The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 742. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 16.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAMB OF CALVARY.

TUNE—"Life's cleansing fountain."

What means those deep, unearthly moans,
That sound from Calvary?
They are "the man of sorrow's" groans,
While hanging there for me.
Eloi, Eloi, Sabacthani,
The Lamb of God exclaims,
He closed then his languid eye,
Then dies 'mid torturing pains.

Behold him hang with thorny crown,
And see the crimson tide,
Warm, gushing blood, 'tis streaming down
From hands and feet and side.
O never, never, love so deep,
Did men nor angel's see;
Ah! who that loves can fail to weep
O'er gory Calvary.

Love's fountains opened, vast and pure,
'Tis ever running free;
It cannot fail to heal and cure,
Come, mourner, taste and see.
Here every hungry, thirsty soul,
That pants for purity,
Can come by faith and be made whole;
Haste! Jesus pleads for thee.

O Lamb of God, thy saints shall raise,
When they immortal stand,
An ever-onward song of praise
Through Canaan's sacred land,
To him that saved them by his blood,
The Lamb of Calvary,
And made them kings and priests of God,
Eternal glory be.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass. S. S. BREWER.

For the World's Crisis.

MAN NOT AN "IMMORTAL SOUL."

(Concluded.)

It is necessary to our purpose to consider the modus operandi, or method of operation, of God in putting on the spirit-body life, when the soul-body life has been put off. We do not suppose ourselves capable of doing this clearly, or going further than the "word" goes, or even as far; but there is great light in the "word" on the subject. To do this, we shall find it necessary to refer to a few verses following the one last quoted; to wit., 1 Cor. 15: 45, and onward, as follows:—

"And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. . . Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption."

We make this quotation thus extended, as we find in it by careful study a deeper meaning than we have been wont to find; and it is a wonderful statement of the point under consideration, and so subserves our purpose in a marked manner. We have the two Adams taken to represent the two kinds of life. Adam the first to represent his posterity in "soul-life," and Adam the second, Christ our Lord, as the quickening Spirit, or Spirit-life giver. The first Adam being made a "living soul," was, according to Paul in this chapter, a soul-body man. He lost that soul-life which he possessed, being sentenced to death, and his posterity shared the inevitable death with him. So the second man, "the Lord from heaven," must first be made a curse for us, a curse by taking our soul-body nature, or so much of the first Adam's nature as he could, through his mother Mary, not having a human father; so Paul states it in Heb. 2: 14. "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."

That moment, therefore, that he took that nature upon him, he became a subject of death in Adam, the death under the law, that held the whole race of Adam's soul-body descendants; and hence Paul's argument that he "took part of the same, that through death," etc., showing that he could not die unless he took it; but he could and must die if he did take "part of [or in] the same." He not only was thus physically prepared for his work, but he became obedient unto "death." So he had "power," or liberty, by means afforded him, "to lay down" his "life," as he said. And that was not all. He was begotten by the Spirit of God, and was, by that begetting, possessed of the divine nature, and having that spirit, not by measure (John 2: 34), but without measure, i.e., by obedience, was qualified for a resurrection from the dead, to deliver himself and the children from death; they who through fear of death are "all their lifetime subject to bondage," so the time came for him to die; to pay the debt of the race by dying with it; "for," or on account of the living soul, the mortal Adam, he died.

Christ died according to the Scripture, and then the Spirit raised him from the dead, and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, or revealed their weakness and imbecility. "Being put to death in the flesh [or soul-body], but quickened by the Spirit," he now no longer has an earthly motherhood, but the Spirit, which raised him from the dead, has advanced its work in him, till from its begetting work, it has advanced to that quickening which has made him to be a "quickening spirit," or a spirit-body; and he is "the first-born among many brethren" (Rom. 8: 29), that they (the brethren) "might be conformed" by the same "operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead" "to" his "image," and have bodies like his glorious body—his spirit-body; which, as such, has that quickening power, spoken of, that "quickeneth whom he will," being a "quickening spirit" now, for, "being raised from the dead," he "dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him," and he "hath life in himself"; so that the apostle could say, "If the Spirit of him that raised Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal [or soul] bodies."

If, therefore, that spirit "dwell in" a man, he is "begotten" of God, according to John and others, and has the "first fruits" of the Spirit, or the spirit of adoption. He can cry "Abba Father," or my second Father; for as Abba, the Syriac for father, is an alien untranslated word, so the first father of the race, or man of the earth, the earthy, is an alien, and a foreigner, and needs quickening by the Spirit; hence a work must be done which will give the Spirit, which raised Jesus from the dead, to those of the soul-body race of the earthy man, sending it forth into their hearts to dwell in them, thus begetting them "unto a lively hope," and so transferring their fatherhood to God, so that they can call him Father, and wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body from the soul, or natural life, and making it a spirit-body, when the Spirit of God, taking the place of both "the breath of life" and the soul-life of the natural man, shall so constitute and make the life, that there shall be no more dependence on the earthly motherhood or fatherhood for existence, or on breath or blood, but a completed new mode of existence for the body, by the Spirit of God, making it, by the same synecdoche, by which soul-life now makes man a soul, a spirit-body being; and yet not such a being as an angel-spirit, which hath not flesh and bones, or such a spirit as God is.

There never was such a form of existence as the immortal saints will be, and they will be forever a signal evidence of God's wonderful power, through Christ's salvation, to save human beings, and make them live forever, by giving their bodies a spirit mode of existence, in the place of the "soul" mode, so permitting the body to live without decaying life, and proving Paul's words that "this mortal shall put on immortality"; not this immortal soul shall put off at death this mortality, but this which is mortal-soul life shall, in the resurrection, put on immortal spirit-life, or the "sown" soul-body shall be raised to a spirit-body.

The spirit of adoption, or of the begotten state in which we now are, as a church, is the beginning of that work which shall be completed when the body shall be thus redeemed from the corruptible soul-life, and put on the incorruptible spirit-body life, and the whole man shall be redeemed from the "earthly" of the first man, and put on the "heavenly" of the second man. When in that state, the new existence begun here in the mind will be completed, and the saying shall come to pass, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

It is true that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God"; because they are of the "first man," the "earthly," the "natural"; hence the necessity of a change. God intends to thoroughly redeem his people, and he will, and give them a higher, far higher, brighter, better life than they have here. We shall therefore have flesh there in the spirit body.

Paul, in arguing this point, and in answering the "fool's" question, "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" before he fully answers the question, and tells us it is a spiritual body, or a body whose life is in and by the Spirit of God, argues the question by citing us to the fact, that there are known to be different kinds of flesh in the world, of birds, of beasts, of fishes, of men; and then refers to the glory of the earthly and the heavenly bodies, and even the difference in the heavenly, as though he would say, "From what we know of different kinds of flesh, already in existence, there may yet be the flesh of a "spiritual body," differing from these mentioned, as the glory of the celestial is above the glory of the terrestrial, or as the glory of the sun is above the glory of the moon; or as one star differs from another, a body so permeated and filled with the Spirit of God, that even gets all its life by that Spirit, so that it shall be painless, not susceptible of fatigue nor disease, and yet full of the liveliest sensations, of pleasant feelings, of ecstasies, of transports, of buoyant joyousness. We can imagine, but do not know, what painless spiritual body-flesh will be. Christ has it now, and he is "alive forevermore." He has led "captivity" itself "captive," and his people shall have bodies like his glorious body, and be tangible spirit-body beings, with flesh and bones, but no blood or soul-life—a life ever wasting, and requiring new supplies for the waste of the body; but this new life is a check to waste and decay. It keeps it forever away. Oh, how far superior is that life to the present. O joy, for the amazing change is soon to be experienced by the waiting church. Amen and amen.

Let us ever be careful to cling fast to the word of life on this question, and be constantly on the alert for errors in theory and example; allowing ourselves in neither, not getting an interchangeable mixture of soul-life and spirit-life, or a theory of either immortal souls now, or ever in the future; but only immortal life, given by the Spirit of God, by which the body shall partake of the Spirit, which shall give it life, and fill every particle, to make it an immortal, spiritual body.

How much clearer and more satisfying is this scriptural view, than any popular theory which corrupts the word of God. All is simple, plain and harmonious, and completely shows that, while man is possessed of animal-soul-life, in common with the beasts of the field, he has a moral nature, and is capable of living forever. L. C. McKINSTRY.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.

"Thy dead men shall live."—ISA. 26: 19.

"And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works."—REV. 20: 13.

The first passage is a prophetic "song" of triumph and safety, that shall burst from the lips of Redeemed Israel in "that day" when "He shall swallow up death in victory; and salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. And the earth shall cast out as an abortion her dead tyrants.

The last passage of scripture describes the fulfillment of the first, as the beloved John took a bird's-eye view of the final catastrophe of nature, and the events immediately connected with the coming of the Lord. Although both are written from a prophetic stand-point, they stand in relation to each other as a prophecy and fulfillment,—Isaiah prophesied of an event he did not distinctly see; John with clearer vision, beheld the sublime panorama as it rolled before him.

The word resurrection (from the Latin re and surgo TO RISE,) means "A rising again; chiefly, the revival of the dead of the human race, or their return from the grave, particularly at the general judgment."

That can only be "raised again" which has been thrown down. That can only be thrown down, which has once stood. We know that the body falls down in corruption and death. "Man dieth." "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." The Spirit returns to God who gave it, but the man dieth.

Shall he live again? Shall bodies that have been decomposed for ages, be reorganized and revitalized in identical physical perfectness? Shall the iron bars of the tomb be rent asunder, and the dust of the valley burst in twain, to let the reorganized dust-man leap from his bed of corruption into a world of of life? And shall those decomposed bodies whose particles of matter have been separated to the four winds, and each particular particle—one from the east and another from the west, one across mountains, another from the sea, one from sandy depths, and another from ærial heights,—shall these particles at some superhuman mandate fly with electric quickness and take their respective positions in the organized temple of human life?

How with the cannibal—the man-eater,—where one body enters into the physical composition of another body,—shall they live? Shall all the dead be raised, or only a part, or shall none of the dead be raised? If a part only of the dead are raised, why a part and not all? By virtue of what prerogative are a part raised and not all? Let us consider,

I. The objections indicated in these questions.

1. It is objected that there is no God that made man, therefore there will be no God to raise him from the dead; consequently there will be no resurrection of the dead. Man exists from natural causes.

Man does not exist from natural causes, unless the fact that "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," be a natural cause. If nature made man, and gave him life, why does she not preserve forever both him and it? But man is himself a part of nature. According to this, man made himself, which is too absurd for sensible people to admit for one moment. But if it be claimed that the absence of one of the elements of organized life produces death, then to return that element ought to produce life. For example; On this principle, if a man freezes to death, thaw him, and he ought to come to life. If he dies from heat, cool him, and he ought to live again. If a want of electricity produced death, a galvanic battery ought to restore it. But these results are contrary to existing facts. Nature instead of being a producing power, was itself produced. Nature cannot perpetuate eternally human life; therefore something else did; that something we call God. That God that had power to give man life at the beginning, has power to give man life again.

2. But it is affirmed that the human "form divine" came to its present state of perfection and nobility by progression. The law of progression cannot raise a man from the dead; therefore there will be no resurrection of the dead. It is asserted that in the beginning this planet was composed entirely of water, without telling us where the water came from. In this water was sediment which settled at its centre, "until the dry land did appear." From this mud sprang certain small, very small aquatic animals, which progressed to tadpoles, which progressed to frogs, which progressed to turtles, which progressed to unamphibious quadrupeds, which progressed to larger quadrupeds, which progressed to smaller bipeds, which progressed to monkeys, which progressed to orang outangs, which progressed to negroes, which progressed to Malays, which progressed to the noble white men who have just discovered their origin; which assertions are all humbug; for 1. They cannot tell us where the water came from. 2. They cannot tell us where the sedimental mud originated. 3. They cannot tell us how, in the sedimental mud there came to be organized animal life. 4. They cannot tell us where the law they love so dearly, and talk of [illegible], originated. Until they can explain these fundamental objections, their theory is as helpless as a still-born babe. But such a law of physical progression is notoriously false. According to this law of progression we should see tadpoles swelling up with the law of progression, and being transmuted into frogs. If progression was the fundamental law of nature by which man came to his present state and condition, he must according to this law progress forever. But man's physical nature does not thus progress. No fact is taught plainer by science, than that every animal has preserved with exactness its original genus. Skeletons that have been buried for hundreds and thousands of years, demonstrate this fact. Races of giants, who are now extinct, have been found, but none have ever progressed to fill their place. Therefore, the law of progression as taught by infidels is untrue. Therefore man came to his present state without such progress. Therefore the being we call God created him. "Male and female created he them." The God who organized man from the dust, can reorganize man by a resurrection from the dead.

3. But it is asserted that indeed the God of the Bible could not find every particle of matter that composed the human body. A body is burned. Some of its particles may be blown into the mountains, and enter the composition of the sturdy tree, which for ages may have been separated and changed into others. Other particles may have been blown into rivers, and carried into the sea, and tides may have washed them around the globe to finally enter into the organism of "the finny tribes of the deep." Grant it. But the God who gave life to, and watches with unerring care, billions and trillions of minute creatures which cannot be perceived by the human eye; who causes billions of grass blades to spring up by the silent impulse of his own changeless law; who numbers the very hairs of our head; whose angels guard the living, and have charge of the silent dust until they shall be summoned to gather them to the harvest of the world,—such a God could find, if need be, every particle that composed the living body, and put it in its proper place. If it were the Hindoo god, or the objecting infidel's god, there would be a signal failure. But the God of the Bible can do it. Amen. He will vindicate his justice by judgment, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God.

4. But it is further objected that the particles of matter that compose the human body are constantly changing. By sensible and insensible perspiration, and the breath, we are constantly sending off worn out particles of matter, while from the nutriment of our food we are as constantly receiving new supplies to take the place of the thrown off material. Thus a continuous change is being wrought throughout the entire physical system. This change becomes entire, on the average, once in seven years.

A man dies at the age of forty-nine years, has had seven different bodies so far as the material particles are concerned, as the seven could not be his body, and no one of them represent his whole, therefore it would be impossible to have a resurrection of the body.

I grant the particles change, according to the language of the objector. One fact is certain; that the man whose body had changed seven times, had preserved his identity. God can change it once more and preserve its identity. Why not? He can if he will. Will he thus raise the dead? "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise."—The Treasury.

SELECTIONS FROM WHATELY.

"The question, What religion is true? and the question as to the way in which the professors of a religion we deem to be false should be treated, are often confounded."

"It should never be forgotten that he who declared he could have called in the aid of more than twelve legions of angels, and to whom all power was given in heaven and in earth, sent forth his disciples not to subjugate or to coerce, but to 'teach all nations.'"

"Men too often employ that violence in the cause of what they believe to be divine truth, which Jesus himself and his apostles expressly forbade in the cause of what they knew to be divine truth."

"The distinction between a civil or political right on the one hand, and a moral right on the other, is of incalculable importance. By rights of conscience is to be understood, not necessarily that every one is right in the religion that he adopts, but that his neighbors have no right to interfere with his right. A man has a right—not necessarily a moral right—to worship God according to his conscience, without suffering any hardship at the hand of his neighbor for so doing."

"As no tree is withered by the frost of the polar regions, or by the scorching winds of the Arabian deserts, because none can exist in those regions; so there is no actual persecution in those countries where persecution has done its work, in crushing and preventing all resistance to religious error. Therefore, the absence of the infliction does not imply the absence of the spirit of persecution."

"Persecution is not wrong because it is cruel; but it is cruel because it is wrong."

"As a narrow or a larger room is equally a prison if a man is forced to remain confined in it; so the narrowing or the enlarging the bounds of orthodoxy does not constitute the absence or the presence of persecution."

"A man cannot be said to be at liberty, or to exercise his own judgment, if another, however rightly, decide for him; if he is not left to himself to take which side of an alternative he thinks fit. To say that religious liberty does not imply irreligious liberty, is to say of a person that he is at liberty to remain within the walls of a prison, but not at liberty to leave it."

"All men wish to have truth on their side; but few to be on the side of truth."

"Men miss truth more often from their indifference about it, than from intellectual incapacity."

"Falsehood, like the dry rot, flourishes the more in proportion as air and light are excluded."

"The judgment is like a pair of scales, and evidences like the weights; but the will holds the balance in its hand; and even a slight jerk will be sufficient, in many cases, to make the lighter scale appear the heavier."

"Some persons follow the dictates of their conscience, only in the same sense in which a coachman may be said to follow the horses he is driving."

"When people have resolved to shut their eyes, or to look only on one side, it is of little consequence how good their eyes may be."

"Though not always called upon to condemn ourselves, it is always safe to suspect ourselves."

"We should study to be wise, not above Scripture, but in Scripture; to learn, not the things which God has concealed, but what he has revealed."

"He who would desire to have an accurate description of party-spirit, need only go through Paul's description of Charity, reversing every point in the detail—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VINTAGE.

The wicked are scoffing in the end of probation,
The Lord is soon coming to take his saints home;
The harvest is passing, the summer is ending,
Like the gleaming of grapes when the vintage is done.

The earthquakes do rumble throughout the creation,
And Jesus will come on his dazzling throne;
All hail to those signs of the saints' soon salvation,
When the harvest is past and the vintage is done.

The sea in commotion, the tidal waves foaming,
They tell us the story that Jesus will come;
The nation's perplexed, creation is groaning,
The harvest is passing; soon the vintage is done.

On a bright shining cloud, in splendor and glory,
Surrounded by angels to earth he'll descend;
All the saints then awakened will shout the glad story,
The harvest is past, and the vintage is done.

May we all meet in glory on that blessed morning,
And shout hallelujah with Christ on his throne;
Be saved in the kingdom, forever adore him,
When the saints are all gathered, and the vintage is done.

N. F. NASON.

THE JUDGMENT.

Our Lord Jesus Christ is ordained by God the Father to be the Judge of quick and dead.

This truth stands upon the firm basis of Scripture authority. You have it from his own hand, "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." John 5: 22. And so the apostle, "He hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Acts 17: 31. And again, "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ." Rom. 2: 16. We will here show the certainty of a judgment to come; the quality and nature of it; and that his being appointed Judge of the world is a special part of Christ's exaltation.

I. The certainty of a judgment. This is a truth of firmer establishment than heaven and earth. It is no devised fable, no cunning artifice to keep the world in awe; but a thing as confessedly true as it is awfully solemn. For,

1. As the Scriptures just cited (with 2 Cor. 5: 10; Eccles. 12: 14; Matt. 12; 36; and many other passages) plainly reveal it; so the justice and righteousness of God require it should be so. For the Judge of all the earth will do right. Gen. 18: 25. Justice requires that a difference be made between the righteous and the wicked: Say ye to the righteous. It shall be well with him; wo to the wicked, it shall be ill with him." Isa. 3: 10, 11. But no such distinction is generally and fully made in this world. Yea, often the wicked prosper, and the righteous perish: "There is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedness." Eccles. 7: 15. Here the "wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than himself." Hab. 1: 13; as the fishes of the sea, where the great and strong swallow up the small and weak. And even in courts of judicature, where the innocent might expect relief, they often meet with the worst oppression. How fairly and justly therefore doth the wise man infer a judgment to come from this consideration: "I saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there. I said in my heart, God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is a time there for every purpose and for every work," Eccles. 3: 16, 17; which denotes that the judgment to come is often the only relief and support with which the innocent may quiet and comfort themselves. "Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." James 5: 6, 7. It is confessed that sometimes God vindicates his providence against the atheism of the world, by particular strokes upon the wicked; but this is rare. And as one of the fathers well observes, "If no sin were punished here, no providence would be believed; again, if every sin were openly punished here, no judgment hereafter could be expected."

2. Besides, man is a reasonable being, and every reasonable being is an accountable being. He is a subject capable of moral government. His actions have a relation to law. He is swayed by rewards and punishments. He acts by counsel, and therefore must expect to give an account of his actions. "So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God." Rom. 14: 12. All the gifts of body, mind, estate, time, etc. are so many talents committed and intrusted to us by God; every one has at least one talent; and a time to render an account for all will come. Matt. 25: 14, 15. We are stewards, and stewards must give an account, in order to which there must be a day of judgment.

3. Our own conscience gives clear evidence of this truth. Lo, it is engraven legibly upon every man's own breast. Every one hath a tribunal in his own conscience, which both accuses and excuses for good and evil, and which it could never do, did it not forebode a future judgment. In this court, records are now kept of all we do, even of our most secret actions and thoughts. But if no judgment, what need of records? Nor let any imagine that this may be but the fruit of education; that having heard such things, we are groundlessly alarmed. For if so, how comes it to obtain so universally? Who could be the author of such a common deception? But let us consider,

II. What manner of judgment this will be.

1. It will be a great and awful day. It is called the "judgment of the great day." Jude 6.

The manner of Christ's coming will be awfully solemn. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. Christ shall come forth out of heaven, with the shouts of angels, above all which shall the voice of the archangel be distinctly heard. And after this, the trump of God shall sound. The dead being raised, shall be gathered before the great throne on which Christ shall sit in his glory; and there by the angels they shall be divided exactly to the right and left hand of Christ. Here will be the greatest assembly that ever met; where Adam may see his numerous offspring, even as the sand upon the sea-shore, which no man can number. And never was such a perfect division made. There were apparent separations of the righteous and the wicked in this world, but no other separation was like this. The saints shall meet the Lord in the air; the Judge shall sit upon the throne, with all the saints round about him; the wicked remaining below upon the earth, to receive their final doom.

These preparatives will make it awful; and much more will the work itself, on which Christ now comes, be awful. It is "to judge the secrets of men," Rom. 2: 16; to sever the tares from the wheat; to present every man in his real character; and according as he shall be found on that trial, to sentence him to his everlasting and immutable state. O what a solemn thing is this!

And no less will the execution of the sentence make it a great and solemn day. The heart of man cannot conceive what impressions the voice of Christ, from the throne, will make, both upon believers and unbelievers.

Imagine Christ upon his glorious throne, surrounded with myriads and legions of angels, his royal guard; a poor unbeliever trembling at the bar; an exact scrutiny made into his heart and life; the dreadful sentence given; and then a cry, while he is delivered over to the executioners of eternal vengeance, never, never to see a glimpse of hope or mercy more.

Imagine Christ, like the general of an army, mentioning with honor, at the head of all the hosts of heaven and earth, the services that the saints have done for him in this world; then justifying them by open proclamation; and then their mounting with him to the third heavens, and entering the gates of the city of God, in the noble train of saints and angels, to be forever with the Lord. Oh what a great day must this be!

2. As it will be an awful and solemn judgment, so it will be most exact and critical. The name of the Judge is, the "Searcher of hearts." His eyes as a flame of fire, pierce to the dividing of the heart and reins. It is said, Matt. 12: 36, that men shall then give an account of "every idle word that they shall speak." It is a day that will perfectly discriminate the character of every man. No hypocrite can escape. Justice will hold the balances in an even hand.

3. It will be a universal judgment, "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ." 2 Cor. 5: 10. "Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God." Rom. 14: 12. Both those that were under the law, and those that, having not the law, were a law unto themselves. Rom. 2: 14. Those that had many talents, and he that had but one talent, must appear at this bar; those that were carried from the cradle to the grave, and he that stooped for age; the rich and poor; the father and the child; the master and servant; the believer and the unbeliever, must appear in that day. "I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened." Rev. 20: 12.

4. It will be a convicting judgment. All things will be so clearly presented, that the sentence of Christ, both on saints and sinners, shall be applauded. "Righteous art thou, O Lord, because thou hast judged thus." His judgments will be as the light that goeth forth. So that those poor sinners whom he will condemn, shall be first self-condemned. Their own consciences shall be forced to confess that there is not one drop of injustice in all that sea of wrath into which they are to be cast.

5. It will be a supreme and final judgment, from which lies no appeal. It is the sentence of the highest and only Lord. "As the ultimate resolution of faith is into the word and truth of God, so the ultimate resolution of justice is into the judgment of God." This judgment is supreme and imperial. Christ is the only Potentate, 1 Tim. 6: 5; the sentence once passed, its execution is infallible. So you find it in the judicial process given us, Matt. 25; when the sentence is pronounced by Christ, it is immediately added, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." This is the judgment of the great day.—"Fountain of Life," by Flavel.

—The whole of a well-spent human life is but the development of a noble thought, and that thought is "godliness."

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

92. Abraham departed to go to Canaan.—"And Abram took Sarah his wife, and Lot, his brother's son, . . . and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan, and into the land of Canaan they came."—Gen. 12: 5.

Abraham went, not knowing where.—"By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went."—Heb. 11: 8.

There is not a shadow of inconsistency here. The Lord called upon Abraham to leave his country, his kindred, and his father's house, and go into a land which he promised to show unto him. "So Abraham departed, as the Lord had spoken unto him." He implicitly believed the words of Jehovah, and "went out, not knowing whither he went"; but the Lord led him on, until he came into the land of Canaan, and then "the Lord appeared unto Abraham and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land; and there builded he an altar unto the Lord who appeared unto him." If Abraham knew when he came forth that it was the land of Canaan which the Lord designed to give him (as the skeptic basely insinuates), why was it necessary for the Lord to appear to him on his arrival there, and tell him that which he knew already?

We are weary of explaining propositions like the above, which are so simple that they need no solution, and were it not that the little work before us is considered the "strong tower" of infidelity, we should have thrown it aside long since, in disgust.

93. Abraham had two sons.—"Abraham had two sons; the one by a bond-woman, and the other by a free-woman."—Gal. 4: 22.

Abraham had but ONE son.—"By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac, . . . his only begotten son."—Heb. 11: 17.

The only difficulty in this proposition is in the text in Heb., where Isaac is spoken of as the only begotten son of Abraham, while the patriarch was the father of another child, according to the flesh. But this apparent obscurity of expression is at once removed, by a careful reading of the text and its connections. Please notice. "By faith, Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son, of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Hence we see at once that the text does not say that Isaac was the "only begotten son of whom [or concerning whom, according to Dr. Doddridge] it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Still, Isaac might very properly be called the only begotten son, in a legal point of view, as he was the only child of Abraham's lawful wife, the heir of his father's property, and the heir of God's promises to Abraham's seed.

94. Keturah was Abraham's wife.—"Then again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah."—Gen. 25: 1.

Keturah was Abraham's concubine.—"The sons of Keturah, Abraham's concubine."—1 Chron. 1: 32.

The boasted "contradiction" between these two texts vanishes like dew before the sun, when exposed to the candid light of honest investigation. A close examination of Gen. 25: 1, explains the matter clearly, for the word that is here rendered "wife," is in the Hebrew ashaw, and its primary definition, as given by Gesenius, is—"A woman, female of any age or condition, married or unmarried." It is used in Cant. 1: 8, in the expression, "O thou fairest among women." It is applied to unmarried females, in Gen. 24: 5; also in Isa. 4: 1. It is used as the name of the sex, and is thus applied to animals, to denote the female, in Gen. 1: 2. Frequent in the phrase, lakah lo leashaw—to take to one's self a woman for a wife. See Gen. 4: 19; 6: 2. Spoken also of a concubine, in Gen. 30: 4, and in Judges. It is also a term of reproach for a man who is weak, cowardly, or effeminate, as in Isa. 19: 16; 3: 12; Jer. 51: 30; also Nahum 3: 13. This being the definition of the word, as given by the best authority we have, the text ceases to present even the semblance of a contradiction to 1 Chron. 1: 32. Even admitting that the word ashaw denotes a wife, in the above connection, the difficulty is obviated by a critical definition of the word concubine. It is thus defined by Webster: "A wife of inferior condition; a lawful wife, but not united to the man by the usual ceremonies, and of inferior condition. Such were Hagar and Keturah, the concubines of Abraham, and such concubines were allowed by the Roman laws." See Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. Hence the infidel's case is rendered hopeless by the light of truth.

"Bible Triumphant," by Mrs. H. V. Reed.

For the World's Crisis.

"UNDERSTANDEST THOU WHAT THOU READEST?"—Acts 8: 30.

How frequently do we hear those who have been led to embrace clearly and literally the teaching of the divine word exclaim, "How much better I enjoy reading the Bible than I formerly did. I used to read it without understanding it; now I find a meaning in every verse." In conversation recently with one who had attended some of the tent-meetings the past season, under the supervision of Bro. Wellcome and others, he remarked that the Bible seemed to open, at each reading, with renewed delight; he seemed to see in every promise to the faithful, the elements of a soul-saving platform. Now this is but the expressed sentiment of very many others who have gone to the Bible with unprejudiced minds, freed from the myths of tradition, and untrammeled by sectarianism.

To such, as to Luther, Wesley, Whitfield, and the reformers of all ages, the Scriptures present a vivid and sanctifying light on every duty of life, till they become strong in the Lord and in the power of his might.

"Hail! sacred truth, whose piercing rays
Dispel the shades of night,
Diffusing o'er a ruined world
The healing beams of light."

Upton, Me. W. A. MANNING.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Jan. 5, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ PHEBE M. RICHARDSON—Will you please let us know what Post Office your paper goes to?

☞ M. F. WISTROM—Ellen Porter and P. C. PARRISH take the Crisis at Appleton, Wis.

☞ J. L. McFARLAND—We are out of Admonitions We send Thessalonica in cloth, as we have not got it in paper.

☞ SARAH E. HOYT—Your money received.

☞ CHARLES P. HUTCHINS—"Christ our Life" is out of print.

☞ F. TRIPP—Money received, and paper sent.

☞ E. H. ALLEN—We have none.

☞ JANE A. BENSON'S P. O. address is 260 South 2nd Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., Missionary.

☞ H. F. CARPENTER'S P. O. address is now North Springfield, Vt., instead of Danielsonville, Ct.

☞ BRO. O. BENDIXON'S P. O. address is No. 2 Bowling Green, New York.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

☞ PLEASE REMEMBER

That all letters, telegrams, or notices, ordering books, tracts, or papers, or for insertion in the Crisis, or for any other business connected with this office, should be addressed to the Editor, or to the Business Agent, and not to the clerks; as their letters, being regarded as private and not for the office, are not opened in their absence. AG'T.

NEW YEAR.

WE WISH ALL OUR READERS A HAPPY NEW YEAR IN THE LORD.

THE NEW YEAR.

We receive a stimulus when we come to the new year, not felt at other times. It is well to take advantage of this and turn it to good account. It is a favored season to break off from bad habits, and form good ones. Has the reader done this? If so, we know the hand would be given with much pleasure in the hearts new year's greeting. Would that we had you now by the hand, and could say Be firm; do not look back; put on "the whole armor of God," that you may make a certain victory over every bad habit. Only the "pure in heart" have the promise of eternal life. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. All depends on how we live. Let us live in 1870 better than ever. We must expect sharp trials, but the Lord will help us to meet them all with triumphant success, if we trust and obey him. Let us put all on the altar, and keep it there. Let no murmur escape our lips, nor rankle in our bosoms. "Be patient toward all men." Many things will go wrong, but do not fret. Let our days in 1870 be cheerful in the Lord. Be kind and gentle in the family, in the church, every where. Keep shining.

This year may be our last to work in the vineyard of the Lord. Let every action, word, and thought, be in harmony with the Spirit of Christ. Be at peace with every one and have the eye single to the glory of God, that the whole body may be full of light. Grand and glorious events are close at hand; let us be all ready for their coming. Throw off every weight, and each besetting sin, that the race may be finished with joy triumphant. Soon the saints will be singing "Alleluia!" "For the marriage of the Lamb is come." Are we "ready?" "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." Which side of the door would the reader be found if the marriage were to take place this day? Would there be danger of being among those who come "afterward, . . . saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us?" O let us "watch," and make sure work for the kingdom. These last moments of time are precious. Let not one be wasted in idle talk, or unholy pursuits. Let every one tell for good.

In conclusion, we wish to say again, We wish every reader a HAPPY NEW YEAR IN THE LORD. We hope to make our weekly visits more pleasant, profitable, and cheering than ever. We purpose to spare no pains to accomplish such a result. Please pardon all our past weaknesses, errors in judgment, neglect of duty, mistakes, words not fitly spoken or written,—every thing that has grieved in the least; and pray for us that we may be filled with divine wisdom, "that is from above," which "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits."

As we ask universal pardon, we most heartily bestow it to every one upon the planet. The Scriptures tell us most expressly that if we have "hatred" or "variance," we "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." And again, "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Matt. 6: 15. Let us be extra watchful, and allow no wicked feeling to have a place in our hearts in 1870. Our conduct this year may decide whether we shall have eternal life, or be destroyed. What "a grand and awful time" is the one in which we are living. The long-looked for event, of which prophets have written, poets sung, apostles spoken; for which martyrs suffered, and every good man has anxiously longed, is now at the door. It is the coming of the Redeemer to set up his everlasting kingdom; the dawning of the morning of glory upon paradise restored, upon Eden in bloom again, when all once more, and for ever, will be not only "good," but VERY GOOD. Let us be there.

RULES OF LIFE.

We wish to repeat some rules of life to be adopted at the beginning of the new year. We commend them to all, and feel sure that their observance will not produce sorrow. Are they not right? Do you say, Yes? Then please adopt them, and carry them into rigid execution. They are as follows: By the help of the Lord, I am resolved,—

1. To speak evil of no one.
2. To speak no unkind words to any one.
3. To bear every thing patiently.
4. To avoid all joking.
5. To forgive every one.
6. To return good for evil.
7. To judge no one.
8. To allow no evil imaginations.
9. To give one tenth of all I receive.
10. To do all to the glory of God.

TRACTS.

We have frequently spoken of the importance of circulating tracts, but we fear our Brn. and Srs. are not sufficiently awake to the subject, that they do not realize how much good can be done in this way. If all knew what we could do, and could hear what we hear, read what we read, we feel sure that hundreds of dollars would be given where tens are now. When there is such a wide door open for us to do good, will the Savior say "Well done," if we do nothing? Come, Brn. and Srs., send a new year's gift to the tract fund. Let us make this a leading work this year. Let the children give their cents and dimes. All can help. Is it not time to make a sacrifice unto the Lord? "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Try it and get the blessing. Do not say, I will think about it, but decide to commence active operations at at once. Sit down this evening and send a letter with a donation for tracts. We are confident if our advice be taken, it will occasion no remorse to the giver, but will bring gladness to many hearts, and accomplish great good. Let us do all the good we can, while there is an opportunity. Our working days are about ended. Have we done what we could? The primitive christians were noted for their spirit of sacrifice for the good of others. Let us imitate them more closely in this respect, for the Lord expressed approbation for their liberality. The Lord does not forget the "cheerful giver." There is no risk in doing much for the benefit of others. It will return in peace and joy, which are of more value than diamonds. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." Are there not some lean ones? The cause may be in withholding "more than is meet." Let there be a careful examination, and prompt action. This is the time to act wisely. Let none perish for lack of the knowledge that we are able to supply.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

We are receiving many new subscribers. Accept our thanks for such favors. We think a little effort would add thousands. The time has come when good people are hungering after just what our readers are feasting on every week. They have only to become acquainted with "our paper" to be interested and profited. Let every reader try to introduce it to his neighbors, that they may enjoy the feast also. The light on the blessed hope is too good to be put under a bushel. Let it shine.

BIDDEFORD AND LAWRENCE.

We spent Dec. 19th and 26th in Biddeford, Me., and Lawrence, Mass. We were much pleased with the deep interest to hear, manifested by the people in both places. They seem more anxious than ever to hear the preaching of those who are looking for the coming of the Son of man. At Biddeford the house was crowded, including aisles, gallery, and the standing room about the stove; and it was said as many went away for want of room as were in the house. While the people were so anxious to hear, they are very slow to act. They have resisted the evidences of Christ's coming so long, it is hard for them to yield at this late hour. They wonder why this and that popular minister and professor do not see the evidence, and declare it as well as those who are doing it; but if they would step into the fair, or some other scene of church amusement, they might guess at the reason. It must not be expected that those who love pleasures more than God, will be found watching for the coming of Jesus. They are just the ones, according to the Scriptures, on whom the event will come as a thief. If church members were over eating and drinking with the drunken, it is at the present time, when all classes meet on a common level, where wicked men and corrupt women take a prominent part in the management of "grand fair," arranged by some popular church. The mere sight of it is heart sickening; but it grows worse and worse. In some cases they go so far as to even disgust wicked men. It is strange that any one can call those the humble followers of Christ, who are engaged in such fairs as are now in progress throughout the country. We would as soon call Belshazzar's feast a christian gathering. No doubt many good people attend them, because they do not like to be so odd as to stay away from their professed Bro. and Srs. in the church, but we think the time is not far distant when the eyes of such will be opened to the corruptions that are covered under religious cloaks; and when the good must leave such shameful burlesques on christianity, or else be for ever blinded and swallowed up in the horrid whirlpool of fashion and folly, and sink at last to perdition.

The time has come for plain talk and decided action. It is too late to be mealy-mouthed and cry "Peace and safety" to save a good name, or to be popular among the enemies of the cross of Christ. Our friends and neighbors, children and companions, are imperiling their eternal interests through the corrupt influences of nominal professors of modern churchanity—not Christianity. Let the faithful watchmen "cry aloud and spare not." Perils are on every side. It is time to be alarmed for the safety of our loved ones. This is the time for lion-boldness to rebuke the daring sins of these last days: and yet it should be done with dove-like meekness.

Let it be done in love, but with much faithfulness. Like the skillful surgeon, do the work thoroughly, though the operation may be painful. It is the only means of saving the life.

REMARKABLE WEATHER.

We do not recollect of having before known such warm weather so long in Dec. as during this winter. Since the middle of the month it has seemed more like March than Dec. In Boston and vicinity, the snow is gone, excepting in a few spots. Dec. 30th, we saw a man ploughing in Lynn, Mass. To-day (Dec. 31st), we are at Windsor, in Canada, nearly as far north as Montreal, and it is as pleasant as spring. There are about four inches of snow, just enough to make good sleighing. Many have prophesied that we should have a cold winter, but thus far it has been the opposite. Of course we cannot tell what is yet to come. If what is said about the sun be true, it may have something to do in causing this warm weather.

RATHER SEVERE.

There are many good men who are most deeply prejudiced against those who preach the great truths of the Bible, as they are now shining forth from the sacred page. They have been prejudiced by false reports, and by some whose lives have not corresponded with their profession.

We have been urged to hold some meetings at Saratoga during the winter. Bro. J. L. Knapp writes from there, that he attended a meeting where the minister said:—"I am wholly sanctified to the Lord. I feel sure we are going to have a good work here. But, brethren, I heard to-day that an Advent minister is coming here. We don't want any such men to come to this place. Brethren, I want you to pray that he may not come. We do not want any such doctrine here. Now, brethren and sisters, pray that the Lord may stop his coming, if the cars run off the track to prevent his coming."

We think we should feel as safe on the cars to Saratoga to hold meetings, as we would if this minister had not thus exhorted his brethren and sisters.

DARK OMENS.

The business prospects look quite threatening at the present time. There have been a number of heavy failures in the large cities; and the money cord is being drawn tighter. The following is from "Burleigh," the New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, dated Dec. 22nd:—

"BUSINESS PANIC.—Mercantile affairs are very shaky at present. Large houses that stop payment are heralded. The multitude of small concerns that go out of sight have none to chronicle their end. Places of business, from the imperial palaces of merchants to small traders, are pasted over with placards announcing 'great bargains,' 'selling off at less than cost,' 'panic prices,' etc., which here usually precedes a general crash. Our Banks depend greatly on their deposits for business success. The Clearing House shows how closely these were drawn down at the close of last week; every Bank of any note on Broadway was a debtor to the Clearing House. One of the largest Banks was indebted $400,000, and others in proportion. Of course business is at a stand still. The dealers in toys and holiday goods say that for the last twenty-five years they have not seen such a Christmas season. Very little is sold, and nobody seems to have any money. Our most intelligent moneyed men say that gold before the 15th of January will go down to 112. If the Government did not prevent it, it would go even lower than that. The feeling is general that we have got to have a crash anyhow, and we had better touch bottom at once. Rents and real estate are especially affected, and no one knows how the matter will turn till after the 1st of January. Some predict a great crash in real estate, and that rents must come down is the universal impression. An unheard of number of marble and brown stone stores are unoccupied; the iron shutters are down, and the ominous words—'To Lease'—are pasted on the doors."

INCONTINENT.

Among the last-day signs given by the apostle Paul, he informs us that the people will be "incontinent." We certainly see this sign developing itself in a most marked degree. Says the New York Observer:—

"The 'free lover' doctrines and practices of the school in which the murdered Richardson was a well known leader, are working, deadly mischief in society. It is this school which finds expression in the press, and in social parties at public restaurants, that society is learning, as one of the papers says, 'to submit, as to matters of course, to fraudulent divorces, to bogus separations, obtained by nominal residences in distant States and secret proceedings in sky-parlor courts, and to elopements, with and husband poisonings, conspiracies to send individuals in the way of the conjunction of "affinities" to lunatic asylums, and State Bazaars and other monstrous tricks and devices whereby the marriage tie is being rapidly reduced almost to a nullity, and domestic purity is beginning to be set up in a light to appear as something of no considerable account, if it stands in the road of individual preferences, or interferes with the savage passions of free love philosophers and their credulous and willing inamoratas."

ISAIAH 9: 7.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please give your opinion of Isaiah 9: 7?—"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." J. O. B.

The Septuagint reads, "His government shall be great, and of his peace there is no end; it shall be upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to support it with judgment and with righteousness, from henceforth and for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall perform this."

THE EXCELSIOR MONTHLY MAGAZINE, published by C. L. Van Allen, 171 Broadway, New York, is before us. An original journal of high-toned morality for the family; and is claimed by its publisher to be the cheapest paper in the country, considering its size and style of execution. It aims to stimulate and provoke to good purposes and endeavors. Price 60 cents a year.

BOSTON DAILY NEWS.—We know of but one daily paper in the United States that appears to be watching over the moral good of society, and that is the Boston Daily News, edited and published by Dr. E. P. Marvin, Province Court, Boston.

"GOOD HEALTH" for January is at hand, containing valuable reading matter for those who desire to be healthy. It is published by Alexander Moore, 21 Franklin Street, Boston. Price $2 a year.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

BRO. COUCH'S "ADDRESS."—The edition of Bro. Couch's "Address" for distribution is exhausted. We shall have no more. AG'T.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

The Catholics anticipate glorious results from the Ecumenical Council. They think the time has come for them to make a most vigorous effort to bring the world under their influence. The following is from the Boston Pilot:—

"For the last three hundred years chaos has reigned in the Christian world. The revival of the spiritual life of the church, and her gradual recovery from the disasters of the great rebellion of the 16th century, together with the remarkable development of the disintegrating tendency of Protestantism, had begun to open the eyes even of Protestants themselves to the necessity of some more practical and effective theory of unity, than any that had yet found favor among their various sects. The great Protestant mind was being moved as by a common impulse in the direction of Unity, all feeling its necessity, yet groping in the dark as to the effective means for accomplishing it. At this moment the sun rises in the midst of darkness. He whom the great Head of the Church himself hath chosen as his Vicar, and commissioned to speak in his name, lifts up his voice to the nations. That voice penetrates, as it were, the very charnal house of spiritual death. There is a shaking among the dry bones. The declaration of the prophet, "The fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon all nations," is receiving a remarkable fulfilment in the present attitude of the Protestant world towards the assembled representatives of the authority of the Church, gathered round their head in solemn council, to legislate on those great truths so intimately affecting the interests of our race. Some revile, as erst the wicked reviled our Lord. Some affect to ridicule. Some gnash their teeth in rage. But all stand in awe, and wait with solemn, painful expectation the final decisions of that great Council. Meantime, the whole world have turned theologians, and are gravely discussing the profound principles of the Catholic faith. No doubt there is much crude speculation, very much ridiculous assumption in all this. But in the midst of all there is an undercurrent of grave thought, of serious reflection, and candid investigation, which, under the guidance of God's good Spirit, will lead many, many souls from the devious paths of error, heresy, and schism, back into the sure and tried ways of dear old Mother Church, from whom they have so long wandered.

What a fearful responsibility does this state of things devolve upon the church at the present moment! What, then, is the lesson which we are to learn? Let there be light. The world is in darkness. It wants light. It wants light especially upon the great truths of which the present Council is a practical illustration and living embodiment. They are sighing and longing for unity. They cannot find it among themselves. Wearied and discouraged with the ceaseless wranglings of the sects, they have many of them already turned their eyes toward the strong battlements of Zion, and now she rises with fair proportions and in solemn grandeur before them, a great fact of Unity, and they are ready to fall down and worship; but they want to know the reason, the philosophy of the thing; especially do they want to know whether it has sanction in Holy Scripture, and is really a part of the divine revelation.

Here then is our work. Priest and layman, each according to his position and opportunities, to pour a flood of light upon the great truths suggested by the Ecumenical Council, which is the great fact of the time in which we live. Let us preach, and write and lecture. Let every Catholic be wide awake to avail himself of every opportunity to inform himself in the first place correctly upon these great truths, and then to inform others. Be ready always to give a reason for the hope that is in thee with meekness and fear. Public attention is wide awake now, but time flies. We cannot tell how long the Council will last. Improve the opportunity while it is passing. Let books, and tracts, and familiar essays on the great questions involved be freely circulated. Let every man resolve to do his duty, not forgetting to pray—to besiege Heaven with prayers for the successful issue of the council, and we shall see such a wonderful revival in the church, and such a gathering in of souls from the ranks of heresy and schism, as will gladden the hearts of all good christians, and fill all heaven with joy and jubilation."

In the second line of the P. S. of the Minutes of the New Hampshire State Conference, instead of "interposition," read "imposition of hands and prayer."

BRO. PRATT writes:—"We have a good meeting last Sabbath. Good congregation. Baptized an intelligent young man, who came out from the greatest darkness. ..."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$156.79
Geo. Tilley	50.00
A. Warthman (by F. H. Burbank)	10.00
A. F. Randall	1.50
Henrietta Ingalls	.25
A. L. Adams	.10

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$32.56
A. Warthman (by F. H. Burbank)	5.00

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$358.15
Geo. Tilley (balance of pledge)	100.00
P. W. Higgins	5.00

S. N. A. CAMPMEETING FUND.

(To help make up the deficiency in the receipts.)

Previous acknowledgments	$52.00
Geo. Tilley (payment of pledge)	50.00

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I have been very busy since I last addressed you through the Crisis. Have now been teaching five weeks. Have night-schools four evenings in the week, prayer-meeting one evening, and Sabbath-school on Sunday. Besides, I keep house with my little son, and do my own cooking; so that I find plenty to do.

To all who are interested in labor for the freed people, I would say that I am striving to do all in my power to persuade this people to lead a purer life, so they may be ready for the judgment, and that I may hear it said to me on that day, "She hath done what she could." I am persuaded we can do more good by caring for the children and teaching them to read and understand about their Maker and Savior; for by so doing we can gain an influence over the parents, which may be used for good.

The condition of many is truly lamentable. The old slave habits are so fixed, that my heart often sinks within me. Whiskey is the great foe of both black and white. They have two preachers here. One was drunk all day Christmas. I went about reasoning of "temperance and a judgment to come." I hope by the blessing of God to see some good accomplished.

Am much interested in my school. Have a bright lot of scholars, some almost white, and I never had pupils that learned faster. My first and most earnest effort is to teach them the sweet, simple principles of the gospel of Christ. They will soon be reading nicely in the Testament. I want to beg the children to send me their Young Pilgrim papers, for there are two now here who can read them, and there will soon be quite a number more; and I think they will do much good. Please, dear children, save all your papers and send them, for these children are in earnest to learn, and we must give them the right kind of reading, so they may learn the way to the Celestial City; for I do hope that some from West Point may be gathered into the fold of the Good Shepherd.

The house purchased for them is a treasure, and they seem grateful. What I lacked of means to pay for it, I hired when I left home, feeling so confident that I was in the path of duty, that I did not fear to trust that I should be enabled to meet the obligation. I counted the cost, expecting to meet with trials and crosses; and the lessons of trust which I am daily called to learn are what I needed, and I thank God for the growing hope that his hand is leading me.

A letter has been sent me from "Klu Klux" threatening a coat of tar if I did not leave in one week. But I have little fear. The best white people in the place are in sympathy with my work, and assure me I shall be protected. The people are very poor, and the children poorly clad. By living upon Bro. Grant's principle somewhat, I shall be provided with food by the people, and I have no anxiety but that I may be used by the Master to work some good in his name.

Since I came, have received the following sums, to help pay for the house: J. Hall, Quebec, $1. E. Corker, $2. Octavia Hill, 40 cts. T. Lockport, $1. No name, $1. H. H. Tilley 50 cts. If any brother or sister has written besides these, will they not write me? I have had some reason to believe that letters may have been intercepted. Many thanks for aid and the sweet words of encouragement.

West Point, Ky. CAROLINE TULLER.

For the World's Crisis.

CHURCH IN GEORGIA.

I have deemed it proper to communicate to the brethren and sisters the progress that is being made with the church in Ga., and also our necessities, presenting a great field of labor for some of the preaching brethren. I live near Homerville, Ga., on the A. and G R. R., where I preach on the second Sabbath in every month, where we have now about seventeen members, and many friends and firm believers, some of whom will soon unite with us.

I have preached in many places from South to Middle Georgia, and the doctrines of the Bible, which we advocate, have been gladly received; and I am called on to go and preach in so many places, I do not see how I can attend to them all. In every new place I receive new invitations to go and preach, and thus the labor seems to multiply.

Cannot you send us out a good preacher? As the cause is new, he, of necessity, must not become chargeable to them at first; but when once the doctrines are established, many places will sustain a preacher. Will not some of the brethren volunteer to help us out?

L. C. MATTOX.

Homerville, Ga., Dec. 27th, 1869.

If you would be rich, do not aim at riches, but simply do what you already possess for the greatest possible good of the greatest possible number.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Dear brethren in the Lord:—Since my last letter for the Crisis, which was Oct. 1st, I have been laboring the best I could to warn sinners of the coming judgment, and encourage saints to hold on to the blessed hope, believing Jesus will soon come to redeem his children. I spent a few days with Bro. Damman, in Belgrade, in a grove meeting. Belgrade Mills is an old place. With others, of like precious faith, we held meetings there eleven years ago, and God's work was revived; and some are living to-day who are praising God for the light they received.

Our grove meeting was of much interest. A number confessed their wanderings, and were blest. The power of God was manifest in our midst. Thank God for what was done in our grove meeting at Belgrade Mills. We held a protracted meeting at Belgrade Depot. Bro. I. Damman came to help, and it was in season truly. The weather was unfavorable, and the attendance small; yet our meetings were good. The interest increased. Some got new light on the coming of Jesus. By request, Bro. Damman appointed a meeting for Monday evening, but received a telegram to be at home that day to attend a funeral. Thus our meetings closed. As one Bro. said, We go into a place and start an interest, then leave. We hope to do better in the future.

Spent one Sabbath in Rome. There are a few holding on to the gospel of Jesus, striving for the kingdom, and contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. I held a protracted meeting in Jay. Bro. Gay and Bro. Mayberry came in season to help preach the word, We had a very heavy rain, that prevented our brethren from coming from abroad. The few who attended were blest, and encouraged. The brethren and sisters in that place are in harmony, laboring for the salvation of sinners. Since our meeting, two have confessed, and found peace. Some eighteen have signed the Christian Covenant to walk together as a church; others will join soon. How good it is to see brethren dwell together in unity.

I have spent a few weeks in my own vicinity to some profit, I trust. I have given several lectures on the chart and signs of the times, in South Chesterville. Several have covenanted anew to live for God. Others are interested to hear. My prayer is, that the seed may fall into good and honest hearts. The Master says, it shall not return void. O that it may prove a savor of life, not of death. What a thought! while some are made better, others are made worse by the same word. I still am laboring about home. I would say to the dear friends, who have written for me to come to help them in the Lord, I will do so as soon as the way is opened by the Lord. Still I ask your prayers, that I may obey the Lord in all things, and be ready for the coming kingdom.

"Nearer, my God, to thee,
E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me," is my prayer. I feel like working with all my might while the day lasts, for the night cometh soon when no man can work. "Up! thou drowsy soldier; worlds are charging to the shock; . . . strike! let every nerve and sinew tell on ages, tell for God."

H. B. SEVEY.

For the World's Crisis.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The N. Y. State Conference convened with the church at Knowlesville, for its quarterly session, Dec. 16th. The roads being very bad, but few were present, and the evening of the 16th and Friday A. M. was spent in prayer and social meeting. Bro. B. P. Stevens, at 2 P. M., spoke from Rev. 2: 7, and closed his remarks with an earnest exhortation to be wholly consecrated to God. Preaching in the evening by Bro. A. C. Newell. Theme, the necessity of ministry and laity possessing the spirit of Christ.

BUSINESS.

Business meeting Saturday, at ten A. M. The first business taken up was report of churches by delegates and preachers. Bro. Urial Finn, of Lockport, reported the condition of the cause in that place as prospering; thought the church in that place were waking up; and thought the prospect at present was encouraging. Brn. J. H. Whitmore and W. Ingmire were received into this conference.

Bro. P. Thurtle reported the church at Knowlesville. Those who had been bearing the burden in the heat of the day were still holding on; had lately been blessed with the labors of Bro. Fenn and Sr. Jennings, and felt strengthened, and some few had expressed a determination to be christians.

Bro. Whitmore gave report of his labors in Shelby and West Barre. Interest very good.

Bro. A. C. Newell reported the church at Darien. The cause not in as thriving condition as he could wish. He gave quite an extended report of his labors with the church and in the surrounding towns.

The conference by unanimous vote agreed to pay Bro. B. P. Stevens $7.15, which sum he paid for moving tent from Mass. to Savannah, N. Y.

The report of Bro. J. Wendell on finance of receipts and expenditures while traveling with N. Y. Mission Tent, was discussed at some length, and at its close the following resolution passed:—

Resolved, That this report be delivered to the Secretary of the Board of Trustees, agreeable to a resolution passed at the annual conference, and by them disposed of as they think proper.

I want to urge at this time the importance of the churches electing delegates who are interested in the cause we love, and who will be prompt to attend the conference at its commencement, and who will feel the responsibility of attending to their duties. If only a few churches take the proper steps and qualify delegates, a few will have to do the business, and your locality's wants may be neglected.

Saturday, P. M., met for worship; good attendance; the time all spent in prayer and exhortation. This was one of the richest feasts I ever enjoyed. The brethren and sisters were all of one mind, and that to implore the Father to give us the Holy Spirit. We all felt we had a foretaste of the joys which are to come.

In the evening preaching by the writer from Heb. 1: 14.

Sabbath, met at half-past nine o'clock for love-feast; after which Bro. J. H. Whitmore gave a good discourse. In the afternoon Bro. E. Owen, of Mass., gave a very close, practical discourse, which I trust will be remembered long by those who listened. At its close, the death and sufferings of our Lord were commemorated, when a goodly number came round the table of the Lord. God grant that they may all live so as to be at the marriage supper of the Lamb. Preaching in the evening by Sr. E. S. Jennings.

Preachers present: J. Blain, Wm. Ingmire, B. P. Stevens, W. A. Fenn, J. H. Whitmore, A. C. Newell, E. Owen, W. J. Hobbs, and Sr. E. S. Jennings.

WARREN J. HOBBS, Clerk.

For the World's Crisis.

CLINTON ARCH MISSION.

Such is the title of a work that has gone quietly on, in the city of New York since Oct. last. No effort has been made to make it popular, nor give it publicity, though a number of its friends are calling for a notice of it. Some seven letters have reached us very recently, saying, "Give us some outline, or schedule of your operations, through the 'Crisis.'" We aim, therefore, in as few words as possible, to say where and what we are trying to do in the vineyard, and to give thanks for what the Master is doing for us.

Our field has been selected on the east side of the city, some twenty blocks from any other mission of the same kind, just where visiting and personal effort is required. It is composed principally of the 10th and 17th wards; the two that have more children, and more grog shops than any other two in all New York. Friends may express some surprise when we say that in these two wards alone, there are more than twenty-five thousand children; but it is even so, and this makes an abundant field for missionaries. "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest."

We have secured a good room for our Sabbath school, and three evenings of the week hold family meetings, about a half mile apart, for the benefit of those who go nowhere to church, and must have the gospel carried to them. Some of these places are fearful to go into, and but for the promise, "Lo! I am with you," we should shrink from the task.

We are indebted to one of our missionaries, Sr. M. Smith (formerly Hanford,) for a long tramp down to the river side, and an introduction to a miserable spot, hid away almost from human observation, where men of all nations gather to spend their idle time. This we were told was a reading room, but we have not yet been able to find anything there like books, or paper, except a pack of soiled cards, and a paper of tobacco.

The men are amazed that we take any interest in them, and seem delighted to have some friends in this great city, to whom they can tell their stories of homesickness, or fraud as they fell among thieves, or frozen limbs, as they come to this cold side of the world. We listen attentively to these poor boys, who are far away from mothers and sisters, and, in hopes of reaching their highest interests, have established cottage readings at their room once a week.

To those who would know more of this interesting group, we would say, should you be in this city on one of our meeting nights, come to our rooms and go with us. We will lead you to a lone, dark, forbidding looking alley, where perhaps the soil is seldom pressed by respectable women's feet, but we shall go safely, and it will do you good.

At each of our stations we are met with tokens of divine approval, and constantly find cause of gratitude and praise to the Lord. Our wants have been supplied, our health recruited, our expenses paid up to the end of the year, and the glory of it all belongs to Him whom we serve. Friends have been raised up whom we knew not of, and to all of them we render sincere thanks for their contributions, and would here say to such, if any one has sent box, barrel, or cash, which has not been receipted by letter, they will please write us immediately.

Our books and financial affairs are at the disposal of a well selected committee, whose names will in due time be given to the public for reference. To them, also, we owe many thanks for their help and kind attentions. We already realize they are a blessing to the church they serve, as well as to us, and we hope the Lord will bless them.

To the friends also at Sandy Hill, whom we do not know personally, please accept thanks and receipt for $3.25 by the hand of one of the committee—A. A. P. But more anon. Those sending letters, packages, barrels, etc., will please direct to "private rooms," to M. E. Dow, Sec'y., or E. S. Millis, rear No. 169 Allen St., New York.

Correspondence.

From Sr. S. Booth.

BRO. GRANT:—It has been seven years since God for Christ's sake forgave my sins, under the labors of Bro. Travis and Sister M. K. Prescott, who was at that time laboring with the Free Methodists, though not a member of that church, but was trying to get sinners to come to Christ and be saved from the coming wrath of God. I was a member of the Free Methodist church at Ridge Prairie, Ill., five years, during which time my mind was more or less exercised upon the precious truth of God's word, that is now so dear to me; but feeling and seeing the opposition I should meet with among those I loved in my mother church, and fearing that I might embrace error, I thought I would let it rest and try to live a holy life, and God would not condemn me for what I did not know; yet I read that some were willfully ignorant, and some willingly, of the word of God.

But little over two years ago I went into St. Louis to spend a Sabbath. I went to the Advent Mission church where they had meetings. Bro. Flagg had gone East. Bro. S. S. Brewer preached three sermons; one I shall never forget. O with what power and with what a sweet, humble spirit he spoke. It seemed to me that every thing must melt before the truth as I then saw it. I had never heard the Bible explained in such a way before. I then began in good earnest to search God's word and pray with an honest heart that the true light might shine, and that he would lead me by his Spirit into the truth: and by fasting and prayer, and from the best light I had from the blessed Bible, my honest conviction led me to see and believe that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

To my sorrow, I began to find my greatest trials and enemies among brethren and sisters in the church. One of them came to my house and told me I was better out of the church than in it; and that I was a disgrace to them if I embraced such a doctrine; but God helped me to bear it with patience; yet I felt keenly what it was to be wounded in the house of friends. I felt in my poor heart the words of David in Ps. 55 : 12–14. But I felt I must stand for God and truth.

Thus I felt it my duty to withdraw from the church, and did so; but as there was no other place of worship, at times I would go into the prayer-meeting, and some would begin to pray for God to send the devil out of the meeting, and to keep them from being daubed with untempered mortar, and so on. I believe there are good christians among them, and I pray God to bless them in well doing.

I am trying to serve the Lord Jesus, and mean to try and prove faithful. I now love the truth with all my heart, and am earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. In so doing I meet with trials severe from an ungodly world, and from a worldly, lukewarm church; but with all, "they that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be moved, but abideth forever."

If I ever have enjoyed heartfelt religion, it has been since I embraced these blessed truths. O, what harmony there is in God's blessed word. I am sometimes lost in wonder when I hear ministers preach and teach error. God knows whether they are honest; if they are, I hope the time will soon come when they will see the true light in God's word, and give meat in due season to the flock of God.

I rejoice that Bro. A. A. Phelps has received the true light, and I pray God to bless him in sounding the cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" and hope many more of the dear Methodist brethren will see and embrace the truth. There are some at Ridge Prairie who believe these blessed truths, but they have no place for meetings, consequently they have to hold their peace. I now embrace the doctrine of the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, and inheritance of the saints, and the soon coming of Jesus to gather his waiting ones home. O, may we all be ready when he comes to say, "Lo, this is our God, . . . and he will save us."

I am one of the afflicted ones, having walked on crutches for ten years; and when I was first converted I had to sit in my chair and pray, and could not get up to speak for Jesus without them; but I asked the Lord to heal me, so I could kneel down and get up to speak for him without them, and he did so. I ask the prayers of the church that I may be healed fully, and thus be better able to tell the story of the cross. SARAH BOOTH.

Careyville, Ill.

From Sr. J. A. Benson.

Brn. and Srs.:—As I have returned home again from the battle-field, I feel impressed to write you a few lines. I know you want to hear how the battle went on. I was away over three months. I had some refreshing seasons with God's dear children, who are getting ready for the marriage supper of the Lamb. I heard many say they expected to be there, but were making no preparation; but, like Ephraim, they are, or were, joined to their idols. I saw a few brought to Christ out of the many, and I am led to think there will be but a few more saved. I feel deep down in my heart that Jesus is near at hand. Blessed thought!

A year nearer home. Thank the Lord! And the name of home—how it cheers our hearts. Why? Because we are pilgrims and strangers, and this is not our home; but we seek one to come. When those dear ones left their quiet homes to go to the battle-field and face the enemy and suffer hunger, cold, sickness, and almost death itself; when they heard the sound of peace, oh, what joy was in the heart. Why? They were going home. What music was ever so sweet?

Is it any wonder that God's dear children, who have been in the battle for these many years, should rejoice to know they are almost home? Now we may lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draws near.

Bless the Lord, it is sixteen years since I started for the promised land. I am not tired nor weary in the service, but I expect to shout glory when this world is on fire. I want you to pray for me—my health is very poor—that I may recover and go into the field again. The harvest fields are ripe. Jesus is coming, and I want to be ready. I hear the sound of "peace," and the cry of "fear not," but I am afraid that the Bridegroom will come, and many will be left out. I want to hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you."

Here I am sick, and must ask you for aid, that I may not suffer hunger and cold, while I am compelled to stay at home and see what the Lord is about to do with me. But there will be no hunger there; no, the inhabitants shall never say, I am sick. There all things are plentiful, and the trees ever verdant, and the partings of christians no more to be seen. To-day I say with all my heart, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly! JANE A. BENSON.

From Bro. Wm. M. Darrow.

BRO. GRANT:—I felt it duty to preach the gospel in by-gone days, but had never put it into practice very much, until I heard you preach in Edenboro, last June, on the one-talented servants of Christ, who buried their talent which they possessed. I felt as though I had but half a talent given me, but resolved in my heart that hour, if the Lord would open the way, I would improve on what I had, and see if he would not bestow more upon me. The way opened before I left the house for me to make an appointment, and I feel as though the Lord had blessed my labors in that place. I praise his holy name I ever had the plan of salvation revealed unto me, as it is brought to light in his blessed word. And now, shall I put that light under a bushel, and men perish because of the want of it? God forbid, but I will endeavor to let it shine before men as the way may open.

WM. M. DARROW.

Blooming Valley, Pa.

From Bro. J. M. Eaton.

BRO. GRANT:—Eld. N. Glidden has been preaching here part of the time for two months past, with good success. We are truly thankful that the good Lord put it into his heart to come and break the bread of life to us, for we were in a very low state before he came, and have been for years; but God has begun a good work; such a deep work as we have not had for a long time. His preaching has been attended with the Spirit and power of God. Quite a number have been converted, and blacksliders have been reclaimed, and God's children have been strengthened to pursue the heavenly journey. Eight have been buried with Christ in baptism, and the work is still going forward. We desire an interest in the prayers of the brethren and sisters.

Meredith Neck, N. H. J. M. EATON.

From Bro. C. C. Ramsay.

BRO. GRANT:—I suppose you are anxious to hear how we are prospering here. We are being blessed constantly by the Savior. He meets us in our prayer-meetings, and is with us in our preaching. One week ago last Sunday I baptized ten, and there are others who are ready to bear that cross. The interest is constantly increasing, and I trust that the day of judgment will reveal a good work in Chicago. There is great interest to hear in the north and south divisions of the city. O praise God for his word. It cuts its way into the very heart of sectarianism, and also separates them from the world. I tell you, what is needed is live ministers, alive in Christ, who can handle the word to the glory of God. C. C. RAMSAY.

Chicago, Dec. 21st, 1869.

BRO. L. C. MCKINSTRY, Conway, N. H., Dec. 25th, writes:—"The whole community is being stirred. Two preachers, excellent men, and devoted christians, are going to take hold with me. They have got deeply interested in the truth. They heard honestly and without prejudice. Neither of them have yet been ordained, but will be with us soon. I baptized four last Sunday. More will go into the water soon. New ones are constantly starting."

BRO. J. S. ST. JOHN writes:—"We prize the Crisis so highly that we find it difficult to wait for it to come to the post office. It is like a cup of cold water to the thirsty soul; it contains so much that is instructing to the lover of the Bible, the christian's hope of eternal life through Christ, who has brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

Obituaries.

COLE. Died, in Kennebunk, Sept. 7th, 1869, widow Eunice Cole, aged eighty-one years and six months.

Fourscore years is a long period to look at when it is before us, but a short one to look back upon when it is past; and however long the journey of life may be, it finds its close at last; and oh! what a gloomy aspect earth would wear, were there no hope of another life beyond the present; but, thank God, the resurrection brings to view another life that knows no end.

The prospect of that better life was the comfort of our aged sister through long, dreary years of widowhood. She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the call of the trump of God to awake to life eternal. God bless the mourning friends. W. H. MITCHELL.

PARKER. Died of heart disease, at Bear River, Nova Scotia, Nov. 1st, 1869, Charlotte, wife of Wilber Parker, in the sixty-second year of her age.

My dear wife was a member of the Advent church in this place for a long time. She loved the Lord, and was looking for the speedy return of the Savior; but she has gone. While we sorrow, we sorrow not as others who have no hope, for we believe as Jesus died and rose again, so them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Bro. John Woodworth, from Isa. 12 : 2.

WILBER PARKER.

ROBERTS. Fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 19th, 1869, in the 23d year of her age, Sister Mary L. Roberts, a daughter of Bro. and Sr. John E. and Deborah Roberts, of New Harford, Conn.

Funeral from the residence of her brother-in-law, John A. Best. The Father's promise, "Them also that sleep in Jesus God will bring with him" from the dead, is the abiding comfort of the bereaved ones. "The Lord cometh," who is "the resurrection and the life." J. D. B.

Married.

At Manchester, N. H., Jan. 1st, 1870, by Eld. J. W. White, Mr. FREDERIC W. EMERY, of Peterboro, N. H., and Miss FRANK J. CRESSEY, of Manchester, N. H.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MADRID, Dec. 29. Senor Zarilla, Minister of Justice, made a speech at Albacete yesterday, wherein he declared that if the Government cannot find a King, they will throw themselves into the arms of a Republic.

LONDON, Dec. 30. M. Lesseps has telegraphed here a contradiction of the stories as to the dangers accompanying the navigation of that canal. He says that since the canal has been opened to commerce the depth of the very worst points has been increased seventy centimetres.

PARIS, Dec. 28. The Journal Official this morning announces the resignation of the Ministry and the Emperor's determination to accept the same. It contains also a letter from the Emperor to M. Emile Ollivier, requesting him to name the persons who will associate with himself and form a homogeneous Cabinet, faithfully representing the Legislative majority, and resolved to apply in letter and spirit the Senatus consultum of September 8. The Emperor counts on the devotion of the Corps Legislatif to the great interests of the country, no less than on that of M. Ollivier to aid him in the task he has undertaken, that of putting into successful operation a constitutional regime.

The Liberal Paris journals, commenting on the Emperor's letter to M. Ollivier, say that personal government is now at an end in France, and the letter is the first chapter of the Liberal Empire.

LONDON, Dec. 31. Heavy gales have prevailed all around the coast during the past few days. Many shipwrecks, attended in some instances with loss of life, have already been reported.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 31. Sometime since the Sublime Porte sent a demand to Ismael Pacha to abandon his iron-clad fleet. The demand remaining unanswered the Sultan to-day forwarded a violent message to the same effect.

☞ The protection given by Juarez to Evangelical Christians in Puebla and other places has excited the animosity of the old church party and their priests, and the present disorders are engendered by them.

☞ A Bible society has lately been founded in Russia which has already distributed 50,000 copies of the New Testament in the Russian language.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, Dec. 31. Private dispatches from responsible sources in Havana, received here today, state that Valmaseda reports that in his district about seven hundred men with their officers laid down their arms to the Spanish forces, and that in the district of Remedios the Chief Coca and all his men had surrendered. Spanish successes are also reported in the district of Puerto Principe and the surrender of insurgents. The opinion is expressed in the dispatches that the Cuban cause is daily growing weaker.

Havana, Dec. 30. The Governor of Matanzas has issued an order directing all citizens having arms in their possession to deliver the same to the Spanish authorities within two days. Those neglecting to comply with this order will be court martialed.

San Francisco, Dec. 30. Several shocks of earthquake were felt in Virginia City last night and this morning. Some of them were quite severe, and the people were considerably alarmed.

DR. PALMER'S PRAYER MEETING.—Next to Fulton street the weekly meeting held at Dr. Palmer's house is one of the most extraordinary in the city. It has been held for thirty years, on the afternoon of Tuesday. It is composed mainly of those who have obtained what is called the gift of sanctification, or have reached the condition of entire holiness, or of such as are seeking that high plain of christian experience. Dr. Palmer and his wife, at whose house the meeting is held, are both preachers, and usually go together and conduct service in some church. On Tuesday afternoons they throw their parlors open for the meeting, and the rooms are usually crowded. Dr. Palmer and his wife are Methodists, but the meeting is not confined to that sect. Persons from all denominations unite, and black and white men and women take part in the exercises. Dr. Palmer usually presides. The meeting has much of the element of a campmeeting. Much of the talk is experience—how people felt before they were sanctified—how they got the blessing—how they now feel. The utmost freedom of expression is allowed for every emotion of joy and doubt, of "Amens," groans, "glories," "Oh's," and "Ah's," and other indications of feeling. Men and women usually kneel in prayer, and sway back and forth as if in intense agony. It is the custom before the meeting closes to test the state of those present. All who are sanctified are requested to rise; then all who are not; then all who desire the blessing of holiness, as it is called. After which the assembly kneel for commitment, singing as they kneel, "'Tis done, the great transaction's done," or "Take this poor heart."

Mrs. Palmer is evidently the popular element of the meeting. She is a woman above fifty, in shape and appearance resembling Mrs. Lincoln. She has an enthusiastic manner, a full, resonant voice, is intensely in earnest, and evidently sincere, and raises the enthusiasm of the audience to the highest pitch. The meeting is held at No. 23 St. Marks place, and is open to all who wish to attend. A meeting purely devotional, carried on for thirty years, is something of a marvel.—N. Y. Cor. in Boston Journal.

PERSECUTION OF PROTESTANTS IN MEXICO.—A Vera Cruz correspondent of the New York World gives the particulars of an outrageous case of religious persecution in Puebla city. A chapel had been fitted up as a Protestant church. When assembled for worship the congregation was attacked by several hundreds of Catholics, headed by a prominent citizen. Many of the Protestants were roughly handled and the balance forced to leave the church. The mob then tore up the seats, destroyed the pulpit and burned the Bibles found there. The police interfered, made several arrests, and so saved the church from total destruction. The same day an ex-Imperial officer, of the name of Rojano, collected a large crowd of exasperated Catholics, and with them proceeded to the domiciles of the leading Protestants, and insulted and threatened them. The police again interfered, and arrested the ringleaders after a severe fight, and there has been no interference with the Protestants since.

MILK IN NEW YORK.—The New York Board of Health have been investigating the subject of milk adulteration during the summer. The agents of the Board have visited nearly all the milk establishments in the city, and secured specimens of the article on sale. These investigations show that in nearly all cases the milk comes from the wholesale dealer in an adulterated state, but as it passes through the hands of others before reaching the public, it is largely adulterated by each party, until a large portion of what is sold for family use is largely composed of Croton water. Standing milk should contain twelve parts of solids, making the water eighty-eight. In some cases the water ran up to ninety-three, leaving only seven parts of solids.

Religious Items.

— The revival among the students of Oberlin continues. There have been over one hundred conversions there this fall.

— The Roman Catholic Bishop of Buffalo has been refused admission to the Ecumenical Council, and will return home next week.

— Rev. George Pearce is the oldest missionary in India. He has labored there, for the English Baptists, for forty three years.

— Cincinnati, the Queen of the West, is a city of about 300,000 inhabitants, of which nearly 100,000 are Germans, or their descendants. There are eleven German Roman Catholic churches, two large German Reformed congregations, three German Methodist, one Baptist, two Presbyterian, two United Brethren, two Evangelical Association, two Independent, three Rationalistic, and two Lutheran churches.

— The Brooklyn Catholics are building a Cathedral which will cost two millions.

— The Jewish Messenger says that so long as Rabbis consent to the intermarriage of Jews and Christians, and ambitious parents encourage it, "so long the society for propagating the Gospel among the Jews will be needless."

— The New York Herald says the clergy cost the United States $12,000,000 per annum; the criminals $40,000,000; the lawyers $70,000,000, and rum $200,000,000.

— A writer in the Methodist estimates that seventy-nine per cent. of the entire vote of the Methodist Church will be in favor of lay-delegation.

— The Freewill Baptists are beginning to receive Congregationalists into their churches without immersing them.

Passing Events.

☞ Salt Lake City and the Pacific Railroad will be connected by a branch in a few days.

☞ The custom House frauds in New York amount to $1,000,000, and a number of the officials are implicated.

☞ A special fast train of Pullman cars is to leave New York every Saturday for San Francisco. The train stops only for wood and water.

☞ The whole of Eastern Kentucky is reported to be overrun with horse-thieves, whose operations are on such a bold and extensive scale that hardly any citizen dares attempt to own or keep a horse.

☞ A new description of lava is being thrown from the crater of Vesuvius since the last eruption, consisting of a beautiful mass of crystalized salt. This beautiful phenomenon has hitherto been unknown in volcanic natural history.

☞ Spain is in a very unsettled condition. The republicans are making a strong resistance in various parts of the country. Madrid is tranquil, but the police authorities have advised the inhabitants of the city to arm themselves and their servants in order to defend their homes in case of a riot. The insurrection continues to extend.

☞ Napoleon's state dinners cost $5000 apiece, which is $50 a plate.

☞ A curious phenomenon has lately been observed in Germany. Some weeks ago an opening was observed in the earth on a chain of hills near Mergentheim. It has gradually increased in extent, assuming the form of a long fissure, about five feet in breadth with perpendicular sides, and of a great depth, estimated at four hundred feet.

☞ Russia not only kicks at the general plan of disarmament, but is buying chassepots wherever she can lay hands upon them.

☞ Castelar, the Spanish orator and enthusiast, is suffering severely from nervous disease, the result of great excitement during the recent revolution.

☞ The session of the Ecumenical Council yesterday lasted five hours. The subject under discussion was "whether philosophy was heterodox."

☞ Prussia is very much agitated over the mission of the French ambassador at the Russian court, and is doing all it can to counteract French influence in the country of the Czars.

☞ There are eleven convents in Philadelphia.

☞ Princess Metternich is a midnight missionary, and has reformed fifty fallen women.

☞ The Cracow Convent scandal has been the subject of a trial in one of the courts of that city. The present and late superiors of the convent have been tried and acquitted of the charge of having illegally and cruelly imprisoned and otherwise maltreated the nun Barbara Ubryk. The defence was that Sister Ubryk was a lunatic.

☞ Some of the largest factories of Meriden, Ct., have closed on account of the dulness of business.

☞ The emigration of Swedes to this country is so great that last year the population of Sweden actually decreased.

☞ The free thinkers' council, held in Naples, in opposition to the Ecumenical Council at Rome, was closed by the authorities. The reason given is that the members raised cries of "Down with the Emperor of the French," and "Long live the Republic." An open air demonstration in opposition to the Ecumenical Council and in honor of Savonarola took place in Florence. Father Gavazzi was among the speakers, and his attacks upon the papacy were received with a good deal of cheering.

☞ A Western man has invented an "ink pencil" which is said to be the best thing yet. It consists of a tube about the size of an ordinary pencil, containing ink. Near the points of the pencil is a little iron stopper, resting on a spiral spring inside. When the point of the pencil is placed on the paper, the stopper is forced up and the ink flows evenly, without blotting the paper. It needs no adjustment, and can be carried around in the pocket.

☞ In the fruit-growing counties of Delaware the farmers gather up the refuse and unmerchantable peaches and apples and make them into brandy worth three dollars a gallon.

☞ Rev. Mrs. Hannaford has received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the first Universalist Church and Society in New Haven, at a salary of $2500. It is a large and influential society, and the field is one of much usefulness.

☞ The best sign for the peace of Europe is found in the fact that the Powers are preparing themselves so splendidly for war. Here is the sick man himself a buyer in our markets of three hundred and fifty thousand Springfield muskets.—N. Y. Herald.

☞ New York has 200 gambling houses, 3,000 professional gamblers, and $1,500,000 capital invested in the game, while 60,000 change hands nightly over the cards.

☞ It is stated that Pere Hyacinthe has received a dispatch from Rome to come there immediately.

☞ Twenty thousand men roam the streets of Chicago, out of work.

☞ Mexico is partly in a state of insurrection. There are bodies of armed insurgents at several places, and the country is full of pronunciamentos.

☞ It is authoritatively stated that the loss of life by kerosene is greater than by railroad and steamboat accidents combined.

Notices.

Mass. State Conference.

The next Quarterly Conference of Mass. will be holden at Chelsea, Library Hall, to commence January 6th, at half past ten, and to be continued over the Sabbath, and longer if thought best. Let there be a grand rally from all parts of the State, and a full representation from every church. Let there be much prayer for this meeting, and let us come together filled with the spirit of the Lord, expecting a mighty work will be done for the salvation of sinners, and quickening of the dear saints. S. W. THURBER, President.
P. S. BUTLER, Secretary.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

The Lord will, the first quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference of 1870 will be held at Dover, N. H., Ham's Hall, commencing Wednesday, Jan. 12th, at ten o'clock A. M., and holding over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to be there to preach the word of life. Let all come to the feast. T. W. PIPER.

Protracted Meeting in Brimfield.

The Lord willing, we shall commence a series of meetings in Brimfield, Mass., Sabbath, Jan. 9th, and continue through the following week.
T. M. PREBLE.
E. McCULLOCK.

Minnesota Conference.

The eighth annual conference of the Advent Christian Church of Minnesota will be held (D.V.) in Monticello, commencing Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, Jan. 13th, and will continue over the following Sunday. All the members are particularly invited to be present, or report by letter. Churches are also requested to send delegates, or report by letter. THOS. K. ALLEN, Sec.

Notice.

There will be preaching in Roxbury, Ct., Sunday, Jan. 2d, 1870, at the house of Levi R. Teeple, by Bro. Chas. C. Barker. Will the brethren and sisters from abroad come to this house and worship with us, that we may have a feast? All are invited. In behalf of the cause of God, and the love of the truth, SUSAN E. TEEPLE.

Notice.

A quarterly meeting of the Union Female Missionary Association will be holden at Meredith Village, N. H., commencing Jan. 5th, 1870, at two o'clock P. M., and will hold over the following Sabbath. Arrangements have been made with the Boston, Concord and Montreal Rail Road to give free return passes to all who may choose to attend the Association from any station on the road, and efforts will be made to secure the same favor on the Concord and Portsmouth, Manchester and Lawrence, and Manchester and Nashua R. R. Persons purchasing full fare tickets to the meeting, will receive return passes, signed by the Secretary, good through the meeting.

The hall where the meeting is to be held, is an excellent one, new and commodious. The place is pleasantly situated. But little preaching of the present truth message has been had there, and it is hoped that the sisters of the Association, the members, and all others who can, will attend this meeting. The few brethren and sisters in the place and vicinity will do all they can to entertain those who may come.

The train up arrives at Meredith Village at noon, and the train down at two o'clock P. M. All who attend the meeting, will come at once to Lake Hall, and arrangements will be made for their comfort. Come to work for Jesus, and save the perishing. M. McKINSTRY.

Ministerial Conference.

By invitation of the church in Bangor, the Maine Ministerial Conference will be held in Bangor, commencing Tuesday, January 11th, 1870, and continue as long as thought proper. We hope to see a full attendance of the ministering brethren from all parts of the State to labor in the name of the Lord for the advancement of the great truth of our day, the coming and kingdom of Christ and of God. C. GOUD, President.
R. R. YORK, Vice President.

It will be remembered that the Maine State Conference was merged into the Ministerial Conference, at its last session, in Richmond; and article six of its constitution amended, by inserting so much of the constitution of the State conference, as provides for a delegation from the several churches and societies in the State, who are in harmony with this conference, and wish to share in its labors; viz., one delegate for each church or society, and one additional for every ten members. We hope, therefore, to see a full delegation from all the churches and societies in the State.
C. GOUD, President.

Notice.

By invitation of the church at New Britain, the next quarterly session of the A. C. Conference will convene at New Britain, Conn. Services to commence Wednesday evening, Jan. 12th, 1870. Business session at ten o'clock A. M., Thursday. Let every church be represented, and all come with a hearty good will to work for the Lord. Letters and communications can be sent to the Secretary previous to the meeting, at 189 Orchard Street, New Haven, Conn.
GEORGE L. TEEPLE, Sec. of Conf.

Notice.

The next session of the R. I. and E. Conn. Conference will be held with the Advent church in Bristol, R. I., on the 5th, 6th, and 7th of January, 1870. Come, preachers and delegates, make one more rally for the conference. Let us begin the work of the incoming year in earnest.
A. DURFEE, President of Conf.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a series of meetings in East Otis, Mass., Jan. 5th, and hold them over the following Sabbath. Brethren and sisters, we desire your attendance. Come one, come all. W. J. RIPLEY.
E. PHELPS.

To all whom it may Concern.

At the Alton Bay Campmeeting, I spoke one afternoon, after which there was a collection taken, which had been talked over by some of the friends for the mission. I knew nothing of the affair, but there seemed to be a mistake, and Sr. Smith gave me the money, every cent, in the name of the Lord, right there; but some said I never got it. May the Lord help us to get all these things out of the way before Jesus comes.
JANE A. BENSON.

Notice.

The Advent Church in Rochester hold their meetings on the Sabbath at Washington Hall, Main Street, one of the largest and best halls in the city. H. PRATT.

Notice.

I have removed from Danielsonville, Conn., to North Springfield, Vt., and friends are requested to address me henceforth at this place.
H. F. CARPENTER.

German Tracts.

Bro. Reimer has a good supply. Send your orders to L. REIMER, 106 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Notice.

LOST, at the Windham Campmeeting, Ct., Aug. 21st, 1869, a medium sized trunk, black leather, iron-bound, rather rough looking, leather flap and key hole, two leather straps fastened to the back and buckled in front, and two leather handles at each end, same color of the trunk, containing campmeeting clothing, bed quilt, etc. Said trunk was sent down to the cars with other baggage, and was probably sent east, and put off with other baggage at some station on the H. P. and F. R. R., when it should have gone west. If any one knows any thing about the above described trunk, they will please inform the owner by addressing her at Fair Haven, Ct., Box 135, and oblige,
HARRIET C. CLARK.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. ALBERT LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
John G. Hook……………Friday evening, Jan. 7th and Sundays, Jan. 9th and 16th.

BOSTON, SOUTH END, (Minot Hall), corner of Washington and Springfield Streets.)
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
C. Goodrich……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Geo. A. Streeter……………Sunday, Jan. 23d

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
J. W. Brittan……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Geo. A. Streeter……………Sunday, Jan. 16th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
T. M. Preble……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
D. M. Leavitt……………Sunday, Jan. 16th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.
T. M. Preble……………Sunday, Jan. 2nd
S. C. Hancock……………Sunday, Jan. 9th

Melbourne Village……………Thursday evening, Jan. 6th and onward. MILES GRANT.

Holden, Mass……………January 9th
J. S. WHITE.

Lynn, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 30th
M. BATCHELOR.

Southington, Ct……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
ALBION ROSS.

North Springfield, Vt……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Bridgewater, Vt……………Sundays, Jan. 16th and 23d
Plymouth, Vt., (Union Hall)……………evenings, Jan. 13th and 14th.
Dinsmore Hill……………evenings, Jan. 24th and 25th
H. F. CARPENTER.

West Abington, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
ENOCH MORRILL.

Salem, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Carver, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
GEO. A. BROWN.

Brimfield, Mass……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
Savoy, Mass……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Hartford, Conn……………Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
E. McCULLOCK.

South Berwick, Me., Great Works, Sabbath, Jan. 9th
Seabrook, N. H……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
A. MUSSEY TRIPP.

Webster, Mass……………Jan. 8th, and over the Sabbath, and onward, if the Lord directs, until Friday.
Square Pond, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. MUNGER.

Providence, R. I……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Lynn, Mass……………Tuesday evening, Jan. 11th
Charlestown, (as Bro. Stope may appoint), evening, Jan. 13th.
Orrington, Me., (Chapel)……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
North Hermon……………Sunday, Jan. 30th
Holden, (at Chapel)……………Sunday, Feb. 6th
GEO. W. BROWN.

Seabrook, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
N. M. DAVIS.

West Romney, N. H., (Plain school-house), Sabbaths, Jan. 16th and 23d.
Will Bro. Wm. H. Shaw meet me there one of those days? C. W. NELSON.

Melvin Village, N. H……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
South Wolfborough, evening, Jan. 11th, through the week, and over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. G. Smith is expected to be with me at this meeting.
Nottingham (baptism)……………Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Wakefield, Mass……………Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Manchester, N. H……………Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. MOONEY.

Warehousepoint, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
Vernon, Vt……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. HIGGINS.

North Raymond……………Saturday evening, Jan. 15th over Sunday, and longer if thought best.
J. T. JORDAN.

Hampton, N. H……………Jan. 6th, and over the Sabbath
East Rochester, N. H……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Wakefield, (Spinney meeting-house), Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Porter, Me……………Sabbath, Jan. 30th
East Canaan……………Sabbath, Feb. 6th
If these conflict, please write me.
D. F. LEAVITT.

Collinsville, Ct……………Friday evening, Jan. 7th
Pleasant Valley, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
West Winsted……………Monday evening, Jan. 10th
Wrightville……………Tuesday evening, Jan. 11th
Camp's Mills……………Wednesday evening, Jan. 12th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

New Durham, (2nd division)……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
J. W. HORNE.

Bristol, Ct……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
R. K. STARK.

Brunswick, Me., (yellow school-house), Saturday evening, Jan. 8th, and Sabbath A. M. Bath, P. M. and evening.
Richmond, (Reed meeting-house)……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Bowdoin……………Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Brunswick, (yellow school-house), Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. D. REED.

Millport, Chemung Co., N. Y., (as Bro. Cole and others may arrange), evening, Jan. 7th, and over the Sabbath.
Hungerford, (school-house, south of Byersville), Livingston Co., N. Y., Sunday evening, Jan. 16th.
D. COOSWELL.

New York, Sunday, Jan. 9th, to commence a series of protracted meetings for two weeks.
Springfield, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
East Savoy, Mass., (at the new Chapel just built), Sunday, Jan. 30th, to commence a series of protracted meetings. H. K. FLAGG.

Hampton, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Dover, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
Melvin Village, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 30th
T. W. PIPER.

Keene, N. H……………Sundays, Jan. 23d and 30th
A. SIMPSON.

Fairhaven, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
L. BOUTELL.

Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house), Sun., Jan. 9th
South Berwick, Me., (Great Works), Sunday, Jan. 16th
Seabrook, N. H……………evening, Jan. 25th and over the following Sunday. J. PINKHAM.

Warren Summit, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
North Haverhill, N. H., (Sr. Glazier's), eve., Jan. 11th
LEVI ALLEN.

Moultonborough, N. H., (Red Hill), Saturday evening, Jan. 22d, and over Sunday, the 23d. Ordination expected. T. W. PIPER, J. G. SMITH, L. ALLEN.

Poultney, Vt……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
(Brethren, please give notice to all.)
Rutland, Vt……………evening, Jan. 12th
Montreal, P. Q……………Sunday, Jan. 16th, and onward.
(Dansville and Quebec noticed hereafter.)
J. B. COOK.

Seymour, Ct., (Great Hill Church), Sunday, Jan. 16th
South Windsor, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

Morris, Ct……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
East Haddam, Ct……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
G. L. WHITE.

Jay, (Blaisdell school-house)……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. B. SEVEY.

Plymouth, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Elliot, Me……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
F. H. BURBANK.

Square Pond, Ct……………Sabbaths, Jan. 9th and Feb. 6th
P. S. BUTLER.

South Windsor, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Prospect, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
S. WOODRUFF.

Starks, Me……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
E. M. HAGGETT.

Springfield, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
RUFUS WENDELL.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
D. W. DAVIS.

Great Falls, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
East Rochester, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
WM. C. STEWART.

Meredith Village……………evening, Jan. 5th and over the following Sabbath at W. F. M. Association: L. C. & M. McKINSTRY.

Milville, Mass……………Sunday, Jan. 9th and through the week. GEO. A. STREETER.

Portsmouth, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Strafford, N. H., (Roberts' school-house) Sun., Jan. 30th
J. G. SMITH.

Hopkinton, (Town Hall building)……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Lake Village, N. H., (North Church), Sun., Jan. 16th
C. W. SARGENT.

Exeter, N. H……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
A. M. HIGGINS.

Bangor……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
ISRAEL DAMMON.

Millville, Mass……………evenings, Jan. 4th and 5th
Charlton, Mass……………evening, Jan. 7th and over the Sabbath. A. D. FLAGG.

Bristol, R. I., (Conference)……………Jan. 5th, 6th, and 7th
Abington, Ct……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
Millville, Mass……………evening, Jan. 12th
Charlton, Mass……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
C. H. SWEET.

Hartford, (Talcott and Post's (Hall), Sunday, Jan. 9th
W. N. PILE.

Seabrook, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Jan. 9th
Webster, N. H., (old meeting-house), Sabbath, Jan. 16th.
Lake Village, N. H……………Sabbath, Jan. 30th
SOLOMON ROBY.

Newport Centre, Vt., (as Bro. Ladd may arrange), evening, Jan. 12th, and over the following Sunday, and from there to Canada. Will some Bro. meet me at Newport, on the arrival of the evening train?
Z. FORD.

Cohocton, N. Y……………Jan. 22nd and 23d
Blooming Valley, Pa., (as friends may arrange), Jan. 26th, and over Sunday.
Little Cooly……………Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Edenboro……………Feb. 4th and over two Sundays
Campton's Corners, (four miles from Edenboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sharps' Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Cohocton……………Feb. 19th and 20th
C. F. SWEET.

Hartland, (Town Hall)……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Waterbury, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
Lovely Street, Ct……………Sunday, Jan. 30th
WM. J. RIPLEY.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
Rufus Wendell……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
James Hemenway……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. K. Flagg……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. N. Pile……………Sunday, Jan. 30th

WESTFIELD, MASS.
A. Simpson……………Sundays, Jan. 9th and 16th
Wm. A. & M. L. Durand……………Sunday, Jan. 30th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
Z. Ford……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
P. S. Butler……………Sabbaths, Jan. 16th, 23d and 30th

STONEHAM, MASS.
D. M. Leavitt……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
J. S. White……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
C. Goodrich……………Sunday, Jan. 23d

STOWE, MASS.
Moses Young……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Chas. H. Wyman……………Sunday, Jan. 16th

LAWRENCE, MASS., (ADVENT CHAPEL.)
John Couch……………Jan. 9th, 16th, 23d and 30th

WORCESTER, MASS.
T. M. Preble……………Sabbath, Jan. 16th
J. Couch……………Sunday, Jan. 23d

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
J. G. Smith……………Sabbath, Jan. 9th
J. W. Thomas……………Sabbaths, Jan. 16th and 23d

EXETER, N. H.
Mark Stevens……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
John Parsons……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
Albion Ross……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. Higgins……………Sunday, Jan. 30th
Joseph Harvey……………Sunday, Feb. 6th

DOVER, N. H.
B. S. Emery……………Sunday, Jan. 9th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
C. H. Fletcher……………Sabbaths, Jan. 9th and 16th
D. M. Leavitt……………Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
J. Hemenway……………Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Ross……………Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
S. W. Thurber……………Sunday, Jan. 16th and on as the Lord directs.

PORTLAND, ME.
W. H. Mitchell……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
C. Goodrich……………Sunday, Jan. 16th
A. Ross……………Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

SOUTH ELLIOTT, ME.
Wm. Stuart……………Sunday, Jan. 9th

NEW BRITAIN, CT.
H. H. Dickenson……………Sunday, Jan. 9th
Wm. N. Pile……………Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. Stuart……………Sunday, Jan. 30th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.
B. Hitchcock……………Sunday, Jan. 16th

Windsor, Me. (Preble school-house), every second Sabbath of the month until further notice. Church Hill, Augusta, third Sabbath. Mud Mills, Augusta, fourth Sabbath. THOMAS RINES.

PORTLAND, ME.
Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

NEW YORK CITY.
The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 405 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Wyoming, R. I……………1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I……………2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I……………3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I……………4th Sabbath in each month
A. DURFEE.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for Loudon Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. E. WELLS, 32 Smith Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 Markham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hecock.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED
BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.
Price in cloth……………75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers……………60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers……………50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.
Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.
Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 81 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.
A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.
BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.
A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.
A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and other statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. 142 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Business.

Letters Received.

L Price, D J Ellsworth, J T Kimball, P Tandy, J J Tuttle, N Lasell, J G Burnham, P M Eaton, S W Austin, J A Benson, M Arnold, J C Bowker, P S W Deyo, D C Corwin, J D Brown, W H Mitchell, W K Everson, C H Leverston, E N Shaford, J S St. John, H Munger, R S Mellen, S S Chamberlain, F H Chamberlain, D B Bridge, L C Mattox, A W Ballet, G W Howard, C Tuller, W J Hobbs, J M Bryant, L J Adams, H Pratt, C Colegrove, J A Cleaveland, J Taylor, W O Higley, A Homenway, B W D., C Mendenhall, J W Morrow.

Cash received for Books and Tracts.

J W White $12.24, S S Brewer $1.75, J Cook $1.00, J Hill 80c, S Cronce 75c, P Cannan 80c, C Keeve 85c, J J Mahew $1.75, J W Morrow $5.80, H Dickie $1.00, H L Hastings $34.10, E D Kentfield 50c, J E Gage 50c, W L Pell $1.00, G W Burnham $1.00, A Stiles 35c, T Devoe 35c, A Devereux $2.00, E Garland $1.25, S L Manley $18.50, S Smith 50c, J V Himes $2.00, W Kidney 35c, H Rotherham $1.00, A F Randall 50c, J A Jordan $3.00, L E Wise 70c, J W Thomas 85c, O D Hopkins $1.20, C Thompson $2.40, N Proctor $4.36, R Price 50c, J G Morrison 35c, M T Muchmore $1.15, H H Warn 50c, H Bailey $1.00, H Austin 80c, T L Roberts 80c, R Ticknor 50c, J W Brooks $2.00, Mrs. R Beardsley 50c, L A Eaton $1.03, A H Ward $3.00, C F Lathrop $1.25, L J Wallace $1.50, V N Edwards 50c, J L McFarland $2.50.

Books and Tracts Sent.

By Mail.—P Cannon, E Davis, J J Smith, J Hill, C Keve, A Stockbridge, J Taylor, H Dakie, J L Small, W Miller, G. A Covill, J C Gage, E A Kentfield, E L Garland, A Devereux, T Devoe, A Stile, G W Burnham, W. L Pell, H Ratherham, Mrs L Bedell, G E Hooper, F Quinter, H A Powers, M. F. Kimball, S. Smith, A Ingalls, J A Jordan, D D Reed, A F Randall, T L Hough, J K Hastings, C Thompson, Eld. D. O Hopkins, J W Thomas, J McCannon, B Price, L E Wise, R Price, P S Butler, M T Muchmore, J G Morrison, H H Warn, T L Roberts, H Austin, C N Gray, W M Gray, S A Carpenter, W S Storms, C F Lathrop, A W Ward, Lizzie A Eaton, V N Edwards, Mrs. B. Bradley, J L McFarlin, J Jay, D B Bridge, L C Mattox.

By Express.—S Roby, N Procter, H Holden, Eld. J Hemenway, T N Willong, J C Shorey.

BOOKS AND TRACTS
FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE
Advent Christian Publication Society,
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, postpaid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.25; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.50. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 60c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 224. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 30c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 460 pp. $1.25.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL and the Scriptural Millennium," by I. C. Wellcome and Clarkson Goud. Price 25c; postage 2c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By I. C. Wellcome. pp. 81. Price by mail, 25c.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

THE MILLENNIUM. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 60 pp. Single copy 15c.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c., postpaid.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

OUR LOSS IN ADAM OUR GAIN IN CHRIST. A valuable tract on the Atonement. By H. F. Carpenter. 5c. single copy, by mail; 40c. per dozen.

THE BIBLE, OR TRADITION—Which shall Believe?" An excellent tract. By S. L. Manley. 3c. single copy by mail; 20c. per dozen.

"ONE MORE INVITATION." A tract of four pages. By mail, 35c. per 100 copies.

NEW HYMN BOOK.
"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."
WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—
Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.
Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 18 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—
Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.
Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.
Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.
☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR,
A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.
376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.
The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."
AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.
BY ELDER J. COUCH.
Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

Selected for the Crisis.

We found this good old hymn in our researches, and were so much pleased with it, except in some slight unscriptural expressions, that we have copied it, made such alterations in it as will make it harmonize with the Scriptures of truth, and send it to "our paper." Let the travelers to Zion sing it.

L. L. McKinstry.

THE WEARY TRAVELER.

Tune.—"The Weary Traveler."

Come, all ye weary travelers,
Now let us join and sing
The everlasting praises
Of Jesus Christ our King.
We've had a tedious journey,
And tiresome, 'tis true;
But see how many dangers
The Lord has brought us through.
Chorus—"Palms of victory," etc.

At first when Jesus found us,
He called us unto him;
And pointed out the danger
Of falling into sin.
The world, the flesh and Satan,
He said would prove a snare;
Unless we should resist them
By faith and humble prayer.

We've oft been disappointed,
With sorrow, we confess;
We have had long to wander
In a dark wilderness;
Where we might long have fainted
In the enchanted ground,
But now and then a cluster
Of pleasant grapes we've found.

The pleasant fruits of Canaan
Give comfort, joy and peace;
Revive our drooping spirits,
And make our strength increase
To own our Lord and Master,
And run at his command,
And hasten on our journey
Unto the promised land.

In faith and hope and patience,
We often do rejoice;
And Jesus and his people
For ever are our choice.
In peace and consolation,
We now are marching on
The pleasant road to Canaan,
Till Jesus Christ shall come.

Sinners, why stand ye idle,
While we thus march along?
Has Jesus never told you
That you are in the wrong?
We're sorry thus to leave you;
We rather you would go;
Come, try a bleeding Savior,
And see what he will do.

Then to the King immortal
We'll sing our joyful praise,
While in his holy service
We spend these toilsome days;
And soon we will shout victory
O'er sin and death and hell;
When we are made immortal,
We'll this glad chorus swell.
Chorus—"Palms of victory," etc.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVENTY WEEKS.

"Seventy weeks are determined [or cut off] upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy."—Dan. 9: 24.

I believe the prophetic periods reveal the time of the second advent, and when they are correctly understood, we can tell about when that time is. Several specified periods of time have passed in which many have looked for the Savior; consequently the disappointments; and the time has come when there appears to be an indifference manifested upon this subject. Where some have failed, others may yet be successful. It is true, the repeated failures are a serious drawback; but we are not to give up. "While there is life there is hope."

The words of the prophecy of Daniel were shut up, and the book sealed even to "the time of the end"; then (at the time of the end) they were to be understood, being unsealed. "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand" (the vision of course). One important question is, whether the 2300 days and the seventy weeks are so connected together that both have one starting point? Are the seventy weeks a part of the 2300 days? Gabriel was commanded to make Daniel understand the vision, "for at the time appointed [2300 days] the end shall be." Gabriel promises to fulfill the command given him. Subsequent to this Daniel is heard to say, "I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it." Up to this time, Daniel was not informed fully concerning the vision. He did not understand it. We must look for Gabriel to make the prophet another visit. We find by turning to the ninth chapter that Gabriel appeared a second time some sixteen years afterwards. "Yea [says Daniel], while I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning [this is the vision of the 2300 days in the eighth chapter], being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation, . . and said, . . "I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding."

There was something about the vision that Daniel did not understand. This second interview of Gabriel with Daniel was to give him skill and understanding. He commands Daniel to understand the vision. What vision? Why, the vision that he had seen at the beginning, recorded in the eighth chapter, concerning the treading under foot of the sanctuary and the host. Gabriel did not come a second time to show Daniel a vision, but to give him skill and understanding of a vision which he had previously seen. This is just what Gabriel was commanded to do in the eighth chapter, and just what he says he came to do in the ninth chapter. First comes the vision in the eighth chapter, then an explanation of it in the ninth chapter. I conclude all is plain thus far. It will be seen there is an immediate connection between the vision of the eighth chapter and the explanation as given by the angel in the ninth chapter; a conclusive fact that the seventy weeks are a part of the 2300 days, being the first part of the vision.

The next question is, What do the seventy weeks measure? and when did they terminate? It reads, "Seventy weeks are determined [or cut off] upon thy people, and upon thy holy city," etc. These seventy weeks certainly relate to the holy city, as well as other things; and as they must have their termination at the latest event included in a series of events, they cannot end till they arrive at that event. The latest events in the series here mentioned are the giving up of the holy city and Daniel's people, for sins and transgressions. Till that time their apostasy was not complete. Nor did our Lord ever direct his disciples to abandon the Jews until they should "see Jerusalem compassed about with armies." This was the signal for them to leave the holy city, then, at that time, given up of God. Then had "transgression" come to its full, and was to be restrained no longer. The two factions who shared the city at the time of the siege were the worst of villains; and had not the Romans come, the city would have been destroyed like Sodom and Gomorrah; for, says Josephus, the inhabitants were more wicked. This pitch of wickedness at which they had arrived, when the Romans compassed about Jerusalem, was the point to which our Savior referred in addressing his disciples, and also when he said to the Pharisees, "Fill ye up, then, the measure of your fathers"; which work they had fully accomplished by killing them which were sent unto them. To that point of time, it is clear to my mind, Gabriel looked in the prophecy of the seventy weeks; —"upon thy people and upon thy holy city"; therefore I believe the seventy weeks terminated when the Roman armies compassed about Jesusalem, between A. D. 65 and 67.

When the period of seventy years of desolations by Babylon and the Medes terminated, God, by Gabriel, designated another period of seventy weeks of years for a further trial of Daniel's people, and continued favor to the holy city. If this proved ineffectual, they would then be visited with more awful judgments than ever before. Our Savior, foreseeing the awful judgments that would overtake that people and their city, exclaimed, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem," etc. But, alas! their house was left to them desolate. The fatal hour arrived, the seventy weeks were fulfilled, and the time had come when their sacrifices and oblations should cease, their city be destroyed, and that once chosen and cherished people scattered, and Jerusalem to be "trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Having shown that the seventy weeks bring us down to the time when Jerusalem was compassed about with armies and the iniquity of that people filled up, we suppose the angel next gives the time of the first advent of the Messiah, by introducing another set of periods, viz., the seven and sixty-two weeks, which we have not time to notice here. The seventy weeks (or 490 years) I think comprise the first part of the 2300 day-vision, leaving 1810 years for the last part, which, if my views in this article be correct, will terminate between A. D. 1875 and A. D. 1877.

Fair Haven, Ct. J. E. Clark.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW YEAR.

Through the indulgence of a kind Father, we are again permitted to see the dawn of a new year in this world's history. The old year, with all its cares, sorrows and turmoils, has gone forever. The past year has been laden with signs and wonders, that are cheering to the poor, care-worn child of God, journeying towards the celestial city. What changes have been wrought in our midst! Cruel death has removed many loved ones; friends have proved false, and we all have had much to try and disappoint us. On the other hand, how much we have for which to be thankful. Our lives have been spared, and blessings both temporal and spiritual have been enjoyed by even the most unfortunate of us. How grateful every heart should be to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "Abstain from every appearance of evil." Walk close in the footsteps of our great Exemplar, and we shall indeed know the sweets of religion.

In looking over the past, we see how many opportunities we have lost that might have been employed in serving our Master's cause. We see many crooked paths we have made. How often we have stumbled and almost fallen; but, thank God, as our day is, so shall our strength be. We must not mourn over the past, but let it be a lesson to us to keep nearer the cross. Let us resolve with the new year to consecrate everything to Christ, praying to God to fit us out with the full armor of righteousness; then we can withstand the temptations of this life, and be ready to welcome our dear Redeemer when he shall come again to reign on the new earth. It will not be long that we have to struggle; for every day tells us that Christ is near at hand, even at the door. Then death will be destroyed; we shall live with that Friend whose love changes not. How willing we should be to serve him, and do his will, though it may seem at times a sacrifice. God grant that we may be faithful followers of the meek and lowly Jesus; that our light may shine before the world, showing that we are indeed his disciples.

Dear fellow christians, let us so live that we may be ready to greet him when he shall make his second advent; for we know he will literally come from heaven, even as he went up into heaven. Let us not be hearers only, but doers of the word. We must all work, for soon the night will come when no man can work. Take courage, weary, desponding one; start with new vigor, ever watchful for the signs of his coming; ever ready to warn our fellow creatures of the wrath to come. God grant that we may be kept from all sin, and be found among those that are to be saved.

"Oh, what a blessed hope is ours!
While here on earth we stay;
We more than taste the heavenly powers,
And antedate that day."

Wilmington. C. Mendenhall.

For the World's Crisis.

BACK IN THE MOUNTAINS.

There is a great contrast between city life and life in the mountains. For two or three weeks, it has been my lot to labor over in the valley, west of the Green Mountains, in No. Adams and No. Pownal, Vt., near the corner of three States—Vt., Mass., and N. Y. The congregation was made up from these three States, but mostly from North Pownal. It was considered one of the hardest places known for religious influence to settle, but God has his own way to get the dispensational truth before the people. About two years ago, he sent a little weak sister, Ellen Otis (now Tousley), into this place, to hold a meeting in a private house. God began to work among some of the hardest ones. The work increased; stout, wicked men bowed to the Spirit's influence; others dreamed strange dreams about their condition, and came out on the Lord's side, until the whole community was stirred. This little frail sister was more than a match for the stoutest opposing hearts, which was marvelous in the eyes of sectarianism and bigotry, which began as usual to oppose the work by saying she was an "Adventist," and warned the people against going out to hear her, for she would break up the church, etc. As her health was delicate, and opposition strong, she felt the need of help, and asked me to help give the truth in the Centre. The Lord opened the way, and here I am in the midst of opposition, ignorance, and bigotry, holding meetings every evening, and helping the invalids during the day with the Prussian Resuscitator, to the astonishment of the people; so I have both the doctor and clergy down on me, but God is with us and light is spreading. Backsliders and sinners are trembling, and acknowledging the truth.

There are some of the fruits of Bro. Batchelor's labors left yet, and they rejoice to see a revival of the truth. Some that opposed him are among the converts, and would be glad to see him. Cannot he come up here again? They like old fashions here. I must speak of my position while writing. The contrast is so different from city life. I am in an old-fashioned house and family. The grandfather cleared up the land, helped drive out the bears and other wild beasts back into the mountains. They lived on plain food, such as bear porridge, pork and beef, soup, brown bread, etc. The three previous generations lived to be from ninety to one hundred and over. They raised their own living, and manufactured their own cloth. I am now stopping with one of the fourth generation. She is on borrowed time—seventy-three—smart and well; goes out nursing her sick relatives; is the mother of eleven children, and all grown up to have families. She says she never hired any help, but spun and wove all the cloth for her great family for summer and winter. Some years she spun and wove over one hundred pounds of wool into cloth, besides all the flax for the summer wear. What a contrast with city females, who disobey the laws of nature by following the fashions, and, with a family of even two children, they must have a servant to wait upon them. This woman has raised eleven children, and is grandmother to twenty-nine. Temperance in all things has produced this effect. Old fashions are best for health. I am now sitting in a chair and writing on a stand over one hundred years old, and looking at a dress on the old lady twenty-four years old, and good enough yet to wear to meeting, which she did last evening, two miles from home, to hear the truth, which she received with joy. She told me her best calico dress is thirty years old.

What a contrast in dressing expenses. The old machinery is now in the building that manufactured the cloth for this great family, and the motive power that drove it. She said she made all her girls learn to spin and work, so that if it became necessary, they could make their own cloth. (A good forethought.) I am thinking if manufactures should stop, how many of our women could produce cloth for a garment. How would the city ladies appear, compared to the country girls? Their pride would soon have a great fall. Variety of circumstances produce a variety of thought, which is the spice of life.

Do not think, by what I have said, that I unchristianize our city-women for not doing what this sister has done. I only want to show the contrasts we meet in our travels to spread the light. We must witness these two extremes, but the most is needless expense, to keep up the fashions of these last days while there are so many poor people destitute even of comfortable clothing. Which of you can spare something? Many will say, We have none to give. Well, I and my wife thought just so awhile ago, as we are very prudent. On hearing of a poor family, we began to look over our scanty wardrobe, and we were astonished at the number of articles that we could spare in the way of coats, pants, vests, dresses, etc. We sent them to the destitute ones, and they were thankfully received, I assure you; and you will be equally astonished if you will but make the search in your closets, and thereby make some poor hearts glad. This is a hard winter for the poor; do not let anything lie idle that you do not use. Will you look and see what you can do? Yes, says one. Then you will do something that will be a blessing to some one, and also to yourself.

Winter begins, says the almanac, on the 21st of Dec.; and that brings to my mind the first verse of poetry I ever learned:

"Now winter has come with his cold chilling breath,
And the leaves have dropped from the trees;
All nature seems touched with the finger of death,
And streams are beginning to freeze."

In the mountainous section where I am, the wind is howling, the streams are freezing, and the storm is raging. It puts me in mind of the poor, and the old proverb: "Whoso forgets the poor forgets God; and he that remembers God remembers the poor."

Yours, up in the mountains, where the people are all stirred up about the doctrine; some scolding, others swearing and lying, others rejoicing in the truth; and so the battle is set in array, and we expect victory in the Lord before the week is out. Hiram Munger.

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE BIBLE THE WORD OF GOD?

AN UNANSWERABLE ARGUMENT.

"The Bible the word of God? No!" exclaims a thoughtless young sceptic; "it is the invention of men."

"But the Bible claims to be the word of God, does it not?"

"Yes; the men who wrote it pretend that they 'spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost'; and they tell us that what they said was a 'Thus saith the Lord.' But that was only a cunning deception, in order to make men the more readily believe it."

"If the Bible, then, is not what it claims to be, it is an imposture, you think; and its 'inventors' are deceivers and liars?"

"Exactly."

"But good men would not lie and deceive, would they?"

"Of course not."

"Then the Bible, you are sure, is not the 'invention' of good men?"

"How could they be good men, if they 'invented' it themselves, and then pretended that its author was God?"

"And, if it is not the invention of good men, then it must be the invention of bad men?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Now answer me candidly—Are liars and religious impostors bad men?"

"Certainly."

"Does the Bible forbid lying and imposture, and threaten liars and impostors with punishment?"

"It does, repeatedly and unmistakably."

"Does it declare that Ananias and Sapphira, for lying, were struck dead? Does it denounce and condemn 'false prophets,' who 'speak deceit in the name of the Lord'? Does it teach that 'whosoever loveth and maketh a lie' shall be shut out of the kingdom of heaven; and that 'all liars' shall perish in 'the lake of fire'?"

"It does."

"And is it credible that false and lying [illegible]

"And can a book which does all this be the 'invention' of bad men and impostors?"

"I must confess, it is not easy to see how it can."

"If, then, as you admit, it can not be the 'invention' of bad men—because they would not have made it condemn themselves; nor of good men—because they could not be guilty of imposture; who else can be its author but God? And if it is God's Book, why not believe it, and obey it?"

W. B. H. in "The Young Pilgrim."

GO TELL JESUS.

Bury thy sorrow, the world has its share,
Bury it deeply, hide it with care;
Think of it calmly when curtained by night,
Tell it to Jesus, and all will be right.

Tell it to Jesus, he knoweth thy grief,
Tell it to Jesus, he'll send thee relief;
Gather the sunlight aglow on thy way,
Gather the moonbeams, each soft silver ray.

Hearts grow aweary with heavier woe,
Droop 'mid the darkness; go comfort them, go!
Bury thy sorrow, let others be blest,
Give them the sunshine, tell Jesus the rest.

For the World's Crisis.

EVIL SPIRITS.

(Translated from the German.)

A great German commentator on the Scriptures, who wrote a great deal about the personal coming of Jesus Christ being nigh at hand (his name is Young Stilling, who lived during the time of the French revolution), spoke thus about Eph. 6: 12, 'For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world (literal of these earth-periods), against spiritual wickedness in high places (original, against the spirits of wickedness in the lower air-regions.)'

"As there is not a single passage in the whole Bible which contradicts the above plain and unmistakable declaration of the apostle Paul, it follows as an irrefutable fact, that the evil spirits dwell in the air, in the atmosphere that surrounds us; and who knows whether they, with the permittance of God, have not a great deal of influence upon the physical nature, diseases, etc.? That they influence men, increase their evil thoughts, and at last satanize them to do the most wicked deeds, we find fully confirmed throughout the Bible; and if this were not so, for what the wrestling which the apostle so earnestly and minutely describes and commends?

"He calls them princes, powers, rulers of the world (Kosmocratoras), spiritual beings of wickedness, etc. This proves that they exercise great power and influence upon our earth, and especially mankind. This is prominent in our day, because, according to Rev. 12: 12, Satan is upon the earth, showing great wrath, for he knows that he has but a short time left." L. Reimer.

Gems.

— If a civil word or two will render a man happy, he must be wretched indeed who will not give them to him. Such a disposition is like lighting another man's candle by one's own, which loses none of its brilliancy by what the other gains.

— It is a mark of the soundest wisdom not to pry into a secret, and, when found, of the purest honesty not to reveal it.

— In the development of every moral principle, there is, sooner or later, a crisis reached, which, if safely passed, ensures the greatest possible amount of good of which the case admits: otherwise, the greatest possible amount of evil. The weight of a feather may turn the scale.

— God loves to have us pray with earnestness. The best proof of earnestness is simplicity. Better in God's sight are the broken but heartfelt utterances of a child, than the high-flown utterances of some who think themselves wonderful in prayer.

— He that loves God most will lay out most for God. More than once in the Scriptures do we read of "the labor of love." Love resteth in its labor, and then resteth most when it laboreth most. Nothing labors more or thinks its labor less.

— It is not required that a man shall always be perfect, in order to be a true christian. But it is required that he should be a sincere seeker after perfection. It is required that he should be moving forward, and advancing up the straight and narrow way of life.

— A firm faith is one of the best divinities; a good life is the best philosophy; a clear conscience the best law; honesty the only true policy; and temperance the best physic.

— Bad thoughts are worse enemies than lions and tigers; for we can keep out of the way of wild beasts, but bad thoughts win their way everywhere. The cup that is full will hold no more; keep your hearts full of good thoughts, that bad thoughts may find no room to enter.

— Grace in itself considered, as a creature, will totally fail. Our permanency is not in respect to the thing, but of God; not from our being holy, but from our being kept holy. All the power of hell shall not prevail against the God of heaven.

— Where God loves he affords love tokens, and such are only his soul-enriching graces. If our heart moves toward him, certainly his goeth out toward us. The shadow on the dial moves according to the sun in the heavens.

A GREAT SIGHT.

Two elderly ladies chatting with each other in a low voice, one morning in June, 1869, entered the office of a certain justice of the peace, in Washington D. C. One showed great emotion of feeling as though there was a smouldering fire within her soul, kindling little by little. Her hair was white and carefully adjusted; her dress neat, but coarse. She claimed a relationship to the keeper of the office through the Maker of all things. He was honored by the name of brother.

A chair was offered the lady, but refused by her. "My soul is too full to sit down," she said. "May I, dear sir, may I do as I please in your office?" she asked.

"You may if—"

Here she shouted, "Glory to God in the highest! glory! glory! glory!"

The officer wishing to know the cause of such great joy, addressing her companion, inquired, "Is your friend crazy?"

"No," she replied. "She will tell you when she can. At present her joy overcomes her. Wait awhile."

After shouting praises to God for his goodness for sometime longer, she at length said:

"Dear brother, twenty-one years ago, twenty of my children and near relations were, in my presence, handcuffed in this room, and chained together for market, and then sent down to Georgia. These walls are my witness, that this awful scene was beheld by these same eyes of mine which now behold you—one of my own color—administering justice—God's kind of justice to all alike."

Here she broke out again, ejaculating, "Glory! glory." Then turning to the other lady, she continued—

"Now, I am done. I can die now in peace, for my own eyes have seen the answer to my prayer. My children, sir,—turning to the officer—are most all dead—worked to death; but God has [illegible] Rev. D. W. Anderson, in Standard.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES AND NEWS.

THE RICHARDSON SHOOTING.

The papers are greatly occupied in the discussion of the subject of N. Y. assassination. We enter not into this discussion, and take no part or side in the matter. Precisely what the truth is, in the antecedents of the case, so far as a provocation to the terrible act is concerned, we cannot certainly know yet. The assassination was murder. A cultivated, intellectual, able, and promising man, in the very early prime of manhood, was suddenly cut down. In reading the copious narratives and comments of the papers, we have not seen all the Bible quotations that might perhaps properly be cited. Let all men know and remember, whether ministers or laity, what is the only Bible ground of divorce. "Whosoever shall put away his wife except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery." Matt. 19: 9. Of what avail therefore are legal enactments, or licenses of the civil law, that allow divorces on other grounds? The fact is, the voice and words and law of Christ on this subject are very greatly disregarded in our day. How many persons, tried by the law of Christ, are unlawfully and unreally married. Again, read in Proverbs 6, thus: "Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned? So he that goeth in to his neighbor's wife; whosoever toucheth her shall not be innocent . . . . For jealousy is the rage of a man; therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance. He will not regard any ransom, neither will he rest content, though thou givest many gifts."

THOUGHT.

I send you a brief paragraph, which I take from the Rural New-Yorker, adding its mite to the ample and constantly increasing proof of the impossibility of thought without organization. How unscientific is the notion of ideas or reasoning faculties without a brain! To think of thinking without a brain, the very thing whereby we think. The paragraph is entitled, "Freezing the Brain."

A curious pysiological experiment has recently been made. A few grains of barley were placed before a hungry pigeon. While pecking at the barley, the brain of the pigeon was frozen by a spray of ether. The bird being thus deprived of consciousness, ceased pecking, and remained as if dead. The barley was then removed, and the ether spray having ceased, the brain was allowed to thaw. The bird soon returned to life, and its first act was to renew the pecking for a moment, though no food was before it.

NEWS FROM ALL THE WORLD.

Some columns in every copy of the Crisis, with wisely selected items, under the above heading, would doubtless be welcome to all your readers. I cannot say how successfully the following paragraphs would momentarily serve to meet such a want, but I give them. The relations of Turkey and Egypt possess great interest to the prophetic student. In such a connection read the following:

SIGNS OF WAR IN THE EAST.

A few days ago, the telegraph announced that as soon as the festivities at the opening of the Suez Canal were over, the Sultan would notify the Khedive that he must accept the Turkish proposals on penalty of being suspended from the Viceroyalty. And in this connection the 'Sun' makes a very important statement—if true. It says:

"Agents of the Turkish and Egyptian Governments have been in this country and in England for several months, engaged in the purchase of arms and material for anything but peaceful uses. The Sultan's agent purchased and has shipped to Constantinople a hundred thousand rifles which our Government was willing to sell, and it is understood that he is now negotiating for another hundred thousand. The Viceroy's agent closed a contract several months ago for a large quantity of Remington breech-loaders, and the entire lot has been forwarded to Alexandria by way of London. A statement appeared recently that Egypt would not purchase any more arms in America or elsewhere; but it is known that the Viceroy's agents, both here and in England, have been closeted with several manufacturers of rifles, and that some of these manufacturers have also put their establishments in very active operation. Last week an order came to New York from a London commission house for a hundred thousand breech loaders, to be delivered as soon as possible. The order closed in these words: "We are not at liberty to tell you what Government desires these rifles; you will please ask no questions, but deliver the arms as we have directed, and your money will be ready on every delivery. Should anybody ask who has ordered these rifles, you can say you don't know."

The rising in Dalmatia, the "Sun" suggests, may be a part of the Viceroy's programme for disturbing Turkey and securing his own independence, and a general revolution in the Turkish principalities is by no means impossible.—N. Y. Express.

Not unworthy of notice may be another little fact, in view of the prophecy that the willful king "shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps." Dan. 11: 43: How about the political and commercial convenience which the new Suez Canal shall subserve to its imperial patron, Napoleon? How shall we think of the thousands of Egyptians hard at work in opening this grand highway to the East? How of the French mortgage on the treasures of the Egyptian prince? And lastly, how of the lavish and magnificent attentions with which Egypt and Turkey both welcomed and glorified the French Empress? Not least among other things, was a present of a diamond tiara of the value of six millions of francs to the popular and flattered Eugenie.

Naturally following the preceding, we give a brief commentary on Turkish finances and feebleness, from the N. Y. Times:—

"No wonder the Sultan is angry with the Khedive. He wants money desperately, and his vassal, instead of helping him to any, goes throwing vast sums away in buying iron-clads and keeping open house for all the world. The Viceroy's guests at the inauguration of the canal are said to have numbered 2,000 Europeans and 15,000 Orientals. But while 28,000 guests are feasted at never-ending banquets, the Sultan is gnashing his teeth in poverty and hunger. He is obliged to send to England to borrow money—£12,000,000 is all he wants, and six per cent. is what he offers for it. People seem to have risen at the bait very freely, and another loan is about to be put on the market by way of a lottery. Turkey is a drug in the market. She has cost the world enough in past times, and somehow nobody sympathises much with her in this quarrel with the Khedive—who at least is a public spirited man. The Sultan will not be able to get on much longer with a system of government which would crush energy and spirit out of almost any people."

C. Colegrove.

— Give a clown your finger, and he'll take your whole hand.

For the World's Crisis.

MELCHIZEDEK.

Bro. Grant:—As there are some inquiring in relation to—Who was Melchizedek? I have concluded to drop you a few lines on the subject. Melchizedek was a man who once lived in Salem, now called Jerusalem. According to Paul's explanation, the word Melchizedek signifies righteousness, and the word Salem means peace. He says in Heb. 7: 2, "To whom Abraham also gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation king of righteousness, and after that also king of Salem, which is king of peace."

It is thought by many that Melchizedek was not a man. It is as certain that he was a man, as it is certain that Aaron was a man. The account of him in Gen. 14 is a proof of it. He is there called king of Salem, which place is now called Jerusalem. He set forth bread and wine before Abraham. This proves him a man. He was priest of the Most High God on earth. Paul says of Christ (Heb. 8: 4), "For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest." There is no place in the Scriptures which mentions Christ as a priest on earth. He, as a priest, is passed into the heavens. Melchizedek being a priest on earth, proves him a man. Paul calls him a great man. "Now consider how great this man was."—Heb. 7: 4.

There are several things mentioned in Hebrews which lead many people to believe Melchizedek was not a man. It is said he was "without father, without mother, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a priest continually."—Heb. 7: 3. This is easily reconciled. Paul is not speaking of Melchizedek as a man, but as a priest. As a man, he had a father, mother, descent, beginning of days, and end of life. The priests under the law all descended from Aaron, who was a priest. If they could not prove that their father and mother were both of the tribe of Levi, they had no right to the priesthood. Melchizedek had no father who was priest before him. His being without descent means that he did not descend from priests, or from the tribe of Levi. Paul says, "But he, whose descent is not counted from them, received tithes from Abraham."—Heb. 7: 6. This is what is meant by his being without descent. It is said he was without "beginning of days, nor end of life." The meaning of this is, that there was no particular time in his life when he should enter into his priestly office, or go out of it. The priests under the law entered into their office at a certain age, and went out at a certain age. This was a limited priesthood. Melchizedek had an unlimited priesthood, which pointed to Christ, whose priesthood is unlimited and unchangeable. Christ is said to be after the order and after the similitude of Melchizedek; but if Melchizedek means Christ, then he is a priest after the order or similitude of himself. I will mention a few particulars in which Christ is a priest after the order of Melchizedek:

1. Melchizedek was a king of righteousness, and king of peace; so is Christ. See Jer. 23: 5, 6, and Zech. 9: 9.

2. Melchizedek was king and priest; so Christ is a great high priest, passed into the heavens, and is to be king, and sit on David's throne.

3. Melchizedek had no relation before him, nor any after him that were priests. He did not receive his priesthood from man, nor leave it to any man; it began and continued with him. So it is with Christ. "For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning the priesthood."—Heb. 7: 14. God gave him his priestly office, and it remains with him; "but this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood."—Heb. 7: 24. Though the Bishop of Rome pretends that Christ gave his priesthood to Peter, yet he has not. He remains a priest forever, after the order of Melchizedek.

4. Melchizedek was a great man, and a great priest, greater than Abraham, whom he blest. Paul says, "Now consider how great this man was."—Heb. 7: 4. So Christ, the high priest, is great. He is greater than Moses, greater than Aaron, greater than Abraham, greater than Melchizedek, greater than the angels. The angel said he should be great. Paul calls him a great high priest.

5. Melchizedek set bread and wine before Abraham, when he was returning from the slaughter. So does Christ, the high priest. He set bread and wine before his disciples, with his own hands, the night in which he was betrayed, and now in that ordinance he does it by his ministers to all who eat the bread and drink the wine, discerning the Lord's body.

6. Melchizedek blest Abraham. So does Christ. God sent him to bless us. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

7. Melchizedek received tithes from Abraham. This showed that Abraham belonged to his kingdom. Christ receives a tribute of praise from all who submit to him; and their giving to him the glory due to his name, shows that they are entitled to his protection. Yours looking for redemption, Wier Davis.

Wadley's Falls, N. H.

Many Facts in a Small Space.—The number of languages spoken is 4,864. The number of men is about equal to the number of women. The average of human life is thirty three years. One quarter die before the age of seven, one half before the age of seventeen. To every thousand persons one only reaches one hundred years, and not more than one in five hundred will reach eighty years. There are on earth 1,000,000,000 inhabitants. Of these 333,333,333 die every year, 91, 824 die every day, 7,789 every hour, and sixty every minute, or one every second. These losses are balanced by an equal number of births. The married are longer lived than the single, and above all, those who observe a sober and industrious conduct. Tall men live longer than short ones. Women have more chances of life previous to the age of fifty years than men, but fewer after. The number of marriages are in the proportion of seventy-six to one hundred. Marriages are more frequent after the equinoxes, that is, during the months of June and December. Those born in spring are more robust than others. Births and deaths are more frequent by night than by day.—Ex.

Meekness.—Meekness is gentle, not easily provoked, not hasty in finding fault.

Meekness is humble; not proud, not self-conceited.

Meekness is peaceable; not eager to assert her own rights, or to justify her own pretensions, or to maintain her own opinions.

Meekness is tender; consulting the feelings of others, and willing to bear much pain rather than inflict any.

Meekness is patient, and can endure unavoidable inconveniences without murmuring or complaining.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

RULES FOR LENGTHENING LIFE.

1. Cultivate an equable temper; many a man has fallen dead in a fit of passion.

2. Eat regularly, not over thrice a day, and nothing between meals.

3. Go to bed at regular hours. Get up as soon as you wake of yourself, and do not sleep in the daytime, at least not longer than ten minutes before noon.

4. Work always by the day, and not by the job.

5. Stop working before you are very much tired,—before you are "fagged out."

5. Cultivate a generous and an accommodating temper.

7. Never cross a bridge before you come to it: this will save half the troubles of life.

8. Never eat when you are not hungry, nor drink when you are not thirsty.

9. Let your appetite always come uninvited.

10. Cool off in a place greatly warmer than the one in which you have been exercising; this simple rule would prevent incalculable sickness and save millions of lives every year.

11. Never resist a call of nature for a single moment.

12. Never allow yourself to be chilled "through and through"; it is this which destroys so many every year, in a few days' sickness, from pneumonia, called by some lung fever or inflammation of the lungs.

13. Whoever drinks no liquids at meals will add years of pleasurable existence to his life. Of cold or warm drinks, the former are most pernicious; drinking at meals induces persons to eat more than they otherwise would, as any one can verify by experiment, and it is excess in eating which devastates the land with sickness, suffering and death.

14. After fifty years of age, if not a day laborer, and sedentary persons after forty, should eat but twice a day, in the morning and about four in the afternoon; persons can soon accustom themselves to a seven hour interval between eating, thus giving the stomach rest; for every organ without adequate rest will "give out" prematurely.

15. Begin early to live under the benign influences of the Christian religion, for it "has the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come."—Hall's Journal of Health.

EATING WHEN SICK.

It is the custom among a certain class of people, when a member of the family falls sick, to begin at once to ask, "Now what can you eat?" Every one has heard of the old story of the man who always ate eighteen apple dumplings when he was sick. On one occasion when engaged upon the eighteenth, his little son said, "Pa, give me a piece." "No, no, my son," replied the father, "go away, pa's sick." When a young man has surfeited, in season and out of season, until exhausted nature gives way, and a fever is coming on, the good mother is in trouble. She anxiously inquires, "Now, John, what can you eat? You must eat something! People can't live without food!" Then comes toast and tea, etc. The stomach is exhausted, and no more needs stimulating or food than a jaded horse needs the whip! What is needed is rest, complete rest. Nine-tenths of the acute diseases might be prevented by a few days starvation, when the first indications appear. I don't mean complete abstinence in every case, but perhaps a piece of coarse bread, with cold water for drink. If such a policy was generally adopted, what ruin would overtake the medical profession!

FASHIONABLE WOMEN.

Too much is not asserted when we say that it is highly probable the exigencies of fashion destroy more women than the pressure of toil or sorrow. The blind obedience to the behest of fashion which nowadays so largely obtains, works a great transgression of the laws of woman's nature, greater injury to her physical and mental, not to say moral constitution, than the hardships of comparative poverty. Experience has proved that the female slave will live to grow old at her task, while she sees two or three generations of her mistresses fade and pass away. The poor washerwoman, who has but a few rays of hope to cheer her in her daily labors, will live to see her fashionable sisters all die around her; and the kitchen maid is strong and healthy when her mistress has to be nursed like a sickly infant. For nearly all the good and valuable purposes of human life, it is sad truth, that fashion-pampered women are almost utterly worthless. Their force of character is small, while they possess still less moral power of will, and quite as little physical energy. Having apparently no great purpose in life to attain, necessarily they fail to accomplish any worthy ends.

Food of Infants and Children.—Every parent must be aware that a child sometimes shows a decided dislike to certain kinds of food. In such a case do not compel it to eat what nature may instinctively reject as being unfit. It is easy to distinguish between a rooted aversion and a mere whim, if you will only forego that which you wish the child to overcome—the petty tyranny of your own will. Even infants, after enjoying one kind of food for weeks, will suddenly reject it, and refuse to take the first spoonful. This is the voice of nature, calling for a change of diet; and you will be wise not to disregard it.—Good Health.

Coal Gas.—A physician attributes much of the sickness in winter to the bad effect of coal gas. He says in nine out of ten houses that he enters he notices coal gas in the air they breathe. Many times he finds the damper in the stove pipe closed to save coal, and the result is a room full of gas, not noticed by the inmates, perhaps, but by those who come in from the fresh air.

Sprains.—The best treatment for sprains is to immerse the limb immediately in hot water, repeating the operation several times a day. The cure is often rapid.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance..........................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address..........$5.50.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address...........$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—Private.

Over all business matters, write—Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's Name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write Private on the outside of the envelope.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,
An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Single copy, 50 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

Ten copies and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 40 cts. a year for each copy.

Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 35 cts. a year for each copy.

To Canada subscribers at the same rates. No extra charge for American postage.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 743. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 17.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS,
M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN,
H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

AT THE DOOR.

Behold I stand at the door and knock."

My Savior stands waiting and knocks at the door,
Has knocked, and is knocking again;
I hear his kind voice, I'll reject him no more,
Nor let him stand pleading in vain.
In infinite mercy he came from above
To ransom, to cleanse me from sin;
I'll yield to the voice of his merciful love,
And let my dear Savior come in.
Savior, come in;
Cleanse me from sin;
Jesus, my Savior, come in, come in;
Enter the door,
Waiting no more,
Savior, dear Savior, come in.

O Savior, my ransom, redeemer, and friend,
The life, and the truth, and the way,
On thy precious merit alone I depend;
Dwell in me, and keep me, I pray.
Thy goodness hath opened the door of my heart—
'Tis open in welcome to thee;
Come in, blessed Savior, and never depart,
Come in, with thy mercy, to me.
Savior, come in, etc.

For the World's Crisis.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A happy new year's greeting to all the dear "pilgrims and strangers." May this be the happiest year of all your lives; yea, the crowning year; even the year of the redeemed, when they "shall return, and come to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads."

I am deeply impressed that it will be so. We have run out our reckoning. The sacred numbers are about complete. God has hung out his signs in the heavens, and the "generation" have seen them and have nearly all passed off the stage. The distress of nations with perplexity; the roaring sea and waves; the fearful, failing hearts of men; the shaking powers of the "aerial regions" are past or passing scenes. The "mystery" woman is plainly showing that she feels her terribly consuming weakness, and totters to her downfall, and soon "shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her." And we believe that when this takes place, the next event is the "going up" of the saints of God to meet the glory-crowned in the air.

O fellow-watcher, keep your head uplifted; in a little you shall see a face of ineffable beauty look through the clouds.

O fellow soldier, gird the armor a little closer; thrust back the powers of darkness once more, and make Satan tremble with all his hosts. Be valiant; you have but an hour to fight, and victory, eternal, glorious victory, is yours.

O weary, groaning, suffering saint, cheer up. "Faint not, droop not by the way." For the joy just before you, you can well endure a few more buffetings and pains and tears. The immortality so soon to thrill through every nerve, and vein, and sinew, will make amends for all.

O weeping, mourning child, dry up your tears. The Conqueror bears the keys of death and hades, and your loved ones shall come again from the enemy's land.

O backslider, come home. Come back, and do be quick.

O perishing sinner, run for your life; the door stands open wide, and mercy lingers, but soon will take her everlasting flight.

O church of the living God, awake from your slumbers. Arise, and let your light shine forth. Bring all you can to share the glory with you, and help to swell the countless throng around Immanuel's throne.

Hark! the trumpet's blast. He's coming! Farewell an hour. I'll meet you on the "other river shore," and help you

"Crown him Lord of all."

Your brother in tribulation and in the "patient waiting for Christ," H. D. LAW.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 1st, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."

Many are the words of comfort which our blessed Lord and Master uttered and caused to be left on record for his waiting ones; and these words that he spake to his disciples just before his crucifixion and ascension to his Father—"I will come again"—are truly comforting to his weary, waiting children: and they form a promise which they can lay hold on with all confidence, knowing that it will surely be fulfilled.

Many are the weary ones watching the signs of the times, and which bespeak his coming near. They hail every token with joy. This hope of Jesus' soon coming buoys up the drooping spirits and cheers the hearts of those that are tried and tempted, knowing that trials will soon end. Our friends that sleep in Jesus will soon come from the land of the enemy, and we shall all meet to reign with Jesus forever.

Then let us labor and toil on a little longer; bear the cross a little longer; face the scoffs and frowns of a wicked world a little longer; then Jesus will come and take us home, to dwell with him forever. Press on.

Gilmanton, N. H. N. B. McMURPHY.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SIXTY-NINE WEEKS.

"Know, therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks and threescore and two weeks; the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times. And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself."—Dan. 9: 25, 26.

The seven and sixty-two weeks, I view as a distinct period from the seventy weeks. Having shown in a former article that the seventy weeks bring us down to the time when Jerusalem was compassed about with armies, when the transgression of Daniel's people was to be restrained no longer, and the iniquity of that people filled up, and that the seventy weeks prophetic time constituted the first part of the vision (2300 days), which ended at the commencement of the siege of Jerusalem by the Roman armies, between A. D. 65 and 67, there remained 1810 years for the last part of the vision (of 2300 days of prophetic time), which carry us to between A. D. 1875 and 1877.

We will next notice the seven and sixty-two weeks. If our view of the seventy weeks be correct, it is clear the lesser period must be another period, and given for another purpose; namely, to give the time of the first advent of the Messiah. After Gabriel had given Daniel the seventy weeks upon the "holy city," etc., and referred to events that would come within that period; he next proceeds to give him another period for the coming of the Messiah. Gabriel, having first given the period allotted to the further trial of Daniel's people, and his holy city, next calls his attention to another measure of time, which was to an event that was to precede the final giving up of Jerusalem, which was to be desolated and trodden under foot of the Gentiles. He says: "Know, therefore," that is, in addition to what has been told you, "and understand" how long it will be to the Messiah.

Some students of prophecy translate the original word "also," instead of "therefore." Thus: "Also thou shalt know and understand, from the going forth of the word to cause to return and build Jerusalem, until Messiah the Prince, are seven weeks and sixty-two weeks." Our translators seemed to have been influenced in the rendering of the verse by what they supposed must be the connection and meaning. But Gabriel, having given the period allotted to the further trial of Daniel's people and his holy city, next calls attention to another measure of time.

There are, no doubt, two classes of events brought to view in the 24th and 25th verses, which are neither the same in themselves, nor in their beginnings and endings. It is quite clear that the sixty-nine weeks began with "the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem," given by Cyrus, B. C. 488, and end at the birth of Christ, B. C. 5. My object is not so much to show when these periods began and ended, as to show what they mean and what they measure. I am fully satisfied it has been a source of error and confusion in supposing the seventy weeks of Daniel, and the sixty-nine weeks, with the one week, cover the same identical period. I believe there is light upon these prophetic periods, and that they give the true time of night. The one week I have not space here to notice, but will hereafter. J. E. CLARK.

Fair Haven, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

GOSPEL ORDER.

There is much said about church organization in these days; some for and some against it. My motto has been, Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind, and act accordingly; but be sure to keep a good spirit toward those who differ from you on these points. Think, and let think; walk as brethren, and love each other.

For one, I am satisfied that there is but one right way for us as a people, if ever we expect to do anything to amount to much, so far as building up the cause we love so much is concerned. We must get ourselves into gospel order, and no one can mistake what that is with the Bible in their hands.

I believe all Adventists think that the Old and New Testament Scriptures are a sufficient rule of faith and practice; also, that every one should be governed by them. If so, why is it there are so many unwilling to come up to the standard and organize into churches, and appoint all the necessary officers to take the oversight of such bodies? If there are but few, we are in a situation to increase our numbers.

It is but a short time since a brother wrote me that he thought he should join the Christian or the Baptist church; for, says he, I want a home somewhere, and the brethren say they won't do anything about organizing a church.

The argument is, If we go to getting up a church, we shall be just like all the rest in a little while. We shall have a "discipline," and "articles of faith," and we shall not be a whit better than the rest of the churches; and I shall not do anything about it. I am going to run in the road, and go where I am a mind to. I am going to be a free man. I like my freedom. I am not going to be accountable to any one but the Lord. I will run the risk of living a christian and not belong to a church.

Well, brother, perhaps you can, but that is not the point. Can you be as useful to do so as to come into gospel order? I am well satisfied no one can.

In the first place, we are to help each other other on in the good way; and if you have no system or regulation about these things, there are times when it is necessary that something should be done; and if you do anything there should be a head in the matter; and if there is no understanding, and no one to go ahead, and unless you have some one among you to take the responsibility of acting, you are in trouble; and it is not pleasant for any one to take the responsibility of acting for a body of christians without an appointment for that purpose. I have tried it some myself.

The argument used by many, that we should not be a whit behind the other churches, is without foundation. A man might just as well say he would never get religion because some or many have tried it and have backslidden. There is no fatal necessity attending it. We might just as well say, because one man gets drunk another must.

It is very evident from all Paul's epistles, that he planted or organized churches, and ordained elders and deacons, with all other officers necessary. I know before God that where there is good gospel order, there we find the most good religion. It is in such places we find union among brethren, if we find it anywhere.

I am glad that there is a conference organized in this State. I am also glad that there are some churches organized. Come, brethren, let us take hold with a will, to carry forward the great work of saving souls, and God will bless us and soon take us home.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

For the World's Crisis.

PICTURES OF PROMISE.

Beautiful pictures, next to realities, are ever acceptable and attractive to every eye, not only to the little ones to whom alphabets and books are an enigma, but to the cultured man of meridian years and world-wide knowledge; and the aged look on even a child's primer with delight.

All illustrations, whether portrayed by pencil, paint, or "artist's pen," fail not to find a ready eye, even in the careless passer-by; while all not illustrated lie untouched and undisturbed.

As with books, so with all other treasures. It is for the minds of deeper research to bring out and beautify the "abstract," as great principles are often termed. O what a blessing it is that the "incorruptible word of truth" is not only precept, but example; not a truth great or small, but with it is its image, living and clothed with humanity.

O, the pictures of the past. Since in the Father's own image were the "sons of God" created until now, what a picture-gallery is the history of the past. And the present—what a delineation of the features described in the words, the unchanging words which are the same yesterday, to-day, and forever.

Bible pictures are pictures of the great Designer and Master-Painter; gloriously beautiful in conception, perfect in execution. How clearly they speak to all; even the wayfaring child of misfortune, in its saddest forms, its blankest intelligence, may read pictures. The past with its panorama of the mercies of God, which endure forever, we read most clearly. The present, with its fulness of the riches garnered from the past, is an age of riches and ingatherings for a brighter day yet to dawn.

"Pictures of promise" gleam from the yet unfulfilled Revelations, so glorious that we already hear the advancing of the hosts which, like the voice of many waters, sing the song, "Alleluia! blessing, and riches, and honor, and dominion, and thanksgiving, be unto Him who sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." "Let us be glad and rejoice, for the marriage of the Lamb is come"; 'his wife hath made herself ready." "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever." "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." "To him that overcometh shall be given of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

How exceedingly glorious! Into that holy city shall they bring the glory and the honor of the nations. O! picture of the just made perfect,—earth's ripened glories, its homes, there perfected around the Father's throne.

Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation; lest ye forget the Spirit's call, and grieve Him whose we are. O, come, while it is called to-day, and enter into rest. Behold with undimmed joy the pictures of promise which our eyes shall with rapture see in the paradise of God. P. M. EATON.

Warner, N. H.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

It seems to be generally assumed that the word "punishment" signifies the process of punishing; but this is an error. The words, "everlasting punishment," do not necessarily mean that the process of punishing will be continued to all eternity; but rather that the punishment—the effect of the sentence—is everlasting. These words cannot mean that the process of punishment is continuous, any more than the words "everlasting judgment" mean that the process of judging will be going on to all eternity; or that the simple expression, "eternal redemption," means that the redemption is being eternally wrought out.

In both these instances the effect, and not the process, is meant; and so in our text, it is the effect, and not the process, which is everlasting. . . . To suit the common doctrine the meaning would be, "These shall go away into everlasting life in misery, but the righteous into everlasting life in happiness!" But there is no ground in Scripture for such an interpretation. It is "life" and "death" which are set in opposition, "life" and "destruction," "life" and "punishment," or some equivalent term. It is never "everlasting happiness" and "everlasting pain," or any form of expression which, carefully weighed, will bear such an interpretation.—Everlasting Punishment not Everlasting Pain.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

95. Abraham begat a son when he was a hundred years old, by the interposition of Providence.—"Sarah conceived and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken unto him."—Gen. 21: 2. "And being not weak in the faith, he considered not his own body, now dead, when he was a hundred years old."—Rom. 4: 19. "Therefore sprang there even from one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky."—Heb. 11: 12.

Abraham begat SIX children more, after he was a hundred years old, WITHOUT any interposition of Providence.—"Then again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah; and she bare him Zimram, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah." Gen. 25: 1, 2.

The skeptic does not even claim a contradiction here. Hence we have nothing to do. It was evidently inserted in the series before us simply to make the number complete. His proposition, in itself, does not present even a semblance of discrepancy. He says, "Abraham begat a son, when he was a hundred years old, by the interposition of Providence"; in which statement he is well sustained by the inspired record. He also says that "Abraham begat six children more, after he was a hundred years old," etc., etc. Well, what of it? Where is the contradiction? It is not even surprising, as a physiological fact, that he should become the father of other children, after his youthful vigor had been miraculously restored.

We have found many propositions before this which were weak enough to excite either our pity or contempt; but this is surely the most insipid objection to the veracity of Bible writers that we have ever seen. What a system must infidelity be, when its votaries are driven to such foolish and contemptible objections to God's word, in order to maintain its very existence.

96. Jacob bought a sepulchre from Hamor. "And the bones of Joseph . . . buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem."—Josh. 24: 32.

ABRAHAM bought it of Hamor.—"In the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor, the father of Sychem."—Acts 7: 16.

We have the statement here quoted, that Jacob bought "a parcel of ground" of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem, and again that Abraham bought a sepulchre of the same party. And because the field which Jacob bought was used as a burial place, the infidel endeavors to make it appear that it was identical with the sepulchre purchased by Abraham. One man bought a field and the other a sepulchre, but they were purchased from the same party, therefore the skeptic eagerly exclaims, "The Bible contradicts itself."—This is evidently a very satisfactory conclusion for him to come to, but the mode of reasoning which he adopts is, to say the least, a little peculiar. The fact that two different parties make a purchase of land from the same individual, certainly does not indicate that they bought the same piece of property. It is probable that Jacob bought the field surrounding the sepulchre, purchased by Abraham, thereby enlarging the burial-place of his fathers. Still, the two pieces of property may have been many miles apart, without impeaching in the least the veracity of the sacred writer.

97. God promised the land of Canaan to Abraham and his seed forever.—"And the Lord said unto Abraham, after Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. . . For I will give it unto thee. . . Unto thee and thy seed after thee."—Gen. 13: 14, 15, 17; Gen. 17: 8.

Abraham and his seed never received the promised land.—"And he gave him (Abraham) none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on."—Acts 7: 15. "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. . . These all died in faith, not having received the promises."—Heb. 11: 9, 13.

It is clear from the covenant which God made with Abraham, that he was to inherit the land of Canaan forever. God assures him that he will give him all the land between the two great rivers Egypt and Euphrates, for an everlasting possession, and he not only promised this land to Abraham, but to Christ, as his seed. For Paul says, "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3: 16. Christ then was a party to the covenant, and must inherit the land with Abraham forever. The infidel, however, finds what he claims to be a mistake, from the fact that Abraham did not receive the promised inheritance before his death. But the promise standeth sure, it is still gleaming in the temple of truth, and eternity will vindicate the justice and veracity of Jehovah. The patriarch did not expect to receive the promised possessions in his natural life time; a mortal man could not receive an everlasting inheritance.

Paul says of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that they "died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, were persuaded of them and embraced them, and confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers." They were looking on beyond the resurrection of God's sleeping children—beyond the second coming of Jesus, to the age of millennial glory, when Messiah shall reign from sea to sea, and from the rivers to the ends of the earth. Then shall the ancient worthies stand upon the glorified hill-tops of a purified earth, and walk beside the crystal streams of Eden restored. The crown of immortal youth shall rest upon their brows, and they shall receive the inheritance which was promised to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession. Where "the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations." A skeptic's eye can never reach the glories of the promised land; his mind can never appreciate the loveliness of a new born earth, where every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess the glory of the Lord.

God never indicated to Abraham that he was to receive the inheritance during his natural life time, but the patriarch looked forward with joyful anticipation to the time when there should be given to the Son of man dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him; for his dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. Then instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir-tree; instead of the brier, shall come up the myrtle-tree. Please see Dan. 7: 13, 14, 27; Ps. 22: 27, 28; Rev. 5: 10; Matt. 19: 28; Luke 1: 31, 32; Rev. 20: 4, 6; Ps. 2: 6, 10; Matt. 5: 5; Rev. 11: 15.

"Bible Triumphant," by Mrs. H. V. Reed.

THE MASTER'S TOUCH.

In the still air music lies unheard;
In the rough marble beauty hides unseen;
To wake the music and the beauty needs
The master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen.

Great Master! touch us with thy skillful hand;
Let not the music that is in us die;
Great Sculptor! hew and polish us, nor let,
Hidden and lost, thy form within us lie.

Spare not the stroke; do with us as thou wilt;
Let there be naught unfurnished, broken, marred;
Complete thy purpose, that we may become
Thy perfect image, O our God and Lord!

For the World's Crisis.

FOR HIS SAKE.

I was deeply moved while reading an article in the Crisis with the heading—"Is it for His sake?" The writer felt that much of her sorrow, and also the frowns of the world, arose from other causes, and were not given "for His sake."

Doubtless very many persons have had an experience similar to that of sister "Rebecca," and may the Lord help me now to speak a word in due season to all such.

First, let us ask, do you belong to Christ? He has bought you, and has paid a great price for you. All that can be done on his part, has been done to make you his own. And you have fully and freely ratified and agreed to the purchase, and have done all that could be done on your part to constitute yourself one of his children. Is this correct? I do not say that you have always walked wisely in the perfect way. I only say that you have given yourself unreservedly to him, and have chosen him for your portion.

Then let us consider this question settled. You belong to Christ. He has chosen you out of the world. "Therefore the world hateth you." John 15: 19. Remember this, it is not on account of your sins, but it is for Jesus' sake that the world hates you. "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own," and that in spite of your sinfulness. Just look at the world a moment and see if it is not so. Do you not see many of the vilest men exalted and chosen by the world to occupy the most honorable and desirable positions?

The enemy may try to persuade you that you do not suffer for the sake of Jesus, but if you belong to him (and you certainly do,) then surely you do suffer for his sake. Do you bear the ills and trials of life patiently? you do it for his sake. And for his sake you deny yourself, and take up your cross daily and follow him.

We know that Jesus suffered for us, but we may say he could never have felt as we do because he never sinned. But he knows your feelings, and has so intimately joined you to himself, that he knows by sympathy all your sorrows. For "he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." He was chastised for our sake, and by his stripes we are healed. Praise his name. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Webster, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

TEMPERANCE.

In the perilous times in which we have fallen, I would like to inquire what is the duty of christians in regard to this subject—temperance. One, if left to judge from observation alone, would be apt to conclude that it was of no importance to them whatever. But as judgment based on observation alone is not conclusive, we will inquire further:

Is it right for those professing godliness to indulge the appetite in those things that are manifestly hurtful and productive of disease, not only to themselves, but to their offspring; and by example hurtful to observers? There are many things that we can use intemperately. But the most alarming feature of intemperance at the present time is the use and abuse of alcoholic drinks. It is of this we wish to speak.

It would be a waste of time to enter upon an investigation of the proof that alcoholic drinks are hurtful, either physically or spiritually. The facts are too apparent to need confirmation, and it would be madness to deny it. It is the experience of every one who has arrived to the years of understanding, that example has been one of their greatest teachers.

This being so, it follows that we are teachers by example. How necessary it is, then, that our example be such as becometh godliness. And are we teaching in accordance with the apostle Paul, when we present the damning cup to the lips of our friend, our brother, sister, wife, or child? And if it is wrong for them to taste, lest they be led away; is it right for us to indulge, and thus give them occasion to stumble over us? I tell you nay.

Hear the apostle (Rom. 14: 21):—"It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is made weak." Let me show a few of the evils that attend this demon alcohol. I quote from a tract:—

"STATISTICS OF INTEMPERANCE.—Carefully compiled statistics show that sixty thousand lives are annually destroyed by intemperance in the United States; one hundred thousand men and women are yearly sent to prison in consequence of strong drink; two hundred thousand children are sent to the poor-house; three hundred murders are committed; four hundred suicides; two hundred thousand orphans are bequeathed to private and public charity; two hundred millions of dollars are spent to produce this shocking amount of crime and misery, and as much more is lost by the same cause."

Judge Patterson, of Norwich, Eng., addressing a grand jury, said, If it were not for this drinking, you and I would have nothing to do." Mr. Wakeley, coroner of Liverpool, said, "Gin may be thought the best friend I have; it causes me to hold annually one thousand more inquests than I should otherwise hold. But besides these, I have reason to believe that from ten to fifteen thousand persons die in this metropolis annually from the effects of gin drinking, upon whom no inquests are held."

With results like these before us, what is our duty? Let your inmost sense of right decide, and I venture to say that total abstinence will be the result. In sight of the civil law, I blush to say that we have a right to drink if we damn our soul by the act; but in the sight of God's law, we have no such right. I can do no better than to close with an extract from the writings of Rev. T. L. Cuyler:—

"We lay down, then, the proposition, that no man has a moral right to do anything the influence of which is certainly and inevitably hurtful to his neighbor. I have a legal right to do many things which as a christian I cannot do. I have a legal right to take arsenic or swallow strychnine; but I have no moral right to commit this self-destruction. I have a legal right to attend the theatre. No policeman stands at the door to exclude me, or dares to eject me while my conduct is orderly and becoming. But I have no moral right to go there; not merely because I may see and hear much that may soil my memory for days and months, but because that whole garnished and glittering establishment, with its sensuous, attractions, is to many a young person the yawning maelstrom of perdition. The dollar which I give at the box office is my contribution toward sustaining an establishment whose dark foundations rest on the murdered souls of thousands of my fellow-men. Their blood stains its walls, and from that 'pit' they have gone down to another pit where no sounds of mirth ever come. Now I ask, what right have I to enter a place where the tragedies that are played off before me by painted women and dissolute men are as nothing to the tragedies of lost souls that are enacted in some parts of that house every night? What right have I to give my money and my presence to sustain that moral slaughter-house, and by walking into the theatre myself to aid in decoying others to follow me?

Now on the same principle (not of self-preservation merely, but of avoiding what is dangerous to others,) what right have I to sustain those fountain-heads of death from which the drink-poison is sold? What right have I to advocate their license, to patronize the traffic, or even in any way to abet the whole system of drinking alcoholic stimulants at home or abroad? If a glass of wine on my table will entrap some young man or some one who is inclined to stimulants into dissipation, then am I thoughtlessly setting a trap for his life. I am his tempter. I give the usage my sanction, and to him the direct inducement to partake of the bottled demon that sparkles so seductively before him. If the contents of that sparkling glass make my brother to stumble, he stumbles over me. If he goes away from my table and commits some outrage under the effects of that stimulant, I am to a certain degree guilty of that outrage. I have a partnership in every blow he strikes, or in every oath he may utter, or in every bitter wound he may inflict on the hearts of those he loves while under the spell of my glass of 'Cognac' or 'Burgundy.' I gave him the incentive to do what otherwise he might have left undone. The man who puts the bottle to his neighbor's lips is accountable for what comes from those lips under the influence of the dram, and is accountable, too, for every outrage that the maddened victim of the cup may perpetrate during his temporary insanity.

In this view of the question, is it too much to ask of every professed christian, and every lover of his kind, that they will wholly abstain from everything that can intoxicate? For the sake of your children do it. For the sake of a brother, a husband, a friend. For the sake of those who will plead your example; for the sake of frail tempted ones who cannot say, No! for your fellow traveler's sake to God's bar and to the eternal world, touch not the bottled devil, under whose shining scales damnation hides its adder-sting!" E. M. RIPLEY.

For the World's Crisis.

BE YE TRANSFORMED.

We read that "no man can serve two masters," and if we seek to please the Lord, we must not be conformed to the world. As one of our sisters said lately, "We must not try to hold on to the world with one hand, and serve the Lord with the other, but let go of the world, and serve the Lord with both hands."

We need more of the Spirit of our blessed Master, who did not seek to please himself, nor to gain the favor of the world, but sacrificed all for our welfare. So we must give up all for him, and "be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of [our] mind that [we] may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12: 2. Let us heed this injunction, and not be satisfied with doing a part of our duty, but let us be wholly the Lord's.

Unless we give up the world, and live for him only, we shall fail to enter the promised land, and enjoy the bliss of the home of the saints. O, let us strive to win a place in our Father's house. If we are lost, it will be our own fault, and we shall be without excuse. SUSAN S. CHAMBERLAIN.

Webster, Mass.

☞ Be always at leisure to do good.

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 1.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Lovers of Jesus, and his precious word; champions for truth; haters of sin, toiling to spread the last lingering tones of mercy to a fire-doomed and unsuspecting generation;—you are now surrounded by a two-fold opposition; a scoffing world, and a worse and more potent enemy; it is the professed worldly, easy-minded christianity of this Laodicean age. Faint not now, nor suffer your hands to hang down. The powers of darkness are surrounding us on every side. Light and darkness are evidently grappling in a manner sufficient to awake the latent energies of every member of the body of Christ.

The mental elements around are becoming permeated with a morbid taint. All around we see dark clouds of unbelief hanging in deadly sullenness o'er the religious horizon. Halls of mirth and frivolity all over the land are crowded with professed religionists. Dress, fashion, and music, are pandering to the sensuality of a voluptuous age; while breathing-holes of perdition are yawning with all their alluring fascinations to draw their victims where footsteps go down to death, and "steps take hold on hell."

This is a fast age. Children will have their own way. What matters it with them if parents sigh in agony of soul, and shed their burning tears over them. This, in matters pertaining to a religion that separates from the world, is an easy-minded age. The portals of pretended places of worship are thrown open, and for a stipend a promiscuous crowd assembles to banish dull care,—eat, drink, feast, laugh, and often mingle in games of chance. It is thus Satan strews with flowers the road to ruin, and walks openly hand in hand with religious dignitaries down where, in the language of Isaiah, the son of Amos, declares—"Hell from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming."

This is a bold, open age of infidelity and atheism. Boldly do they, in an impious manner, attack the Creator, ridicule his word and character, and sow broadcast the spawn of blasphemy and death amid this morally stagnant atmosphere of this fast age and generation. Truly the harvest is ripening at a rapid pace.

A gloom o'er earth is gathering fast,
Its palmy days are o'er and past;
The clouds are black, presaging wo,
And wickedness "the fats o'erflow."
In sin, the mass grow bold of late,
While crimes and violence are great;
Madly the mass reject their God,
Nor fear his sin-avenging rod.

The harvest's ripe, behold the tares
In countless multitudes appear;
As seen by Joel in his vision,
Thronging the valley of decision;
Boldly the Lord they now defy,
And scoff at judgment being nigh;
Alas! such is the state of earth,
While nearing fast God's day of wrath.

Proclaim this both far and near,
Awake your mighty men of war;
'Tis done, the demon spirit's rife
With horrid taint for blood and strife;
Like epidemic in the air,
It cries for war—prepare, prepare;
And soon the Judge from off his throne
Will bid his mighty ones come down.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

THE EARTH TO BE LAPPED UP BY FIRE.

The sun's atmosphere, say the scientific men, is in a highly excited condition. A column of magnetic light is shooting out further and further from the solar sphere, and it is now stretching out forty-five millions of miles. In other words, it has accomplished half the distance between us and the sun. The interesting question, and one on which, perhaps, we do not wish any more light of this character, is, How long will it be before it finishes the rest of the distance, and bridges the gigantic chasm between the earth and the sun? Is it a messenger sent out to snatch us up as food for the insatiate monster that keeps himself warm by devouring planets, and whose fire-eating propensities this whole earth would satisfy for a few days only? If so, how long will this emissary be in reaching us, and carrying the globe away as if we were a gigantic lump of coal for a roaring furnace! This column of light at intervals indicates its approach by flashing and corruscating with fresh brilliancy. So decided are its effects that two astronomers, one at London, the other at Oxford, and neither knowing the experience of the other, supposed that the dark glass of their telescopes had been broken or put out of range, so strong was the flash of golden light upon their vision.

It is predicted that before the end of next year this magnetic light will have got near enough to us to make its immediate and actual influence upon the earth distinctly felt; and that in consequence we may expect to see phenomena that have never before been seen or known by any human race. If any of our readers are, therefore, yet disposed to complain of the weather and earthquakes, let them remember that, by this time next year, they may have an entire new line of experiences to explain and endure, in comparison with which the fitful winter and rough rude autumn of today, may seem like a June morning in Paradise, and the earthquake's shock and lightning's storm, a placid rocking in the cradle with a pleasant lullaby of thunder.—Ex.

REASONS FOR DRESSING PLAIN ON THE LORD'S DAY.

1. It would lessen the burdens of many who find it hard to maintain their place in society.
2. It would lessen the force of the temptations which often lead men to barter honor and honesty for display.
3. If there was less strife in dress at church, people in moderate circumstances would be more inclined to attend.
4. Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by the removal of many wandering thoughts.
5. It would enable all classes of people to attend church better in unfavorable weather.
6. It would lessen, on the part of the rich, the temptation to vanity.
7. It would lessen, on the part of the poor, the temptation to be envious and malicious.
8. It would save valuable time on the Sabbath.
9. It would relieve our means from a serious pressure, and thus enable us to do more for good enterprises.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Jan. 12, 1870.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

MRS. C. D. SIMMONS—N. McCulloek's address is No. 4 Eagle Street, Rochester, N. Y.

W. S. STORMS—The Bibles are 3½ inches wide, 7¼ long, and 1¼ thick.

J. WENDELL—Where does Martin Dexter receive the Crisis?

NOAH W. SANBORN—All right.

MARY AUBELL—Your postmaster can give you information about foreign postage.

A. B. FABRICK—"Christ our Life" is out of print. What shall we do with the 50 cts.?

E. H. ALLEN—See Crisis of Jan. 5th, second page.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

SIGN YOUR NAMES.

We frequently receive articles signed only by the initials of the writer's name. Such must not expect to see their communications in the paper, unless they are well known by their initials. Some of these articles are good, and would be published, if we knew who wrote them. Please be particular, and not send us anonymous articles, if the writer wishes them published.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

A correspondent of the London Times, writing from Rome, Dec. 14th, 1869, informs us that the first meeting of the Council, "with closed doors," Dec. 10th, "was a scene of the greatest confusion." It is said "the Pope's friends accuse France of dictating, and Frenchmen do not deny the imputation. The situation on both sides is said to be very critical, "and nobody sees the way out of it."

IS MAN A GOD?

The spirits do not hesitate to say that man is God, and there is no intelligent being who is God above man; and that all are Saviors, or may be, as truly as was Christ. This is the special mark of antichrist; who is to be known by denying Father and Son. This the Papacy never did, but always acknowledged and honored them.

In the Banner of Light for January 1st, 1870, we find some questions put to a spirit, and the answers, in which it is said there is "no difference at all" between us and Christ, so far as being the sons of God is concerned. When referring to Christ as our Savior, the spirit is reported to have said, "I have not a particle of faith in that kind of Savior—not a particle."

"What is your opinion with regard to preexistence?"

In answer to this question, the spirit said:

"I believe in a previous existence—that we have existed through all past eternity in form. I believe that some of us are very old in spirit, while others are very young; but the spirit, under some circumstances, I believe to have always existed. But to say that it always existed in some human form, would be saying more than I dare to. I believe that we, as spirits, as souls, as living entities, have always had an existence. But I believe after a certain period of experience we come into an intellectual machine—a human form—and are become impressed largely in the image of God, which is the image of intelligence. I believe as we go round and round the cycle we shall gather more and more experience to ourselves. I believe that we shall every one of us, at some future period, return to human bodies and live in human physical bodies again. Oh, you need not cry out against it, because this is fate, and you cannot escape it. I should hope that those who were unblest with bodies of disease, full of the misery of physical life, would not be called upon to inhabit such again. That would be my prayer for you, should I pray for you at all in that direction."

MORMON MORALS.

The Spiritualists claim that the Mormons are the nearest to the true social standard of any class, excepting themselves. The following is from the "Banner of Light:"

"The Mormons at Salt Lake are justly entitled to take precedence in rank among the numerous sects of the professed followers of Christ. And with this established result in their code of morals, if they would extend the same rights, socially, religiously and politically, to the female portion of their members that they do to the males, we should hail Mormonism as a moral evangelizer.... We declare that a woman has just as much right to a plurality of husbands as men have to a plurality of wives.... We do not expect professed christian churches or communities to accept, practically, such simple primitive truth; it is too early in the morning of the millennium for that. It is a brighter truth than many human souls can yet look at."

The foregoing gives us a hint at the kind of a millennium the demons and their followers would like to introduce.

THE TRUTH PLAINLY SPOKEN.

We have never seen an article that we thought expressed a sad, yet well-known truth, better than the following, from the editor of the Earnest Christian. It containts points worthy of the consideration of every good man. Does it not show a deplorable state of things. Where is the remedy? May we expect it will be applied? Please read the article, and give it a careful consideration.

REFORMATIONS.

It has become popular to have revivals. Nearly all denominations labor to promote them. Even the Roman Catholics hold protracted meetings, and send evangelists from city to city to propagate their doctrines.

The great drawback to these revivals, whether among Protestants or Catholics, is, that too often they are not accompanied with reformations. They bear a much greater resemblance to the system of proselytism carried on with so much zeal and success by the Pharisees than they do to the comparatively unsuccessful efforts of the Savior to promote the self-denying religion of the cross. The converts are as worldly-minded as ever. They do not even aim to overcome the world. They follow its fashions and are governed by its maxims. They are as much conformed to the world as if the Scriptures commanded it, instead of uttering against it a stern denunciation. The word of God as the standard of faith and practice, is practically set aside. The world insinuates itself into the church, obtains the mastery over it, and lays down the laws by which it is to be governed. Pride reigns where humility should prevail: God is dethroned by mammon. This is done—not by the open attacks of the world—for these would be resisted—but by bringing the world into the church. Had the Irish Catholics attempted to gain the control of the city of New York, by open assaults of fire and sword, they would doubtless have been successfully resisted. But by coming into the city in swarms, and taking upon them the obligations of citizens, and gaining control of the ballot boxes, they are enabled to levy contributions at pleasure upon the property of the inhabitants. The city government itself has become little better than a conspiracy against the property of the citizens. Similar tactics are employed by the overthrow of Christianity. Members of other and antagonistic societies, such as masonry, are freely admitted, until religion is made the handmaid of worldly policy, and the church becomes tributary to the lodge.

Now what is wanted is a real, radical, thorough reformation; such as they had on the day of Pentecost; such as they had in the days of the Wesleys. A reformation is demanded that vindicates the authority of God and the essential equality of man in the sight of God; that does away with the spirit of caste in the house of God; a reformation that makes men honest in all the relations of life; that will not allow them to amass wealth, either by themselves violating the commands of God, or hiring others to do it; that makes employers considerate of those under their control, and makes the employed careful of the interests of their employers as though they were their own; that makes men absolutely refuse to assist in elevating those to office who will use their influence for the spread of drunkenness and corruption. The Bible standard of Christianity must be reared. The people must be taught that the religion of the day is not true religion. As President Finney says, "Until we can put away from the minds of men the common error that the current Christianity of the church is true Christianity, we can make but little progress in converting the world." These are weighty words. Lay them up in your heart.

Do you want to see in your day and generation such a reformation as we have hinted at? We take it for granted that you do. There is a wide-spread dissatisfaction with the state of piety that so generally prevails.

If you would see such a reformation, then give yourself to God to promote it. An ordinary consecration will not answer. You must set yourself apart, to do the work which you see needs to be done. If you are a preacher—one whom God has called to the work, you may, by his blessing and co-operatson, which may be easily secured, promote such a reformation. It matters not what are your talents or your education; these have far less to do with the matter than is generally imagined. Weak things of the world confound the mighty when God chooses them for this purpose—not otherwise.

If God has called you to labor in his vineyard, then go to work; if not, then get out of the way, and make room for heaven-commissioned men. There is no calling on earth higher than that of the ambassador of God, who speaks his word faithfully... If your main object is to get a living, or to make money, then go into some honest business, but do not seek to make a gain of godliness. But if God has called you to the work of saving souls, then trust in him, and go at your work. Do it thoroughly, and confidently look for success. God will never fail you; he will give you the wisdom that will enable you to win souls.

If you are not a preacher in the ordinary sense of the term, still there are many ways in which you can preach. You can do it by bearing a faithful testimony against the superficial religion of the age. You can do it by circulating books, tracts, and publications that arouse the conscience and lead the soul to God. Perhaps in your own denomination there are ministers who cry aloud and spare not. You can avail yourself of their labors. Through their instrumentality you can pour the truth upon the hearts of the people.

Then do not lie down in discouragement. God has not given you light that you should put it under a bushel. Arise and shine! Stir up yourself, and stir up others to lay hold on God.

THE DEISTICAL COUNCIL IN NAPLES.

We clip the following from the N. Y. Herald of Jan. 5th:—

"The Council in Naples was called ostensibly in opposition or by way of a free-thinking contrast to the Ecumenical Council in Rome, but, as will be seen, the representatives hurried on with such rapidity of thought that they almost immediately lost sight of the very reverend and aged gentleman who claims to be the visible vicegerent of God on earth, and soared far away over his head to assail and defy the heavenly enthronement. There were Frenchmen, Italians, Germans and Englishmen; so that the war notes went forth in a chorus of almost Babelic utterances. It was young Italy and old and young France, with a decrepit assumption of mediæval Britain, in what appears to us a poor plagiarism of Voltaire and a miserable imitation of Robespierre, lacking the genius of the one and the personal courage of the other, and with the Goddess of Reason behind the scenes. 'War to the death with God,' 'war to religion and the princes,' were the short and sententious utterances with which the doctrine of woman's rights and the more subtle essentials of many of the modern isms, which have crept so silently into the midst of our own population in many places were proclaimed. The promulgation of a general proclamation of atheism was advocated, and finally, as we are told in conclusion, "many illustrious atheists gathered at the table, not to protest against the Ecumenical Council, but to combat God."

Unhappy Italy! In her pursuit of union and consolidation has she evolved only the elements of governmental disunion and social anarchy? Loosing herself voluntarily and by violence from a recognized centre of discipline and order, is she really incapable of walking alone in decency before the nations, or has she fallen from the path of rectitude merely in temporary lapsus in consequence of an unadvised adoption of a new code of morals—one which bears such fruit as was lately seen in the palace, near Florence during the moribund marriage of her death-sick King? In that instance it was free love and a marriage, to-day it is Deism and 'war on God.' We regret all this sincerely. It is to be lamented for the sake of Italy, her morals, her government and her finance, for the sake of France and for the sake of Germany. Our special writers in Paris have told and tell of Traupmann; from Germany we have news of the murderer of a clergyman, who, as he informed the judge, was convinced at nineteen years of age that 'there is no God, that it was all a fable,' and even worse. Among ourselves we have murders, family butcheries, assassinations, the knife, socialism, clerical sentimentalism, free love and deathed marriages. What is the reason? Is it from an unrestrained license of preaching and teaching? Shall we have a moral reaction and repentance, or a complete dissolution of the bonds of society?"

DIFFERENT SPIRITS.

We are often told that the spirit in man is immortal. We have not yet found the passage of Scripture that affirms any such thing. We find a great variety of spirits named in the Bible. The following list we quote from "The Herald of Life":—

1. We read of the spirit of Antichrist in 1 John 4: 3.
2. The spirit of bondage, Rom. 8: 15.
3. The spirit of counsel, Isa. 11: 2.
4. The spirit of divination, Acts 16: 16.
5. A dumb spirit, Mark 9: 17.
6. The spirit of error, 1 John 4: 9.
7. Evil spirit, Luke 7: 21.
8. A familiar spirit, 2 Chron. 33: 6.
9. The spirit of fear, 2 Tim. 1: 7.
10. A foul spirit, Mark 9: 25.
11. The spirit of jealousy, Num. 5: 14.
12. A lying spirit, 1 Kings 22: 22.
13. A perverse spirit, Isa. 19: 14.
14. The spirit of slumber, Rom. 11: 8.
15. A sorrowful spirit, 1 Sam. 1: 15.
16. The spirit of vexation, Eccl. 1: 14.
17. Unclean spirit, Mark 1: 23.
18. The spirit of understanding, Isa. 11: 2.
19. The spirit of whoredoms, Hos. 4: 12.
20. A wounded spirit, Prov. 18: 14.
21. The spirit of infirmity, Luke 13: 11.
22. The spirit of anguish, Exod. 6: 9.
23. A hasty spirit, Prov. 14: 29.
24. A haughty spirit, Prov. 16: 18.
25. The spirit of sleep, Isa. 29: 10.
26. A grieved spirit, Isa. 54: 6.
27. The spirit of heaviness, Isa. 61: 3.
28. A faint spirit, Ezk. 21: 7.
29. A troubled spirit, Dan. 2: 1.
30. The spirit of disobedience, Eph. 2: 2.
31. A proud spirit, Eccl. 7: 8.
32. The spirit of adoption, Rom. 8: 15.
33. A broken spirit, Ps. 51: 17.
34. A faithful spirit, Prov. 11: 13.
35. The spirit of grace, Heb. 10: 29.
36. Humble spirit, Isa. 57: 15.
37. A patient spirit, Eccl. 7: 8.
38. The spirit of truth, John 14: 17.
39. The spirit of wisdom, Eph. 1: 17.
40. An excellent spirit, Dan. 6: 3.
41. The spirit of sanctification, 2 Thess. 2: 13.
42. The spirit of judgment, Isa. 4: 4.

Here are over forty spirits. Which is the immortal one?

THE JESUS OF SPIRITUALISM.

In the Rostrum, as published by Mr. Hull, he finds fault with a minister for speaking of "the truth as it is in Jesus Christ;" and says:—

"Why give the truth as it is in him preeminence over that in any other man? We want the truth as it is in Confucius, Zoroaster, Pythagoras, Socrates, Plato, Xenophon, Publius, Cyrus, Bacon, Locke, Newton, Swedenborg, and A. J. Davis."

Indeed, we find the old heathen philosophers are counted of more value by the Spiritualists than the truthful words of Jesus.

"UNIVERSAL PERPLEXITY."

The following is from the New York Herald, Dec. 17th, 1869.

"Ours is a funny age. In religion, in morals, in politics, who knows where he is, or who knows what to do or believe? Everything is uncertain. Doubt is omnipresent. Faith is nowhere. All the world is troubled with the question. It is a universal perplexity. We have for some time past been doing our best to keep the world hanging on to the tails of belief; but even texts, Scripture texts and sermons, in the new and the old style, have not prevented the world from judging and concluding for itself."

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

We expect to have a supply of "Admonitions" by the 20th inst.

THE HEALTH REFORMER for January is at hand, filled with valuable reading matter that should be in every family. It is a superior health journal. Price only $1 a year. Address "Health Reformer," Battle Creek, Mich. A single number often contains articles worth more than the price of a year's subscription. It has the highest moral tone of any health periodical with which we are acquainted.

THE MONITOR.—We have just received the first number of The Monitor, edited and published by Brn. F. H. Chamberlain, Webster, Mass., and A. A. Angell, No. Scituate, R. I. "The Monitor" is full of good things, and we wish our Bro. much success. "The Monitor" is published monthly at $1 a year. Address either Bro. Chamberlain or Angell, as above.

NEW AND OLD.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please explain the passage found in Eccl. 3: 15? L. BEDELL.

The passage is as follows: "That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past;" or, as in the margin, "that which is driven away."

We understand the wise man to mean that society repeats itself from century to century. Things that are done now have been done before. Vices now predominating have been in other ages. Discoveries in the fine arts at the present day were known to the ancients, as is shown by samples of their work.

Again, the earth is to be without a "curse" (Rev. 22: 3) [illegible] in the days of [illegible] The time is coming when there will not be a sinner living; that "hath already been," in the early history of our race.

Solomon does not say that every thing "which hath been is now" nor that every thing "which is to be hath already been;" yet it is a general truth.

TRUTH IN ENGLAND.

We are rejoiced to learn that the truth is spreading in England, and other parts of Europe. The same is true in this country. Good men and women in all the evangelical churches are becoming more interested in the pure Bible doctrine, which many are pleased to call "infidelity." Certain we are that an earnest conflict is at hand between the powers of light and darkness, truth and error, Christ and Belial; but, thank the Lord, the victory is sure on the side of the christian's Captain. Let us be brave for the right. All heaven is interested in the result. Let us be willing to stand in the hottest of the fight. Let no coward's fear have a place one moment in the heart of any one engaged in this glorious warfare. The final contest is just at hand, and soon will begin the eternal, triumphant rejoicing:

In the October No. of the Rainbow, the worthy Editor says:—

But a few months ago, at the bidding of conscience and in the fear and love of God, we did a thing which greatly offended many of our old friends. They have deserted us because the great truth, after years of earnest study, has come like the light of a glorious sun upon our mind, that there is no immortality out of Christ, and that therefore the dogma of endless torment to the unsaved is not, and cannot be true. Hundreds—thousands of persons have thanked us for the existence of the Rainbow; shall its services be dispensed with now that its value as an exponent of Scripture is so greatly enhanced? Shall it disappear because certain christian men, hitherto its supporters, have not yet seen what they will as certainly see some day, as that to-morrow's sun will rise, that the punishment of the ungodly is "everlasting destruction?" Shall its testimony be silenced because its editor has with conscious loyalty and love to God, lifted up his voice against a dogma that fearfully dishonors him whose wondrous name is Love, and shocks and horrifies every man that tries to think what it really means?

I might make this case still stronger by mentioning the fact that, though a poor man, I have labored gratuitously these six years, having no editorial fee; that in teaching the doctrine of life in Christ only, I am at one with prophets, and apostles, and the Lord of both; that in declaring that the wicked shall be consumed, I am wresting out of the hands of infidelity its very strongest weapon; that I only ask co-operation from men who love the Lord in endeavoring to serve my generation according to the will of God; and that willing service for the truth's sake seems at least to deserve some appreciation on the part of those who love the truth.

The day may come when those who have turned against me will think better of it. I know they are estimable men, and I regard them as highly as before, although their opinion is no rule for my faith, and their defection from a magazine they once admired, no reason why I should abandon what I consider an imperative christian duty. The letters they sent me have all been destroyed to prevent the possibility of any of them seeing the light when this hand shall cease to write. Perhaps for this thoughtful service, too, some of them may yet feel grateful.

It may, however, encourage the reader if I give two or three specimens of letters from men who think the value of the Rainbow increased since the great question of immortality was introduced into its pages.

A gentleman in London writes:—"Thanks many, dear Dr. Leask, for the glorious light you have shed upon a perplexing mystery. I live in a new universe now, and I love God as I never did before."

A gentleman in Scotland says:—"I trust the Lord will sustain you in the arduous and glorious work in which you are engaged, clearing away the mystification with which traditional, and what is termed orthodox, theology have overlaid the prophetic parts of Scripture, and setting forth the truth in its pure simplicity to the edification and joy of humble believers."

Another says, among other things:—"Accept my warmest thanks that you have opened the Rainbow for the purpose of bringing to light the doctrine of immortality only in Christ. I must confess myself won over to the scriptural arguments brought forward."

A gentleman in Barnet writes:—"Dear Sir—I can scarcely express the thankfulness (and also that of many friends to whom your valuable magazine is a never-failing source of pleasure and profit) with which I read the article on 'Immortality,' and the many others which it has called forth, having long since felt that the doctrine of 'eternal torment,' is inconsistent with every attribute of God, particularly those of justice and love, and for the holding of which his word holds out no fair warrant. I sincerely regret that the number of subscribers to the Rainbow is so limited, but I am sure God will not forget your work and labor of love; and I pray God to stir up his people, that they may realize the vast importance of the truth it advocates, and that they may thus be led to put forth greater efforts to make it known. I can testify to the great benefit I have personally received from it, and lose no opportunity of bringing it under the notice of my friends, many of whom now take it regularly."

A clergyman of eminent ability writes:—"Increasingly precious to me and several of my friends are the contents of the Rainbow, and let me add, greatly enhanced is my affectionate esteem for its editor. There are not a few old-fashioned ideas from which we require to be disestablished and disendowed, that our preaching and thinking may be free and pure, because more scriptural and less conventional. I have always felt a repugnance to the eternity of penal torments, that it was unwarranted, even by the exceeding sinfulness of sin; but, especially, do I feel that the gift of immortality, which was never inherent in man, is the blessed prerogative of Jesus. This, I feel, honors the Son with his due honor."

A gentleman in Dundee writes:—"Permit a stranger to express his thanks to you for the noble and fearless manner in which you have of late opened your columns for the discussion of the great themes of immortality, and of the fate of the wicked. Though, for the moment, it may militate against you, yet I do not think it will do so long. If some cease their patronage in a fit of anger at seeing their monstrous dogma of endless torments assailed—the most detestable and God-insulting of all heresies that ever yet were vamped up—never mind it, but go courageously forward in the path of duty, as you have done hitherto, and, doubtless, many new friends will be raised up to take the place of those lost. For there are many whose minds are being stirred up to thoughtful inquiry on these solemn topics, and whose research will increase the tide of disgust that is rising against these corrupt sectarian theologies, and will one day sweep them away. Such periodicals as yours will prove a most beneficent end, in showing many inquirers after truth the right way, into which they should turn, and thus save them from infidelity, or from its half sister, indifferentism, as in the case of 'C. T., Liverpool,' on cover of July number. Do not be discouraged, then, dear sir, but fling your banner to the breeze, and fight manfully the battles of the Lord, and he will sustain you."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$218.64
C. S. Sherman	40.00
J. Wilson	.50
J. D. Fletcher	.90

For the World's Crisis.

"MUCH SPEAKING."

Perhaps the brethren who take an active part in our meetings, by preaching or talking, are more excusable than other teachers for their long discourses. They are the result of patient, prophetic investigation, by which arguments were produced which require long articles in print, and long lectures in public, to state them in a clear and satisfactory manner.

We have listened to such discourses of more than an hour's length, and were often so deeply interested in the subject, and so pleased with the energy and style of the speakers, as to have been willing to listen an hour longer. We do not wish to see such brethren limited on such occasions, but even these need to be on their guard lest they fall into the habit of taking up too much time whenever they address their hearers. A hint, however, is sufficient for such men.

But there is another class in the church who seem to be, as Bro. M. expresses it, given over to hardness of heart in this practice. No hints, no entreaties avail with them. They talk and talk; sometimes the words almost freeze on their lips; and when they have got through, you are sure that the sum of all they said could have been condensed to a ten minutes' operation. They talk on; no matter if a dozen of disgusted ones arise and seek relief by leaving the place. O, what an injury to the cause of truth! Why will men, and some of them really good men, do so?

I believe many a society languishes from this cause; for people will not attend if constantly tortured with long, dry, monotonous speeches. A spiritually-minded hearer will judge such ministrations to be the fruits of formality and Phariseeism; and he cannot live in such a place any better than a fish can exist out of water.

We look back on past years and call to mind the men who, notwithstanding their good intentions, have paralyzed many a well-begun meeting by such a course (shall I write such a curse?). I do not think they ever edified the church. They have disappeared, one by one, to the great relief of those they punished. We think of their inflictions, and repeat—

"Daughter of Zion, awake from thy sadness;
Awake, for thy friends shall oppress thee no more."

I fear it is a waste of time to remonstrate with those who thus wound the Lord in the house of his friends. The examples of such effective men of God as Whitefield and Wesley are held up to them in vain.

Brethren, you who are the subjects of these remarks, let me direct your attention to the examples presented in the Scriptures. Did you ever reflect on the short, sharp, and decisive utterances of those who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit? Turn to the first of Luke and read the words of Elizabeth, of Mary, and of Zacharias. Look through the New Testament, and read the recorded speeches of Stephen and St. Paul before councils. How well chosen their words. How brief, considering the nature of their cases. Many now-a-days make longer so-called prayers.

Let no preacher weary his hearers by compelling them to sit an hour listening to him, except on rare occasions. Do not make yourself the signal to drive or keep people away when you are expected to preach. Open your eyes and see with what pleasure an audience listens to the half-hour's discourse of a brother who may be your inferior in learning. What is his secret? He is not prosy.

And you who are not ordained preachers, but talk so long in meeting—how unfair, to say the least, to monopolize the precious time and disregard the rights of your fellow worshipers! Suppose a meeting of two hours' long with twenty christians in it. Each one should have a right to five minutes for prayer, exhortation, or testimony. If you take up half an hour you wrong your brethren, especially if you do so repeatedly.

It may be urged as an excuse, that others will not fill up the time if you do not. Did you ever considerately make way for them to occupy their share of the time? Have they always refused? Then something is wrong with them, and be assured that no long speeches, merely to fill up the time, will do them or yourself any good. Rather let the meeting break up in silence. The Lord, who knows your motives, will bless you for adhering to a righteous principle.

I believe that if the general voice of our people could be heard on this subject, they would cry out against it as a great hindrance to our spiritual prosperity, and desire the various conferences to give a decided expression on the subject. The only other hope of a remedy is to enter a plain but friendly protest in behalf of our fellow sufferers, in the Crisis.

Newark, N. J. JOHN LYLE.

For the World's Crisis.

"BEREAN'S CASKET."

Buy one, and use it as a reference book, and you will not regret it. When you look at the book you will say—"great price;" but when you have carefully examined its contents, you will say I have got my money's worth. The collection of prophecies and their fulfillment, together with the numerous statistics which the book contains, makes it a very valuable one if there were nothing more.

W. H. MITCHELL.

For the World's Crisis.

TO BRO. BELLOWS' FRIENDS.—Some weeks since, before Bro. Bellows' death, Bro. Grant was in New York, and in the next week's Crisis appealed to friends for aid. The late notice of Bro. Bellows' death carried Bro. Grant's appeal home to the hearts of Bro. B.'s many friends, and caused them to respond after a godly sort; but Sister Bellows fears that some will give who are not able, and wishes me to express her heartfelt thanks to the friends who have written to her, but also state that they lack none of the necessaries of life; as one of her sons, who is yet single, and successful in business, nobly supplies all their wants. I might add that not only Henry, but his brothers and sisters, are all industrious, and those who have no families to provide for bring their wages home, and thus all are provided for in this life. O may Henry and all soon possess the enduring riches, so they with their father, who now sleeps in Jesus, may be an unbroken family in the everlasting kingdom which we all hope soon to enter. H. A. KING.

New York, Jan. 5th, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

GOOD NEWS.—For several weeks past there has been quite a stir in religious matters at Upper Bartlett, N. H., occasioned by the promulgation of the truth as it is in Jesus to the people of that region by our Bro. and Sr. L. C. and M. McKinstry. The whole community has been deeply stirred, and some eighteen or twenty have been awakened to a newness of life, four of whom have been baptized. Eight subscribers have been obtained for the Crisis. It is truly heart-cheering to all lovers of our ever-blessed Redeemer to know that, amid all the abounding wickedness that exists throughout the entire world, in the last and fast closing-up days of this age, the precious truths of the Bible are spreading abroad, and some are gladly receiving the word of life.

CHAS. H. HURD.

For the World's Crisis.

TO ALL MY FRIENDS.—After a long and tedious delay, the first number of The Monitor is now out, and we should be very glad to supply all our friends with a copy. It is not as free from typographical errors as we hope future numbers will be; but we think you will find it worth the cost, and trust those who read it will be edified thereby.

The contents of "No. 1" are as follows:—The Field and the Work; The Ground of Confidence; The Sunday School; Religion and War; How to remove Mountains; Blindness of this World; The words of Jesus; Trust in the Lord; Truth; A fitful Religion; Facts for the Rich; Puff and Growth; Sectarianism; The Closing Hours of Time; Our Prayer-meeting; True Happiness: Dan. 12: 10; Blowing; Fashion; Wisdom; Our Intentions, and what we propose to do; Flattering Titles; The Day of Judgment; The Children's Department, and several pieces of poetry and minor articles. Single copy, ten cents.

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

FINANCIAL REPORT
Of the Alton Bay Advent Campmeeting for 1869.

EXPENDITURES.

Paid for groceries, provisions, and the various articles used and sold at the boarding house, at the refreshment stands, and for services rendered by persons in the above departments, about	$3,405.31
" For hay, grain, and labor at the stable	193.10
" For lumber	330.00
" For hay and straw to fill beds	125.00
" For police service	66.00
" For stove and tin ware	35.87
" For stove, house, lunch stands, repairing seats, floor over oyster room, back buildings, and labor	365.00
" For crockery, glass ware, spoons, knives and forks	148.26
Total	$4,668.54

I use the term about in the above, because there were some things purchased at the stand, and paid for, that are not in this report, and I have no way of knowing how much.

RECEIPTS.

For lumber	$300.00
" hay and straw to fill beds	125.00
Received at stables	233.98
Cash for board and at stands	3,806.08
By collections	206.70
Total	$4,671.76
Excess of receipts over expenditures	$3.22

D. CHURCHILL, for Committee.

INQUIRY ANSWERED.

DEAR SIR.—Clergymen and others ask why I have devoted myself to the anti-tobacco cause twenty years! This inquiry deserves an answer.

1. I was myself a user of tobacco. I gave it up; and, as it formed an era in my life, like a young convert, I joyfully proclaimed it to my fellow-men.

2. My preaching was blessed of God. Many clergymen and many laymen relinquished the habit; and young men and boys in large numbers signed the pledge against tobacco and strong drink.

3. In the course of investigation, I soon saw that tobacco was injuring the piety of church-members, rendering some irritable and others stupid, and tending to destroy all aspirations for santification and the "higher life."

4. I became convinced that tobacco is an idol, assuming the place of God—as really an idol as Baal or Juggernaut, and that our young men, whilst worshiping it, can no more be saved, than whilst worshiping God and Mammon.

5. In looking over churches, I saw that backsliders were tobacco users and I came to the conclusion that tobacco had much to do with their apostasy. This is confirmed by mournful facts.

6. On farther investigation, I found that many devotees of tobacco are in a narcotized or abnormal state. Their moral sensibilities are not only stupefied, but the glorious attribute of free will is paralyzed, and their power to choose God well nigh destroyed.

7. I found that when men relinquished tobacco, it payed the way to relinquish other destructive habits, and this to a resurrection of the whole moral man, and this to a determination to be right with God, and to "lay hold on eternal life."

8. Conferring with missionaries in this and other lands, I found the evil as broad as the world; that the Chinese and Turks are intoxicated and narcotized not only by opium, but by tobacco, and whilst in this state their conversion is about as hopeful as that of dead men in the catacombs of Rome.

These are my reasons for sacrificing myself to this despised cause. Other men may denounce the habit as filthy, expensive, and unhealthy. I take higher ground. I maintain that it mars the image of God in good men, hinders the conversion of sinners about us, and the conversion of the world.

Great obstacles obstruct the gospel. I am doing what I can to invoke attention to a mighty one, and to prepare the way of the Lord. My cause is unpopular—I am unpopular; but somebody must do unpopular work, or it will never be done.

Yours truly, GEORGE TRASK.

Let a man examine his thoughts but for one hour of the day, according to the standard of spiritual-mindedness, and then be proud of himself if he can.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. D. Reed.

To the saints of like precious faith:—After laboring for two years on the great Mississippi, my last work was among the Chippewa tribe, at Crow Wing. On the fourth of Nov. we left for Cal., and on the eighth took dinner on the top of the Rocky Mountains, and on the twelfth found ourselves in this beautiful town, the best part of the world. Never any snow in this valley. Roses and other flowers bloom the year round. A great fruit and grape country.

But the curse is here, and the land groans for deliverance. We have had three groans or shocks of earthquake since we came. One shock whilst holding meeting in the evening. It made the house tremble. But none of these things move me, for I am looking for a shaking of heaven and earth soon, and perfect love will give boldness in that day. And I can say, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." All is well, earthquake or no earthquake.

Our first work on our arrival here was to scatter tracts all over the town. I left "The Duration of Evil" at a Baptist minister's house. The next Sabbath he warned his congregation to have nothing to do with those "damnable tracts," for we "denied the resurrection." Another minister says he has no confidence at all in the Advent doctrines that we preach, as it is "a Northern speculation got up in Boston; for that is a great place for getting up new things."

O the blindness that has happened to this generation! So ignorant, they know not whether the doctrine is founded on God's word, or has its foundation in Boston. And this is a learned minister. "Ever learning, and never coming to a knowledge of the truth." The land is covered with darkness, and the people with gross darkness.

Another minister of the Christian order came to inquire about these things, and he, like the noble Bereans, "searched the Scriptures daily, to see if these things were so," and has decided for God and the truth, and come out clear on all the great truths of the Bible. He is going from house to house publishing the glad tidings of Christ's soon coming. He is a bright light in this dark land.

I preached the first Advent sermon that was ever heard in this place. Some are being waked up to the great subject of Christ's soon coming; but only a few will believe it. The way is too straight for them. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be when the Son of man cometh."

We shall move as the Lord opens the way before us. I thank God that we ever came to this land. I feel the Lord sent us here. So we will try to blow the gospel trumpet as loud and as long as we can. In hope,

D. D. REED.

Santa Clara, Cal., Dec. 29th, 1869.

From Bro. L. E. Craw.

To the saints scattered abroad:—I wish you all a happy new year in the Lord. We have just been called to bid adieu to 1869, with its cares, trials, and conflicts with the enemy, its seasons of holy enjoyment, especially to as many of you as have been favored with conferences and other glorious seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Entombed with the old year lies many a watchman who has fallen at his post. But, thanks be to God, though they have passed from earth like the old year, they are not, like it, forever blotted out of existence. For who knows but 1870 may bring them forth to the judgment, where they shall receive white robes and be forever with the Lord?

Brn. and Srs., if there ever was cause to work in earnest, it is now. If ever necessary for us to go forth weeping, bearing precious seed, it is doubly so now. Let our joyous anticipations of the fulfillment of prophecy, bringing to us the consummation of our hope, even our dear Jesus from heaven, our entrance into life, be mingled with sorrow for a wicked and doomed world. Let us remember those in bonds as bound with them. For who has not been bound with them? Let us think how terrible would have been our condition if we had never left their ranks. Let us consider them our brethren and sisters, and equally as well worth saving. "In union there is strength"; and with God for our helper, and with his word for our armor, let us renew the conflict with the arch-deceiver, and set his prisoners free.

May God grant that our efforts be not in vain, but that 1870 shall be the year in which Satan's hosts were put to rout, and when the soldiers of the cross waxed valiant in fight.

Now you who are taking your ease, laying up "treasure upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt," remember you will want to be reckoned among those who have come through tribulation, on that great day; but God knows what you are doing. Let every sleeper on the verge of judgment wake up now. Let those who are awake cease to make contention in the ranks by hobby-riding, so that we may show the enemy a broad front this year, and much good be done in the name of Jesus.

L. E. CRAW.

Hedgerville, W. Va., Jan. 1st, 1870.

From Bro. P. Tandy.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—We wish you a very happy new year in the name of the Lord. May the richest of heaven's blessings descend upon you. May your work and labor of love be signally owned and blessed of God to the good of many precious souls. And may all the Advent ministers of our Lord Jesus Christ, throughout our land and world, both male and female, be abundantly blessed of God. The word of the Lord declares that "he that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins." May you go forth in the name and strength of the Lord, "weeping, bearing precious seed," that you may "come again rejoicing, bringing your sheaves with you."

And to the little flock generally, let me wish you a very happy new year! Time is short at the longest, and what we do we must do quickly. Christ left the cross and ascended to glory, that you and I might take it and bear it after him, and finally receive the crown. Follow after holiness, without which no man can see the Lord in peace. If you would please God and be owned and blessed of him, be much in his company. Jesus Christ is able and willing to help you in every emergency; prove him, trust in him; he has promised to never leave nor forsake us. Remember that God has his eyes always upon us; we cannot deceive him; let us be careful not to deceive ourselves.

Brethren and sisters in Christ, what are we doing for God against Satan? And what are we doing for the cause of Christ in opposition to sin? Let conscience honestly answer these solemn questions. We are emphatically living in perilous times, which show us plainly that we are in the last days of probation. The Lord has been faithful in giving us the signs by which we may know when his second advent is near. He says, "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking [or at] after those things which are coming [or have come] on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken; and then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory." "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "Seeing we look for such things, what manner of persons ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness."

I believe we have had all the signs mentioned in the twenty-first chapter of Luke, but the last two, namely, the shaking of the powers of heaven, and the sign of the Son of man coming in a cloud.

Let us "take heed, lest at any time our hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon us unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Yours in earnest, P. Tandy.

Jan. 1st, 1870.

Sr. R. Williams writes from No. Canton, Ct.:—"Eld. H. K. Flagg has been here over two weeks, and we have had a blessed good time. We have no doubt but the Lord sent him. Many have been blest. A number that were backslidden, and a good number of young people, have started for the kingdom. Some were baptized, and we are expecting some of us will be of the number who shall go into the kingdom. The Methodists, a few of them, came in and heard the truth on the signs of the times, baptism, and other Bible doctrines; and they would say, That is truth; but they do not seem to be of the number that take a stand for it. We have lived here three years. There have been Advent meetings here twice in the time, but we could not attend on account of sickness, and it has been a great feast to us. I thought of the prophet when the angel told him to eat enough to last him forty days."

For the World's Crisis.

Lowell St. Chapel.—We shall continue our meetings every evening this week, and over next Sunday, and onward as the Lord may direct. We hope all the brethren and sisters will come, and put their shoulders to the wheel, and pray earnestly that many souls may be added unto the Lord.

John G. Hook.

HOLDING OUT.

After having started in the divine life, there is nothing like holding out to the end. It is the latter part of a race that decides the contest. It was the last few hours of fighting that turned the scale at Waterloo in favor of Wellington; and that enabled Sheridan to snatch the victory from his opponents in the valley of the Shenandoah. "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

If you were floating upon a wreck, and should see your comrades one after another relaxing their hold and sinking to a watery grave, it might awaken your fears, but you would only hold on the firmer while your strength remained. It is enough to strike terror to the stoutest heart to see what numbers, who for years lived near to God, compromise at last, and either openly go over to the world, or fall into a state of lukewarmness that renders their damnation none the less certain, though they reach it through a more respectable route. We can point you to scores of ministers, who were once a power for God in the land, who either do not preach at all, or, if they do open their mouths in the name of God, they do it in such honied tones as not to disturb the repose of those who are asleep in Zion. Some cater to the proud, and seek positions in fashionable churches; some had joined the lodge and proclaimed concord between Christ and Belial; some have become immersed in politics; and others have gone into the life-insurance business—a business which affords respectable employment to many backslidden preachers.

Beloved, shall we hold on to our integrity to the last? We may. It is God's will that we should. He is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the throne.

But if we would hold out, we must guard especially against a love of ease and self-indulgence. The battle is not so much to be dreaded as the victory that follows; prosperity destroys far more than persecution. After years of conflict, the energies of the body clamor for repose, and the appetites for indulgence.

The devil will try just as hard to induce those who have laid in a large stock of grace, as those who have laid up a large stock of gold, to say, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." Yield to this temptation, and you are lost. Past experience is valuable, as it gives us confidence to look for present blessings. But we cannot live upon it. "Give us this day our daily bread." Our motto must ever be, "Onward and upward." We must take the kingdom by force. Let the Master's words ever ring in our ears—"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Earnest Christian.

True Woman's Movement.—The work accomplished by the Woman's Board of Missions, and reported at its recent meeting in Park Street church, must be highly satisfactory to its officers and members, as well as to all others who are interested in the spiritual regeneration of peoples yet excluded from the light of the gospel. The secretary, Mrs. Copp, in her able report, showed that the missionaries of the Board have penetrated the most distant and barbarous nations, and in several instances have worked complete reformation in the moral and social habits of the savage. In the Gilbert Islands, for example, woman was taught the elevation and delicacy of the position she occupied on the christian plane, and thus she is being speedily rescued from the degradation in which she had been long sunk. In various parts of the far East and South, similar success has attended the labors of the Board—and all this accomplished within a period not exceeding two years!

Although so lately in existence, the Woman's Board has auxiliaries in nearly every State of the Union, and there is no doubt that a wide field of usefulness is opened for its labors which it is destined successfully to cultivate. What a noble field for the activity of women! There certainly can be no objection to their enlarging their sphere in this and similar directions, and this done, other fields may open as freely and naturally.—News.

Obituaries.

Cross. Died, in West Ossipee, N. H., Nov. 25th, 1869, Sr. Lydia Sanborn, wife of Bro. Moses Cross, formerly wife of the late Eld. Thomas Sanborn, of Effingham, N. H., aged about seventy years.

In the death of Sr. Cross, the church has lost a faithful witness for the truth, and one who often administered to the wants of the saints, as many living witnesses could testify. She for a number of years had been awaiting the consummation of the christian's hope, but with an innumerable company of the meek she now sleeps in Jesus, resting for a little while, until earth's day of probation is ended, and the voice of the Life-giver is heard calling—"Come forth!" C. H. Hurd.

Clark. Fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 29th, 1869, James P. Clark, of Corinna, Me., aged forty years, three months, and nine days.

After a continued illness, our brother closed his eyes in death, which released him from the pains of a diseased heart and lungs, no more to be disturbed by the ills of this life, but waiting the call of the Lion of Judah, when he shall awake to enjoy the blessedness of that world where sorrow will never come. He leaves a wife and five children, together with a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss. The gospel we realized to be glad tidings while we spoke from those heavenly words recorded in Phil. 3: 20, 21.

Allen Damon.

Leas. Died, in Concord, N. H., Dec. 5th, 1869, George A. Leas, aged thirty years.

Bro. George was a great sufferer the last six months of his stay here, but he bore all with patience, and died with the armor on. So we laid him away in his quiet sleep, expecting to meet him in a little while, where pain and death never come. Funeral services attended by Bro. J. Couch.

J. T. Kimball.

Hatch. In Wayne, Cass Co., Mich., Dec. 18th, 1869, Bro. A. Y. Hatch, aged seventy years, seven months, and twenty-nine days.

He left a wife and a large family to mourn his loss. His last illness was a stroke of the palsy. Although his sufferings were extreme, he bore them with resignation, He died as he lived, strong in the faith of a better resurrection. His mind was drawn seriously to the subject of religion about twelve years ago, when the Lord converted him. From that time his life has been marked by humble and holy living, commanding the respect of all who knew him. Being a man of much reading in early life, his mind was now directed to the reading of the Bible, which led him to embrace the faith of the speedy coming of Christ, and its kindred doctrines. After remaining in the Congregationalist church as deacon a few years, his mind settled on the Advent faith, and he felt it his duty to connect himself to the Advent body, where he also retained the office of deacon until his death. The church has lost a faithful brother; the family a kind father and dutiful husband.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. chapel, which was crowded, while the occasion was improved by the writer from Job 14: 14. It was a solemn time. We then laid him away in the cold grave, to be remembered by his Lord when he comes into his kingdom. A. M. Smith.

Benson. Died, in Warren, Mass., Dec. 29th, 1869, Luna L., son of Hezekiah A. and Mary J. Benson, aged four years and nine months.

Their first loss. The blessed hope of the resurrection sustains them. Funeral attended by the writer. W. N. Pile.

Leighton. Died in Lawrence, Dec. 26th, 1869, Mr. James H., son of V. H Leighton, formerly of Middleton, N. H, aged twenty-five years, seven months, and eleven days.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Job 14: 10. M. Stevens.

Married.

By Elder A. W. Sibley, Jan. 1st, 1870, at the residence of A. Kendall, Esq, West Thornton, N.H., Mr. Frank R. Sawyer, of Bristol, N. H., and Miss Olive M. Brown, of Ellsworth, N. H.

Also, at the same place and time, by Elder A. W. Sibley, Mr. Royal A. Fifield, of Woodstock, N. H., and Miss Sarah A. Smith, of Northfield, N. H.

By Eld. A. W. Sibley, Jan. 5th, 1870, at West Thornton, N. H., Mr. Charles H. Elkins, and Miss Rose E. Marden, both of Thornton.

In Richmond, Dec. 30th, 1869, by H. D. Reed, Mr. Corin Harlow and Miss Arexene Berry, both of Richmond, Me.

At Wilbraham, Jan. 1st, by Elder P. S. Butler, Mr. James N. Glover, of Wilbraham, and Miss Mary E. Brigham, of Northfield, Vt.

Also, at Monson, Jan. 1st, by the same, at the house of the bride's father, Mr. Charles H. Haskell, of Peabody, and Miss Ann Fannie Poole, of Monson.

In Cambridge, Nov. 16th, 1869, by Rev. W. H. Meeker, David W. Lincoln, and Fannie R. Burr, both of Hebron, N. Y.

In Cambridge, Nov. 16th, 1869, by Rev. W. H. Meeker, John H. Moore, and Mary A. Lincoln, both of Hebron.

In the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broome Co., N. Y., Dec. 29th, 1869, by Eld. J. W. Taylor, Mr. Isaac S. Bull, of Binghamton, N. Y., and Miss Eudora M. Ross, of Great Bend, Pa.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Rome, Jan. 3. The Civilta Cattolica, published here, has a long article on the relations of the different nations of the world to the Ecumenical Council now in session in this city. It states that governments generally have neither favored nor hindered the Council, except the Russian schismatic, which prevented the only Bishop of Poland not killed or exiled to Siberia from being present to relate the misfortunes of that martyred country. Only one nation, France, has given proof of her solicitude in keeping a garrison here to protect the tranquility of the Council.

Rome, Jan. 4. A general congregation of the Council was held at the Quirinal yesterday. The Pope was not present, and the Cardinal presiding by right of age, announced the recent deaths of four Cardinals.

Madrid, Jan. 4. A decided negative has been received from Italy in the matter of the candidature of the Duke of Genoa. As a consequence, Gen. Prim and all the rest of the Ministers have resigned.

Rome, Jan. 6. The second public congregation of the Ecumenical Council commenced this morning. The first was on the occasion of the inauguration of the Council. The ceremonies to-day were not on so grand a scale as those of the opening day and the number of spectators was much smaller.

The Pope was present, but there was no procession to the hall of the Council, and no opening address was delivered. Mass was celebrated, after which each Father delivered to the Pope his profession of faith according to the formula of Pius IV. Though its organization is completed, the Council cannot yet promulgate decrees. The Holy Father continues in full health.

London, Jan. 6. The correspondent of the Times, writing from Rome, says the Pope will probably proclaim the dogma of infallibility, by a decree not admitting an appeal to the General Council.

London, Jan. 7. A correspondent of the Morning Post, writing from Ismailia, says that anything drawing over fifteen feet of water must be lightened in order to pass through the Suez canal. Dredges, etc., so obstruct it that the passage is hazardous. The Company decline to take any risk whatever. It requires a mint of money to keep the work in order.

Paris, Jan. 7. Count Daru, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, has addressed a circular to the diplomatic representatives of France at foreign courts, announcing that the policy of the French Government will be absolutely pacific.

Paris, Jan. 8. The Memorial Diplomatique asserts that a compromise has been arranged on the question of the infallibility of the Pope. Infallibility will be affirmed, but dissent from the article will be indulged.

Great Floods in England.—The London Times of Dec. 21st states that heavy rains which had prevailed for several days had caused great floods in many parts of England. In the midland counties they were very destructive, and in the Vale of Trent thousands of acres were submerged. At Nottingham the water in the river reached within a foot and a half of the highest point ever known. Many buildings were flooded. At Derby the Derwent overflowed its banks and did an immense amount of damage. The water was five feet deep in a large number of dwellings and warehouses, and St. Paul's church was blocked up with water so that no service could be held on Sunday. In Shropshire and North Wales the rains produced floods almost unprecedented in the present century. At Shrewsbury, where the rivers Severn and Res join, the water submerged a vast number of houses. Boats, cabs, wagons and rafts were in constant requisition to convey the people from the suburbs to the centre of the town. An immense amount of damage was done to stock and property. At Melverly, a low lying district, the cottagers were entirely driven from their homes, and the land for miles presented a frightful waste of waters, with only the tops of trees here and there interspersed. The injury caused by the floods is estimated at $2,000,000.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 7. An immigration company, of which Caleb Cushing is President, has purchased an immense body of land in Amherst, Bedford and adjoining counties, where they will establish a Polish colony.

Gov. Ord of Arizona states that some 20,000 Apache Indians are overrunning that territory, and he is en route to Washington to obtain either more troops or an authorization to raise volunteers from the miners and farmers to protect themselves from the redskins.

Improvement in the Telegrapher's Art.—The poles of a new system of telegraphing are now being erected between New York and Washington, by which means it is claimed two hundred words per minute can be sent over one wire. Twenty words is as much as the most rapid operator by the Morse system can transmit, so that one wire under the new system will be able to do as much work as ten of the wires now in use. The inventor, a Mr. Little, of Baltimore, anticipates to be able to at once reduce the rate of telegraphing to one-half of present prices, and ultimately to make a uniform tariff of one cent per word to all distances. This would draw all business correspondence from the mails and multiply the amount of telegraphing tenfold what it now is.

The New York "Bore."—New York papers say that the Broadway pneumatic tunnel has been carried from the corner of Warren street to the Astor House. It is nine feet four inches in diameter. The tunneling is done by a cutting machine, which is worked by hydraulic pressure. It is managed by two men, who are able to excavate more than fifty men could do under the old tunneling process. The machine cuts around the tunnel, causing the whole front to loosen and fall inwards. Masons are at work building the masonry, which is eight inches thick. Ten feet daily is the average progress made. The space is to be divided into four tunnels, two for parcels and freight, and two for letters. The inside of all the tubes will be cemented air tight, and within each a railway will be constructed. The route already arranged is thirteen miles long. The first objective point is South Ferry. Branches will run to Central Park and other points.—Journal.

How long the Council is likely to Last.—With regard to this question, which is frequently asked, the Paris Monde, one of the most influential papers of the Catholic world, remarks: "The Council of Trent lasted eighteen years; but it was the longest of any of the Councils, and its real labors only lasted for about five years." The Monde expects that, unless unforeseen events intervene, the deliberations can be finished by the end of the year 1870. Should new questions present themselves, the summer of 1870 would be employed for preparatory work, and the final session would take place in the winter of 1870 to 1871.

The Recent Auroral Display.—The northern sky, between the hours of four and five o'clock yesterday morning, was lighted with the grandest auroral blaze that has been witnessed in this latitude perhaps since September, 1859. The sky was clear, with the exception of a few thin vapory ribbons of clouds floating in bands above the horizon. The air was calm and cold.

Above the northern horizon a faint blush crept and retired, but came again. At first the rosy glow suggested fire on some of the hills north of the city. Its faintness indicated distance, but the delicacy, the tenderness and the depth of its tint proved it one of those grand conflagrations the solution of whose mystery baffled the wisdom of ages.

Half an hour after the first blush, the stars in half the northern heavens shone through a veil of deep, tremulous crimson. Then in the northwest broad bands of red light shot up in ranks half way to the zenith, brilliant and varying, now into the colors of solar spectrum, now fading through all the intermediate range, and withdrawing behind the hills. Farther toward the east up they came again, repeating the sublime display, but copying nothing. Like a rank of giants they swept along the horizon, and withdrew below the northeast hills.

This procession of splendor left behind it a plain of light, in which the stars looked pale. It was like the light of dawn in silver grayness, and it was unlike the dawn in quivering shifting brilliancy and color. Now, it resembled a broad, blazing milky way, and a moment later, red rose, like a vapor, covered the field with a delicate blush.

The final display was surpassingly grand. Twice bands of brilliancy had marched from west to east, along the line where earth and sky meet. A deeper red gathered at the starting place in the northwest, broke into tufted columns of colored fire, and set out upon the grand march, following the path of its predecessors.

Pen, pencil or tongue, it is no extravagance to confess, are feeble vehicles in the presence of such a miracle of beauty. Each particular bar of brightness had its peculiar color which, chameleon-like, it cast off every moment, to put on another no less beautiful. The transformations were of inconceivable variety. The band of burning crimson faded into a glow of pale azure, through which pencils of red shot till it was ablaze again. Then again the northern sky looked as if draped with a curtain that hung over it in graceful folds. The splendid spectacle, with its throbbing pulsations of glow, swept grandly to the east, went out, leaving, as if loth to go, an atmosphere of diffused, tender, gray light, to mark the path it took. The time of the display was about an hour.—Cin. Gaz., Jan. 4.

Passing Events.

☞ A German savant predicts an immense transformation scene to eventuate in a short while. He propounds the unique theory that the Zodiacal light is a gaseous, luminous ring surrounding our planet, and, becoming gradually cool, will presently concentrate and give us another Queen of Night.

☞ Owing to the unusually mild winter a heavier grape crop is anticipated for next season in California than has ever before been known. More vines will be planted this season than in any previous three years combined.

☞ Farmers are plowing near Albany.

☞ Political executions continue in Cuba to an alarming extent. Spaniards are butchered by scores and insurgents are shot as soon as captured.

☞ A large Newfoundland dog in Buffalo, after watching for some minutes a fight between two little curs, suddenly caught up one of them by the neck and trotted off with it, keeping a firm hold upon him until his angry passions had time to cool.

☞ A Viennese astronomer has just completed an atlas of the moon.

☞ An Omaha dispatch says that the Mormon schism is increasing rapidly. There are over 2000 apostates now in Utah, and they are about to have a daily newspaper.

☞ The Paris world is in great excitement because a lady of high rank has just named her last child Marie Antoinette. Everybody inquires if this signifies a return to legitimist tendencies, as the lady is a woman of great influence.

☞ The New York World, describing the gathering at a masquerade in that city Monday night, says: "There were present several of the most noted pickpockets, aldermen, officials and gamblers in the city; and there was probably not one virtuous woman in the house."

☞ The Prince Napoleon and one of the noted French generals are urging the necessity of army reforms, and wish to increase instead of diminish the army budget.

☞ The most interesting Continental struggle at present is that between France and Austria, each striving to get on the right side of Russia, and neither succeeding sufficiently so but that each is jealous of the other.

☞ The Japan correspondent of the World writes that Russia has seized some of the northern islands of the Japanese Empire, and that the belief prevails that it is the intention of the Czar to ultimately absorb the entire country.

☞ Mrs. Randolph E. Ladd of Springfield has taken her seat as a member of the City School Board, to which she is elected.

☞ Brigham Young is slowly and cautiously perfecting the plans by which he hopes to defeat the leaders of the present schism and "freeze them out," the method employed by him to free Salt Lake City from the presence of Gentiles and apostates.

☞ A Chinaman writes to a New York paper that the Celestials in that city are mostly "deserters from Cuba"—that is, they are brought to Cuba in coolie ships as slaves. They hide themselves in other ships, hoping to be carried again to the Middle Kingdom, and are landed at New York instead.

☞ The new French coinage is to bear the profiles of the Empress and the Prince Imperial alongside that of the Emperor.

☞ The greatest storm we record in England occurred on November 26 and 27, 1703, when 8000 people were drowned in the rivers and on the coasts. Twelve men-of-war were lost, beside an immense number of smaller vessels, and 1700 trees were torn up in Kent alone. It was during this gale that the Eddystone Lighthouse and its architect were swept away together.

☞ In Belmont violets are in bloom, rose bushes are shooting out leaves, crocuses and the little iris have made their appearance, and even seeds planted have sprung up.

☞ Strict orders have been given throughout the Russian Empire to prevent any manifestation on the anniversary of the emancipation of the serfs, which occurs on February 27th.

☞ The citizens of Corinne, Utah Territory, have built an adobe church, the first Christian edifice in Utah.

☞ The capture of Port au Prince by the Haytien insurgents is fully confirmed.

☞ Queen Victoria has sixteen grandchildren.

☞ Young girls are employed as lamplighters in Buffalo.

☞ Napoleon says he is master of the political situation.

Religious Items.

— The Rev. Justin Perkins died at Chicopee on Friday last. He was a native of West Springfield, and had been thirty six years a missionary among the Nestorians, during which time fourteen of his co-laborers had died. Among them were such men as Rev. Dr. Grant and the Rev. Mr. Stoddard, formerly of Northampton. For several years he was editor of a Christian monthly publication known as the "Rays of Light," and published in the Nestorian language. This is the only religious paper in Persia, and the only paper of any kind beside is a government paper printed in the Persian language. Mr. Perkins arrived home in August, out of health, and he has been gradually sinking since.

— In Paris, much good is being done by the daily prayer meeting, like that in Fulton Street, established by Lord Radstock in 1868, and attended by constantly increasing numbers. In the same rooms, a meeting has been held every Monday evening for the benefit of workingmen, chiefly coachmen, the expenses of which are borne by a Mr. Edwards, and Lady Henrietta Cowper, who is often present and leading in prayer. This meeting, which also serves to aid the distribution of books and tracts, has been imitated in several other quarters of Paris, and the work is earnestly urged by French pastors. In Charte and other provincial towns the example likewise has been followed; and the distribution of Bibles and religious reading, which has been uninterrupted since the Exposition in 1867, is going on with increased vigor.

— The cause of religious liberty is making progress in Austria. Besides the convent and other measures recently prepared at Vienna, the Hungarian Ministry have drawn up a bill removing all the old religious disabilities and declaring the State to be "supreme over all religions in temporal matters."

— It is only a few years since Sunday schools of the American pattern were introduced into Germany. A Lutheran journal says that the movement in their favor is becoming quite remarkable. At the late meeting for home missions in Rhenish Prussia, held at Bonn, several pastors who had at first opposed Sunday schools now spoke in their favor, having seen them tried in their own parishes. The system was approved without a dissenting voice. One of the most decided advocates of the American system, as it is called, was Professor Lange, the Bible commentator.

— It is reported in England that the rich young Marquis of Bute, who went to Rome with a magnificent silver cross for the Pope, has become disgusted at some of the goings on at the Ecumenical Council, and is meditating a return to the Protestant Church.

— Four years ago there was a solitary woman studying medicine at the University of Zurich; now there are sixteen who are earnestly pushing their studies there unmolested.

— The New York Methodist, the most influential organ of that body, is strongly advocating a re-union of the Northern and Southern branches of the church. Since the death of slavery there is no serious obstacle in the way of re-union, and the Presbyterians have set a conspicuous and noble example.

— Hartford, Conn. pays $100,000 annually for amusements, and about one tenth of that amount for preaching.

☞ In North Falmouth, Mass., there is but a single church in the village, and that is of the Congregational order, in which every family meets for religious worship.

☞ Rev. Arthur Mitchell, of Chicago declines an offered addition of $1,000 to his salary, and proposes that it be donated toward furnishing cheaper sittings for those who are kept away from the sanctuary on account of dear pew rents.

— New York has four hundred and twenty-nine churches.

Notices.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. Smith.

Notice.

The Lord will, the first quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference of 1870 will be held at Dover, N. H., Ham's Hall, commencing Wednesday, Jan. 12th, at ten o'clock A. M., and holding over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to be there to preach the word of life. Let all come to the feast. T. W. Piper.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting at North Haverhill, N. H., at the Union meeting-house (D. V.), commencing Jan. 18th (evening), and continue each evening through the week and over Lord's day. Let all come to labor for the salvation of souls. Pray for us. Bro. N. Wheeler is expected to be with us to preach the word.

A. A. Hoyt.

Notice.

A series of meetings will be held at "Advent Hall," in Webster, Mass., commencing Sabbath, Jan. 9th, and will continue through the week and over next Sabbath. Brethren and sisters interested in this blessed cause are invited to come and help. Bro. H. Munger is expected to preach the word. H. L. Woodard.

Minnesota Conference.

The eighth annual conference of the Advent Christian Church of Minnesota will be held (D.V.) in Monticello, commencing Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, Jan. 13th, and will continue over the following Sunday. All the members are particularly invited to be present, or report by letter. Churches are also requested to send delegates, or report by letter. Thos. K. Allen, Sec.

Notice.

By invitation of the church at New Britain, the next quarterly session of the A. C. Conference will convene at New Britain, Conn. Services to commence Wednesday evening, Jan. 12th, 1870. Business session at ten o'clock A. M., Thursday. Let every church be represented, and all come with a hearty good will to work for the Lord. Letters and communications can be sent to the Secretary previous to the meeting, at 189 Orchard Street, New Haven, Conn.

George L. Teeple, Sec. of Conf.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and-by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. George E. Lee, Brimfield, Mass.

Notice.

Any one having a copy of the "Crisis" published March 6th, 1867, would do me a favor by sending it to me at Springfield. I will return it, after perusal, if desired. W. N. Pile.

Notice.

The Advent Church in Rochester hold their meetings on the Sabbath at Washington Hall, Main Street, one of the largest and best halls in the city. H. Pratt.

German Tracts.

Bro. Reimer has a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 186 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. Albert Libby, West Poland, Maine.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel.

John G. Hook............every evening this week and over Sunday, January 16th.

Boston, South End, (Minot Hall), corner of Washington and Springfield Streets.)

Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.

A. P. Moore............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Geo. A. Streeter............Sunday, Jan. 23d
T. M. Preble............Sabbath, Jan. 30th
J. S. White............Sunday, Feb. 6th

East Boston.

Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.

Geo. A. Streeter............Sunday, Jan. 16th
J. S. White............Sunday, Jan. 23d

Chelsea, Mass., (Library Hall.)

D. M. Leavitt............Sunday, Jan. 16th
E. Burnham............Sunday, Jan. 23d
H. Munger............Sunday, Jan. 30th

Charlestown.

Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 23 Main Street), every Lord's day.

J. W. Britton............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Rufus Wendell............Sunday, Jan. 23d
J. S. White............Sunday, Jan. 30th

Holden, Mass............Sunday, Feb. 13th
J. S. White.

Lynn, Mass............Sunday, Jan. 30th
M. Batchelor.

Plymouth, Vt., (Union Hall)......evenings, Jan. 13th and 14th.
Bridgewater, Vt.........Sundays, Jan. 16th and 23d
Dinsmore Hill.........evenings, Jan. 25th and 26th
South Vershire, Vt.........evenings, Jan. 27th and 28th
West Fairlee, Vt.........evening and Sabbath, Jan. 29th and 30th.
North Springfield, Vt.........Sabbath, Feb. 6th and 13th
H. F. Carpenter.

Savoy, Mass............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Hartford, Conn............Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
E. McCulloch.

South Berwick, Me., Great Works, Sabbath, Jan. 9th
Seabrook, N. H............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Biddeford, Me............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
A. Mussey Tripp.

Square Pond, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. Munger.

Charlton, Mass............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
West Gloucester, R. I............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Webster, Mass............evening, Jan. 26th
Brimfield, Mass............evening, Jan. 27th
North Somers, Ct............evening, Jan. 28th
South Windsor, Ct............Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Wallingford, Ct............evening, Feb. 1st
Yalesville, Ct............evening, Feb. 2nd
Cheshire Street, Ct............evening, Feb. 3d
Bristol, Ct............evening, Feb. 4th
Wrightville, Ct............Sabbath, Feb. 6th
New Britain, Ct............Sabbath, Feb. 20th
C. H. Sweet.

Putnam, Conn............Jan. 28th, 29th and 30th
Clarksville, R. I............Monday, Jan. 31st
Pascoag............Tuesday, Feb 1st
North Scituate............Wednesday, Feb. 2nd
Rockland............Thursday, Jan. 3d
A. Durfee.

Bristol, Ct............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Woodstock Valley, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 23d
R. K. Stark.

North Somers, Ct............Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. Morse.

Danielsonville, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
J. T. Dixon.

Corinna, Me., (at the Chapel)............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Holden, Me., (Clewley Chapel)............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Bradley, Me............Sunday, Jan. 30th
E. V. B. Edgerly.

East Haddam, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 30th
I. B. Potter.

West Meriden, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
W. N. Pile.

Southington, Ct............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
B. Hitchcock.

Wrightville, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
New Millford............Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. D. Flagg.

Dover, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Plymouth, Mass............Sunday, Jan. 30th
John Couch.

Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house), Sunday, Jan. 16th.
D. W. Davis.

Chichester, N. H., (Pine Ground), evening, Jan. 22d, and Sunday, Jan. 23d, and so on once in two weeks until further notice. N. B. McMurphy.

Freedom, N. H., (at the Chapel)....Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Porter Village, Me., evening, Jan. 16th.
Chas. Coleman.

Cabot, Vt............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Porter, Me............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Parsonsfield, Me., (meeting-house), Tuesday evening, Jan. 25th.
T. E. Lang, Jr.

Lock's Corner, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 16th
W. C. Thurman.

Lynn, Mass............Tuesday evening, Jan. 11th
Charlestown, (as Bro. Stone may appoint), evening, Jan. 13th.
Orrington, Me., (Chapel)............Sunday, Jan. 23d
North Hermon............Sunday, Jan. 30th
Holden, (at Chapel)............Sunday, Feb. 6th
Geo. W. Brown.

West Romney, N. H., (Plain school-house), Sabbaths, Jan. 16th and 23d.
Will Bro. Wm. H. Shaw meet me there one of those days? C. W. Nelson.

Nottingham (baptism)............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Wakefield, Mass............Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Manchester, N. H............Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. Mooney.

Warehousepoint, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Vernon, Vt............Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. Higgins.

North Raymond............Saturday evening, Jan. 15th over Sunday, and longer if thought best.
J. T. Jordan.

East Rochester, N. H............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Wakefield, (Spinney meeting-house), Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Porter, Me............Sabbath, Jan. 30th
East Canaan............Sabbath, Feb. 6th
If these conflict, please write me.
D. F. Leavitt.

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house)..Sabbath, Jan. 16th
Bowdoin............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Brunswick, (yellow school-house), Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. D. Reed.

Hungerford, (school-house, south of Byersville), Livingston Co., N. Y., Sunday evening, Jan. 16th.
D. Cogswell.

Springfield, Mass............Sunday, Jan. 23d
East Savoy, Mass., (at the new Chapel just built), Sunday, Jan. 30th, to commence a series of protracted meetings. H. K. Flagg.

Dover, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Melvin Village, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 30th
T. W. Piper.

Keene, N. H............Sundays, Jan. 23d and 30th
A. Simpson.

South Berwick, Me., (Great Works), Sunday, Jan. 16th
Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house), Sun., Jan. 23d
Seabrook, N. H............evening, Jan. 25th and over the following Sunday. J. Pinkham.

North Haverhill, N. H., (Sr. Glazier's), eve., Jan. 11th
Levi Allen.

Moultonborough, N. H., (Red Hill), Saturday evening, Jan. 22d, and over Sunday, the 23d. Ordination expected. T. W. Piper, J. G. Smith, L. Allen.

Rutland, Vt............evening, Jan. 12th
Montreal, P. Q............Sunday, Jan. 16th, and onward.
(Dansville and Quebec noticed hereafter.)
J. B. Cook.

Seymour, Ct., (Great Hill Church), Sunday, Jan. 16th
South Windsor, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 9th
Wm. A. & M. L. Durand.

East Haddam, Ct............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
G. L. White.

Jay, (Blaisdell school-house)............Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. B. Sevey.

Elliot, Me............Sunday, Jan. 23d
F. H. Burbank.

Prospect, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 23d
S. Woodruff.

Great Falls, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 16th
East Rochester, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. C. Stewart.

Strafford, N.H., (Roberts' school-house) Sun., Jan. 30th
J. G. Smith.

Lake Village, N. H., (North Church), Sun., Jan. 16th
C. W. Sargent.

Webster, N. H., (old meeting-house), Sabbath, Jan. 16th.
Lake Village, N. H............Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Simeon Roby.

Newport Centre, Vt., (as Bro. Ladd may arrange), evening, Jan. 14th, and over the following Sunday, and from there to Canada. Will some Bro. meet me at Newport, on the arrival of the evening train?
Z. Ford.

Waterbury, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Newfield, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Lovely Street, Ct............Sunday, Jan. 30th
Wm. J. Ripley.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Hampton, N. H............Sunday, Jan. 23d
L. E. Saviatson.

Coheston, N. Y............Jan. 22d and 23d
Blooming Valley, Pa., (as friends may arrange), Jan. 29th, and over Sunday.
Little Cooly............Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Edinboro............Feb. 4th and over two Sundays
Campton's Corners, (four miles from Edinboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sharps' Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Coheston............Feb. 19th and 20th
C. F. Sweet.

Dorchester, N. H., (North school-house), eve., Jan. 12th
Dorchester, N. H., (Town House), eve., Jan. 13th, over the Sabbath, Jan. 16th, and Sunday, the 23d.
John H. Evans.

West Abington, Mass............Sunday, Jan. 16th
F. H. Burbank.

Shrewsbury, Mass., (where Fordyce Maynard may appoint), Saturday evening, Jan. 15th, and over Sunday, Jan. 16th. Enoch Morrill.

Exeter Centre, Me............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Allen Damon.

Montpelier Centre, Vt., (where Bro. E. N. Morse may appoint), Jan. 13th, 14th, and 15th, and over the following Sabbath.

Commence a series of meetings at Braintree, Vt., (where Elder Sampson may appoint), Jan. 19th, and continue through the week and over the following Sabbath.

East Canaan, N. H., (at the Chapel), commencing Jan. 27th, and continue over the following Sabbath.
J. A. Cleaveland.

Springfield, Mass., (Bethel Church.)

James Hemenway............Sunday, Jan. 16th
H. K. Flagg............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. N. Pile............Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

Westfield, Mass.

A. Simpson............Sunday, Jan. 16th
I. B. Potter............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. A. & M. L. Durand............Sunday, Jan. 30th

Lawrence, Mass.

S. S. Brewer............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Miles Grant............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Miles Grant (in City Hall)............Sunday, Jan. 30th

Wilbraham, Mass.

P. S. Butler............Sabbaths, Jan. 16th, 23d and 30th

Stoneham, Mass.

J. S. White............Sunday, Jan. 16th
C. Goodrich............Sunday, Jan. 23d

Stowe, Mass.

Chas. H. Wyman............Sunday, Jan. 16th

Worcester, Mass.

T. M. Preble............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
J. Couch............Sunday, Jan. 23d

Portsmouth, N. H.

J. W. Thomas............Sabbaths, Jan. 16th and 23d

Exeter, N. H.

John Parsons............Sunday, Jan. 16th
Albion Ross............Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. Higgins............Sunday, Jan. 30th
Joseph Harvey............Sunday, Feb. 6th

Concord, N. H., (Centre Street.)

C. H. Fletcher............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
D. M. Leavitt............Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
J. Hemenway............Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Ross............Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th

Concord, N. H., (at the Bethel.)

S. W. Thurber............Sunday, Jan. 16th and on as the Lord directs.
F. H. Burbank............Sunday, Feb. 27th

Portland, Me.

C. Goodrich............Sunday, Jan. 16th
A. Ross............Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

New Britain, Ct.

Wm. N. Pile............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. Stuart............Sunday, Jan. 30th

Square Pond, Ct.

H. Munger............Sunday, Jan. 16th
B. Hitchcock............Sunday, Jan. 30th
P. S. Butler............Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Morse............Sunday, Feb. 23d

Abington, Ct.

A. Morse............Sabbath, Jan. 16th
M. R. Phetteplace............Sabbath, Jan. 23d
J. S. Eldredge............Sabbath, Feb. 13th

Wolcottville, Ct.

B. Hitchcock............Sunday, Jan. 16th

Windsor, Me. (Preble school-house), every second Sabbath of the month until further notice. Church Hill, Augusta, third Sabbath. Mud Mills, Augusta, fourth Sabbath. Thomas Rines.

Portland, Me.

Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block, 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

New York City.

The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 405 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Star of Hope Mission, 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock
Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M.
Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M.
Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M.
Friday, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M.
Come one, come all. A. E. Smith, Principal.

Wyoming, R. I............1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I............2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I............3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I............4th Sabbath in each month
A. Durfee.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. Eggleston.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. Thomas J. Spinney.

☞ Bro. Joseph A. Philbrook has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. E. Wells, 22 Smith Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. York, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with Albert Burgess, Cor. Sec.

☞ Augustus E. Snow, 1715 N. Eleventh Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. Hitchcock, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. Powell, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hecock.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $5.00; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $4.00; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2 50; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $1.50; postage 24 cts

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $2.50; postage 20 cts Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 180 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 81 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.

A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. 162 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Business.

Letters Received.

W N Pile, A D Flagg, A Dalton, P S Butler, E H Temple, H A King, R Williams, S Jackson, A Bedell, C H Hurd, J Bathrick, H D Reed, H Snyder, S L Reed, E M Ripley, D D Chaffee, M A Miller, G E Lee, M Stevens, N B McMurphy, H D Law, J Lyle, M J Aubel, L E Craw, J A Cleaveland, G Tfeak, L E Weaver, M P Dailey, C K Marshall, J Durgee, J Alger, M Sanborn, E S Moulton, M E Hopkins, F H Burbank, J C Ashley, S Wyttenbach, J I Habbinger, C H Sweet, H Pratt.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, postpaid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth. 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

SOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36c; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts; by mail, 6c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble pp. 224 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 32pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 30c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 460 pp. $1.25.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL and the Scriptural Millennium," by I. C. Wellcome and Clarkson Goud. Price 25c; postage 2c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By I.C. Wellcome. pp. 81. Price by mail, 25c.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

THE MILLENNIUM. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 60 pp. Single copy 15c.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c., postpaid.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

OUR LOSS IN ADAM OUR GAIN IN CHRIST. A valuable tract on the Atonement. By H. F. Carpenter. 5c. single copy, by mail; 40c. per dozen.

THE BIBLE, OR TRADITION—Which shall Believe?" An excellent tract. By S. L. Manley. 3c. single copy by mail; 20c. per dozen.

"ONE MORE INVITATION." A tract of four pages. By mail, 35c. per 100 copies.

"GOLDEN MOMENTS." A four-page tract. By mail 35c. per 100 copies.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 15 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

276 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth............75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers............60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers............50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

OUR HAPPY FUTURE.

Soon we shall be shouting and singing,
On the beautiful evergreen shore,
Our voices in melody ringing,
With a sweetness unheard of before.

We will join our glad hands in reunion
With friends whom, long absent we meet;
And we'll, heart to heart, hold blest communion
When the host of immortals we greet.

We shall know then what means resurrection,
What means it to know we have died,
Yet live in immortal perfection,
Alive through the dear Crucified.

We shall wander 'mong beautiful life-trees,
That drop round our feet myrrh and balm;
While their odorous, starry, flower-clusters,
With their beauty and fragrance will charm.

We'll be happy the long sunny hours,
Our beings with ecstasy thrilled
By the Spirit whose wond'rous powers
Through us like the dew'll be distilled.

If we're happy while only we're mortal,
When that Spirit's "first fruits" are but given,
When we yet have not entered that portal,
How blest in the kingdom of heaven.

There the long endless ages evolving,
Shall "roll out" increasing delight;
Then let us while earth is dissolving,
Prepare for the rapturous sight.

L. C. McKinstry.

For the World's Crisis.

NEWS FROM ALL THE WORLD.

Whatever may be objected to a plain presentation of some of the darker aspects of the world's condition and affairs, we are abundantly justified in such a faithful exhibition thereof as shall keep us up to the measure of a right understanding of the correspondence of facts to the prophetic photograph of Christ; and especially in reference to phenomena betokening the return of the Lord to earth. Accordingly we give extracts which bear on the Divine foresight and prophecy of trouble, "anguish of nations in perplexity." I need not here perhaps specially point out the apocalyptic function and agony of America, as involved in pending events. Let readers think diligently, each for himself. Let us take a look at

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

From the late report of Hon. David R. Wells, Revenue Commissioner, we find that he estimates the cost of the late war, at no less than "nine thousand millions of dollars, a sum nominally in excess of the entire increase of wealth as returned by the census, for the whole country from 1850 to 1860." He adds, "whatever may be the condition of the rich, the poorer part of the community have certainly grown poorer." From the N. Y. Express we clip the following:—

"PAUSE—THINK—STOP!

We hear of big failures in the city, in the country, abroad, at home, everywhere, and it is time for people to pause, think, and ask the cause of all this commotion in the land. If it is too late to remedy the past, it is not too late to be warned for the future. Some new horse may enter the stable, though the door was locked after the first one was stolen. Young men may be taught by the mistakes of their seniors, new corporations by the errors of old ones, and new co-partnerships by the examples of those which are having a forced dissolution. We have lived for some years now in a state of inflation. The rich have become richer, and the really poor poorer."

From the same paper again.

"DEPRESSED STATE OF CITY TRADE.

The scarcity of money, excess of importations, and the difficulty of disposing of the crops in the West at a profit to the farmers, are among the reasons given by mercantile men for the depressed condition of business. Rumors of failures, and of difficulties in meeting monetary engagements, are common, and there are an unprecedented number of downtown stores which are tenantless. There are not one half as many travelers employed by New York business houses in the West this year as last, which shows that people cannot, or are afraid to buy, and some of the leading merchants predict a grand commercial crash this winter.

Mr. Peter Cooper, thinks 'there is much cause for alarm in the present aspect of commercial affairs, and fears that we are in danger of another crash, similar to that of 1857; especially if there is too sudden a return to specie payments.' Another prominent merchant says 'the present condition of the dry-goods trade is very bad; and a general state of inactivity prevails, particularly among jobbing houses; people have not been making money to any extent in two years.'

Firms cannot stand the heavy expense of running their establishments, and a number of large houses will either willingly or from necessity, cease to exist on the 1st of January."

Of a similar tenor is this from "Pease's Oil Circular."

"The business season is drawing to a close, and it has not, as a general thing, fulfilled the expectations indulged at its commencement. There has been an uncertainty and general distrust attending all business transactions, and clear heads have been at fault as to the future."

Says the New York Times, candid and impartial authority (and with this paragraph we dismiss the subject for the present.)

"Practically, however, taxation now becomes more oppressive than ever, while the ability of the taxpayers becomes rapidly less. The reduction of taxes has not kept pace with the general decline of prices; the burden is therefore relatively greater, because the capacity to carry it is diminished. The rapid fall of the gold premium has unsettled values; all prices tend downward, and the consequent depression is aggravated by uncertainty. The West suffers especially. War prices enabled the farmers of the wheat producing States to pay off incumbrances and acquire unwonted prosperity. The return of low prices is forcing them back to their old position. They are deeply in debt, and unable to discharge it. Present prices afford them inadequate compensation for their labor and outlays, and their requirements are being cut down by stern necessity. Everybody knows what this state of things involves. When country storekeepers cannot collect from their customers, the city merchant soon realizes the dilemma; and the bond of sympathy between the Atlantic cities and the trading communities of the West is too strong to allow of indifference on the part of either to the adverse fortune of the other. Never, therefore, has the combined taxation, national and local, seemed so formidable as it is at this moment. It was sufficiently heavy in the most prosperous times; it is terrible now that prosperity has disappeared from some sections and has been sadly dwarfed in all.

We turn for a moment to look now at the

MORAL ASPECTS OF THE TIMES.

From a leading New York paper, we take the following:—

"The exposures of fraud, like the legion of devils, are innumerable. They reach all along from the far off Pacific to the Atlantic, on the lakes, in the States, and in the territories; in public places, and by-places, in palatial stores, and log-cabins. The army and navy have their few delinquents, while fraudulent officers in the civil service seem to be numberless. The Custom House shows not only collusions with importers, but false weights and false balances, as well as false invoices. Honest American merchants fall outright by the side of those who are in collusion at home and abroad. Some years since, one of our leading merchants paid the Government nearly $100,000 on goods invoiced at Paris, for less than half their value, notwithstanding which he got rich and retired with a splendid fortune. He could undersell all honest importers and made his riches in that way. Many others have done the same thing, and gone aboard with their pockets lined with Government gold. Now comes a series of fresh revelations of colossal frauds committed, as we are told, by over two hundred respectable merchants, many of them occupying prominent and influential positions, all at least under suspicion of having participated in the frauds, which extended through several months during the last administration. According to the Times, these frauds, accomplished by means of false invoices and undervaluation of imported merchandise, involve a vast amount of money. Duplicate and triplicate copies of false invoices have been found in certain mercantile houses, the books belonging to which have been seized, and removed to the Custom House."

The same paper not altogether inaptly adds:

"There are now to be seen, through powerful glasses, six clusters of spots upon the sun. In view of the immoralities, corruptions, sins and wickedness generally prevailing in this region, we should not be surprised if the sun were to veil his face from us altogether."

From the New York Examiner, a leading and able Baptist paper, we quote relative to theatrical representations:—

"What is now seen at one or two theatres in New York is but the first view of a descending series, beginning with legitimate plays and ending with the absurd, meaningless 'spectacular dramas,' and the always foolish, generally indecent burlesques.

And there are indications of a lower depth yet, to which the theatre is tending. Already the French writers of burlesque have laid hands upon honored historical reputations, and covered them with the filth of their own reeking imaginations. Where will the process end? Is there not danger that subjects more sacred, even, than the reputations of honorable men, will be thus basely caricatured?

The theatre is sometimes said to be 'a school of morals and manners.' It never was, it never can be. Its tendency is downward, by whatever accident it may be temporarily elevated to apparent innocence and decency; and it drags down with it those who expose themselves to its baneful influence."

CHURCH EXCLUSIVENESS AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

We quote, not vouching for the absolute truth of the first paragraph:

"A correspondent who has just returned from his journey around the world, remarks, 'that the houses of worship were free all over the world, among all religions, except christianity; and that of the three great divisions of Christendom—Roman, Greek and Protestant—the latter alone adopted the exclusive system; a system whose practical working in our large cities is to shut out from the house of God a large part of the common people.'"

The New York correspondent of the Episcopalian, lashes the "Church Fair Nuisance" without mercy. Speaking of one now in progress in Brooklyn, he says:—

"Walking down Clinton street the other evening, we came to a magnificent church edifice, which was finished only a few weeks ago, at a cost of between three and four hundred thousand dollars. In a spacious hall, near by, we observed that there was a great clatter, as if some thing of more than usual importance was going on. We asked a bystander what it was all about. He seemed amazed at our ignorance, and replied that it was a fair to raise money enough to buy communion plate for the church, and furniture, carpets, books, etc., for the Sunday-school. 'Looker On' could not resist the reflection that it would have been a good thing for the congregation and vestry of that gorgeous church to have been content, at the start, with a less showy and expensive edifice, restricting the cost say to $250,000, as then they would have had something like an overplus of $100,000 to furnish the Sunday-school and buy the communion plate. In that case there would have been no occasion of resorting to the sham of the church fair to make good deficiencies."

The same writer is after Rev. Dr. Dix with a sharp stick, for his alleged "Romanizing tendencies" as recently exhibited in the Popish proclivities of the Christmas carols which have been prepared in Trinity parish, for the celebration of the approaching festival of the Nativity. Wherever there is the slightest pretext for invoking the Virgin, or paying her peculiar honor, it is turned to account, after the manner following:

'Twas Mary, daughter pure
Of holy Ann,
That brought into this world
Our God made man.
St. Joseph too was by,
To tend the child,
To guard him and protect
His mother mild.

"Here," says the Episcopalian, "the reader will perceive, precedence is given to the creature rather than to the Creator—to miserable sinners rather than to the Redeemer of sinners. Christ, clearly, is an after-thought. . . . St. Paul's chapel would seem to be among the foremost of the city parishes, in pushing this kind of literature, if literature it can be called. When it is borne in mind that the rector is the author of the 'Book of Hours,' the fact will occasion no surprise."

One can scarcely avoid a mingled feeling of astonishment and abhorrence at the immense wastefelness of outlay involved in the magnificent pomp of architecture and decoration evinced in the above account. Was it a thought of sarcasm that suggested a reduction of expense to a quarter of million for the building, and ten times ten thousand for the necessities of the Sunday school and communion service? And this reminds me of a projected enterprise mentioned in a neighboring city, in my hearing, the other day, enlisting the zeal of many helpers, which struck me as amounting to this in reality—an enterprise to feed the well-fed under the cognomen of an elaborate Sunday school festival. O, if we could only feed the poor, and please Christ!

We give once more an item relative to the

PROSPECTS OF THE JEWS.

Recall to mind the graphic and pregnant close of Daniel 11. Who is he that is to "enter into the glorious land"? Who is to "stretch forth his hand upon the countries," Egypt included? Who "shall have power over the precious things of Egypt"? At whose "steps shall the Ethiopians and Libyans be"? Let the thoughful ponder and watch!

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE RESTORATION OF THE JEWS.—The Jewish Messenger of last week has a remarkable article on the completion of the Suez Canal, and the influence which may thereby be exerted in behalf of the Holy Land and its ancient people. Alluding to the commercial results certain to flow from the work of M. Lesseps, the Messenger maintains that Palestine will as surely 'sympathize with the regeneration of Egypt, and the seaports of the Holy Land be transformed again into busy marts.' The Messenger proceeds to cite the 'sure word of prophecy,' as uttered by Isaiah and Ezekiel, in regard to the ultimate restoration of the 'peculiar people' of God to their own land. It then says:

"The language of the prophecies is explicit—the confidence of Israel in their fulfillment is almost universal. Our uncertainty as to the time implies no doubt as to the ultimate realization of these hopes.

The rehabilitation of Palestine, the commencement of commercial relations with the world at large, will once more introduce as a momentous question 'the right to the Holy Sepulchre,' involving the right to the government of the Holy Land. But the decision will not depend on the arbitrament of helmeted knights, wild enthusiasts, or the indomitable Guard. The weapons of peace will be wielded and the reopening of commercial activity in and about Jerusalem will be the manifestation of this great change.

Will the Israelites consent to return to Palestine? That remains to be determined. It is not unreasonable, though, to anticipate that when this field for business activity actually presents itself, there will be thousands of Hebrew pioneers ready to avail themselves of the prospect.

There are hundreds of thousands whose love and attachment for the Holy Land time has not dimmed, who will embrace with avidity the opportunity of emigration. Their condition as individuals and as communities would be materially bettered."

We append a paragraph from the N. Y. Times:—

"The cruel treatment of the Jews in Western Russia has been a subject of comment for some time in Europe. One writer says, 'such heart-rending, brain-maddening misery as the three million Jews in these ill-fated regions are now enduring is without a parallel in modern history.' This comes from the Berlin correspondent of the London Times—one of the most careful and conscientious men who ever consented to act in a very thankless and disagreeable position, as a 'special correspondent's must always be. There can be no doubt that men, women and children have been reduced to the most horrible privations."

Last of all, in the present connection, we subjoin something pertinent to the chief of European schemers,

LOUIS NAPOLEON.

So numerous and assured have been the protestations of the Emperor's inevitable and speedy destination of removal (by death) from the perils or profundities of European politics, so positive the affirmation that his schemes of ambition would be irrevocably frustrated by the arch and dark imperialist, death, that I venture to append the significant item below, clipped from the Buffalo Courier

"The physicians," says the Gaulois, "and Dr. Ricord at their head, are unanimous in declaring that the late illness of the emperor, far from impairing his health, has, on the contrary, consolidated it. 'His majesty,' says that eminent practitioner, 'has found in the struggle with his malady a fresh and unexpected force. Pay no attention to fantastical and malevolent diagnostics; it is not the emperor who is most surprised at this issue of the crisis; it is I."

I admit that I am a little inclined to interrogate the prognosticators of that demise of Napoleon, which should forever settle and sink all ideas of any further function in the tremendous preparations of European political toil and fate,—which should dissipate the imagination of his being destined to any scene or figure of moment or terror, in the unfolding apocalyptic drama; tempted to inquire, I say—are you yet utterly incredulous? We forbear categorical or dogmatic assertions. Yet we expect such a developement as will speedily put an end to doubt. The Lord preserve our children.

We close all with a hint from the New York Tribune, which discloses an auxiliary to the deception and idolatry of the nations, in the crisis, when in view of the signs of the returning Lord from heaven, the ungodly throngs turn to fasten their hope and homage on the great imperial idol, antichrist. United with him in unbroken compact, they run the desperate and awful venture of joining battle with the Lamb, the august leader of the immortal battalion of saints. Amid all such beginnings of confederation, now, always, and with all prayer and devotion, cling to Jesus! Says the Tribune,

"Napoleon is the best of bad men. He is neither a sphinx nor a Mephistophiles, nor does he wrap himself up in the solitude of his own originality. "His sincerity and affability," says M. Emile Girardin, "disconcert all plain speaking. His sweet manners disarm the bluntest counsellors." By M. Ollivier's particular friend, M. Robert Mitchell, he is spoken of as a 'prince of a good, generous, grateful, and sympathetic nature, invested with absolute power.'"

To which we may add, see if this does not meet the prophetic pre-delineation of a man whom humanity cajoled, yet abandoned, enthusiastic but apostate, enamored, revolutionary and infidel, will confederate to deify. O, the dread calamity and infatuation of the last mad act of mankind, the worship of a man! Thus set in a frame of most plausible seeming, may we ken a mind of unmatched subtlety; while the wild democracy of Europe pays to its false god the tribute of its unrighteous and blasphemous admiration.

C. Colegrove.

For the World's Crisis.

ORDINATIONS.

Bro. Grant:—As it is often asked me and others to give advice about ordaining young preachers, I will offer a few thoughts to such.

Brother, if you are called upon to labor or improve your talent, it may be by way of exhortation, which is a separate calling or duty from preaching, and if that is your place, you should not be ordained as a preacher, as more will be expected of you than you can perform, and you will be in an awkward position. There are many good exhorters spoiled, to make a good preacher. Better be a good corporal than a poor captain.

It is a poor sign to see any one urging his ordination. If you are a proper subject, your brethren will know it, and propose it. We have suffered as a people by laying on of hands too suddenly, contrary to the apostles' advice. If a brother can labor successfully in getting men converted, let him keep at it. You can do that by exhorting and praying, when you cannot preach a sermon to save your life. Some think that if they can do something in the cause publicly, they must be ordained. If this idea originate first with you, it is a sign of a spiritual pride which has upset many, and injured the cause. Do not be in a hurry. Keep at work, if God blesses your labors; if not, quit it, and labor more retired.

Some are determined to be prominent, or not do anything. Such are not fit for the position they seek. Mark this! Each member of the body will come into his proper place easily, and without effort of his own. Some ask, What is the sign preachers have that they are called to preach? There is no sign. If God has called a man to preach, he can preach, and not without. He has not got to learn to do it. If he is called to exhort, he can exhort, but not preach. We see this fact demonstrated in many instances among us, from the loose way we have allowed things to go on.

I am glad the conferences have begun to look after this thing, for the benefit of the cause, and those who have been ordained preachers, who were only exhorters. This gift is dying out, from the fact that all must preach if they labor at all. The time has come for us to know those who labor among us, and not recognise or countenance such as preachers who cannot get ordained properly, or such as secretly ordain one another, as has been the case in some instances. The result of their course has been sorrowfully known.

I would not discourage our young brethren from laboring in the cause if they feel it duty, but use the armor you can wear, and do more good by keeping in your place, and not be too anxious to get into the desk. If that is your proper place, God and his people will know it, and put you there; and your brethren will not dread to see you in the desk when it is your proper position.

H. Munger.

For the World's Crisis.

PEACE.

"Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them."

Great peace have they that love thy law,
And naught shall them offend;
And o'er the heart, like holy awe,
This peace from God descends.

The peace of God that passeth thought,
O, may it fill my heart;
The peace of Christ I long have sought,
O, may it ne'er depart;

The peace that like a river runs,
To fertilize and bless,
From God the fountain-head it comes,
And gives sweet joy and rest.

Its righteousness, like waves of sea,
Rolls o'er the happy soul,
Till joy surpassing speech there be—
'Tis joy beyond control.

N. Woodstock, N. H. Sophia Jackman.

For the World's Crisis.

MISSION LETTERS FROM HUNGARY.

Dear Bro. Grant:—You may wonder at my negligence in writing to you of our European Mission, which may interest our good American friends, brethren and sisters in Christ; but, unfortunately, I have been so engaged in my work day and night, that really I have had no time to give you any account of my work in the Lord's holy vineyard.

I left Pest in October last for Siebenburgen, where I was strongly invited by my old Polish friends. I commenced my labors in Gerend, after visiting Thorda, Pata, Kolos, Klausenbourg, Volosxyt, Szamosujvar, Dees, Bethlehem, Scheinburgen, and now I preach to and visit the people from house to house, in Bistritz and vicinity, with good success. In every place where I passed I left a very good impression of the second coming of the Lord, and in special matter the danger of Spiritism, etc. Glory be to God, our mission prospers. But the suffering through which I must pass is very heavy also. I was dangerously sick for five weeks. I was not able to speak, neither to give answer to any question; but, by the grace of God, I can now again work with my hands for the support of my dear family, and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, carrying on my poor old back a heavy pocket with the books.

Our seven stations in Pest, Buda, Dunakesz, Waez, Adelhaz, New Pest, and Rakosz, are in good spirit and progress daily; but from another part the wickedness is so great, the iniquity so abounds, that truly I never saw or heard of the like before. Near my lodgings in Waez, one night a poor old man and his wife were murdered with an axe, after being robbed. No track was found of the murderer; but at last the justice of heaven inspired a woman to come to Waez and declare that her husband, who was the son of the old man, killed his father and mother, trusting to find the money. Oh! what horror struck the heart in witnessing such an awful crime! Oh! what an unnatural child that could do such a thing. But how can the people be good there, when the priests on festival days play with cards, billiards, with the first vagabonds of the street in the taverns? Last week one priest was taken to prison in Pest for killing his own two little children; another the same week, who was pastor in Dunakesz, was convicted of the same crime, and cut his own throat in prison. A man can hardly pass safely in the streets at night. One Jewish lady asked one evening two policemen to show her the street and her house. The watchmen asked her if she had money. She responded, Yes. Then the two policemen took her life for eighty guilders.

Sunday, and all festival days here, is the greatest market, in the streets, and before the open churches; and after dinner music, dancing, playing and gambling until midnight. Drunkenness prevails everywhere. Truly, this is the time of the end.

But I will turn to another part of Europe, and say a little of my poor native city of Cracow, which is now covered with shame and disgrace everywhere; it is the thrilling story of a nun—Miss Barbara Ubryk.

[Bro. C. here encloses the account, which our readers are already somewhat acquainted with, and we will therefore not repeat it.—Ed.]

Permit me, my dear brethren, sisters and friends, to give you my opinion of this awful crime. I will say with our dear Savior Jesus Christ, that "it is necessary that offences should come"; and this: "but wo to them by whom they come." Indeed, my dear Polish countrymen in Cracow were very devoted Catholics, very pious, and trusting in the priests, nuns and monks; but now, glory to God, they are awakened; they await the judgment against this wicked mother—Maria V. Wenzyk. And if she is not punished, as the priests work very hard to deliver her and other nuns from just judgment, there will be a tremendous revolution against the priests, and the monastery will be ended. But here is another thing. Now is the door opened for me, my dearly beloved, to write and to preach to my people in Cracow, Lemberg, and vicinity; now is the precious time to work as never before, and for that reason, and in the name of Almighty God and our dear Savior Jesus Christ, I beg your assistance for some publications in the Polish language; and not only you, dear Advent Christian Association, but all, Adventists, Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, and every one that loves Jesus, to send ten or twenty cents to Bro. G. T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, for the evangelization of the city of Cracow, and you will receive a great blessing from God in heaven.

I wait your help and prayer, hoping that I shall not be disappointed in my confidence in you. I am yours as ever in the "blessed hope,"

M. B. Czechowski.

My address for the winter will be Thorda, Siebenburgen, Hungary.

"THE CHRISTIAN UNION."

The following we quote from the "Salutatory" of the Editor of the Christian Union, (Henry Ward Beecher), of Jan. 1st, which number begins a new series:—

"The Christian Union will devote no time to inveighing against sects. But it will spare no pains to persuade christians of every sect to treat one another with christian charity, love, and sympathy. * * * We shall dismiss from our editorial columns, as far as possible, the discussion of external forms. We shall endeavor to promote christian cordiality and sympathy, by keeping before men's eyes the great ends which are common to all christians; by inclining men to co-operation in labors which shall not require any one to sacrifice his ecclesiastical preferences; by drawing forth from every sect the things which are lovely, and which will create toward it a kinder and more generous sympathy; and by hiding, as far as duty will permit, those evils which belong to all sects alike, and which it is more christian to cover than to expose.

Above all, and hardest of all, it will be our endeavor to breathe through the columns of the Christian Union such christian love, courage, equity, and gentleness as shall exemplify the doctrine which it unfolds, and shall bring it into sympathy with the mind and will of the Lord Jesus Christ. In which great labor we ask the charity of all who differ, the sympathy of all who agree, and the prayers of all devout men, whether they agree with or differ from us."

For the World's Crisis.

L. BRUCE WALKINS.

On the fourteenth of December, 1869, Bro. L. Bruce Walkins fell asleep in Christ, after an illness of five weeks, at South Manchester, Conn., aged thirty-nine years. Bro. Walkins was well known in Westford, Ct., and vicinity, where he formerly resided, and with his wife (a daughter of Dea. Converse), shared the love and friendship of the little flock; and since his removal to So. Manchester, he has won the love of neighbors and associates, and in his responsible position as foreman of an extensive sash and blind shop, has gained the respect and confidence of his fellows in a marked degree.

During a protracted illness caused by inflammation of the lungs, in which, though every attention was paid him, he grew weaker and weaker, till at last he "fell on sleep," he manifested a quiet trust in God, and a warm affection for those around him, in whose loving sympathy he so deeply shared.

One morning, a short time before his decease, his wife went to his bedside and said:

"Do you know me this morning?"

"O, yes," said he, "I know you, and love you."

"Do you love Jesus?" she inquired.

"Yes," said he, "I love Jesus and love everybody; have not a hard thought toward any one in this world; nor do I think that any one has anything against me."

He seemed at peace with God, and with all mankind; having a conscience void of offence toward God and man.

The writer was at his side the day before his death, and found him weak and helpless, but filled with an inward emotion which the tongue could not express, but which revealed itself as we prayed and sang—

"Jesus, refuge of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the raging waters roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, oh, my Savior, hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O, receive my soul at last."

His end was peace; and his word of comfort to his afflicted partner was—"We shall meet again in the morning." Funeral services were conducted by H. L. Hastings, assisted by H. H. Dickenson of Hartford, and Rev. Mr. Kingsley, pastor of the Methodist church, which was tendered for the occasion; and the words of the disciples, "If he sleep he shall do well" (John 11: 12), were used to suggest thoughts of hope and comfort to the sorrowing ones that gathered there.

He has gone to his rest, leaving wife and children in the care of Him who is a Father of the fatherless and a Judge of widows, and who will never leave nor forsake his trusting ones. May we meet them all in the morning, when the day shall break and the shadows flee away.

H. L. H.

I CAN'T AFFORD TO QUARREL.

Just look at it. Say a man rises with the sun: nature in him, fresh from repose, is in harmony with nature without. A heavy and sad heart indeed that feels no light rippling of gladness in the morning, out under the open heaven, the clear, bright splendor overflooding the east, birds filling the air with glee. Burdens that seemed heavy, and problems that were all dark the night before, are light and clear now. Life is elastic and fresh. It is worth while to live in such a state. Every sound is music, and you are the friend of everybody. Who shall deprive you of this blessing? What shall throw all these notes of life, so sweetly accordant now, into jarring and discord? How certain you are that no fault of yours shall work such sadness.

But you got angry the other day, and, shall it be said, quarreled with a neighbor. No matter what the occasion was. It is not much we risk in leaving that out of the count; but let us see what it cost: In the first place, away went all this music of life, that made the morning so happy. Passion hung a vail between your eyes and all the sweet light of nature, and the pure splendor of the sun. Anger is a fierce flame, and his fumes are black. Even the faces of your own wife and little children are seen but dimly through it. Moreover, you lost self-respect. Your eyes sought the earth, and a flush overspread your cheek as you thought of it. How shame unmans one! Contrast the clear, open, honest front, with the shrinking, downcast look of conscious unworthiness. Remorse adds her sting. Time and repentance are the only cure for such wounds. Then, again, your reputation suffered. Henceforth, men cannot trust you quite as they did.

A passionate man is like one periodically insane, and when the fit is on trusts are forgotten. Some will pity, some will scorn, and all will regard you with abated confidence. What a rare gratification should it afford to lose one's temper at such a cost! Reputation, self-respect, and all the sweet rapture of rational life, struck down at a single blow! It is as if the grass and flowers which all the summer had been weaving of the sunshine and dew, had been suddenly swept away by a devouring fire. How truly might every man and woman say, "I cannot afford to quarrel with my neighbor."

Bee-Keeper's Journal.

A Praying Band in New York.—A band of apostles—twelve members of the Methodist church in New York—from October to June, devote their time to visiting the churches, spending a day with each, hold three services and conduct every part themselves. At the appointed hour they enter the altar, commence singing, and conduct the service in a genuine camp-meeting style. The service, increasing in interest, culminates with the evening session. The house is usually densely crowded; the leader, Mr. Halsey, is one of the most renowned Methodists in New York. The evening service opens at seven and closes at ten. It opens with a crisp song started by the leader of the Band. Ministers all give way. Revival hymns, earnest prayers, short, sharp exhortations, consume the first half of the meeting. Invitations are then given to come to the altar. The congregation unite in singing. While the hymn is sung the members of the Band scatter through the audience, exhorting individuals to seek the Lord. As the excitement begins to glow, and strong men and children come up and bow down, the scene is indescribable, clapping of hands, ringing out of "Amens!" singing, praying, shouting, talking, comforting mourners, calling on the congregation to come out all at the same time, making a scene of apparent confusion. But the whole thing is conducted on a regular system, and the excitement and enthusiasm continue to the close. When one is converted the whole audience rise to their feet and sing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." And this is repeated as often as any one expresses hope.

Fates of the Apostles.—Matthew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom, or was slain in the city of Ethiopia.

Mark was dragged through the streets in Alexandria, in Egypt, till he expired.

Luke was hanged to an olive tree in Greece.

John was put into a boiling cauldron at Rome, but escaped death. He died a natural death at Ephesus, Asia.

James the Great, was beheaded at Jerusalem.

James, the Less, was thrown from a pinnacle, and beaten to death.

Philip was beheaded.

Bartholomew was skinned alive.

Andrew was crucified and pounded while dying.

Thomas was run through with a lance.

Simon was crucified.

Matthias was stoned.

Barnabas was stoned to death.

Paul was beheaded by the tyrant Nero, at Rome.

For the World's Crisis.

BLESSED SAVIOR, GENTLY LEAD US.

Blessed Savior, gently lead us,
Let thy hand clasp tightly ours
Through this world of sin and sorrow,
Till we reach fair Eden's bowers.

Shade and sunshine here are mingled,
Joy and sorrow come and go;
Sad the heart that hath no treasure
Beyond earth's dark scenes of wo.

Life is fraught with cares and trials,
Snares along our pathway lie,
And our songs are often plaintive,
Grieved by sin; for home we sigh.

Well we know that we are erring,
Trust we in the Lamb of God,
Heeding not the world's derision
While we tread the path he trod.

Voyagers on life's stormy ocean
To the port of endless rest,
Bear us safely o'er its waters
To the haven of the blest.

Somers, Ct. Lillie J. Adams.

Gems.

— The secret of a happy heart is keeping near the Master. Christ in the heart, a constant guest, can it but help to rejoice? Christ holding the hand, Christ making the path, Christ leading the disciple, can there be room for melancholy? Can troubles press heavily that are day by day and night by night rolled into the open sepulchre beside the cross?

— Men often boast of progress when they are only moving in a circle; and are sure they are in the right path, because with every circuit the footprints multiply, when they are only following their own tracks.

— A hidden light soon becomes dim, and if it be entirely covered up, will expire for want of air. So it is with hidden religion. It must go out. There cannot be a christian whose light in some aspect does not shine.

— Little faults become great, and even monstrous in our eyes, in proportion as the pure light of God increases in us; just as the sun, in rising, reveals the true dimension of objects which were dimly and confusedly discerned during the night.

— A good conscience is better than two witnesses—it will consume your grief as the sun dissolves ice. It is a spring when you are thirsty—a staff when you are weary—a screen when the sun burns—a pillow in death.

— To seek to be alone with the friend we love, is a large proof of our love to him. He who desires to know the depth of his affection for Jesus, does well to look at the pleasure he derives from, and the time he devotes to the enjoyment of intercourse with this friend alone.

— Christ never designed his church to be a bushel for hiding of the lights, but a candlestick from which each light is to send forth its rays.

— Morality without religion is only a kind of dead reckoning—an endeavor to find our place on a cloudy sea by measuring the distance we have run, without any observation of the heavenly bodies.

— It is usual with obstinate persons to regard neither truth in contradiction nor benefit in disputing. Positiveness is a certain evidence of a weak judgment.

— Invite Jesus, for he always says, "I will come." He may wait three days, as he did with Martha and Mary; but "I will come" is his intention. Expect him till he comes.

Beautiful feet are they that go
Swiftly, to lighten another's woe,
Through summer's heat and winter's snow.

— To reprove small faults with undue vehemence is as absurd as to seek to remove a fly from a friend's forehead with a sledge hammer.

— In matters of conscience first thoughts are best; in matters of prudence, last thoughts are best.

— Trials being sanctified, increase faith; and faith being increased is again put to the trial.

— The miser is the poorest man on earth; the most liberal man is the most wealthy.

— A christian should not plead spirituality for being a sloven. If he be a shoe-cleaner, he should be the best in the parish.

— The plainest and best instructions are of no avail, unless there be an understanding heart to receive them.

— The surest road to poverty is to hoard up treasure.

— Deeds for others' happiness show the true foundation of our own character.

— The surest road to wealth is to bestow liberally where it is most needed.

A Generous Answer.—The Oriental philosopher, Lokman, while a slave, being presented by his master with a bitter melon, immediately ate it all.

"How was it possible," said the master, "for you to eat so nauseous fruit?"

Lokman replied, "I have received so many favors from you, that it is no wonder I should once in my life eat a bitter melon from your hand."

The generous answer of the slave struck his master to such a degree, that he immediately gave him his liberty.

The Oldest Religion.—A certain Italian saw in his church in the time of mass the well-known face of an English gentleman. Glad to see him there, and wishing to convince him of the superiority of the Papal communion, he wrote on a slip of paper with his pencil, and sent to his friend, the following words:

"Where was your Protestant religion to be found before the days of Luther?"

The English gentleman wrote in like manner the following answer:

"Our religion was to be found then where yours is not to be found now—in the word of God."

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

METEORS.

What are meteors? They are luminous bodies that flash through the air, or drop to the earth from above.

Different names have been applied to them, although our knowledge of their origin and nature is so limited as to make these distinctions very indefinite. Those starry or metallic bodies that fall to the earth, are called "aerolites," from two Greek words "aer" and "lithos" signifying air-stones.

Those brilliant points that suddenly flash through the higher regions of the atmosphere, are called "shooting stars." They leave a luminous train behind them. The terms, meteor, fireball, or globular lightning, have been variously applied to those larger luminous bodies which have spherical form and sensible diameter. These traverse a large extent of vision, and are seen for sometime. Some suddenly disappear, after passing over a large extent of country; others seem to fall to the ground, while others explode with loud reports.

Aerolites are composed of iron, tin, copper, nickle, cobalt, sulphur, phosphorus—in all nineteen elements. In 1807 a shower of aerolites fell at Weston, Conn., the largest of which weighed two hundred pounds. The Yale College cabinet has a specimen of meteoric iron that weighs 1,625 pounds. When they first fall, they are glowing hot. Houses have been burnt, and men have been killed in the fall of aerolites. There is an account of one that fell, about 600 B. C., that killed ten men.

In 1819 a brilliant meteor passed over a large extent of the United States. Its diameter was estimated to be a half a mile, and it was supposed to be about twenty-five miles high.

These fireballs are not as dangerous as aerolites, and are remarkable for their curious form and slowness of motion.

The origin of meteors is a matter of conjecture. Some ancient philosophers supposed they fell from the sun, others from the moon. Some later philosophers thought they were exhalations of the earth, condensed to solid masses, and charged with electricity to such an extent as to render them explosive. The modern theory is that they are produced by small bodies revolving, like the earth, around the sun. The orbits of these small planets intersect the orbit of the earth, and when they reach the point of crossing at the same time with the earth, we see a meteor. They are invisible until they enter our atmosphere, and are converted by the friction into heat and light. Herschel, the great astronomer, thought that meteors were pieces of comets, torn to shreds by the sun's attraction.

Did any of our little readers ever see a meteor? If so, did you not think it a beautiful specimen of nature's curiosities?—Bee-Keeper's Journal.

THE APPLE TREE.

A young apple tree was covered with blossoms. The children of the house before which it stood came to play beside it. They looked up among the delicate blossoms and said, "How beautiful!" A poor, lame child was brought in her mother's arms, and placed beneath the spreading boughs. She clapped her little hands and laughed with glee. The beauty made her very happy.

Two or three days passed. A strong wind arose, and when its strength was spent, the beauty of the tree was gone. Where the sweet blossoms had been, there were only a few green leaves to hide the unsightly boughs. The children who had played beside the tree looked sad when they saw it standing so bare. The little lame child shed tears when her mother brought her to it again. She thought it was dead.

In a few days, little green bunches began to swell where the pale tinted blossoms had been. They grew larger and larger, and so did the leaves. When autumn came, the tree was beautiful to behold. Ruddy fruit weighed down its branches, and showed among its thick green leaves. All who passed by admired it. They praised the beauty and abundance of its fruit.

The little lame child was brought again, and placed under the tree. Her mother plucked some of the fruit, and gave it to her, and the poor little thing sang for joy. She had wept when she saw the lovely blossoms lying on the ground. If they had not fallen, there would have been no fruit. The strong winds did not harm the tree.

The winds of adversity sweep over our souls, and scatter their fairest blossoms of hope. But the blossoms fall that we may bring forth much fruit—patience, faith and love.—Bright Side.

LITTLE CHILDREN LOVE JESUS? YES, THEY CAN.

Every child knows what it is to love his mother, but can he tell you anything more about it than that he feels it? Can any man say more?

Every child can take hold of his father's hand and go with him in the dark, and that is having faith in his father; but he cannot tell what faith is.

The child Samuel could say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," though he could not know the voice of the Lord from the voice of Eli.

So the little child can believe in Christ, and love Christ, though he cannot know all the deep things in religion. He can live upon the sincere milk of the word, and grow thereby, and that is all that is necessary for his being gathered to Christ.

So the little one does not know how he believes in Christ, and how he lives by faith, but he does. And the tall trees of the forest, and the giant oak on the hill, can no more tell how they are nourished by the rain and the sunshine, than the little violets that grow in the crack of a rock; and the lofty tree in the garden and the frail lily are alike fed, they know not how. When the child has said that he feels love to Christ in his heart, could a Newton, with all his great mind, say more?

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance....................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address.......$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—Private.
Over all business matters, write—Business.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's Name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write Private on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,
THE YOUNG PILGRIM.
An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.
TERMS.
Payable always in advance.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 744. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 18.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"A LITTLE WHILE."

"What is this that he saith: A little while?"—John 16 18.

Oh! for the peace which floweth as a river,
Making life's desert places bloom and smile;
Oh! for a faith to grasp heaven's bright "forever,"
Amid the shadows of earth's "little while."

"A little while" for patient vigil-keeping,
To face the storm, to wrestle with the strong;
"A little while" to sow the seed with weeping,
Then bind the sheaves and sing the harvest song.

"A little while" to wear the robe of sadness,
To toil with weary step through erring ways;
Then to pour forth the fragrant oil of gladness,
And clasp the girdle of the robe of praise.

"A little while" 'mid shadow and illusion,
To strive by faith love's mysteries to spell;
Then read each dark enigma's clear solution,
Then hail light's verdict—"He doeth all things well."

"A little while" the earthen pitcher taking,
To wayside brooks from far off fountains fed;
Then the parched lip its thirst forever slaking
Beside the fulness of the Fountain Head.

"A little while" to keep the oil from failing;
"A little while" faith's flickering lamp to trim,
And then the Bridegroom's coming footstep hailing,
To haste to meet Him with the bridal hymn.

And He who is at once both Gift and Giver,
The future glory and the present smile,
With the bright promise of the glad "forever,"
Will light the shadows of the "little while."

—Selected by A. G. Bartlette.

For the World's Crisis.

"WATCHMAN! WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

"And in the days of these kings, shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

Daniel declares that God hath made known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall come to pass hereafter. The question arises, Did this knowledge interest those only of his day, or has it also been handed down to the people of the present day for our benefit? If so, why so much indifference on the subject?

In the first place, what "kings" are referred to in the text? By reading the interpretation of the image that the king saw, we shall see that the head of gold represented the king or kingdom of Babylon, at that time in the height of its glory. And we are shown, also, that the breast and arms of silver indicate a second king inferior to him, fulfilled in Belshazzar's reign. The history of the reign of king Cyrus proves the fulfillment of the third kingdom. This mighty monarch did perform all that was predicted should be accomplished by the third power that should arise. He did subdue the most powerful kingdoms and people that existed on the earth, even Babylon, the great and mighty kingdom that had conquered many and mighty kings, and brought many nations to serve her, fell into his hands, even the strong and beautiful city, and all the cities and countries that belonged to her.

A short description of that strongly fortified city may not be out of place here. The circumference of the city was one hundred and twenty furlongs (or a little over fifteen miles square), the city being square, and encircled with a wall three hundred and fifty feet high and eighty feet thick. There was a very broad, deep ditch formed all around the outside of the city, where the earth was removed of which to make the brick. This ditch was filled with water from the river Euphrates, which passed directly through the city. And there was still another extensive wall erected on either side of the ditch. One can only have an idea of the depth and width of this ditch, by the extent of the walls of the same that were formed of the earth removed, of which the bricks were made by being cemented with bitumen.

There were one hundred gates of entrance, twenty-five on each of the four sides, and these massive gates, and also the posts, were made of brass. One can easily conjecture the magnificence of the courts, palaces, gardens, and streets, of this famous city, by this short description of the outside walls and fortifications.

Notwithstanding all the strength, pride and power of this far-famed city and extensive province, it fell an easy prey into the hands of this renowned prince. It was during the reign of king Cyrus, or the third kingdom spoken of, that the Jews were permitted to return to their own land and rebuild the Temple, which had been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, A. M. 3416.

We have now passed down in the history of the world sixty-five years from the time the image was introduced. We now notice the legs and feet of the image, which were of iron and clay. "Forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things; and as iron breaketh in pieces, shall it break in pieces and bruise." This is the Roman power; it being the next ruling power (or kingdom) that overcame all the strong and mighty kingdoms and nations of that time, and has ruled them with the most tyrannical oppression of any on the earth. It has not been enough for her to overcome nations, but she must crush them. Surely she has fulfilled her reign of terror, as predicted, and although she has been divided into separate kingdoms, as indicated by the toes of the feet of the image, yet she has maintained her supremacy; and as the iron and clay in the symbol represent the power to be partly strong and partly broken, so we learn in her history that by her divisions she has been broken; that is, her power has been diminished. Yet she has not been destroyed, but, as predicted, she has mingled with the seed of men, and is spreading herself all over the earth; even in our own boasting country of religious freedom, she has suppressed the reading of the Scriptures in our common schools in many places.

But as the wheels of time have rolled us down to the extremity, or toes, of the image, we may now expect to see the establishment of the fifth kingdom, which is to be set up in the days of "these kings."

We now come to notice the agent to be used by the God of heaven to break in pieces and destroy all these kingdoms, and set up a kingdom that shall have no end. "Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold." "The stone that the builders rejected, has become the head-stone of the corner."

By reading the following references, it will be readily seen that Christ is the stone referred to by Daniel. Matt. 21: 42–44; Mark 12: 10; Acts 4: 10, 11; 1 Pet. 2: 7. Many undertake to prove from Scripture that the kingdom referred to is a spiritual one, and that the work was accomplished by Christ at his first advent, and that the kingdom is within us, etc. As there is such a diversity of opinion as regards the application of the Scriptures on this point, I conclude to examine for myself. I find but one text in the whole Bible that would seem to imply any such meaning; and by examining that, I can not see how it can be taken to convey a spiritual meaning.

We will admit that our Savior tells the Pharisees that the kingdom of God is within them (or so it reads in our version). If the word had been translated "with" you, instead of "within" you, it appears to me it would then harmonize with all his teaching, and with the Bible, on this point. It does not appear that Christ intended to convey the idea to these proud and unbelieving Pharisees that the principles of the kingdom of God were in them; but, on the other hand, he did plainly teach them that the kingdom should be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof; and that it would at last be better for the Publicans and harlots than for them. He also pronounced a woe upon them. Matt. 23: 13–15. He said they were hypocrites, and shut the kingdom of heaven against men. This does not appear to teach that the kingdom was in them in a spiritual or in any other sense, as the inference in the text referred to is commonly taken.

I think it can be plainly shown from Scripture that the kingdoms referred to in the Bible are countries, rulers, and subjects. The nation called the Israelites (or Jews, as they were afterwards called) inherited the land of Canaan, by direct promise from God to their fathers. The original tract of land was embraced within the river of Egypt to the great river Euphrates; the whole length being about one hundred and seventy miles by eighty miles wide. They were first led to this promised land by Moses. It was divided to them by Joshua, and they were ruled by judges three hundred and ninety-nine years, and afterwards by kings, until they were subdued and carried into captivity by other nations; and finally, as predicted by the prophets and our Savior, the kingdom has been taken from them, and they driven out and scattered among all the nations of the earth.

We have already noticed something of the extent of the Babylonian kingdom, the Medo-Persian kingdom, and the Roman empire. We now come to inquire into the whereabouts, extent, and subjects of this long-looked-for kingdom spoken of by Daniel, which is to succeed the fourth, symbolized by the image.

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." He is to set up a kingdom; so it appears the kingdom has not been set up yet. As we have shown that we live in the days of these kings, and the work to be accomplished is to break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, it appears very evident, therefore, that the kingdom has not been set up yet. "And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27. Notice, this kingdom will be under the whole heaven, not in heaven. "I will give thee the heathen for thy inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Ps. 2. "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and the nations shall flow unto it."—Isa. 2: 2. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham or his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."—Rom. 4: 13.

It appears evident from the above passages that the kingdom of God and Christ is to be set up in the earth, in the place of these wicked and perverse kings and rulers that bear rule over us now.

Who are to be the subjects of this near-approaching kingdom? And as it is to endure for ever, we are all interested, or should be, in this great question.

Christ says the meek shall inherit the earth. Matt. 5: 5; 13: 41–43. They never have yet. He says his word will not fail, and I believe it. "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." He also tells the disciples that unless their righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, "ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 25: 31–34. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory"; and when the good and bad are gathered, then shall the King say to them on the right hand, "Come, ye blessed of my Father," etc. But we may know every day how the case stands with us. When the King comes to set up his kingdom, he ceases to intercede for us; then the day of grace is past; no repentance will avail after that; he that is holy will be holy still; and he that is filthy will be filthy still. "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God."

Hear what the apostle James says: God hath "chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him."—Jas. 2: 5. Jesus says, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God." He also says, "Blessed are ye poor, for yours is the kingdom of God." Hear also Paul's testimony (1 Cor. 6: 9, 10): "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

When all these characters are excluded, may we not well inquire, "Are there few that shall be saved?" Read what Paul says to the churches in Galatia (Gal. 5: 19–23); also to the Ephesians (5: 5). No person will be allowed to remain in that country who will displease, or do injustice to any one. Jesus says to the disciples, "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity."—Matt. 13: 41.

It appears evident from Solomon's writing, that God gave him a clear view of the earth in its renovated state, when the curse should be removed, and all them that do injustice are gathered, and destroyed from the face of the whole earth. In Prov. 11: 31, he says, "Behold, the righteous shall be compensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner." 14: 32. "The righteous hath hope in his death." Isaiah saith, "Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever." Hear David, "Surely he shall not be moved for ever; the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance; . . . the wicked shall see it and be grieved; he shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away; the desire of the wicked shall perish."—Ps. 112: 6, 10. Surely David must have had strong faith in a future life on this earth, after the curse should be wiped out. Peter also declared he looked "for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." These prophecies are not being fulfilled in our day, neither have they been in the past; but God's word is sure, and will not fail.

In David's time the wicked were in great prosperity. In the seventy-third Psalm he says, "I was envious, when I saw their prosperity; they were not in trouble as other men, neither are they plagued like other men"; and that "the ungodly prosper in the world; they increase in riches." "Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end." Again, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree." "For evil doers shall be cut off; but those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth." "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." "A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked."—Prov. 10: 7. The name of the wicked shall rot." "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth." "When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish; and the hope of unjust men perisheth." Texts of this kind might be multiplied, but I forbear.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, let me exhort you to lift up your heads and rejoice, for the day of our redemption draweth nigh, and the time of his appearing and kingdom is at hand. "In the days of these kings" he will come, and will not tarry; and while the "midnight cry" is being sounded that "the Bridegroom cometh," and the moral darkness of the world prevails to such an extent, let us keep our lamps trimmed and burning; let us watch and be sober, lest that day come upon us unawares; let us remember what our Lord saith: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven"; these have the promise of entering into "that rest."

The Lord sware in his wrath that those whom he brought up out of the land of Egypt should not enter into his rest. Paul declares that this judgment was not pronounced against all who came out by the hand of Moses, but on those who had sinned and grieved him by disobedience and unbelief; whose carcases fell in the wilderness. "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into that rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."

In Hebrews 4, Paul teaches that the rest here spoken of is not past, but future. "Seeing, therefore, it remaineth that some must enter therein; and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief; again, he limiteth a certain day. . . . For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterwards have spoken of another day. . . . There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God." J. D. Sheridan.

—Live with a clear conscience. Endeavor to scatter sunshine and happiness to all in every place.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ONE WEEK.

"And the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined. And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate" (or desolator.)—Daniel 9: 26, 27.

I believe this period of one week (or seven years prophetic time) measures the war upon the Jews, commencing at the time of the siege of Jerusalem, and ending with that war. I do not believe this period is in any way connected with the seven and sixty-two weeks, but that they form a distinct period of themselves, showing the duration of the war in which Jerusalem was destroyed, and the confirmation of the covenant. "And the people of the prince that shall come [the Romans] shall destroy the city and sanctuary." "And he [the prince of the people that shall come and destroy the city and sanctuary] shall confirm the covenant with many for one week." How will the Roman prince do this? By fulfilling the words of prophecy spoken by our Lord in relation to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the distress of that people.

From the siege of Jerusalem, one week (or seven years) was allotted to show how exactly the words of Christ (and Daniel also) should be fulfilled, whereby the wavering christians would be confirmed in the covenant with Christ, and established in the truth. A very remarkable point in the prophecy of Gabriel was, that in the midst of the week he (the prince of the people that should come to destroy the city) shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease.

Up to the time that Titus took the city, the sacrifice and oblation had continued to be offered on the Jewish altar in the temple. And the Jews continued for some length of time, if not up to the very time Jerusalem was destroyed, to offer the offerings under the law. But God so ordered it that those sacrifices and oblations should cease, and this was done when the people of the prince that came took the city in July or August A. D. 70, at which time the temple was burned, and its worship ended, or was made to "cease." Thus the sacrifices and oblation were offered no more. And this was done just about three and a half years after the siege commenced, according to one eminent writer.

The daily sacrifice in the temple ceased July, A. D. 70; that is, the end of the first half week. Re-capture of Masada, A. D. 73, when the war ended, and the one week terminated.

I leave the subject, believing that within about seven years from this date, A. D. 1870, we shall behold the end of the Gentile times. Solemn events are just before us. It becomes all to "watch and pray always," lest the Master come suddenly and find us sleeping. The great day of the Lord is at hand, and who shall be able to abide the day of his coming?

Fair Haven, Ct. J. E. Clark.

For the World's Crisis.

COME TO JESUS!

Oh, dear sinner, will you come to Jesus? Come now; come to-day. Do not harden your hearts. You have not the promise of to-morrow. Procrastination is dangerous; you know not what the morrow may bring forth. You may die unprepared. If so, what an awful doom awaits you when the last trump shall sound, and you are numbered with those that must die the second death. Dreadful thought!

Why will you turn a deaf ear to the warnings and invitations given by those that love your soul? Why will you grieve the Spirit of God? Salvation is free—without money and without price. The sick can have it, the poor can have it if they will. Jesus requires you to give him your heart. You must come out and be separate from the world, for you cannot love God and the things of this sinful world too; for where your treasure is there your heart will be also. "Strive to enter in at the straight gate; for many shall seek to enter but shall not be able." Repent, believe and be baptized, and thou shalt be saved. Confess and forsake your sins.

Some persons seem to think (or act as though they thought so) if they are baptized they have nothing more to do. But it is a sad mistake. We must watch and pray, lest we fall into temptation. The tempter stands ready to lead the lambs of the flock astray, and unless we meet him with—"Get thee behind me, Satan!" and pray to God to help us in every time of need, we shall be led into forbidden paths. We know God is ever ready to hear and answer the prayers of his children when they come to him humbly. Being baptized will avail us nothing in the day of judgment, if we do not forsake our sins. God looks at the heart, and if we do not live up to our profession he knows it; we cannot deceive him, although we may deceive our friends.

You will say, perhaps, that you see many professing godliness doing things that are wrong. You say you do not see any difference in their dress, and they follow the foolish fashions of the day; they can jest, laugh, and seem to enjoy the things of this world as well as you do. You think you are just as good as they are. We cannot deny that we see some such cases; but, providing all this is true, dear sinners, you can be saved if you will. You must not look at poor mortal man for an example. Look at the true pattern—Christ Jesus, who died that you and I might be saved. O, how he loved us,—to die for us, to shed his precious blood that we, needy worms of the dust, might have everlasting life.

Then do come to the Savior. Bear the light trials and temptations, the scoffs and frowns of this world a little while, for the sake of a home in the kingdom. In the name of Jesus, I ask you to come and seek your soul's salvation. Now is the time. Do not delay. May God in infinite mercy grant that these few lines may be the means of leading some sinner to seek his soul's salvation, is my prayer, and his name shall have all the glory.

M. A. Miller.

LINES.

Jesus, may I trust in thee;
O, support and comfort me;
Lead me in thine own good way,
May I never go astray.
Teach me how to be thy child,
Make me penitent and mild;
May I do thy holy will;
Make me good and humble still.

May I ever ready be
To my precious Savior see,
For his coming is so near,
O, so soon he may appear.
Then I hope to have a home
Where temptations cannot come,
Where all trials will be o'er,
Safe with Jesus evermore.

May I ever watch and pray;
Help me, Jesus, day by day,
To be good and faithful too;
Teach me what I ought to do;
Then when thou shalt come to reign,
I may with thee then remain,
Free from sickness, pain, and care,
Evermore thy joys to share.

East Randolph, Mass. Mary J. Pratt.

ON DRESS.

1. Many years ago I observed several parts of christian practice among the people called Quakers. Two things I particularly remarked among them, plainness of speech and plainness of dress. I willingly adopted both, with some restrictions, and particularly plainness of dress; the same I recommended to you when God first called you out of the world; and after the addition of more than twenty years experience I recommend it to you still.

But before I go any farther, I must entreat you in the name of God, be open to conviction. Whatever prejudices you have contracted from education, custom, or example, divest yourself of them as far as possible. Be willing to receive light either from God or man; do not shut your eyes against it. Rather be glad to see more than you did before, to have the eyes of your understanding opened. Receive the truth in the love thereof, and you will have reason to bless God forever.

2. Not that I would advise you to imitate the people called Quakers in those little peculiarities of dress which can answer no possible end but to distinguish them from other people. To be singular, merely for singularity's sake, is not the part of a christian. I do not, therefore advise you to wear a hat of such dimensions, or a coat of a particular form. Rather, in things that are absolutely indifferent, that are of no consequence at all, humility and courtesy require you to conform to the customs of your country.

But I advise you to imitate them, first, in the neatness of their apparel. This is highly to be commended, and quite suitable to your christian calling. Let all your apparel, therefore, be as clean as your situation in life will allow.

I advise you to imitate them, secondly, in the plainness of their apparel. In this are implied two things: 1. That your apparel be cheap, not expensive; far cheaper than others in your circumstances wear, or than you would wear if you knew not God. 2. That it be grave, not gay, airy, or showy; not in the point of fashion. And these easy rules may be applied both to the materials whereof it is made, and to the manner wherein it is made or put on.

3. Would you have a farther rule with respect to both? Then take one which you may always carry in your bosom: "Do everything herein with a single eye;" and this will direct you in every circumstance. Let a single intention to please God prescribe both what clothing you shall buy, and the manner wherein it shall be made, and how you shall put on and wear it. To express the same thing in other words: let all you do, in this respect, be so done that you may offer it to God, a sacrifice acceptable through Christ Jesus. So that, consequently, it may increase your reward and brighten your crown in heaven. And so it will do if it be agreeable to christian humility, seriousness and charity.

Shall I be more particular still? Then I exhort you to wear no gold, nor pearls, or precious stones; use no curling of hair, or costly apparel, how grave soever. I advise those who are able to receive this saying, Buy no superfluities, no mere ornaments, though ever so much in fashion. Wear nothing, though you have it already, of a glaring color, or which is any way gay, glistening, or showy; nothing apt to attract the eyes of by-standers. I do not advise women to wear rings, ear-rings, necklaces, lace, (of whatever kind or color,) or ruffles, which, by little and little, may easily shoot out from one to twelve inches deep. Neither do I advise men to wear shining stockings, glittering or costly buckles or buttons. It is true these are little, very little things; therefore they are not worth defending; therefore give them up, let them drop, throw them away, without another word; else a little needle may cause much pain in the flesh, a little self-indulgence much hurt to your soul.

3. For the preceding exhortation I have the authority of God in clear and express terms; "I will that women [and, by parity of reason, men too] adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered [curled] hair, or gold, or pearls, [one kind of precious stones, which was then most in use, put for all] or costly apparel; but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works," 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10. Again, "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting, [curling] the hair, and of gold, or of putting on of apparel. But let it be—the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of great price." 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4. Nothing can be more express: the wearing of gold, of precious stones, and of costly apparel, together with curling of hair, is here forbidden by name; nor is there any restriction made, either here or in any other scripture. Whoever, therefore, says, "There is no harm in these things," may as well say, "There is no harm in stealing, or adultery."

There is something peculiarly observable in the manner wherein both St. Peter and St. Paul speak of these things. "Let not your adorning [says St Peter] be that outward adorning; but let it be the adorning of a meek and quiet spirit." The latter clause is not added barely to fill up the sentence, but with strong and weighty reasons. For there is a direct contrariety (as little as we may suspect it) between that outward and this inward adorning; and that both with regard to their source and with regard to their tendency. As to their source, all that adorning springs from nature: a meek and quiet spirit from grace; the former from conforming to our own will and the will of man; the latter from conforming to the will of God. And, as to their tendency, nothing more directly tends to destroy meekness and quietness of spirit than all that outward adorning whereby we seek to commend ourselves to men and not to God. For this cherishes all those passions and tempers which overthrow the quiet of every soul wherein they dwell.

"Let them adorn themselves," saith St. Paul, "not with curling of hair, or with gold, pearls, or costly apparel, but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." The latter clause is here likewise added, for plain and weighty reasons. 1. that kind of adorning cannot spring from godliness, from either the love or fear of God, from a desire of conforming to his will, or from the mind which was in Christ Jesus. 2. It no way tends to increase godliness; it is not conducive to a holy temper. 3. It manifestly tends to destroy several of the tempers most essential to godliness. It has no friendly influence on humility, whether we aim at pleasing others or ourselves hereby. Either in one case or the other it will rather increase pride or vanity than lowliness of heart. It does not at all minister to the seriousness which becomes a sinner born to die. It is utterly inconsistent with simplicity; no one uses it merely to please God. Whoever acts with a single eye does all things to be seen and approved of God; and can no more dress than he can pray, or give alms, to be seen of men.

"O! but one may be as humble in velvet and embroidery as another in sackcloth." True; for a person may wear sackcloth and have no humility at all. The heart may be filled with pride and vanity, whatever the raiment be.

But can you be adorned at the same time with costly apparel and with good works? That is, in the same degree as you might have been had you bestowed less cost on your apparel? You know this is impossible; the more you expend on the one, the less you have to expend on the other. Costliness of apparel, in every branch, is therefore immediately, directly, inevitably destructive of good works. You see a brother for whom Christ died ready to perish for want of needful clothing. You would give it him gladly; but, alas, it is corban, whereby he might have profited. It is given already, not indeed for the service of God, not to the treasury of the temple but either to please the folly of others, or to feed vanity, or lust of the eye in yourself. Now, (even suppose these were harmless tempers,) yet what an unspeakable loss is this, if it be really true, that "every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labor," if there is indeed a reward in heaven for every work of faith, for every degree of the labor of love!

Secondly. 1. As to the advice subjoined, it is easy to observe that all these smaller things are, in their degree, liable to the same objections as the greater. If they are gay, showy, pleasing to the eye, the putting them on does not spring from a single view to please God. It neither flows from nor tends to advance a meek and quiet spirit. It does not arise from, nor any way promote, real, vital godliness.

And if they are in any wise costly, if they are purchased with any unnecessary expense, they cannot but, in proportion to that expense, be destructive of good works. Of consequence, they are destructive of that charity which is fed thereby; hardening our heart against the cry of the poor and needy, by inuring us to shut up our bowels of compassion towards them.

At least, all unnecessary expenses of this kind, whether small or great, are senseless and foolish. This we may defy any man living to get over, if he allows there is another world. For there is no reward in heaven for laying out your money in ornaments and costly apparel; whereas you may have an eternal reward for whatever you expend on earth.

Consider this more closely. Here are two ways proposed for laying out such a sum of money. I may lay it out in expensive apparel for myself, or in necessary clothing for my neighbor. The former will please my own eye, or that of others; the latter will please God. Now, suppose there were no more harm in one than in the other, in that which pleases man than that which pleases God, is there as much good in it? If they are equally innocent, are they equally wise? By the one I gratify the desire of the eye, and gain a pleasure that perisheth in the using; by the other I gain a larger share of those pleasures that are at God's right hand forevermore. By the former I obtain the applause of men; by the latter the praise of God. In this way I meet with the admiration of fools; in that I hear from the Judge of all, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

Brethren, whatever ye are accounted by men, I would not have you fools in God's account. "Walk ye circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise;" not in those ways which God may possibly forgive, (to put things in the most favorable light,) but in those which he will certainly reward. In wickedness be ye children still; but in understanding be ye men. I want to see a visible body of people who are a standing example of this wisdom, a pattern of doing all things, great and small, with an eye to God and eternity.—J. Wesley.

CONFIRMATIONS OF SCRIPTURE.

After all the attention which has been given to Layard's discoveries among the ruins of Nineveh, we doubt whether the public mind is fully aware of the nature and extent of the confirmation which they bring to the truth of Scripture. It may be useful here to set out, in the briefest form, a specimen of some of the general results of these discoveries.

They show, in conformity with the tenor of the Scriptures, that the earliest ages were not, as many think, barbarous ages; but that the race of men, originally enlightened from a Divine source, had, at first, a high degree of knowledge, which they gradually lost through their defection to idolatry. It has long been demonstrated by these excavations, not only that a high state of arts existed in Nineveh a thousand years before Christ, but also, that in the earliest ages of that city, dating but a few centuries from the flood, their sculptures were the best. In this remarkable result, the Egyptian and Assyrian antiquities also agree.

It is also proved, contrary to the general impression, that idolatry was introduced when men had better knowledge of the true God than afterwards prevailed; that it did not grow up as a religion of nature, by the ineffectual attempts of men to find the true God. But it was introduced as an expedient of men in order to obscure what knowledge of God they possessed, because they did not like to retain God in their knowledge. This is shown in the fact, that the earliest representations of God found in these sculptures, are the best, and immeasurably exceed anything of the kind existing in after ages; especially in their approach to the true idea of God. So that idolatry came in not for want of light, but by an abuse of God. Men, knowing God, became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

The Scripture accounts of the great antiquities of Nineveh and the Assyrian Empire, agree with these records dug out of the ruins of Nineveh. The Scriptures date the building of the city not long after the flood; and by the fact that the same marble materials have been used in successive structures, and that ancient buildings have been placed on the ruins of those still more ancient, and other unmistakable indications, the conclusion is made clear, that the city had all the antiquity which the Scriptures ascribe to it.

These monuments also bear upon them the records of the fulfilment of prophecy. Nahum prophesied that the city would be plundered before it was burnt. The prophet foretold that the invaders would obtain easy access to some portions of the city; and that whenever the inhabitants should resort to the strongholds, these should be burnt. Now the ruins show just this result; that some parts of the city were destroyed by fire, and others escaped.

But a more striking confirmation is found in the fact that inscriptions on the ruins of palaces give the records of the military career of Sennacherib, with just such a series of conquests, and just such a boasting of them, as the Scriptures ascribe to him. For instance, the Bible tells us that in Hezekiah's reign, Sennacherib came up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took from Hezekiah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty of gold. Now compare this with the historical inscription on Sennacherib's palace: "Because Hezeziah, king of Judah, did not submit to my yoke, I took and plundered forty-six of his strong fenced cities, and innumerable smaller towns, but I left him Jerusalem his capital city; and because Hezekiah still refused to pay homage, I attacked and carried off the whole population which dwelt around Jerusalem, with thirty talents of gold and eight hundred of silver." This agrees with the Bible account, except in respect to the quantity of silver. As to this, the one account may describe what was delivered by Hezekiah, and the other the whole product of his plunder.

One chamber of Sennacherib's palace presents in sculpture and inscriptions, the siege of the Jewish city of Lachish. The king is sculptured in royal pomp on his throne, and over his head this inscription; "Sennacherib the mighty king, king of the country of Assyria, sitting on the throne of judgment before the city Lachish; I give permission for slaughter." In the Scriptures the destruction of the city of Lachish is represented to have been his most difficult work; and, of course, it was a victory on which he would most plume himself, as these sculptures show that he did.

Another coincidence appears in this, that in the historical sculptures there are marks of a sudden and final interruption of the work, such as would naturally follow from a violent death of the king, as is described in the Bible.

In the ruins of Babylon there is no sculptured marble. The city was built of brick. Yet the bricks often have characters stamped upon them. In one instance a huge palace is formed of bricks thus stamped; and the same characters repeated, one upon another; and these characters exhibit the name of "Nebuchadnezzar." The prominent characteristic of Nebuchadnezzar was his pride—such as was revealed in that speech: "Is not this great Babylon that I have built, by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" Now these ruins of the palace, in every brick of them, give just the echo of that boasting speech. Thus, after so many centuries, God has brought forth, from the ruins of the cities, voices in response to what the inspired penman had recorded so many centuries ago.

—Value no man for his opinion, but esteem him according as his life corresponds with the rules of piety and justice. A man's actions, not his conceptions, render him valuable.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Jan. 19, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ M. G. S.—It was sent the 14th.

☞ B. KNEPPER—"Christ our Life" is out of print. We send you some tracts for the money.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Some of the preaching brethren are doing nobly in obtaining new subscribers. Will not all who sympathize with us, take special pains to secure new subscribers? We received sixty-seven new ones last week. We are trying to make our paper worthy of the confidence and support of all the friends of Jesus. Pray for us that we may be successful.

THE NEW BOOK.

We would call the attention of our readers to the proposed "new book," which is now in manuscript, and is designed to be just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are unaquainted with the reasons of our hope. Such a book is much needed at the present time. Many are inquiring for a work like the one now being prepared. We wish those who are willing to help in this enterprise would send in their pledges at once, in order that we may know how far the Bro. will sustain the work. Some who made liberal pledges at the National Convention, at Rochester, are willing to give a large part of what they pledged for the sake of having such a work issued. It will be seen at once, that unless some do make donations, we shall not have means to publish the first edition of the book. After the first edition is issued, it is hoped we shall have no difficulty. But if all take the amount of their pledges in books, and do not pay till they are sold, where shall we get the means to pay the printer and binder? Are there not some will who make liberal donations to have this important work issued at once?

The winter is the best time to get such a work before the public; and we are anxious to have the means to push it with energy. The book should be before the public as soon as possible. We trust there will be no delay for want of sufficient means for its execution. Please let us know immediately how much you will give besides, to assist in publishing the first edition. It is designed to make this a standard work, as an expositor of the doctrine of the Bible. The chief object is to scatter the light through the churches in all parts of the world, and, if possible arouse them to see the great truths that are so heart-cheering to thousands who love the appearing of Jesus. We have arranged for extensive advertising, and feel anxious to have the machinery in motion as soon as possible. How much will you give? How many copies will you take?

CANADA.

At the different places in Canada, where we held meetings, we found the people increasingly anxious to hear about the coming of our Savior, and the necessary preparation for the event. We met Bro. J. Porter, pastor of the Danville church, who informed us that the meetings there had been more interesting and better attended than usual. The people seem to be well convinced that some great event is at hand; and they are anxious to have an understanding of the matter.

We met Bro. and Sr. W. Cooper, from England, who are deeply interested in a pure christianity. He is a preacher of the gospel, and spoke fondly of the coming of Christ. In all places we find those who truly love Jesus, are interested in his coming, and expect him soon. The evidences keep increasing which show that the last days have truly come. Those who intend to be at the marriage supper of the Lamb, should now keep unspotted from the world.

STRIKES.

Strikes among mechanics are now becoming very common. At the present time the telegraph operators are having quite a general and serious strike throughout the country. They demand more wages than they have been receiving from the telegraph companies. Daily meetings are held in New York by the strikers, and they express very strong determination to maintain their position. It is quite an injury to the business of the country. These strikes indicate a bad condition of society, which threatens serious results.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—Bro. Hook has obtained over fifty new subscribers for the Crisis since campmeeting, towards the two hundred he proposed to get. Many others have sent one, two, or more. Now is the time for effort. A little extra effort would double our list of subscribers, and our paper would gladden the hearts and homes of thousands who are now strangers to the "blessed hope." Who will try and see what can be done?

THE RESUSCITATOR.

When we first heard of the Resuscitator we paid but little attention to what was said about it, believing it to be some quack contrivance; but, after seeing its operations, hearing and reading of those who have received great benefit from its use, we have come to the conclusion that it is worthy of the confidence of all, and is a valuable remedy for the diseases of the human system. It is simple in its application, and can be used by any intelligent person. We would recommend it to every family. It can be obtained of Bro. H. Munger and T. W. Weaver, Springfield, Mass. Price $10.

BRO. GEO. T. ADAMS, our Business Agent, has been very sick with pleurisy; but is a little better now. At one time it was thought he could not live. Pray for him.

CHELSEA.—We are having good meetings in Chelsea. Five were baptized yesterday (Jan. 16th), by Bro. Leavitt.

PARIS.—There is great excitement in Paris in relation to the murder of one Victor Noir, by Prince Pierre Buonaparte. It was estimated that one hundred thousand people were connected with the funeral, and as many soldiers on duty to preserve order. The prospect of trouble was quite alarming. It was with much difficulty that order was preserved. A brother of the deceased addressed the populace, and urged them not to make any disturbance; otherwise, it is thought there would have been serious trouble.

☞ The article in the Crisis for Dec. 29th, headed, "She hath done what she could," should have been signed C. E. Greenslit.

QUITE APPROPRIATE.

A distinguished Spiritualist lecturer is advertized in the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," to give a lecture. Mr. Benjamin Todd, formerly an able preacher, when referring to Mr. Finney's lecture says:—"I will (D. V.—diabolus voluntas) attend and report.

(Signed.) SATAN, JR."

We think all Spiritualist lecturers would be quite consistent should they say like Mr. Todd, diabolus voluntas—the devil willing, when they propose to do any of his work.

INQUIRIES.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please answer the following questions, and confer a favor?—1st. Please place in order the three sons of Noah, according to birth—Shem, Ham, and Japheth. 2nd. Is there any place in the Bible where Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, or one of them, are called the children of Israel? 3d. What was the age of Terah at the birth of Abram? J. DURGIN.

According to the Book of Jasher [the Upright Book], Noah married Naamah, the daughter of Enoch, and his first born was Japheth. There is no mention of the birth of Ham; but from a subsequent arrangement of the names, we are led to think that Shem was the youngest. Noah was four hundred and ninety-eight years of age when he married Naamah, and his wife was five hundred and eighty years old. He had been married four years when Shem was born.

The book of Jasher says: "In his five hundred and ninety-fifth year Noah commenced to make the ark, and he made the ark in five years, as the Lord had commanded." Jasher 5: 34.

2. We do not know of any place where Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are called the children of Israel. There were no children of Israel [Jacob] till after the birth of Jacob's first born. Jacob was the first one called Israel, hence he could not be one of the children of Israel. He was the father, not one of the children of Israel.

3. The book of Jasher says, "Terah was seventy years old when he begat . . . Abram." Jasher 7: 51. Haran, Abram's oldest brother, was born when Terah was thirty-eight years of age.

FRIENDSHIP OF THE WORLD.

BRO. GRANT:—Please give your idea of the meaning of the following passage of Scripture: "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God." James 4: 4. READER.

The first part of the verse reads:—"Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" When we become a friend to any one, we seek to please him. The worldly man is opposed to God, hence his enemy; therefore, if any one becomes the friend of the enemy of God, how can he be God's friend? If I unite with the enemy of my special friend, I cease to be his friend. We cannot please the world and God at the same time; because there is no harmony between the two. The world is unreconciled to God. If I am in harmony with that which is opposed to God, then I cannot be in harmony with the right; consequently must be wrong myself. This is the condition of those who are in harmony and sympathy with the world. If the people of the world were naturally right, then they would need no Savior to pardon their sins. When we truly love the Lord, we shall not love the world; because "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." The spirit of the world and the Holy Spirit are opposite in their influence. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

QUESTIONS.

BRO. GRANT:—1. Are the souls (as persons) spoken of in Rev. 6: 9, and 20: 4, the same class? 2. Do they not live and reign with Christ when the fifth seal is opened? 3. If they do not, please explain the last clause of Rev. 20: 4. A. D. FLAGG.

1. In answer to the first inquiry, we think there is no doubt but that the word "souls" in Rev. 6: 9 and 20: 4, mean the same as the word persons. Prof. N. N. Whiting, one of the best Hebrew and Greek scholars in the country, renders the word persons in both cases; so does the Emphatic Diaglott.

2. We do not see how it can be made to appear that they reign with Christ under the fifth seal. These martyrs, whom John saw in vision, were unborn at that time. He beheld what would take place some centuries in the future. He did not see them reigning with Christ under the fifth seal, but he saw them "under the altar." The whole scene of martyrdom, during the continuance of the fifth seal, is represented as a place of slaughter, and John saw them lying under the altar.

3. We believe all who now sleep in Jesus will live, and reign "with Christ a thousand years," which will constitute the true millennium. The last clause of Rev. 20: 4, reads as follows: "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." If the reign is in the past, they reigned without Christ; for he has not yet returned to set up his kingdom and begin his reign.

TRACTS.

Thanks to those who have responded to the call for donations on the tract fund. Will not many more lend a helping hand? The case is urgent. Many poor persons stand ready to assist in the circulation of tracts among the poor, who hear no preaching on the blessed hope. Shall they be supplied? Who will lend to the Lord? There is no risk in this work. Come, Brn., let us do something worthy of an earnest christianity.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

MAGAZINES.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN QUARTERLY for January is at hand, filled with interesting reading, under the following headings:—The gospel preached to Abraham—The blissful vision—The duration and nature of Future Punishment—The saints' joy and sorrow—The use and value of the term 'aion'—The return of the Lord Jesus Christ—"Ascension Robes"—Editorial.

THE RAINBOW for January is received, and contains some very interesting articles. Bro. Leask is doing a noble work, and deserves the hearty support of the lovers of truth. A strong effort is being made to crush him, because he believes and advocates that the wicked will be destroyed. We are glad that some in this country are taking "The Rainbow." It is a quarto monthly, containing 48 pp. Price $3.50 in greenbacks. Any who wish to take it can send us the money and their P. O. address, and we will forward them to Dr. Leask, the editor. We hope many will send for it, and thus help on a good work.

THE HEALTH REFORMER, HERALD OF HEALTH, and GOOD HEALTH, for January, are at hand, filled with valuable reading matter for those who wish to observe the laws of health, and keep off from the sick bed. We think every family should be provided with a health journal. The subject of physiology has been most sadly neglected. It is a christian duty to preserve our health as far as we can. We are most fully satisfied that seven-eighths of the sickness might be avoided if people would only observe the laws of health as taught in the health journals to which we have referred. "The Health Reformer" is published at Battle Creek, Mich. Price $1.00 a year.

"The Herald of Health" is published by Wood and Holbrook, 15 Laight St., New York, at $2.00 a year. "Good Health" is published by Alexander Moore, 21 Franklin St., Boston, at $2.00 a year.

THE BEE-KEEPER'S JOURNAL AND NATIONAL AGRICULTURALIST for January, contains many interesting and valuable articles illustrated with appropriate engravings, in its five departments of "Bee-Keeping," "Agriculture," "Home and Fireside," "Ladies' and Youth's Departments." The articles "The New Honey Extractor," "The New York Poultry Show," "The Australian Bee-Hunter," each illustrated by a beautiful engraving, and the method of fertilizing Italian Queens in confinement by any drone desired, are especially interesting. On the front page is a fine portrait of Mrs. Ellen S. Tupper, America's most distinguished lady writer on bee-culture, and one of the editors of this Journal. The February number will contain the portrait of Francis Huber, the celebrated pioneer bee-keeper of Europe, to be followed by the portraits of Dzirzon, Berlepsch, and all the leading apiarians of Europe and America. This is a new feature following other improvements made since the removal and consolidation, and yet the publishers furnish the Journal at $1 a year. One sample copy sent free. Address H. A. KING, & Co., 37 Park Row, New York.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. H. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$209.94
C. S. Sherman	60.00
Orman Stone	2.00
"Reader"	.50
P. Martin, M. D.	4.75
Nellie Bedell	.25
Llewellyn Bedell	.25
Geo. W. Whiting	.40
H. W. Bardick	2.50
Mrs. Jane C. Wheeler	.25
L. M. Richardson	2.50
Abram Libby	2.50
R. T. Price	1.00
John Dick	.13

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$463.15
M. E. Stone	4.00
C. S. Sherman	60.00
L. D. Allen	2.50
W. E. Hathaway, (from church at North Carver, to send barrel to Memphis.)	6.00

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$37.56
Mrs. C. D. Simmons	2.50

THE GLORIOUS BURDEN OF PROPHECY.

"Behold! the Lord cometh." This is the cry that should arouse the world; this is the music swept from the harp of prophecy to gladden the heart of the church; this is the great truth around which other truths cluster, and from which they derive their life-force and far-reaching significance. It takes many forms, and occurs in many connections; now diffusing joy unspeakable, and then shaking the heavens and the earth; now calling the dead to spring from their graves and enter on a glorious immortality, and then causing the panic-smitten rebels to implore rocks and mountains to crush them into "abhorred annihilation" from the awful eye of the Judge; now encircling the sainthood of all generations with a divine halo, brighter than noonday, and then hurling the devil and his legions to the earth on their way to the dismal darkness of the pit.

But whatever the form, connection, or result, the great master-thought which the Omniscient Spirit would impress upon the minds of men is the advent in glory of the Father's Anointed as Judge and King of all. This central thought is never departed from, never brought into the presence of any other thought that can equal it in importance or splendor. There are no twin glories before the eyes of the Seer. There are glories manifested on the earth, and on the sea, and in the heavens—physical, moral, mental, domestic, social, worldwide; but they all radiate from the presence of the Great King, and are the consequences of that presence. If the nations are at peace, and learn war no more, it is because the Prince of Peace has come and put down, by the power of his strong right hand, the despotic tyrannies and the wild democratic revolutions that have for so many weary centuries agonized the world. If Edenic fertility beautifies and gladdens the earth, and if the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose, it is because the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, has returned to his inheritance, and lifted the curse from its soil. If the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and the destruction that wasteth at noonday, no longer fill cities with consternation and mourning, it is because he at whose word diseases fled in the days of his humiliation, has come in his glory as the great healer of suffering humanity. In a word, not one of the manifold priceless things that cluster in beauty on the page of outstanding prophecy can ever gladden the eye of man until the Son of man return in power and great glory to take possession of the kingdom and dominion "under the whole heaven."

For this is God's revealed order—the declared outline of that purpose which he works according to the counsel of his own will. No scheme of man's devising, no church system, no theological theory can alter it, or set it aside. All events will take place exactly as God has determined; the evil foreseen in churches and States will assuredly take place; the good by which that evil is to be overruled and overthrown will most certainly appear at the proper time. And, it is beyond doubt, that the early christians cherished as a blessed hope the coming of the Lord in their day. There was no revelation of the time, but there was of the fact, and on that fact they gazed with fond desire. Let us do the same; for though we know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh, it is certain that the coming is the glorious burden of prophecy.—The Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

A STATEMENT.

BRO. GRANT:—Please permit me, through the columns of the Crisis, to correct an error which I committed through misunderstanding, and which has given a wrong impression to the readers of your paper, and led them to consider me occupying a position that I am not yet prepared to assume.

Last Oct., during a season of tent-meetings under the auspices of the Advent brethren of this city,—through the foolishness of preaching, by Brn. John G. Hook, D. M. Leavitt, and A. Simpson,—myself and wife were brought to see the truth as it is in Christ, which blessed truth found a hearty welcome in our hearts; and I can truly and with gratitude to God say, the Bible has become to us a new book since we have accepted its plain teachings, free from traditional and figurative interpretations, and we are rejoicing and walking in the new-found light.

Previous to the assembling of the Advent State Conference at Concord, N. H., last month, I had frequent and urgent invitations to attend. On my arrival there the second day's session, I went directly from the depot to the hall, where the conference was convened, and had been there but a few minutes when I was importuned to join conference. It was the first time a word had been said to me on the subject by any one, and I hesitated, because I did not understand the nature of the step I was asked to take. My understanding of the explanation then given was that it was only a complimentary and temporary connection, to last only during that session of conference; therefore, with that understanding, I consented to join. When the minutes of the conference, in the Crisis, came to hand, I was more surprised than I can express to find my name among the preaching brethren, and then for the first time came to a realizing sense of the step I had so blindly taken.

Had I understood its full import, as I now do, and in any way contemplated such a step then, I should at least have taken time for prayer and preparation on the subject, and a more mature forethought; and also especially I should have taken a more plain and honorable course, in first withdrawing myself from my peculiar relations to the M. E. church, not only as a member, but as local preacher, before joining myself to any other body of christians.

The only object of my heart in the above statements is to place myself in a right position, and to be rightly understood. Whatever I can do, as a humble disciple of the Lord, I do not feel to shrink from in the least, wherever I am, or in whatsoever circumstances; and my earnest, constant prayer shall be, Dear Lord, help me to follow thee, and vouchsafe to me the influences of thy unerring Spirit's guidance. Very truly yours in Christ,

JOSEPH I. HATLINGER.

Dover, N. H., Jan. 10th, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO WILL HELP?

To the Editor of the Young Pilgrim:—In a dark and cheerless portion of New York, where the sunlight scarcely enters, Sisters Mellen and Dow, with little means and few comforts, are laboring for the salvation of the poor and neglected, old and young. Their "twilight" home is greatly cheered and benefitted by the visits of the World's Crisis and the Advent Christian Times, whose comings are without money and without price. But they feel that they need one favor more of that kind, to help them in their work, and for which they would feel grateful. For their interesting little Sabbath school they desire very much to have our dear little juvenile paper—the Young Pilgrim. If it would not be asking too much, will you please forward about twenty-five copies regularly to the address of M. E. Dow, rear 169 Allen Street, New York. And may the blessing of the Lord attend your labors of love, and accompany your blessed little paper in its varied pilgrimages, is the prayer of your Sister in Christ, A. E. BENNETT.

Worcester, Mass.

The following is from the Superintendent of a very flourishing Sabbath school in Pennsylvania, started some years ago, and now numbering one hundred and forty children, and eight teachers, who, with much self-denying sacrifice, go out into the highways and hedges and bring in the poor, the ragged and barefooted, and, Sabbath after Sabbath, through rain, hail, snow or sunshine, wend their way to the upper end of the city to break to the poor and lowly the bread of life:—

My Dear Bro.:—I herewith enclose to you a brief history of our Sabbath school work, taken from the Daily Telegraph. The portion of the city in which our work is has no church of any kind, and they are all poor (some now without shoes). . . . I wish very much to supply our school with the Young Pilgrim, but I cannot ask these poor children to pay a cent. I would like one hundred and twenty-five copies, but I am too poor myself to venture more than $12, which will have to be out of my own earnings, as I am alone here in the "blessed hope," which I have been looking for since 1842. . . If you can, in some way, send me a hundred copies, I will forward you the $12 next week.

"We'll work till Jesus comes,
And then be gathered home."

Yours in hope of immortality, W. F. F.

Who will help towards supplying these Sunday schools with the Young Pilgrim? The Society is willing to do what it can, but it has no funds on hand for this purpose; and as the receipts from subscription do not meet the expenses of publication, and will not until the circulation is larger, we see no other way than to let these appeals go out to the liberal stewards of the Lord's money, who have the means and the heart to help the needy and the poor. Believing that the Lord will make it all right, we have sent papers to both the above schools, and the account stands thus:

YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

PAPERS GRANTED.

100 copies, 1 year, Pa.	$35.00
25 " " New York	10.00
Total Granted	$45.00

DONATIONS.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass., (pledged)	$12.00
W. F. F., Pa.	12.00
Cora, West Winsted, Ct.	.50

"Uncle John" pledges $12 for thirty copies to distribute himself, provided a hundred others will pledge the same. Who else will be one of the hundred? W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

R. I. AND EAST CT. CONFERENCE REPORT.

This conference convened at Bristol, R. I., Jan. 5th, according to appointment. The afternoon was spent in prayer and conference. It was a refreshing season. All felt that we had made a good beginning. In the evening listened to a discourse from J. S. Eldredge. Text, Matt. 5: 48.

Jan. 6th, 9–30 A. M. Met for business. Bro. Durfee in the chair. The clerk being absent, C. H. Sweet was chosen clerk pro tem. Listened to reports of churches.

Rocky Brook.—One added to the church. Two have died. Have a flourishing Sabbath school. Want more preaching. Lafayette.—A revival interest. A goodly number converted and reclaimed. Charlestown.—Seven added to the church. Prospect encouraging. River Point.—Interest very low. Wyoming.—Not very prosperous. Hope for better days soon. Westerly.—Gaining ground slowly. Foster.—Two baptized since the last Conference. North Scituate—Still holding aloft the ensign.

The following preachers reported their labors: A. Durfee, E. R. Wood, Rufus Pierce, J. S. Eldredge, J. S. Collins, C. H. Sweet, M. R. Phetteplace, and Sister Crumb. All these reports were cheering. I would like to give them in full, but have not space. Some forty had found Christ under Bro. Wood's labors, in connection with others. Bro. Phetteplace had baptized twenty-five at Blackstone, Mass., and ten had arisen for prayers at West Gloucester, R. I., during the past few weeks.

An interesting letter was read from Bro. H. F. Carpenter. He had seen much apparent fruit from his labors in Vermont. The Charlestown church presented a request to become connected with this conference, and was received. Brn. Geo. Tilley and Gideon Gray were appointed a committee to act with the Chair in supplying the pulpit during the conference. On motion, Brn. Sweet, Wood, and Durfee, were appointed a committee on nominations. Business meeting adjourned until 9.30 A. M. to-morrow. In the afternoon, preaching by J. S. Collins, from Heb. 12: 1. In the evening M. R. Phetteplace, from Isa. 63: 3.

Jan. 7th, 9.30 A. M. Bro. Durfee being absent, M. R. Phetteplace was chosen chairman pro tem. Moved, That a committee be appointed to visit our weak and defunct churches. Carried. Brn. Phetteplace, Bellows, and Wood, were chosen that committee. The following was presented and adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That it be a standing request of this conference, that no church within its membership shall disorganize without giving at least three months notice of such intention of disorganization to this body.

The committee on nominations reported the following: President, A. Durfee; Secretary and Treasurer, H. F. Carpenter. Report accepted. Adjourned to meet with the church at West Gloucester, R. I., the first Wednesday in April. In the afternoon preaching by C. H. Sweet, from 2 Thess. 2: 9, 10. In the evening by Bro. M. R. Phetteplace, from Isa. 26: 1.

Much might be said concerning this meeting; but suffice it to say, that it was no exception to our former sessions.

Delegates present: N. Lewis, Teft, J. Eldredge, and R. Pierce.

C. H. SWEET, Clerk pro tem.

FREEDMEN'S MISSION.

Moved, That we rescind the vote of a previous meeting appointing Brn. Bellows and Carpenter a standing committee to disburse the funds of the Mission. Carried.

Moved, That we amend the constitution by choosing M. R. Phetteplace Treasurer, instead of the Treasurer of the conference. Carried.

Moved, That we appoint Brn. Bellows and Wood a committee to act with the Treasurer in disbursing the funds of the Mission. Carried. C. H. SWEET, Clerk pro tem.

THE HOLY LAND.

LECTURE BY RABBI SNEERSOHN.

A large and highly intelligent audience, gathered in Library Hall, Chicago, Monday evening, January 3d, on the occasion of a lecture on the "Holy Land," by the Rabbi Sneersohn, for twenty years a resident of Palestine. The lecturer was dressed in the Oriental costume of his order, and presented to the Americans quite a fantastic appearance. The Rabbi speaks with a strong German accent, although he is a Russian by birth.

He said that the only English he knew was acquired in Australia, where he delivered a course of lectures in Hebrew. Considering his disadvantages, his English was remarkably good in accent and grammatically correct. It was that of a scholar. He said that the prospects of Palestine were excellent. The Lord had not yet forgotten his people. For centuries it appeared as if it were always to be neglected, but now it was gradually returning to its former grandeur, and would soon stand erect among the countries of the earth. During the past eighteen hundred years it had been governed by eighty-three different kings, and had been under twenty-seven different governments. He then entered into details of the different conquest. How it changed from Grecian rule to Persian, to Arabic, to Tartar, to Ottoman, etc. It had been visited by pestilence and famine, and through all it had come purified, and would soon be entirely regenerated. In the course of its existence, Jerusalem had been five times totally destroyed. In these wars Jew and christian blood had flowed in the same cause. It had been, no doubt, a righteous judgment, for the hearts of kings were in the hands of God. No other people but those of Judea could have outlived such struggles; no other city could have been so often destroyed, and again rebuilt. Not Rome, but Jerusalem should be called the Eternal City. It was God's city, and would never be blotted out.

The Holy Land might at present be compared to a rough stone containing the pure diamond. Although it had long been confined in the bowels of the earth, it was yet the most brilliant of all the jewels in nature. All testimony substantiated the claim that it was God's chosen land. Its soil was the most fertile; its hills the most beautiful, and its relics the most sanctified. Even the stones of King Solomon's Temple yet remained.

He spoke of the city as being at present a strange mixture of grandeur and squalidness. Many buildings were grand and lofty, while the streets are long and extremely narrow. The average temperature was 50°, and the thermometer seldom ranged above 92°, while cool breezes from the mountains always played about its towers. For three hundred years Palestine had been under the reign of the Turk, and the children of Israel were strangers in their own land. But he was compelled to say that the Ottoman rulers had been very kind and considerate to Jew and Christian alike. The greatest enemies to the Holy Land to-day were the Arabs, who hung about the outskirts, fleet of horse, and ready to plunder any poor wayfarer who might fall into their clutches. But with all their faults, who ever came to them for food and shelter that was not hospitably and kindly treated? So long as he was a guest, not a hair would fall from the stranger's head. But in war they were relentless, and, so far, always successful. They were stately, and intelligent, very stiff-necked, full of proverbs, but not very learned. Few could speak any other than the Arabic language. They were highly superstitious, treacherous, but very clean in their person.

He then gave an interesting account of the Turks, the present rulers of Palestine. He spoke of their manners, customs, and mode of government, and gave rather a doleful picture of the prospect of mental and moral advancement under their rule. The one hope of Palestine was America. It was their great shield for the future. From it they received the inspiration of freedom. He was grieved to say that the American consul who had lived there under the last administration, had not been favorably inclined to the Jews; but he hoped that his successor would be better. There were, at present, fourteen congregations of Jews in Jerusalem, gathered from nearly all the countries in the world. Among these the Portuguese were the most conspicuous, and stood in highest favor with the government. Their learning was, however, less thorough and more pedantic than that of the German, and they were not as strong in religious controversy.

Among the Jews there were about seven hundred who made a living by trade. These were principally Portuguese, and the Germans were generally mechanics and very useful citizens. His picture of Jewish social life was not very flattering. Too many of them were poor, and two or three families were often crowded into very small tenements; consequently, there was much disease among them. The Jews of the Holy Land walked with bowed heads, and the poor fairly groaned under their many afflictions. Where there was once peace there was now internal strife, and where there were once untold riches there was now little more than abject and squalid poverty. But with all these hindrances the Jewish faith in the Holy Land was gaining strength, and the Arab and the Turk were disappearing. A single united effort of the children of Israel in the civilized world could redeem the chosen soil of God. He hoped that the day was not far distant when it would be made, and the land of Zion be redeemed.—Chicago Tribune.

☞ If you would be pungent, be brief; for it is with words as with sunbeams, the more they are condensed the deeper they burn.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—I visited a place a few miles from the city last week, and found the people anxious to hear. I had a good time in speaking, and the truth took deep hold of the hearers. After the fourth evening, we were invited to the Baptist house that had been closed against us, and the deacon, who had the church in charge, after listening one evening, desired me to continue the meetings. Two, that had known nothing of religion, confessed their faith in the gospel of Christ, and purposed to set up the family altar. Another intelligent lady gave her heart to Christ. Another said, "I have received more light from the Scriptures for the past four evenings than for forty years before." Several are desirous of being baptized, and so the Lord is working.

"The ten pieces of silver." Our Savior introduces one woman who had ten pieces of silver, and having lost one, she lighted a candle and searched diligently till she had found it; and then called in her neighbors to rejoice with her, for she had found the piece that was lost. I found in Rush (the place above mentioned) another woman, one that had laid by "ten pieces of silver"—more than dimes or half-dimes, and had not lost any of them; but when I came away she put them in my hand, with tears running down her cheeks, saying, "Take these; I have kept them to look at long enough." I declined, but said she, "The Lord wants me to give them to you." And think you that her joy was less than that other woman's who boarded up the lost piece again with the nine? I tell you nay; there was joy in heaven over such a self-sacrifice.

Once on a time, I baptized the wife of a man that became very angry, but afterward gave his wife a fifty-cent piece to give to me. I said, This is the price of wrath; it must bring praise unto the Lord. At length I saw beside the road our good old blind brother Moore, in Litchfield, Ct., sawing wood. I stopped the horse, and as he raised his head, I said, How do you do, Bro. Moore? He replied, "Is that you, Bro. Pratt?" Yes. Have you got any money? I could hardly wait for him to speak, for I felt that the money was for him. He said, "If I haven't, I don't want any from you." But I am in earnest. Have you any money? "Well, to tell the truth, Bro. Pratt, I have no money. My daughter boards me, and my son from the West has usually sent me a few dollars every quarter to buy such things as are convenient for me; but for the last quarter I have received none, and I am all out." I placed the shining coin in his hand, and his mouth was filled with praise. I had gone but a little way, when I found that God had given me an interpretation of that scripture which says, "He shall cause the wrath of man to praise him, and the remainder will he restrain." I wrote back to the wife, saying, You will have no more trouble from your husband; and so it was.

"The gold rings." Again, there were two young ladies in R. that gave themselves to God, and with hearts all contrite, and eyes all glossy with tears, each placed in my hand a heavy gold ring. Those were heart treasures. I hardly knew what to do with them. They were precious tokens of hearts made more pure by the love of God. At length I changed them for Bibles, giving one to each of those lovely girls, and disposed of the rest as I thought the Lord directed. One of those dear children sleeps in Christ. May they both share in the rewards of the just.

But those "ten pieces of silver"—what shall I do with them? I look upon them, and that meek, hard-working young wife comes up before me with tearful eyes, and I hear the husband's voice saying (as we are ascending the long hill, in the cold, wintry morning, when looking back), "Wife still stands there looking after us, and weeping." Then in a subdued voice said, "I don't know but I am selfish, but I do think I have got one of the best women in the world. She is all the time doing something. She can make all kinds of clothing, and she is so kind-hearted; and now she loves the Lord so much, and she feels so bad to think you can't stay and preach longer,"—and here the words got choked up, and we drove a long way in that dreary, grey morn in silence.

I ask again, What shall I do with these "ten pieces of silver?" and the answer comes from the heart, They must preach. They must preach to me of the thousands that would be equally glad of the precious truth of Christ's soon coming; they shall preach to me of the preciousness of time, and of the importance of carrying the truth with a sympathetic heart, and to work while the day lasts; and they shall preach to others of the little value that gold or silver possesses in that heart all consecrated to God. H. PRATT.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 10th, 1870.

From Bro. J. A. Cleaveland.

BRO. GRANT:—By request of the brethren of this place, we organized a church, so that all might act in unison. We believe it necessary, for the well being of every church, that they have a head, with whom to consult in relation to business matters. If there is nothing of this kind, everything goes to loose ends, and confusion is the result in almost every case. There are some among the Baptists, also among the Methodists, that are with us to some extent, and treat us kindly. They have an ear to hear. We do not wish to be treated better than they treat us at their homes.

As a people, we are inclined to say much about bigotry and sectarianism; but I think we need not go away from home to find it, for it stands out very prominent among us in many cases; and I am of the opinion, brethren, if we would preach what we believe openly, with sincerity, and let others alone entirely, so far as their peculiar tenets are concerned, it would result in more good than it does to browbeat in a harsh manner, or get a spirit of contention into meetings. It is not to be supposed that any one is to see everything as I do; neither do I believe that every one that does not believe as I do will be lost.

I have been astonished to hear from the desk, that a man must believe and keep the seventh day, or be lost; or believe in the non-immortality of the soul and destruction of the wicked, also the unconsciousness of the dead, or be lost. When preachers get to that, they are beyond me. I cannot go with them, and that is not all; I cannot think that God ever called them to preach any such thing; and I am sure there is no good arising from it. I am a full believer in the non-immortality of the soul. I believe Christ is the only medium through which we get eternal life, and that will be given at the coming of Jesus. I cannot see it in any other light at the present time, with the Bible in hand. All the testimony I can get from it goes to prove to me our only hope is in the coming of Christ. If this is so, there can be no consciousness between death and the resurrection. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept."—1 Cor. 15: 19-20. We are satisfied that our position is right; yet we do not wish to send others to hell, if they do not see in all points as we do; for I think there are good christians who take the opposite view. Let us be honest in all things. I can catch more bees with honey than I can with vinegar.

I am still looking for Jesus soon to come. We need much of the good Spirit, in order that we may be ready to meet the Lord when he comes. We are glad to find the brethren trying to live here in Warren. May God bless the little church here. My dear brethren, "keep the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace."

A word to my preaching brethren. Come to Vermont and help us. If you do not know where to come, write to me, and I will make appointments for you. There are many warm hearts here, and a large field. Come, filled with the Spirit of love, and God will bless you. Much love to the saints. Your Bro. in Christ, J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Warren, Vt., Jan. 7th, 1870.

From Bro. A. D. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—Many have been the invitations given for all preaching brethren to write for "our paper," the Crisis; and it has been asserted that if a man can preach, he can write. We think this is not always the case. A person may write a very good article for a paper, without any grace in his heart; but he cannot preach a good sermon without the aid of the Holy Spirit. I presume that many refrain from writing because they do not understand grammar; others because they are not good spellers; but I think the greatest reason is, they are afraid they cannot write as good an article as some others.

When I was first converted, I often thought if I could talk in meeting as well as such a one, I would willingly bear my cross. Says the old enemy, If you arise in this meeting, you will only make a fool of yourself. You had better keep still, and not expose your ignorance. In this way he manages to cheat us out of that blessing which God designs to bestow upon all that fear him, and obey him in all things. Now, dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, I made up my mind at the commencement of this year to obey the Master in all things, and leave the results with him. Would it not be well for us all to come to this conclusion. Let us lay aside the fear of man, get rid of this tormenting spirit which says, What will such-a-one think? Let us buckle on the whole armor of God, lay hold of eternal life with a firm grasp, act, talk and speak in earnest. Let the world know that we believe what we preach. Come, let us rally around the standard of truth, take the sword of the Spirit, fight like men who expect nothing but a free and full salvation, and in the kingdom of God an immortal life. O how blessed to think of eternal life, where all tears will be ended, all sorrows gone; where the ransomed of the Lord shall come with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. Lord, help us to be faithful. A. D. FLAGG.

Millville, Mass., Jan. 5th, 1870.

From Bro. H. K. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just closed a series of meetings in No. Canton, Ct., which continued sixteen days, including two Sundays. I trust a good number of new converts were converted from sin; beside a good number of backsliders, who were induced to start anew in the service of God, making in all perhaps sixteen to twenty who were blest during the meetings, some of whom were baptized the last day of the meeting. It was the best meeting I think I have seen since coming from St. Louis. The meetings were well attended. I received very kind attention, not only from those of our faith, but from the Methodists and others professing godliness.

I have now commenced meetings at 24th St. church, New York, with a view of holding protracted meetings in concert with resident preaching brethren, for a revival of the work here. I believe with all my heart, that our efforts in this trying hour of peril should be to persuade men and women to heed the last calls of mercy which are being made.

I expect soon to hold a series of meetings in the new Advent Christian chapel, just built in the eastern part of Savoy, Mass. There are two churches in Savoy; one worshiping in the northwestern part of the town, in a neat and commodious chapel, refitted up some three or four years since; and the other has recently built a chapel in the eastern part, making the places of worship some five or seven miles apart. I never enjoyed so much faith of a speedy deliverance in the coming of our King and Savior, as now.

H. K. FLAGG.

New York, Jan. 11th, 1870.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear ones in Jesus, greeting. Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied unto you, and blessings from God rest upon you. May we soon meet in that better world, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest. Jesus, come quickly, and gather the weary pilgrims. We are truly nearing home. I feel it. The city almost heaves in sight. The pearly gates I almost behold. The pure, gushing fount I can almost see. The sweet fields of living green, the glory-gilt mountains, the heavenly harpings, I can almost realize. O listen! catch each strain as it is wafted far o'er the land. O hear that sweet, sweet music! how transporting! how cheering! How it bears our sinking spirits up. Hear the angel bands, while they chant sweet strains of redeeming love,—"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain." He's coming, coming soon, I know; coming to gather all his dear ones home. O to be with them. I long to be there. Glory, glory be to Jesus. "O hail, happy day!"

Dear ones, let us take fresh courage, and soon we will sing, "Glory to God, all our trials are o'er." May this be the happy lot of both reader and writer. Pray for me, that I fail not of an abundant entrance into the kingdom at last.

To Sister Emily Sanderson I would say, as you requested me, that I received the dollar sent by you as a Christmas present, and God only knows how much I thank you for it. God bless you eternally. I also received a dollar from some one, saying, "If you get this safely, please say so through the Crisis." God bless the dear one. It has been a great help to me. May you all be abundantly rewarded for all you have done for me. The Lord has promised to be with me to the end. Though the furnace fires may be very warm, yet he will never suffer them to burn up anything but the dross; and all the dross I want burnt up, and his blessed image to be reflected in me. The Lord has done great things for me; therefore in the shadow of his wings will I hide until his indignation be overpast. He will not suffer me to bear only what is for my best good. I am in the hands of an all-wise God, and he doeth all things well. Dear ones, write often; for your letters are like cold water to a thirsty soul. Pray for me. Yours in the hope of soon seeing Jesus, and being made like him, THERA B. WEAVER.

No. Dana, Mass., Jan. 1st, 1870.

From Bro. M. Batchelor, to the Conference in Chelsea.

Dear brethren, assembled in holy convocation at Chelsea, grace be with you. Through mercy, I am able to write these few lines to you. I have been near the gates of death. On the 23d and 30th of Dec., I had each time so much pain that my life hung in great doubt. But all was well. In the last named poor turn, I felt one more turn of the wheel would crush me. I said, Wilt thou pursue thy worm to death? Then a flood of heavenly joy filled my whole being with tears of joy. I shouted, Glory, alleluia, to the surprise of all around me. I felt I got the victory that moment. I have had no return of the pain since to any amount, but it left me very weak. I feel I shall yet testify for Jesus. My work is not done. I can not be with you. It is not prudent for me.

Dear brethren, strike for purity in the ministry and purity in the church. Make the Lord's soon coming appear a fact. I have a host I want to say, but I feel I am too weak to say it. The sensation goes all over me. Dear Brn., pray for me. God bless, direct, and make you a blessing to Chelsea, is the prayer of your brother waiting for the Lord.

M. BATCHELOR.

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 6th, 1870.

BRO. M. D. JOHNSON, Glenmore, N. Y., writes, Dec. 28th, 1870:—"Your paper has been a great benefit to me by way of instruction. It has learned me how to live to enjoy good health, and with this great blessing I can more earnestly seek for the blessings of eternal life. Your two-meal system I have tried for about one year, and derived a great benefit in the improvement of my health. I can more clearly comprehend the truth, and I am determined to walk in its glorious light, until I find that rest that is for the weary, and eternal life in the coming kingdom."

LEARNING IN THE PULPIT.—Some of the Rev. Mr. Romaine's congregation, thinking his style of preaching too common and plain, requested him to exhibit a little more learning in the pulpit; accordingly, the next opportunity, he read his text in Hebrew. "Now," said he, "I suppose scarcely one in this congregation understands that." He then read it in Greek, and added, "There may be one or two that understand me now. I will next read it in Latin." He did so, and said, "Possibly a few more may comprehend me, but the number is still very limited." He last of all repeated the text in English. "There," he continued, "now you all understand it; which do you think is best? I hope always so to preach as that the most ignorant person in the congregation may understand me."

PRAY AND WAIT.—While Father Hyacinthe was in this country, a friend, alluding to the peculiarity of his present status, asked him,—"Under these circumstances, what are you going to do?" His reply was, "I am going to pray and to wait." It would be difficult to conceive a more beautiful or a more evangelical answer, or a state of mind more fitting, under peculiar exigencies. These two things,—to pray and to wait,—seem to embrace our whole duty as intelligent and dependent beings, whose wisdom and help come only from God. And we thank Father Hyacinthe for so valuable an apothegem, so concisely expressed and so full of truth.—News.

WHEN I see a young convert with his cigar, the image of the dear old mother in Israel comes to mind—"Religion which begins in smoke commonly ends in smoke;" and my imagination anticipates a year or two, and I see this smoking convert on the mournful catalogue of apostates cast out as rubbish in the gloomy lumber-room of the church.

Obituaries.

DUDLEY. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Springfield, Iowa, Feb. 19th, 1869, of consumption, Sr. Sophona Dudley, wife of Wm. G. Dudley, and daughter of Bro. John and Lucretia Sturdevant, aged thirty years.

She embraced the blessed hope, and was baptized by the writer at Floyd, Iowa, March 22nd, 1868. She remained faithful until death. Sermon by Elder King (Disciple), from 1 Cor. 15: 22, 23. Her hope in the resurrection was faithfully presented on the occasion. PETER S. W. DEYO.

STURDEVANT. Died, at Strawberry Point, Iowa, Dec. 16th, 1869, Alva Fletcher, only child of Fletcher F. and Laura Jane Sturdevant, aged three months and twenty-six days.

Also, fell asleep in Jesus, at Strawberry Point, Iowa, Jan. 4th, 1870, of consumption, Sister Laura Jane, wife of Fletcher F. Sturdevant, aged twenty-two years and nine months.

Jennie Clark, which was her maiden name, embraced the blessed hope two years ago this month, and received baptism at my hands. She was a delegate to our first State campmeeting, where she gave her testimony for the Lord. The children in the Pilgrim tent will well remember her. From the first, she was decided for the Lord, and faithful to her calling. Funeral sermon by the writer, founded on Job 19: 25, 26. P. S. W. DEYO.

MARIGOLD. Died, in the blessed hope of immortality, in Fernandina, Fla., Bro. William Marigold, formerly of Waterbury, Ct., aged forty-six years.

This heavy affliction came unexpectedly to a happy family. Bro. Marigold was an old pioneer. His life was spent in the support of the cause, and his house (in Waterbury, Ct.), was ever the pilgrim's home; and his kind-hearted and pious wife and dear children are left among strangers in a strange land, to mourn his loss. Our brother sleeps in Jesus. He was conscious to the last, and sung, "Oh, to grace how great a debtor."

J. E. CLARK.

BURCH. Died, in Providence, R. I., Wednesday, Jan. 5th, of scarlet fever, Byron Burch, aged twelve years.

May the grace of God sustain the parents in their hour of deep affliction. Services conducted by F. H. Barbank.

BEBBLER. Died, in Philadelphia, Dec. 16th, Winfield S. Bebbler, aged two years.

Bro. and Sr. Bebbler are sustained by the promises of the Lord, and hence do not mourn the loss of their little one despairingly. Services by F. H. Burbank.

RICE. Died, at Northfield, Minn., Dec. 24, 1869, Lawrence Herbert, youngest child of Sylvester and Elizabeth Rice, aged three months and eight days.

O how we loved him! Sadly we laid him away in the village churchyard, beside the snow-covered mounds of his two little sisters. Soon, he who blessed the little ones will come to awaken him from his peaceful sleep.

ELIZABETH J. S. RICE.

HOPKINS. Died, of scarlet fever and throat ail, Nov. 1st, 1869, at Foster, R. I., Eddie, youngest son of Elder H. C. and Amy Hopkins, in the tenth year of his age.

Sermon by Elder Jonathan Eldridge.

M. E. HOPKINS.

Married.

In Boston, Mass., Jan. 1st, 1870, by Elder H. L. Hastings, JOHN TAYLOR and Miss LAURA A. SMITH.

In Lockport, N. Y., Dec. 23d, by Elder E. Owen, Mr. JOHN BABCOCK, of Olcott, N. Y., and Miss MARTHA PENCILLE, of L.

DROWNED, in Lockport, N. Y., Dec. 26th, Willie Pencille, aged six years. Such is life. A wedding and a funeral.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

ROME, Jan. 8. At the session of the Council to-day, notice was given of the nomination of Cardinal Bizarr, as President of the Committee on Religious Orders. The Committee on Dogmas has commenced its sittings.

Several ultra Roman Fathers have signed their names to a petition to the Pope, praying His Holiness to present the Council a reason for declaring the dogma of infallibility. It is evidently their design to force the Holy Father into this precipitate policy, as they are doubtful of obtaining a sufficient number of adhesions to their party unless he publicly commits himself in favor of the dogma. The reports that the Pope will allow no discussion of the question in the Council unless he is sure of the result, is confirmed. He receives such petitions as the above, but simply as expressions of homage to the Holy See.

The Memorial Diplomatique asserts that a compromise has been arranged on the question of the infallibility of the Pope. Infallibility will be affirmed, but dissent from the article will be indulged.

A quarrel has arisen between Prince Pierre Bonaparte and the writers of the Marseillaise in consequence of a bitter and slanderous attack made in that paper on the Prince. The latter has sent a note to Henri Rochefort, editor of the Marseillaise, closing with these words: "I reside at 59 Rue Danteuil, and I promise you that if you present yourself you will not be told that I am out." The affair is extensively commented on by the press.

PARIS, Jan. 10. This afternoon, M. M. Fonvielle and Victor Noir, of the editorial staff of the Marseillaise (Rochefort's journal,) proceeded to the residence of Pierre Bonaparte, as seconds in the contemplated duel between the Prince and Pascal Grousset, an editor of that journal. They had an interview with the Prince, during which an altercation took place. The Prince became enraged and seizing a revolver, fired twice upon his visitors. One of the shots took effect in the body of Noir, killing him instantly. The tragedy causes great excitement in the city. Prince Bonaparte has delivered himself up to the authorities.

PARIS, Jan. 11. The city is greatly excited over the tragedy which occurred yesterday. Prince Bonaparte's version of the affair is furnished to the journals to-day by Paul Cassagnac. He says the Prince made the following statement to him on his honor: "M. Fonvielle and M. Victor Noir came to my residence with a menacing air, with their hands in their pockets, and presented a letter from M. Pascal Grousset. I said, 'It is Rochefort, and not his creatures I seek.' 'Read the letter,' replied Noir. I had my hand on a pistol in my pocket. 'Are you responsible for it?' I asked. At this I received a slap in the face from Noir, when I drew my revolver and fired at him. Fonville crouched behind a chair, and, from the protection it afforded, aimed his revolver at me, but he could not get it to go off. I fired at him while he was in that position, when he ran out of the room. He stopped in the next room and again turned his pistol toward me. I fired at him again and he fled."

The Journal Official of this morning contains a decree convoking the Chambers, for the purpose of bringing an action before the High Court of Justice to decide upon the charge of homicide against Prince Bonaparte. The Prince belonging to the Emperor's family, the examination must be held before this Court.

PARIS, Jan. 11. The office of the Marseillaise, Henri Rochefort's new paper, has just been seized by order of the Government.

At the sitting of the Corps Legislatif to-day, M. Guyot Montpayroux proposed that members of the Imperial family be rendered amenable to law. He said he had no intention of creating trouble; he wished simply to do away with unlawful exceptions.

M. Henri Rochefort referred in bitter terms to the murder of Victor Noir. He said Noir was one of the people, and the people should judge his murderer, who, though cousin to the Emperor, must not be allowed to escape.

M. Ollivier, in his reply, promised that they should have justice. In the course of his speech he used these words: "We are justice, law and moderation; if you force us, we will be power."

A communication from the Procureur Imperial was laid before the Chamber, demanding the arraignment of Deputy Henri Rochefort for outrage against the Emperor and for exciting disorder and violence. The demand was referred to a committee.

It is reported that M. Ollivier, with the approval of the Emperor, has issued orders permitting the free return to France of Ledru Rollin and others in the same position.

PARIS, Jan. 17. The Marseillaise to-day publishes the following despatch from Madrid: "A public meeting of twenty thousand Republicans, held in Madrid, by a unanimous vote send congratulations to the Republicans of Paris, and to Deputy Rochefort, the devoted champion of the Democracy."

In the Corps Legislatif to-day, a debate on the arraignment of Deputy Henri Rochefort was opened. From the beginning of the sitting, the Chamber was crowded with spectators, and all the Deputies were present. M. Rochefort occupied his usual seat, and all the members of the Cabinet were present on the Ministerial bench. M. Estancelin opened the discussion with a proposition made on the part of the Left Centre. He said that they felt confident of the strength of the Ministry, and would advise that the prosecution against the offending Deputy be abandoned.

M. Ollivier replied that the Government could not accept this proposal. He demanded a vote of the Chambers on the question at issue; otherwise Ministers would not continue in office. This declaration was received with applause from all parts of the hall.

M. Rochefort made a violent speech. He declared that the Ministry were determined to get rid of him as a Deputy—not being able otherwise to destroy him.

M. Rochefort was frequently interrupted by protestations from members.

A crowd is collecting in the hall of the Corps Legislatif. A large police force is on hand. The debate is still going on. (3 P. M.)

5.30 P. M. The police prevent the people from crowding around the Legislatif Chambers. The public are not permitted to cross Pont de la Concorde, which leads directly to that point.

6 o'clock P. M. The debate in the Chamber is closed, and the vote has just been taken. The Chamber has decided to grant the demand of the Government for the arraignment of Rochefort by an overwhelming majority. The vote stood 226 for, and 34 against prosecution.

As soon as the vote was announced, Deputy Gambetta rose and protested against this sudden termination of the debate, which he charged was brought about to prevent the proper consideration of so grave a question.

The Chamber then adjourned.

When the news of the result was received by the crowds waiting outside, a great demonstration was made in favor of Rochefort in the Place de la Concorde.

6.30 P. M. Another popular manifestation of sympathy for Rochefort is reported on the Boulevard Montmartre.

8. P. M. Crowds are still collected in the streets, shouting for Rochefort.

HALF A MILLION DEATHS FROM FAMINE.—The Bombay (India) Gazette, a well-informed journal, estimates the deaths from want of food in all Rajpootana at not fewer than half a million; and besides, pestilence has, as usual, followed famine. For the last two months the people have been cut down by a most persistent fever and murrain, or swelling of the limbs and face, caused by living on grass seed. The people have lost heart, and the mortality is saddening. In some villages, from ten to twelve per cent. of the inhabitants died during the month of October alone.—Boston Journal.

☞ $9,000,000,000 (nine thousand million) is Mr. Wells's estimate of the cost of the war.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 17. The telegraphic strike is at last ended. More than half of the men have returned and the office is fully manned.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 17. The water in the Scioto River is higher than it has been before in twenty years. Great damage has been done. No trains have reached this city from Cincinnati to-day on account of bridges having been swept away.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 17. A terrible tornado visited Cave City Station, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, early this morning, which caused great destruction of life and property. Seven or eight persons were instantly killed, including Mr. Tankman and his family, consisting of his wife and two children, and about eighteen persons were more or less injured. Quite a large number of buildings were blown down and timber scattered in all directions.

Religious Items.

☞ A correspondent of the Boston Transcript asks a serious question." It is this: Can any one tell why the soul, which certainly is the individual, that me or I, is called it or she by every one?

☞ It is now settled that there shall be a conference of all the branches of the Evangelical Alliance in Christendom, at New York, in the autumn of 1870. Large delegations of eminent divines and distinguished christian philanthropists, from Great Britain, France, Holland, Germany, and Switzerland are expected to be present to take part in the deliberations and devotional services of this grand international christian conference. The object of this conference will be two-fold; to manifest and increase christian unity among believers, and to devise measures for extending a common christianity, without regard to denominational distinctions, throughout the whole world.

☞ A permanent Evangelical Council has been formed in New York, for the purpose of securing the unity of churches, and the spread of the gospel.

☞ The protracted meeting which recently took place in London, was the first of the kind in the Church of England since the early part of the seventeenth century. The nightly attendance average forty thousand, and in some instances sixty thousand, made up chiefly of those who were never before inside of a church.

☞ The meetings in Cincinnati under the direction of Rev. Mr. Hammond are going forward day and night, without any abatement of interest. It is estimated that six or seven hundred have been awakened and converted, and many of the churches have been greatly revived and strengthened.

☞ The Queen of Madagascar having renounced paganism and embraced christianity, had the royal idols brought out and committed to the flames in the presence of her subjects. The principal deity, which consisted of two pieces of silk with a small splinter of wood in the middle, was taken from his temple and thrust into a fire, much to the consternation of the people, who, not accepting at once their sovereign's new faith, declared that, being a god, he would not burn—yet the image did burn, and in a short space of time was reduced to ashes; whereupon the foundation of their faith was greatly shaken, and they sent to the Queen to know what they were to worship in the future. The Queen is said to be a zealous convert and anxious that her subjects should become christians. —Journal.

☞ At a recent religious meeting in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, one of the speakers said it was estimated that there were sixty thousand sewing girls in the two cities of New York and Brooklyn, and that a gentleman connected with the trade expressed the opinion that the average earnings of these girls did not exceed three and a half dollars per week, with which they were expected to find bread, lodging, dress and other necessaries of life.

Passing Events.

☞ One of the prominent Mormon Elders recently said, in a Brooklyn meeting of the Saints, that Brigham Young's people were ready to take up arms and shed blood, if necessary, rather than submit to the harsh rule of the Gentiles, or to lose their right to have as many wives as they please.

☞ Earthquakes in 1869 have been respectable in their number, in the vast extent of their range, and in the amount of damage and fright they have caused. They have operated in South America, in Mexico, in the West Indies, in California, in Nevada, in New England, in the Canadian Dominion, in the Sandwich Islands, in Germany, in the Caucasian country, in the Crimea, and in the Philippines.

☞ During an excavation made in Pompeii, a fortnight ago, the objects turned up were a human skeleton almost perfect, a pair of gold ear-rings with pearls, gold bracelet, and five gold coins, 782 silver coins, three silver rings, and 67 pieces of bronze money.

☞ At a late meeting of the San Francisco Academy of Sciences, Professor Bolander called attention to the fact, recently reported to him on reliable authority, of a marked rise in the waters of Lake Mono since the earthquake period of 1868, and added that the rise had been followed by a freshening of the water, and the total disappearance of the dense clouds of flies which formerly deposited their larvæ on the shores of the lake. Professor Whitney stated that there is evidence that Lake Mono was once six hundred feet higher than now. He added that Great Salt Lake and Pyramid Lake have also risen greatly within a year or two.

Notices.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. SMITH.

Protracted Meeting at Springfield, Mass.

I shall commence a protracted meeting Jan. 17th, (Monday evening), to continue every evening through the week, over the Sabbath, and longer if desired, where Bro. Bliss may appoint. I would say to the brethren in that vicinity, Come to the meeting with your hearts all warmed up with the love of God, and labor for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the perfecting of the saints. E. COTTON.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting at North Haverhill, N. H., at the Union meeting-house (D. V.), commencing Jan. 18th (evening), and continue each evening through the week and over Lord's day. Let all come to labor for the salvation of souls. Pray for us. Bro. N. Wheeler is expected to be with us to preach the word.

A. A. HOYT.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will commence a series of meetings, Sunday, Jan. 30th, 1870, and continue as long as the Lord may direct, at the Advent house, Chichester, N. H. Come and hear the word. E. COTTON.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. LANG.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broom Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Feb. 11th, and continue over the Sabbath following. A general invitation is extended to all. By order of the church.

J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. WHITEHEAD, West Meriden, Conn., Box 4.

Will Bro. D. B. Rogers, of Pitts, Penn., please say through the Crisis, or by private letter, if he formerly lived in Stafford, N. Y? I have written one letter, and it was returned. My address is Flint, Genesee Co., Mich. DANIEL SKINNER.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. GEORGE E. LEE, Brimfield, Mass.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. ALBERT LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

John G. Hook............every evening this week, and over Sunday, January 23d.

BOSTON, SOUTH END, (Minot Hall), corner of Washington and Springfield Streets.)

Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.

Geo. A. Streeter..............................Sunday, Jan. 23d
T. M. Preble..................................Sabbath, Jan. 30th
J. S. White....................................Sunday, Feb. 6th

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.

J. S. White....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
B. Finney.......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
A. Simpson.....................................Sunday, Feb. 13th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)

E. Burnham.....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
H. Munger.......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
A. Simpson.....................................Sunday, Feb. 6th

CHARLESTOWN.

Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 33 Main Street), every Lord's day.

Rufus Wendell..................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
J. S. White.....................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
S. W. Thurber....Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th

Holden, Mass....................................Sunday, Feb. 13th
J. S. WHITE.

Lynn, Mass......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
M. BATCHELOR.

Bridgewater, Vt................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Dinsmore Hill..................evenings, Jan. 24th and 26th
South Vershire, Vt..............evenings, Jan. 27th and 28th
West Fairlee, Vt...............evening and Sabbath, Jan. 29th and 30th.
North Springfield, Vt........Sabbath, Feb. 6th and 13th
H. F. CARPENTER.

West Abington, Mass.........................Sunday, Jan. 23d
ENOCH MORRILL.

New Bedford, Mass...........................Sunday, Jan. 23d
L. BOUTELL.

Abington, Mass.................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
CHARLES E. BARNES.

Lowell, Mass....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

East Rochester, N. H.........................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Haverhill, Mass.................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H.............................evening, Feb. 3d
Concord, N. H., (at the Bethel)..........evening, Feb. 4th
Lake Village, N. H...........................Sunday, Feb. 6th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)............evening, Feb. 9th and over the following Sabbath.
WM. C. STEWART.

Seabrook, N. H................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
N. M. DAVIS.

Lee, N. H., (Union House)...................Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. J. GLOVER.

West Rumney, N. H., (Plain school-house), Sabbath, Jan. 23d.
Piermont Village, N. H., (Town House) Sab., Feb. 6th
C. W. NELSON.

Newfield, Ct.....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Lovely Street, Ct..............................Sunday, Jan. 30th
Westfield..Sunday, Feb. 6th
WM. J. RIPLEY.

Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house), Sun., Jan. 23d
D. W. DAVIS.

Nashua, N. H., (55 Vine Street)...........Sunday, Jan. 23d
JOHN H. DADMUN.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and Feb. 6th.
Lake Village, N. H............................Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H.................Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
SIMEON ROBY.

Lock's Corner, N. H..........................Sunday, Jan. 23d
W. C. THURMAN.

South Sutton, N. H............................Sunday, Jan. 23d
C. H. FLETCHER.

South Casco, Me...............................evening, Jan. 28th
Stowe, Mass., (as Bro. Geo. Howard may arrange), Jan. 29th and 30th.
East Stoneham, Mass........................evening, Feb. 1st
North Northway, Me...........................Feb. 2d and 3d
South Livermore, Me..........................Feb. 4th to 6th
Lewiston, Me.....................................Feb. 7th and 8th
Belgrade Depot, Me............................Feb. 9th
South Sangerville..............................Feb. 11th to 13th
South Atkinson..................................Feb. 14th to 15th
Emerson's Mills.................................Feb. 16th
Machiasport.........Feb. 20th, and onward indefinitely.
I. K. LOMBARD.

West Poland, (Free Chapel).................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Mechanic Falls..................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Bowdoin, Me., (Adams' school-house), Sun., Jan. 23d
Bowdoin, Me......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
Brunswick, Me., (Ham's school-house), eve., Feb. 5th
Bath, Me...Sunday, Feb. 6th
Reed meeting-house...........................Sunday, Feb. 13th
Sabbattusville...................................Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. S. MITCHELL.

Plymouth, Vt.....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Rawsonville, Vt..................................Sunday, Feb. 6th
Z. T. WOOD.

Bristol, Ct...Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. H. DICKINSON.

Guildford, Ct.....................................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
New Haven, Ct...................................Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Bridgeport, Ct....................................Sabbath, Feb. 13th
G. L. TEEPLE.

On account of sickness in my family, my appointments are changed as follows:—

West Glocester, R. I..........................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Webster, Mass....................................Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Abington, Ct......................................Sabbath, Feb. 6th
South Windsor, Ct..............................Sabbath, Feb. 13th
C. H. SWEET.

Hartford, Conn...................Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
E. McCULLOCK.

Biddeford, Me....................................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Lewiston, Me.....................................Sabbath, Jan. 30th
A. MUSSEY TRIPP.

Putnam, Conn.......................Jan. 28th, 29th and 30th
Clarksville, R. I.................................Monday, Jan. 31st
Pascoag..Tuesday, Feb. 1st
North Scituate...................................Wednesday, Feb. 2nd
Rockland...Thursday, Jan. 3d
A. DURFEE.

Woodstock Valley, Ct.........................Sunday, Jan. 23d
R. K. STARK.

North Somers, Ct...............................Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. MORSE.

Holden, Me., (Clewley Chapel)..............Sunday, Jan. 23d
Bradley, Me.......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

East Haddam, Ct................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
L. B. POTTER.

Southington, Ct..................................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
B. HITCHCOCK.

New Millford......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. D. FLAGG.

Plymouth, Mass..................................Monday, Jan. 24th and through the week.
Plymouth, Mass..................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
JOHN COUCH.

Chichester, N. H., (Pine Ground), evening, Jan. 22d, and Sunday, Jan. 23d, and so on once in two weeks until further notice. N. B. McMURPHY.

Porter, Me..Sunday, Jan. 23d
Parsonsfield, Me., (meeting-house), Tuesday evening, Jan. 25th.
T. E. LANG, JR.

Orrington, Me., (Chapel).....................Sunday, Jan. 23d
North Hermon...................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
Holden, (at Chapel)............................Sunday, Feb. 6th
GEO. W. BROWN.

Nottingham (baptism).........................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Wakefield, Mass.................................Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Manchester, N. H...............................Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. MOONEY.

Vernon, Vt..Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. HIGGINS.

Wakefield, (Spinney meeting-house), Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Porter, Me...Sabbath, Jan. 30th
East Canaan......................................Sabbath, Feb. 6th
If these conflict, please write me.
D. F. LEAVITT.

Bowdoin..Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Brunswick, (yellow school-house), Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. D. REED.

Springfield, Mass................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
East Savoy, Mass., (at the new Chapel just built), Sunday, Jan. 30th, to commence a series of protracted meetings.
H. K. FLAGG.

Melvin Village, N. H...........................Sunday, Jan. 30th
T. W. PIPER.

Keene, N. H.....................Sundays, Jan. 23d and 30th
Stowe, Mass......................................Sunday, March 6th
A. SIMPSON.

Stafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house), Sun., Jan. 23d
Seabrook, N. H.................................evening, Jan. 26th and over the following Sunday. J. PINKHAM.

Moultonborough, N. H., (Red Hill), Saturday evening, Jan. 22d, and over Sunday, the 23d. Ordination expected. T. W. PIPER, J. G. SMITH, L. ALLEN.

Elliot, Me..Sunday, Jan. 30th
F. H. BURBANK.

Prospect, Ct......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
S. WOODBURY.

Strafford, N. H., (Roberts' school-house) Sun., Jan. 30th
J. G. SMITH.

Hampton, N. H..................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
L. E. SAVILRAGE.

Collinston, N. Y......................Jan. 22nd and 23d
Blossing Valley, Pa., (as friends may arrange), Jan. 26th, and over Sunday.
Little Cooly..........................Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Edinboro.................................Feb. 4th and over two Sundays
Crampton's Corners, (four miles from Edinboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sharps' Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 16th and 18th.
Cabasta....................................Feb. 19th and 20th
O. P. SWEET.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House).....Sunday, the 23d
JOHN H. EVANS.

Commence a series of meetings at Braintree, Vt., (where Elder Sampson may appoint), Jan. 19th, and continue through the week and over the following Sabbath.

East Canaan, N. H., (at the Chapel), commencing Jan. 27th, and continue over the following Sabbath.
J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Collinsville, Ct..................................Sabbath, Jan. 23d
Scitico, Ct..Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Morris, Ct..Sabbath, Feb. 6th
G. L. WHITE.

North Canton, Ct.........evenings, Jan. 19th, 20th and 21st
Pleasant Valley, Ct.............................Sunday, Jan. 23d
West Winsted....................................Sunday evening, Jan. 23d
Wolcottville.......................................evening, Jan. 25th
Campville..evening, Jan. 26th
Morris...evening, Jan. 27th
New Preston......................................evening, Jan. 28th
New York City, (Cooper Institute), Sunday, Jan. 30th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Webster, Mass., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, Jan. 26th and 27th.
Worcester, Mass..........................Friday evening, Jan. 28th
Stoneham, Mass..........................Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Lynn, Mass.................................Tuesday evening, Feb. 1st
Vernon, Vt.................................Thursday, Feb. 3d
and over the following Sabbath. H. MUNGER.

Lafayette, R. I....................Monday evening, Jan. 31st
JOSEPH D. BROWN.

Fremont Center, N. Y., Jan. 20th, and over the Sabbath.
Daneville, N. Y.................................Jan. 24th to 26th
Rogersville, N. Y..........Jan. 27th and over the Sabbath
Cohocton, N. Y...............Feb. 4th, and over the Sabbath
Great Bend, Pa., (Dulk hill)..................Feb. 3th to 10th
J. W. TAYLOR.

Fort Edward, N. Y.............................Sunday, Jan. 23d and onward. E. S. JENNINGS.

SALEM, MASS.

A. P. Moore......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
C. Goodrich......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
C. E. Barnes...........................Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)

H. K. Flagg.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. N. Pile.....................Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

WESTFIELD, MASS.

I. B. Potter.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. A. & M. L. Durand.......................Sunday, Jan. 30th

LAWRENCE, MASS.

Miles Grant.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Miles Grant (in City Hall).....................Sunday, Jan. 30th
F. H. Burbank.....................................Sunday, Feb. 6th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.

P. S. Butler.......................Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th

STONEHAM, MASS.

C. Goodrich.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. P. Moore.......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
A. Simpson..Sunday, Feb. 27th

WORCESTER, MASS.

J. Couch..Sunday, Jan. 23d

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

J. W. Thomas......................................Sabbaths, Jan. 23d

EXETER, N. H.

Albion Ross.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. M. Higgins.....................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
Joseph Harvey.....................................Sunday, Feb. 6th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)

D. M. Leavitt..................Sabbaths, Jan. 23d and 30th
J. Hemenway......................................Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Ross...........................Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)

S. W. Thurber..................Sunday, Jan. 23d, and onward
F. H. Burbank.....................................Sunday, Feb. 27th

PORTLAND, ME.

F. H. Burbank.....................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
A. Ross.........................Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

SQUARE POND, CT.

A. Morse...Sunday, Jan. 23d
B. Hitchcock......................................Sunday, Jan. 30th
P. S. Butler..Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Hiram Munger.....................................Sabbath, Feb. 13th

NEW BRITAIN, CT.

Wm. N. Pile.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Wm. Stuart..Sunday, Jan. 30th
S. C. Hancock.....................................Sunday, Feb. 6th
H. H. Dickinson...................................Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. H. Sweet...Sunday, Feb. 20th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.

G. L. Teeple..Sunday, Jan. 30th
B. Hitchcock.......................................Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple..Sunday, Feb. 27th

ABINGTON, CT.

J. S. Eldredge.....................................Sabbath, Feb. 13th

RICHMOND, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)

J. J. Northup.......................................Sunday, Jan. 23d
Joseph D. Brown..................................Sunday, Jan. 30th

PORTLAND, ME.

Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. Eggleston.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor.

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with N. McCULLOCK, 4 Eagle Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 Markham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hecock.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding. $6.00; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $4.00; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2 50; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.50; postage 24 cts

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $3.50; postage 20 cts Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism--its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 51 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 400 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.

A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures; and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Business.

Letters Received.

D B Rogers, D Skinner, E S Jennings, D T Pratt, E McCulloch, M E Chute, A L Adams, E P Manning, S T Wheelock, C E Greenwood, L W Bragg, M E Dow, N P Stearns, L Reimer, E O Allen, F Belcher, H K Flagg, B Knepper, H Pratt, M E Orr.

Cash received for Books and Tracts.

I. C. Wellcome $108.31, M F Kimball $2.80, D E Bridge $1.00, J Jay $1.00, L O Mattoon $2.00, W E Brown $9.72, T J Tuttle 50c, J Hare 50c, N B Ager 50c, H Rude $1.00, W Shapeley 50c, C W Conolly $1.30, B F Snook $20.00, J Andrews 75c, W S Storms $6.80, W J Ketchum 75c, E Willard 50c, S Roby $7.50, A C Reed $1.00, T G Smart 35c, N C Finton $1.00, G Thompson 95c, A E DeWitt 50c, O Stone 50c, P Martin, M. D., $1.50, J C Shaw $1.00, J A Greenfield $1.35, A M S Bement $1.00, J H Lord 50c, C Wilder $1.30, T Taylor $2.50, E G Staley $1.15, P B Prescott $1.55, G Marsh 35c, E Shuls 50c, D H Brown $1.00, W F Carpenter $3.20, C DeLong $1.00, R Price 80c, J W Church 50c, J Hill $2.00, A C Taylor $1.00, J W Bentley $4.00, C W Corson 40c, J Dick 87c, R Bertenshaw 60c, H Tucker $4.15, L A Wheeler $1.00, J M Baker $1.60, C Place 70c.

Books and Tracts Sent.

By Mail—E S Ticknor, T W Brooks, M A Davis, E Peterson, H Rude, N B Ager, J Hare, E H Hatch, Wm Shapley, T J Tuttle, C M Conolly, W S Storms, D D Chaffee, J Hill, J Andrews, B Williams, N C Fenton, Geo Thompson, S G Smart, A C Reed, A E DeWitt, J C Shaw, W A Caplinger, J V Himes, D D Reed, D D Tennant, W A Thomas, E G Stevens, J A Greenfield, M Haskell, Wm Ashdown, C Wilder, Eld. J H Lord, E A Prescott, J V Himes, F L Dunton, W J Ketchum, Mrs J Thorp, M F Kimball, C DeLong, W H Reed, J H Brown, E Shuls, E V Carr, P B Prescott, E G Staley, T Taylor, A C Taylor, J Hill, J W Church, H W Williams, F B Jones, R Price, T W Bentley, S Bodin Olive Place, T Wheeler, J M Baker, Laura A Wheeler, H Tucker, R C Gray, S Smith, R Bertenshaw, J Dick, C W Carson, A M Bancroft, B Knepper, H L Woodard, C C Dow, Mrs A Cary, G Marsh.

By Express—I C Wellcome, S Roby, Smith & Carpenter.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, post-paid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible. With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 6c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 30c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.26; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERYBODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 234. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth.....................75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers..................60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers......................50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, double o'ell, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 20 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

IN MEMORIAM.

Beloved Gilbert! sweetly rest,
No more by pain or woe distrest,
Though short thy course, thy work is done,
Fulfilled his will—the Eternal One.
Then shall we murmur or complain
As others, who no hope maintain?
Shall we, whose tears so freely flow,
Unyielding ask, why was it so?
The loss to parents, brothers dear,
Can not be told; nor doth appear
To all. Who knew his daily life,
With deeds of love and kindness rife,
Who felt the sunshine of his smile
On old and young alike the while;
Who marked his "conversation chaste,
Coupled with fear," enriched by grace;
His godly mien, his watchful care,
Self to deny, the cross to bear,—
Can best condole with kindred near,
At loss of one they held so dear.
Relentless death! Thy cruel might
Shall cease to be, when He, whose right
It is to reign, shall take the throne,
Claiming the kingdom for his own.
But soon the clarion's note shall sound,
And, echoing the whole earth around,
Shall wake the just from land and sea
To glorious immortality.
Nor we "prevent." By angels led,
"Together with" the risen dead,
We'll soar to meet our coming Lord,
And shout his praise with glad accord.
Thy voice, attuned to praises here,
Shall join with more than mortal cheer;
And for thyself, with ravished sight,
Thine eyes behold him in the light
Of heavenly day, nor night e'er come
To dim the sunlight of that home.

Black Walnut, Va. M. S.

"PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD."

"What shall we Protestants say to these things?" Will the Union and Advertiser give place in its columns for the following reply to Mr. Beecher's inquiry and article upon "prayers for the dead," found in your issue of Oct. 9th? As no one has answered, to my knowledge, and thinking it to be too valuable to pass off in silence, I forward the same with reply:

THE REV. THOS. K. BEECHER, ON PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD.

From his last Friday's Miscellany.

Bernard Colgan, of happy memory, left a son, who, being a priest, will not leave a son. Rev. P. Colgan, of Corning, is this priest-son of Bernard above named; and being on good terms with his bishop, and with Father Brady of this city, and with other clergy from Rochester, Albany and Scranton, he and they held a stately prayer meeting in the Roman Catholic meeting-house at Corning. Being a dutiful son, he and his holy brethren were mindful of Bernard Colgan, the father; they praised his good works of charity, and united in "offering their prayers to the throne of the Most High, that in his mercy he would look favorably on the soul of the departed." "At one o'clock a sumptuous repast was served at the pastoral residence." On the whole it was a pious and pleasant day's work.

What shall we Protestants say of these things? Say? It is never so done in our meeting-houses, and so it seems to us very queer. Any religious rite seems queer to them who are not used to it.

"What shall we Protestants say of these things? Say?" We say that if they had been mindful of Bernard Colgan, the father that was dead, and come a long way to pray for him, and then only offered prayers for the repose of his soul, which they supposed was still alive, they missed their mark. What shall we say of their sumptuous feast? Say? Why, if their prayers had added any comfort to the soul of Bernard Colgan, whether in "limbo" or at the right hand of God, where there is fulness of joy and pleasures forevermore, it was meat for them to have a "sumptuous repast," which ever way you spell it.

Mr. Beecher says:

It seems queer to pray in Latin. It seems queer to select one happy soul out of millions, and observe 'a month's mind' for him in particular.

It does seem queer to pray in Latin when people do not understand it; and as St. Paul says—"How shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?" Further, he considers that five words in a voice that can be understood are better than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. (1 Cor. 14, 15, 19.) It does seem queer to select one happy soul out of millions, and observe "a month's mind" for him in particular, when the unhappy ones (if such there be) might need our prayers most. Queer, that while they praised the good works of Bernard Colgan, the father, that was dead, that they should unite in offering prayers to the throne of the Most High for "a happy soul" that had never died and needed no prayers.

Again says Mr. Beecher:

In Paul's time they used to baptize the living for the dead, and had great comfort in this proxy baptism. If salvation requires that some BODY be buried with Christ in baptism, and it is certain that no body of flesh and blood, however baptized, can inherit the kingdom of heaven, it may be well, therefore, to keep baptizing a body of somebody, hoping that each baptism will count one on the tally of salvation. It can do no harm, at any rate.

"What shall we Protestants say to these things? Say?" It is still comforting to baptize the living to show our faith in the resurrection of the dead, just as Abel showed his faith in the suffering of Christ by his proxy lamb. Does salvation require that some BODY be buried with Christ in baptism? Just as much as the former dispensation required the shedding of blood. Both are typical.

"Yet it is certain that nobody of flesh and blood, however baptized, shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." Is it so? Is not this vile body to be changed and fashioned like Christ's glorious body? How can Christ say, "I was hungry and ye fed me; I was athirst and ye gave me drink," to any who had not ministered to the saints? The expression, "flesh and blood cannot enter" it, the kingdom of heaven, can mean no more than the expression just before concerning the natural in contrast with the spiritual. That was not first which was spiritual, but that which was natural, afterward that which is spiritual. This spiritual, referring to Christ, was just as much flesh and bones as was the natural Adam; and just as much the one that John baptized, as the one that had lain in Joseph's tomb; and though the natural man may fail of the kingdom of heaven, the spiritual man—the body quickened by the spirit—those that have been planted in the likeness of his death, shall also be in the likeness of his resurrection. They shall inherit the kingdom. His resurrection brought him up that was dead. Hear him—"It is I myself; handle me and see; a phantom has not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Paul says, "If Christ be not risen, your faith is vain; . . . then they also that have fallen asleep in Christ have perished." But now is Christ risen and has become the first fruits of them that slept. The harvest must be as literal and tangible as the first fruits. This was the faith of Job. "I shall see God yet in my flesh." So says Isaiah: "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they rise, awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." But, Mr. Beecher, if those individuals that are baptized cannot inherit the kingdom of God, why baptize at all? "It may be well therefore to keep baptizing a body of somebody, hoping that each baptism will count one on the tally of salvation." What shall we Protestants say? What if Mr. Beecher should keep "baptizing the body of somebody" day after day, summer and winter, and the inquiry should be made: Mr. Beecher, what are you doing? I am baptizing. Do you think that any of those individuals you are baptizing will inherit the kingdom? No; I am baptizing for the dead. But, says Paul, why baptize for the resurrection of the dead, if the dead rise not at all? "It may count one somehow." "It can do no harm at any rate." What saith the Scripture? "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved." But do you not understand why they baptize for the dead? Says Mr. Beecher:

But that baptism for the dead is a hard nut. Paul did not crack it, and we cannot. Yet mark! Paul did not rebuke it, neither will we rebuke "prayers for the dead," even though they be Latin prayers, and offered by priests and a bishop in a Roman Catholic church, for the repose and safety of Bernard Colgan. Perhaps they may have done some good. Who knows? They were well meant. Priest Colgan is a dutiful son. His father gave him an education and a good setting out in the world. What harm in the son's trying to get his father well along the road of mystery and life?

Baptism for the dead a "hard nut." So was that proxy lamb of Abel's to Cain. He could not crack it, so he cracked Abel's head. His offering was typical. So is baptism. One pointed to the death of Christ: the other to the resurrection of the dead.

"Paul did not crack it." If they were baptizing, as the Jews were offering their sacrifices, without understanding its significance, I think he did crack it about their ears when he exclaims, "Why are they then baptized for the [resurrection of the dead] if the dead rise not at all?" "We cannot crack it." I think it needs only the faith of Abel to make it a beautiful figure of the burial and resurrection of the dead. Col. 2: 12. "Buried with him by baptism wherein ye are also risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God that raised him from the dead." It simply figures forth our faith in the operation or power of God in a literal resurrection of the dead. Paul did not rebuke it. No; he gave a significance to it which we would do well to follow. Else what shall they do who are baptized for the dead if the dead rise not at all? "Neither will we rebuke prayers for the dead." If, as we Protestants believe, there is no probation after death, and as Bernard Colgan, the father, is dead, and, as Solomon says, "the dead know not anything," I see but little encouragement to pray for the dead, though it were "a dutiful son trying to set his father along the road of mystery and life." It savors of heathenism, not of christianity. The Egyptians embalmed their dead that the soul might have a house to return to, or like a bird box upon the house to invite its return. Wives being burnt upon the funeral pile of their dead husbands, infants thrown into the Ganges, killing servants to attend their dead masters, and seeking unto the dead for knowledge as the Spiritualists do, and praying to, or for the dead, belong to other than people enlightened by the Scriptures. It has no precedence or countenance in the Scriptures save in such cases as that of the woman of Endor. Mr. Beecher gives his reasons why we should not rebuke prayers for the dead. Hear him:

Reader, of whatever faith or church, hear our word. We are all of us equally ignorant as to the "after death."

Have the Scriptures given us no light concerning "the after death"? Is it not a sleep? Jesus says, "Our friend Lazasus sleepeth." Is is not a sleep in the dust? "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Or as Job says, "when our rest together is in the dust." Does not the wise man say, "There is no knowledge, nor wisdom, nor device in the grave whither thou goest"? David exclaims, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. But this is not all of "the after death." "After death the judgment." They must be waked. (Dan. 12: 2.) "Many that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Christ says, "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth." Isa. 5: 28. This is to be a special comfort to the righteous. Says David, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise; awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Isa. 26: 19. "All are equally ignorant concerning the after death." Has the Bible no light for us beyond this life? Says Paul, "I would not have you to be ignorant concerning them that sleep" (the after death.) "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, and we who are alive and remain unto his coming shall together with them be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so ever be with the Lord: wherefore comfort one another with these words." Is it true that all of whatever faith are equally ignorant concerning "the after death"? Are not such declarations calculated to weaken our faith, or do they not evince a weakness of faith in the word of God? Let Mr. Beecher's own reasoning answer:

"Like vines that have outgrown their trellises, we reach up our tendrils and sweep the empty air, but find no support."

How sad the picture. Is this the language of the "branches" of God's vine—the bride of the Lamb? Has my father, the husbandman, furnished no trellises for Christ and his branches beyond this life? Are christians to sweep (like vines that have outgrown their trellises) the empty air and find no support? Comes this language from one whose hope is like an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast, or from "soul drifting"?

Is there no lifting up of this dark cloud—is there no silver lining? Listen again. "Here and there many weedy vines twist together, and by their union lift up themselves a foot or two, as christians join in churches and by twining agreements seem to gain proofs as to the unseen world."

Needy vines—twining together—join in churches, lift themselves up, and by twining agreements seem to gain proofs as to the unseen world. Is not this darkness that can be felt?

Has God's vine indeed outgrown its trellises, and must christians join in churches and by twining agreements only seem to gain proofs as to the unseen world? The trellis that God gave Jacob reached quite up to heaven, and so strong that the angels of God could ascend and descend upon it. The trellis that He gave Job in his afflictions reached far beyond "the after death" and he would have its thrilling history bedded in a rock that it might stand forever. Hear him. "I know that my Redeemer liveth and that in the latter day he shall stand upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself and not another. Isaiah climbed upon these promises until in rapturous strains he could say, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they rise." And upon these sacred testimonies which they climbed, we too can reach out our tendrils of affection, and entwine around the sleeping dust of departed innocents and praying mothers, and with them in our arms we can climb up the shadowy vale, till "a little while" when the trump of God shall sound to wake them to beauteous life to die no more. Our vile body will then be changed, and together with them live in that sweet "by-and-by" forever. Mothers live again, children come from the land of the enemy, and still the trellises of God are inviting us onward.

Earth may shake, floods lift up their hands, the sun pale into night, men's hearts fail them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth, yet the branches of God's vine find support. Their tendrils have laid hold on eternal life, and sweep no "empty air." Onward still and the new earth appears, the rosy wilderness blossoms, the fir, the box and the pine appear to beautify our pathway. The young lion and the fatling are grazing in peace, and infant hands fierce tigers lead, and nothing to hurt or molest in all God's holy mountains.—Isaiah 11 and 60. God's kingdom has come; we stop not here. Says John: "I saw a new heaven and a new earth, and I saw that holy city, the New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, adorned as a bride adorned for her husband; and I heard a voice from heaven saying: Behold! the tabernacle of God is with men." We may climb its jasper walls, we may enter its pearly gates, we may run along its crystal river, entwine around the tree of life, climb up the throne, behold the wounded side, and sing "worthy is the Lamb," and God's trellises are onward still.

There, down beside life's fruitful tree,
Amid life's gushing rills,
My ever peaceful home shalt be
Beside fair Zion's hills;
'Mid brightest splendor there to dwell,
'Mid sweets that never cloy,
Redemption's story there to tell,
Oh! what unbounded joy.

"All equally ignorant of 'the after death?'" May we rather say with David, "My hands will I lift up unto thy testimonies, in which I have great delight." The mystery solved. Hear him again:

Trinity vines! who shall rebuke you? Who shall rebuke the pensive, pious and peaceful usages of Christian people as to their departed ones? But we can prove nothing. Priest Colgan cannot prove that his prayers did his father any good, neither can we prove the contrary. Two guessing mortals ought not to strive about their guesses!

Trinity vines? Of course, on trinity trellises. "What kind of trellises are these?" They were unknown until the middle of the second century, and though they were talked up loudly as being superior to God's trellises, they never were brought into use until the Council of Nice, A. D. 325, and then not completed till the Council of Chalcedon, A. D. 451. The vines, however, refused to run or entwine upon them, so the inventors issued a decree in A. D. 533, and made arrangements to cut off or destroy every vine that would not run on this trellis. So some fifty million were destroyed, as we are told.

Now to make these trellises they found what Paul would have called an unknown God, that is, a god without "body or parts," a God everywhere in general and nowhere in particular. They then got a son of this unknown God of "two natures," human and divine, and had those natures united "without change, division, or mixture." This was an article of faith made sacred at the Council of Chalcedon. This was adopted by Protestants, as Gibbon truthfully says, "The doctrine of the two natures still triumphs in the Protestant churches." We find it in the Methodist Episcopal Church on this wise: "Article 1st—There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body or parts, * * and in unity with this God head there are three persons of one substance, power and eternity, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Article 2d—The Son, who is the word of the Father, the very and eternal God, * * took man's nature in the womb of the blessed Virgin, so that two whole and perfect natures were united never to be separated or divided; whereof is one Christ, perfect God and perfect man, or 'very God and very man,' who truly suffered, was crucified, dead and buried, to reconcile his Father unto us." These are the trellises for trinity vines. All were considered heretics that would not adopt them by the Catholics, and none are considered evangelical who do not embrace them by Protestants.

"Trinity vines. We reach up our needy tendrils toward God, the Father, and find no "body or parts," and of course we "sweep the empty air." We strive to lay hold of the Son, but learn that he is the same substance of the Father, and we find no support; we reach out to the "God-man," the two natures; we come like the shepherds to the manger, and here we are told that we clasp divinity and humanity, though without "change, division, or mixture," yet they are united, never to be separated. We need support, we entwine around the babe of Bethlehem, we lift up ourselves upon the man of sorrows, we come to the cross, and here we are gravely told that "As the divinity withdrew, the unsupported humanity sunk!" Alas! alas! The only tangible trellis left us (around which we entwined with the assurance that these two natures never would be separated) split in two, tendrils and leaves all stripped off. "Trinity vines!" "Who shall rebuke you?" With a trellis invisible, intangible, without "body or parts," what could the vines do but outgrow them, and then what, except to "sweep the empty air" and find no support. "Who shall rebuke the pensive, pious and peaceful usages of Christians as to their dear departed ones?" No one!

"Show pity, Lord! oh, Lord, forgive!"

"But," says Mr. Beecher, "we can prove nothing." Certainly not upon trinity trellises, but upon God's trellises we are required to "prove all things," and hold fast that which is good. "Guessing mortals." How can it be otherwise? No trellises at all, and they all outgrown, and split in two besides, what can we do but "sweep the empty air" and only "guess" which way the wind may carry us, or where we shall fall? No wonder men pray for the dead—no wonder they don't know whether it does any good or not—no wonder it is called all guess-work. What could we do better, upon such trellises?

But Mr. Beecher is not the man to despair. Listen again:

"We, too, have a father in the promised land—and not him alone. Names graven on our heart are always read by the Spirit when in every prayer we say—Remember those whom we love, and teach us to deserve their love and to love them better. We are praying for the dead. Our "month's mind" lasts through the years round. We are very rich in that land of the future."

A father in the promised land? And yet all equally ignorant of "the after death." "We are praying for the dead." Why not, if we don't know but it may do them some good? "We are very rich in that land of the future." Rich! And yet like needy vines twine around each other, and lift ourselves up a little, and then only seem to gain proofs of the unseen world! Rich! Yet like vines that have outgrown their trellises, sweep the empty air and find no support? Rich! Yet all ignorant of "the after death?" Rich! Yet all guessing mortals! "A father in the promised land," and yet can prove nothing? And are still praying for the dead? "What shall we Protestants say to these things?" Say? The picture is well drawn—more, it is photographed. It is a life-likeness of Christianity of the nineteenth century. There are exceptions in all churches, but the experience of thousands are told in these brief musings. Mr. Beecher's confession:

"We do not open a meeting-house, nor invite priests and bishops. But were we a lonely and loving priest like father Colgan, we would do just as he has done. Invite in the holy brethren; tell over the virtues of our dear departed; have prayers in Latin; and having relieved our rich and burdened spirit, then from the dead that rests in peace we would turn cheerfully to the living, and make them welcome to the rites of hospitality in the parsonage."

What hinders Mr. Beecher from praying for the dead? Simply because he is not a lonely and loving priest like father Colgan. But, Mr. Beecher, do you not pray for the dead? Yes! "We are praying for the dead," and, but for my family, I would do just as father Colgan has done. "What shall we Protestants say to these things?" Say? "It seems queer." What apology will Mr. Beecher make for such a confession? Hear him:

"Prayers for the dead and good dinners for living, are at least amiable and well intended." H. PRATT.—Rochester Union.

For the World's Crisis.

A SAD SIGHT.

On New Year's day (Jan. 1st, 1870), I saw something that was very painful to see, the like of which I have very seldom seen, and never wish to see again. I was walking on the sidewalk in a crowd, with my little daughter near me, when I noticed quite near us a poor old man, emaciated, feeble, haggard, and whose uncertain step as he staggered along indicated a state of intoxication.

Some two hours later in the day, as we were on our way home, when about a mile from the place where we first met the poor old man, as we drew near to a large stone mansion, we saw him again. He had staggered against the iron fence which surrounded the front yard, and it was with great difficulty that he regained a posture sufficiently erect to enable him to walk. It seemed strange that he had made out to get so far; for one would hardly suppose from his appearance that he could walk a quarter of a mile.

I cannot tell you how pitiful and wretched the poor old man appeared, as he tried to go on, and the last we saw of him he was leaning against a stone post, a picture of hopeless despair.

Old, feeble, poor, friendless, drunk. Truly it was such a sight as one might wish to never see again. But why do I describe it thus to you? It is to warn you one and all to avoid taking the first steps in a career which may end in a condition as miserable as that I have described.

Unless you "pledge perpetual hate, to all that can intoxicate," in the form of alcoholic drinks, and sacredly keep your pledge, you are liable to be drawn into the maelstrom of intemperance, and at last go down into that terrible abyss, the drunkard's grave, where hope and mercy never come.

O, pray that we may all be kept from such a doom. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

SELF-DENIAL.

To deny self is a tender point in human organization. Self is the pet, the darling, of the affections, naturally. Self sits as umpire in the unregenerate heart.

Query: Is it so in the christian's? When we espoused the cause of Christ and the work of salvation, did we deny self entirely, or did we only check selfish desires? Did we crucify the flesh, and hate the things we once loved, and love the things we once hated? Did the carnal mind become spiritual? Did the soarings of imagination give place to sober, patient meditation? Did we step from the ideal world of fancy, and take upon us the burden of christian warfare in actual life? Did we try to curb every wild thought, longing and desire, and feel that our heart was open to the inspection of God? Was the door of your heart barred to every evil? and open to every good influence? Did we seek and pray for entire chastity of heart, and that God should be "all in all" in our affections? Did we break off our sins by righteousness, and our iniquities by turning to God?

If we did this in the commencement of our christian experience, do we now find that God is first in our thoughts, first in every act in life, and first in our affections? When alone with our thoughts and our heart desires, can we honestly say that God is first in each? When for a moment some coveted desire knocks at the door of our heart, does our reason and our affection bid it depart, and confess we will have no joy or pleasure but that born of God? Can we deny self enough to bring each of the natural senses into perfect harmony with, and obedience to, the will of God?—each sight, hearing, taste, touch, smell? Are our eyes sanctified, in that we will not look upon any thing that God would not look upon with allowance? O, how many feet are led into sin and disobedience by this one great desire to see! We like to see fine things, pleasant sights, gay assemblies, fun and amusements of every character, and so deny selfish propensities. Seeing and hearing conjointly lead our feet to the theatre, to the opera, to the ball-room, to the concert-room, and the various scenes of amusement. The heart naturally craves these indulgences; but can we deny self and turn squarely about, forsake the mass, and, perhaps, alone pursue the way to the house of prayer, for the sake of receiving the blessing of obedience? There is a blessing for those who deny self and bear the cross of Christ.

Taste is another of the senses that leads our willing feet into paths of sin. Taste is not wholly a gift of nature, nor wholly the effect of art; it may be more or less cultivated. But we speak of the physical organ of taste, or appetite. How many are there who do not sin through this cause? The sense of tasting, the keenness of appetite, is marked and powerful in human organization; but how sensitive we are if told of it.

I will not enumerate the different ways we sin through this organ, for we have only to look to ourselves to discover some of them, and we cannot be blind to others. The question is, will we deny self in this department? Will we try each day to deny self of some pet sin, that our advancement in divine life may be steadily onward? Will we not try here to prepare—aye, get ready for the appearing and kingdom of Christ? Who will try to deny self most, that God may have the praise? I thank God for the desire in my heart to please him in all things.

Who will commence this new year by practicing self-denial fully, heartily, and determinedly? As you weigh this in your mind, and perhaps hesitate, may God by his Spirit influence you to make a wise and final decision. Christians, you do not wish to become estranged from God and the communion of saints, I know; then practice self-denial. If you would have the peace of God in your heart, it must come through self-denial rather than through self-indulgence. Ask our God to permit you to see yourself as he sees you, and then you will see the need of reform. My daily prayer is that he may carry on the work of reform in my heart and life.

SOPHIA JACKMAN.

For the World's Crisis.

JESUS OUR HOPE AND SONG.

Joyful we'll sing while journeying home,
Waiting for the kingdom to come;
Bearing the cross, united and strong,
Jesus our hope and song.

CHORUS.—Soon he's coming back to earth again,
Crowned as King, with all his saints to reign,
Then life's unending joys ever more
Fill all this wide earth o'er.

Joyful we'll bear our trials severe,
Knowing that deliverance is near;
Pilgrims and strangers journeying along,
Jesus our hope and song.

Joyful we'll toil in the strength of the Lord,
Waiting for the promised reward;
Trusting his word while journeying along,
Jesus our hope and song.

Come, sinner, come, forgiveness obtain
Through our Savior's glorious name,
Join in our band, while journeying along,
Jesus our hope and song.

B. C. SIMONDS.

Gems.

— How pure and white the beautiful snow! Let your thoughts and actions be the same.

— Exercise prayer, thought and action, then life will be found wholesome.

— Take your standard of a man from his mind, and not the dress.

— A forgiving heart is one of the noblest qualities which a man can possess.

— Happiness consists in being perfectly satisfied with what we have got and with what we haven't got.

— Troubles are like babies; they grow bigger by nursing.

— One reason that the world is not reformed is, because every body would have others make a beginning, and thinks not of himself.

— Always endeavor to learn something from the information of those thou conversest with; and to put thy company upon those subjects they are best able to speak of.

— No person ever got stung by hornets, who kept away from where they were. It is so with habits.

— The greatest thoughts, it has been said, spring from the heart; but the maxim is far more true with respect to the noblest actions.

— Truth feareth nothing so much as concealment, and desireth nothing so much as concealment, and desireth nothing so much as clearly to be laid open to all.

— Kind words are as refreshing to the burdened heart as rain to the parched ground.

— Do noble deeds, and pity the minds that would ridicule what they dare not perform.

— Men are generally like wagons; they rattle prodigiously when there is nothing in them.

— The merit of our actions consists not in doing extraordinary actions, but in doing ordinary actions well.

— A Christian's experience is like a rainbow, made up of drops of the grief of earth, and beams of the bliss of heaven.

— A reckless mind—a sacred conscience—a hardened heart—one step more, and—a lost soul!

— The world is a sea of glass; affliction scatters our path with sand and ashes, in order to keep our feet from slipping.

— Learn to control your temper now, children, or by and by it will control you.

— It is not required that a man shall always be perfect, in order to be a true christian. But it is required that he should be a sincere seeker after perfection. It is required that he should be moving forward, and advancing up the straight and narrow way of life.

— Where God loves he affords love tokens, and such are only his soul-enriching graces. If our heart moves toward him, certainly his goeth out toward us. The shadow on the dial moves according to the sun in the heavens.

"BEFORE I SUFFER."—How suggestive to the thoughtful christian are these words spoken by our Lord, before the institution of the Last Supper. What an aggravation of his sufferings it must have been that he saw them all in prospect. In mercy to us he withholds the knowledge of coming trouble; but he never allowed himself to taste an unmingled joy. Truly he was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. How ill fitted should we be for the duties of life, if we knew the sorrows that were in store for us; but Jesus performed his work in full view of the cross and the shame. How great his love. He spares us, but he never spared himself. Shall we spare ourselves in his service?—Christian at Work.

HOW TO BE NOBODY.—Young man, it is easy to be nobody. Go to the drinking-saloon to spend your leisure. You need not drink much now—just a little beer, or some other drink. In the meantime, play chequers, dominoes, or something else to consume time, that you will be sure not to read any useful book; or if you do read, let it be the "dime novels" of the day. Thus go on keeping your stomach full, head empty and yourself playing time-killing games, and in a few years you will be nobody, unless you should turn out to be a drunkard or a professional gambler, either of which is worse than to be nobody.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

For the Hygiene Column.

JUST A WORD.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say just a word, through the Crisis, to the sufferers from diseases that afflict so large a portion of our brethren and sisters. Do not submit yourselves to the drug medication that is destroying so many of the human family, but try the "Resuscitator." An account of it was published some time since in the Crisis by Bro. Munger. I obtained one from him some time in February last, the 18th I think, and have used it in my practice ever since, and find its effects truly astonishing. Have cured a number of cases considered hopeless. One sufferer said that no money would or could tempt him to do without its use. J. S. ST JOHN.

Vineland, N. J., Box 283.

MENTAL EXCITEMENT.

Mental excitement is a prolific source of bodily disease. Undue anxiety causes many premature deaths. If we carefully examine, we shall find these to be the cause of ill-health much more frequently than we generally imagine. It is not possible for it to be otherwise, if we consider the influence which the mind has upon the body. How often do we see fear or grief blanch the countenance, and anger redden it as though the blood of the whole body were in the face? Many cases are on record, where mere mental excitement has changed the hair in a very short time from jet black to grey, or white, as was the case in Mary Queen of Scots. Can it, then, be matter of surprise that mental excitement diseases the body?

It is true, a very large proportion of mental excitement and anxiety is imaginary, or in anticipation, rather than real and present. But this fact changes not its influence upon the body. If really believed to be present, it is enough. If a man thinks he is poor, to all intents and purposes he is so, as far as he is concerned. We see many cases of this kind. He thinks he shall come to poverty, and die in the poor-house! The consequence is, he lives, eats, drinks, talks; yea, acts, in all respects, just as he would if it were real, though he may be a millionaire.

A quiet, contented mind is one of the best safeguards of good health. In our experience, we have often known anxiety and depression to lay the foundation for a fever and other diseases. "A cheerful heart doeth good like a medicine," was a proverb of old, and experience proves its truth. If a man feels that he can do nothing; if he is troubled about his worldly affairs; if he has a family dependent upon him, and little means with which to maintain it; if his way seems hedged up in all that he attempts, and his spirit becomes broken, good health will not long be his companion." . . .

Some years ago, the "Great and General Court" of Massachusetts appointed "a commission" to examine into, and ascertain the causes of imbecility of mind and disease of body, entailed by parents upon their children, or the influence of progenitors upon their descendants. This Commission says, "Out of four hundred and twenty cases of congenital idiocy, they found, in three hundred and fifty-six of them, that one or the other, or both, of the immediate progenitors of the unfortunate sufferers had, in some way, widely departed from the normal condition of health, and violated the laws of nature. In some families which are degraded by drunkenness and vice, there is a degree of combined ignorance and depravity which disgraces humanity." . . . .

An English physician, Dr. Elam, in discussing medical subjects pertaining to the physical and mental condition of the race, has the following upon the transmission of mental diseases: "There is no form of heritage more remarkable than that of tendency to suicide, without any other marks of aberation of intellect." Dr. Winslow speaks of a family where all the members, when they arrived at a certain age, manifested a desire to commit suicide. Dr. Gall relates a case where seven children of one father were possessed with a rage for suicide; and, though they enjoyed a competency, so bent were they upon their purpose, that they all accomplished it before they reached the age of forty years! Dr. Elam adds the following case: "Sitting one day with an acquaintance, I noticed some depression in his spirits. After a prolonged silence, he broke out into the following dreary attempt at conversation: 'My grandfather hung himself, my uncle took poison, my father shot himself, I shall cut my throat. The facts were correct; but constant surveillance prevented the sequel in his own history.'"

But as our mental excitement and impressions seem to be leading to the subject of longevity, which subject we purpose to discuss at a future time, we will leave the effects of the mind upon the body for the present; advising our readers to be calm, contented with their lot, and improve their condition as best they can.—Good Health.

HEALTH OF FARMERS.—There are seven reasons why farmers are healthier than professional men, viz:

1. They work more, and develop all the leading muscles of the body.
2. They take their exercise in the open air, and breathe a greater amount of oxygen.
3. Their food and drinks are commonly less adulterated, and far more simple.
4. They do not overwork their brain as much as industrious professional men do.
5. They take their sleep, commonly during the hours of darkness, and do not try to turn night into day.
6. They are not so ambitious, and do not wear themselves out so rapidly in the fierce contest of rivalry.
7. Their pleasures are simple and less exhausting.

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES OF EGGS.—The white of an egg has proved of late the most efficacious remedy for burns. Seven or eight successful applications of this substance soothes pain and effectually excludes the burned parts from the air. This simple remedy seems preferable to collodion or even cotton. Extraordinary stories are told of the healing properties of a new oil which is easily made from the yolk of hens' eggs. The eggs are first boiled hard, and the yolks are then removed, crushed and placed over a fire, where they are carefully stirred until the whole substance is just on the point of catching fire, when the oil separates and may be poured off. One yolk will yield nearly two teaspoonfuls of oil. It is in general use among the colonists of South Russia as a means of curing cuts, bruises and scratches.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.—Do three things:—First, eat nothing; second, go to bed, cover up in a warm room; third, drink as much cold water as you can, or as you want, or as much herb tea as you can; and in three cases out of four you will be well in thirty-six hours. To neglect a cold for forty-eight hours after the cough commences, is to place yourself beyond cure, until the cold has run its course, of about a fortnight. Warmth and abstinence are safe and certain cures, when applied early. Warmth keeps the pores of the skin open, and relieves it of the surplus which oppresses it, while abstinence cuts off the supply of material for phlegm which would otherwise be coughed up. This is a simple but effectual remedy. Drink no intoxicating liquor.

☞ All business should be suspended and forgotten, as far as possible, at least half an hour before bedtime, and in some cases a much longer time than this.

☞ Temperance is the best physic.

P. O. Address of Preaching Brethren.

Massachusetts.

C. Goodrich—No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.
Enoch Merrill—Crisis Office, Boston.
J. S. White—66 Decatur Street, East Boston.
L. Boutell—Chelsea.
S. W. Thurber—Chelsea.
T. M. Preble—Lynn.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls.
Geo. A. Brown—Plymouth.
Geo. A. Cole—Plymouth.
D. Churchill—Lowell.
Matthew Batchelor—New Bedford.
S. S. Brewer—Ashburnham Depot.
H. Pratt—Springfield, 57 Cedar Street.
E. Ford—Box 302, Springfield.
W. N. Pile—Springfield.
P. S. Butler—Collins Depot.
Geo. A. Streeter—North Dana.
O. H. Sweet—Millville.
Alvah Bean—Lowell.
J. W. Thomas—Lowell, 16 Rock Street.
Benj. Finney—Wakefield.
S. S. Brassee—Cold Spring.
W. E. Hathaway—North Carver.
Rufus Baker—Warren.
J. W. Brittan—Westboro.
Dr. A. M. Higgins—Palmer.
H. K. Flagg—Savoy.
E. M'Culloch—Savoy.
E. Owen—Westfield, Lock Box 616.

Maine.

S. K. Partridge—North Whitefield.
L. C. Wellcome—Yarmouth.
H. D. Reed—Richmond.
H. S. Mitchell—Richmond.
J. Carr—South Albion.
Allen Damon—Corinna.
N. F. Nason—Weeks Mills.
C. Goud—Topsham.
Jesse Gay—Casco.
Thomas Smith—Bangor.
I. K. Lombard—South Windham.
Thomas Rhynes—Augusta.
R. R. York—Portland.
M. B. Patterson—Richmond.
J. Albert Libby—West Poland.
J. T. Jordan—West Poland.
E. M. Haggett—Livermore.
F. A. Baker—Levant.
Israel Damman—Corinna.
Jared Whitman—Mechanic Falls.
H. B. Sever—Mt. Vernon.
M. W. Corliss—Milltown.
N. G. Reed—Bath.
Wm. H. Mitchell—Kennebunk.

New Hampshire.

L. C. McKinstry—Tamworth Iron Works.
A. W. Sibley—West Thornton.
J. Couch—Concord.
A. Simpson—Concord.
D. N. Chadsey—Whitefield.
Caleb Richardson—Salem Depot.
N. C. Twombly—Strafford Centre.
J. B. Brown—Laconia.
A. A. Hoyt—North Haverhill.
T. E. Lang, Jr.—Meredith Village.
B. S. Moulton—Whitefield.
Wm. C. Stewart—Exeter.
John H. Evans—Holderness.
Levi Allen—Lake Village.
O. D. Eastman—Landaff.
Joseph Kimball—Unity.
Joseph Pinkham—Dover.
N. B. McMurphy—Gilmanton.
A. Ross—Amherst.
C. H. Fletcher—Newport.
T. L. Hall—Keene.
Wm. W. Sutherland—Newport.
S. S. Mooney—Pittsfield.
N. Wheeler—Whitefield.
C. W. Sargent—Box 426, Concord
Simeon Roby—Warner.
D. F. Leavitt—Loudon Ridge.
T. W. Piper—Melvin Village.
D. M. Leavitt—Holderness.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia.
J. G. Smith—New Durham.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth.
N. Glidden—Meredith Center.

Vermont.

H. F. Carpenter—North Springfield.
J. A. Cleaveland—Marshfield.
A. Gordon—Canaan.
E. G. Chadsey—Richford.
C. P. Dow—Franklin, Vt., or Stanbridge, C. E.

Rhode Island.

M. R. Phetteplace—West Gloucester.
D. O. Hopkins—North Foster.
B. Roberts—Knightsville.
A. Durfee—Woodville.
J. T. Dixon—Rocky Brook.

Connecticut.

William J. Ripley—Pleasant Valley.
S. M. Tatro—No. 51 Windsor St., Hartford.
W. S. Campbell—New Britain.
H. Rockwell—West Winsted.
Wm. A. Durand—Cheshire.
S. Woodruff—Unionville.
B. St. John—Wolcottville.
Dr. Samuel Wells Treat—Middlebury.
Geo. L. Teeple—Monroe.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville.
A. D. Flagg—Torrington.
I. B. Potter—West Stafford.
E. Bellows—South Killingly.
B. Hitchcock—Forestville

New York.

Anna E. Smith—Star of Hope Mission, New York City, 14 Laurens Street, above Canal.
E. S. Jennings—President of "F. U. M. Association," Honeoye, Ontario Co.
J. K. Bellows—19 Orchard Street, New York City.
J. B. Cook—Brooklyn.
Wm. Ingmire—Lincklaen, Chenango Co.
Jacob Blain—Buffalo.
Chas. P. Greenman—Rapids, Niagara Co.
Arthur King—145 Nassau Street, New York
Wm. A. Fenn—Rochester.
Phineas A. Smith—Rochester.
Z. Dubois Baird, Centre Falls, Washington Co.
C. Pike—Hebron, Washington Co.
C. H. Leverton—Honeoye, Ontario Co.
C. F. Sweet—Albion, Orleans Co.
Warren J. Hobbs—Honeoye Falls.
C. W. Low—Fredonia.
M. R. Miles—Wolcott, Wayne Co.
J. Wilbur—West Hoosick, Rensselaer Co.
A. C. Newell—Darien City.
C. H. Williams—West Martinsburg.
E. P. Stevens—South Butler
D. Cogswell—Dansville.
Herbert H. Brown—Honeoye, Ontario Co.
Cornelius Pike—Caldwell, Warren Co.

New Jersey.

S. P. Babcock—Malaga.

Pennsylvania.

. W. Taylor—Little Marsh, Tioga Co.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co.
Jonas Wendell—Edenboro, Erie Co.
R. Cotton—Edenboro, Erie Co.
Wm. Stuart—1314 Vineyard Street, Philadelphia.

Ohio

H. G. McCulloch—Nevada, Wyandot Co.
O. W. Stetson—Olena.

Tennessee.

Dr. I. I. Leslie—Box 631, Memphis.
L. F. Cole—Memphis, Box 631.

Kentucky.

John B. Wadsworth—166 No. 2nd St., Louisville

Indiana.

R. H. Scott—Scottsville, Floyd Co.
David Shankland—West Lebanon.
E. C. Andrus—Big Indian P. O.
Dr. N. Field—Jeffersonville.
S. A. Chaplin—Pierceton.
Edward Cordray—Lakeville.
Dr. C. H. Cass—Holton.
Dr. J. W. Warman—Muddy Fork P. O.
Dr. Case—Nebraska.
G. W. Green—Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co.

Illinois.

George W. Foster—Victoria, Knox Co.
O. D. Gibson—Amboy.
J. W. Burroughs—Neponset.
F. Burr—New Rutland.
Wm. McCullock—New Rutland.

Michigan.

J. R. Preston—Wallaceville, Wayne Co.
J. M. Snook—Romeo.
A. N. Seymour—Reading.

Iowa.

Peter S. W. Deyo—Strawberry Point, Clayton Co.
A. F. Dugger—Simpson.
Ambrose H. Eggleston—Parkersburg

Wisconsin.

Wm. Sheldon—Brodhead, Green Co.
N. A. Hitchcock—Prairie Du Lac.
George Thompson—Attica, Green Co.
F. W. Hough—Mendoro, La Crosse Co.

Minnesota.

Edwin T. Himes—St. Paul, Box 258.
Wm. Sweet—Backsville, Brown Co.
Philip Ramer—Winona.
Thos. K. Allen—Box 241, Winona.
Ruth M. Rowell—Winona, Box 621.
D. D. Reed—Crow Wing.
O. R. Fassett—Minneapolis.

Nova Scotia.

Wm. M. Ingham—Clementsport.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance .... $2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address ..... $5.00.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address ...... $10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.
TERMS.
PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 745. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 19.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

It comes, it comes! the advent's near,
That glorious day will soon be here
When Christ our Lord will come;
The signs are thick'ning fast and strong,
The waning night gives place to morn,
Earth hails the rising sun.

It comes, it comes! the advent cry
Has gone o'er earth; and from the sky
A voice proclaims "'tis done!"
And myriad voices raise the sound,
"Worthy is he who now is crowned—Redemption now has come."

It comes, it comes! let all who hear,
Make ready, for the Judge is near—
He will not tarry long;
Ye slumbering virgins wake and sing,
Welcome your absent Lord and King,
In coronation song.

It comes, it comes! ye mourners, dry
Your tears; let hearts no longer sigh
O'er buried loved ones here;
The trump of God shall call them forth,
From east and west, and south and north—
Immortal they 'll appear.

It comes, it comes! aloud proclaim,
The Savior comes on earth to reign;
This is the jubilee.
Ye saints be glad, the desert blooms,
The wilderness has lost its gloom,
Joy reigns from sea to sea.

North Woodstock, N. H. Sophia Jackman.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH.

Death is a stern reality. Long centuries ago it visited our globe, and has been on its march in every land, conquering its countless millions. But is it the messenger of God, or the "king of terrors"? "Sin entered into the world, and death by sin"; hence, had it not been for the introduction of sin, death would never have been here, but man would have eaten of the tree of life, and "lived forever" in a deathless and sinless world. But Satan brought sin, and sin brought death, and death brought mourning. But notwithstanding this, death is pronounced a blessing by modern theologians. If it is a blessing, it can be traced back to Satan, and honestly demands that we should render to Satan the things that are Satan's; and if he is the author of one of the greatest blessings ever received by mankind, let us render honor to whom honor is due, and cease to sing—and give Satan his share of praise for bringing this great blessing to the saints of God. The position is taken that death does not kill men, but merely lets them out of a mortal prison, and sets them free. If this is so, Satan was certainly very kind in introducing it, and he must be a very clever devil after all. But it may be well to inquire whether death is not a curse, and whether it does not really kill folks. We firstly inquire:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,"

Is death an enemy?

1. Human experience gives a strong affirmative answer to this question. For nearly six thousand years, it has extorted tears from human eyes, and saddened hearts with bitter grief. It has dotted earth with grave-yards and funeral processions, and filled the world with mourners. These facts jointly proclaim death an "enemy." We warmly greet our friends, but we unanimously repel death, and are never resigned to fall into his hands till all resistance proves unavailing. We could not feel such reluctance in falling into the hand of a friend. All our eternal surroundings, together with our internal aversion to death, pronounce it an enemy. Even theologians, who eulogize death, and picture it out as a friend in robes of disguise, love it best at the greatest distance from them; and array themselves in hostile attitude at his approach, and make every available effort within the range of their intellect to blockade every road by which he might visit them. This is human experience, not in some remote corner, but through the wide world. This alone may not be regarded as a satisfactory reply to the question. But—

2. A divine aversion to the harbingers of death is equivalent to a sacred repudiation of death as a friend. Upon one occasion Jesus "rebuked" the fever that was paving the way for death. A rebuke is expressive of disapprobation. Jesus never rebuked anything in harmony with the divine plan, but simply that which is averse to it. When Epaphroditus "was sick nigh unto death," it is said, "God had mercy on him" in restoring him to health again; from which we learn that death could not have been regarded as a friend, for no one could regard it an act of mercy to be kept away from a true friend. Hezekiah resorted to weeping when told he must soon become a guest of death, and earnestly prayed to have the decree rescinded. Death had no charms for him, though he possessed a "perfect heart." Christ did not treat death like a friend in healing the sick and raising the dead, for the one act prevented men from going to God, and the other recalled them from him, according to modern theology, all of which is averse to fraternity.

3. Inspiration has infallibly inscribed the title "enemy" on the brow of death, so plainly that it cannot be concealed from the anxious interrogator: "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."—1 Cor. 15: 26. If death is really an enemy, instead of being a friend, it cannot reasonably be expected that he will help all the saints to emigrate to a realm of glory; but he holds them as victims somewhere, for at the coming judgment he is to deliver them up (Rev. 20: 13); and of the innocent children slain under Herod it is said, "They shall come again from the land of the enemy." Jer. 31: 16. If death confines the innocent children in the land of the enemy—his own dark dominion—he will not give the saints a better place. Indeed, the "enemy," death, has but one land, "a land of darkness," and there he holds saints and sinners alike till they are called to judgment. Death never takes us to the judgment, for the judgment is after death's reign is over. "And death and hades delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged, every man according to their works."—Rev. 20: 13. Hence all remain unjudged, and consequently unrewarded, up to this epoch.

Does death reduce men to a state of unconsciousness?

1. Our senses take no cognizance of a continued conscious existence of men subsequent to the fatal stroke of death. We see them breathe the last breath, and all is still. We see nothing, hear nothing, feel nothing, to indicate the perpetuity of a conscious existence in some other form. If left to our senses, we could never have imbibed the thought of the emigration of an invisible personality from the material man at death. In other matters we are bold to repudiate that which our senses cannot recognize, unless taught by revelation. It avails nothing to speak of the repeated manifestation of personal spirits long subsequent to the dying hour, supposed to be the spirits of our deceased friends. (1) Because Inspiration reveals the existence of two orders of spirits—angelic-spirits and satanic-spirits; both of which existed before man's creation, as man was made "a little lower than the angels"; and some of these "angels kept not their first estate." These satanic spirits are styled "seducing spirits," often deceiving men by claiming to be what they are not. (2) If a personal spirit leaves the dying man, it could as really be seen then, as at any subsequent time; and (3) if it really enters into heaven or hell at death, as we are taught, it certainly could not be seen on earth.—Observation furnishes no proof of man's conscious existence after death, but much to conflict with the sentiment.

2. Revelation speaks plainly and repeatedly on this theme. "Return, O Lord, deliver my soul; oh, save me for thy mercies' sake. For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave [sheol—the state of the dead] who shall give thee thanks?"—Ps. 6: 4–5. Thus when men go to sheol, whether they go in a disembodied state, or corporeally, they go where there is "no remembrance" of God, and where they cannot give him thanks; which strongly negates the theory of a conscious existence in the state of the dead. The wise man says: "The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, are now perished."—Eccl. 9: 5–6. From this testimony we learn (1) That man, while alive, knows something, let the knowing part be soul or body. (2) That which possesses knowledge, while alive, is destitute of it in death. If the body only possessed knowledge while alive, nothing is left to know anything after the body dies; if the soul only possessed knowledge while the body was alive, that knowing part must be destitute of knowledge after death; for to say of something that never possessed knowledge, while alive, that it shall be destitute of knowledge after its death, would be random talk. (3) While dead, "neither have they any more a reward," but Christ says, "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just"; so "reward" in death is prohibited. (4) Their memory, their love, their hatred, their envy, are "perished." That part of man that loves, or hates, ceases to exercise these passions after death. If they are passions of the soul, the soul cannot survive death as a personality; else its love would not "perish"; or if wicked, its envy would not perish. But at the tenth verse, the affirmation is made—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave [sheol—the state of the dead] whither thou goest."

From this statement we learn (1) that the part of man which engages in "work," possesses "knowledge" and "wisdom," and goes into sheol. (2) If only the body goes to sheol, the body only possesses knowledge and wisdom, and the soul is destitute of knowledge even in this life. (3) If the soul is the part that possesses knowledge and wisdom in this world, instead of the body, then the soul goes into sheol, where there is no knowledge, nor wisdom. If the soul enters sheol as a living personality, it must possess an unconscious life, and sheol become a realm of ghostly know-nothings, possessing "no" knowledge. Better be dead than alive under such circumstances. If, to dodge future unconsciousness of the soul, we make the text refer only to the body, we thereby rob the soul of present consciousness, and make it unconscious before death; for whatever goes to sheol is deprived of knowledge; for to say of something that never possessed knowledge, that it shall have no knowledge after death, would be to talk nonsense. So in trying to prevent this text from teaching the unconsciousness of the soul after death, it is made to teach even its present unconsciousness; and that which knows nothing before death, can know nothing after death. All in sheol are unconscious, whether they are souls or bodies.

David tells us, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. The sentiment contained in this text is this: (1) That which can praise the Lord in this life cannot praise him after death, but goes into "silence." (2) If the body only goes into silence at death, it only could praise God while alive; whereas David elsewhere exclaims, "Praise the Lord, O my soul." That which praises God while alive, ceases to praise him when "dead," being enveloped in silence. If an internal man now praises God through the body, and after death praises him more perfectly than ever, then the part that praises God never ceases to praise him. (3) Death prevents that part from praising God which once praised him. Is it the soul alone, or the body alone, or both jointly? If the latter, death stops both, and hushes them into silence till the resurrection.

The Psalmist thus speaks of man in death: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. Death stops the thoughts of men. While the mind lives and acts, thoughts will continue to exist. But when the powerful hand of death kills the thinker, his thoughts perish with him. Mind is so connected with the body as to keep pace with its changes from feeble infancy to the summit of ripest manhood; and then retrogrades to second childhood. When a child, he thinks childish thoughts; when a mature man, he puts away childish thoughts; when the basis of a strong mind is impaired, his thoughts become weaker; and when that basis is utterly paralyzed by death, his "thoughts perish." It is not a personal soul within man that thinks for him, but man himself is a thinking being. If thoughts come only from a personality within man, which deserts man at death, and thinks on more clearly than ever, the thoughts of the real thinker could not perish; but inspiration affirms they "perish" under the stroke of death. Agreeable to this, Job testifies concerning man in death, "His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." Job 14: 21. So utterly unconscious is man in death, that he is unmoved by either the prosperity or adversity of his offspring; "He knoweth it not," and why? The state of dreamless slumber alluded to in the twelfth verse is a sufficient cause. "Man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." They sleep the sleep of death, and their slumbers will be undisturbed till the heavens pass away with a great noise, at the coming of a mighty One, who is "the resurrection and the life."

Wm. Sheldon.

THE YEAR-DAY SYSTEM.

Much as I desire to avoid controversy, it is necessary for me now to observe that, for a long time, it was taken for granted as an axiom not to be disputed, that a day in prophetic language stands for a year. But, when, even superficially examined, there appears not so much as a shadow of foundation for this extraordinary assumption; and it is a most serious offence for any man, without express warrant, thus to alter the plain words of holy Scripture, and in effect, to assert that the Lord God does not mean what he says. He says, "days;" and who will venture to change it into "years" without either warrant or necessity?

Numbers 16: 24, and Ezekiel 4: 6, are usually appealed to by the advocates of the the "year-day" system, as triumphant proof of the principle for which they contend. "The Israelites were to wander forty years in the wilderness in reference to the forty days that the spies searched the land. And Ezekiel was to lie upon his side a certain number of days, to signify the years that Israel was to be punished." But the fact is that these examples tell entirely against, instead of in their favor. For they show clearly that wherever it was intended that a day should represent a year, the Lord God did expressly make it known to his servants, and did positively enjoin it. "Lo, I have appointed thee each day for a year;" showing clearly that this was a special appointment.

But is this "special appointment" for a special occasion any reason that a day must always stand for a year? Surely to make any such assertion is a violation, not only of Scripture, but of common sense. Besides, its advocates do not apply this principle to all cases, but only to some of the promises; that is, in fact, where it suits their own favorite theories to do so. But if a principle be good in one cause, it is good in all. If a day stands for a year in prophecy, then it must so stand also in history, especially as one, at least, of the above examples is taken from the historical books; then see what confusion would ensue! Grammarians say, "The exception proves the rule." Now, common sense would decide that "a day for a day" is the rule; and "a day for a year" the exception. But no; these interpreters assert that "a day for a year" is the rule; and yet, strange to say, they mak the "exceptions" infinitely to exceed the rule in number; for they only apply their rule in a very few—some half-dozen cases.

The seventy weeks of Daniel (chap. 9) have also been pressed into the controversy. "These weeks," they say, "are proved by the event to have been weeks of years, therefore a day stands for a year." But in this instance it is impossible to acquit those advocates of what logicians call the "suppressio veri"—suppression of the truth; for they themselves know perfectly, and unfairly conceal the knowledge from their readers—that the "weeks" of Daniel are not ordinary weeks, but simply "Hebdomads," i. e., periods of seven, and might be hours, or days, or months, or years, or centuries, or any other division of time. The event only could decide which; and the event has shown them to be "Hebdomads" of years.

The first to question the "year-day" system was the Rev. Mr. Maitland, whose pamphlet fell like a bombshell amongst the interpreters of his day, scattering and demolishing all their theories. His pamphlet was published many years ago, and has never been answered, simply because it is unanswerable. Such replies as were attempted consisted merely of personal abuse, and declamatory appeals to popular prejudices. Mr. Maitland's arguments from Scripture, reason, and common sense, are perfectly irresistible, and as impossible to overturn as the position that two and two make four. Since then, many other writers have likewise demonstrated the unsoundness, indeed, palpable absurdity of the "year-day" system; and, amongst others, the Rev. W. De Burgh, whose most valuable works on prophecy the student may consult with equal pleasure and advantage."

[The above is transcribed from pp. 253–4 of the Rev. W. Ker's very valuable book on the "Prophecies of the Last Days." We inserted a short paragraph last month from the same source on the same subject, since which, Mr. Ker has suggested to us the propriety of laying before our readers some of the proofs which guided him to a conclusion on the matter. We do so with pleasure, and we take this opportunity of saying that a careful perusal of the entire volume will amply repay the time it requires.—Ed. R.]—Rainbow.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITH MANIFESTED BY WORKS.

"But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead."—James 2: 20.

In the language of all the inspired writers, faith is urged upon us as a necessity and power; without which it is impossible to please God. But the apostle James, who admonishes us to a most practical course of conduct, declares that "faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith and I have works; shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works." The truth of which statement the consistent reasoner will readily affirm. An objection however may arise. That by the law of faith alone, boasting only will be excluded; that Paul says, "Not of works, lest any man should boast." "That a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." Eph. 2; Rom. 3: 28. But the objector will here see, as also in many other places, that the apostle is arguing grace, rather than law; the grace freely given us under the new covenant; and that he by no means desires to render the law without effect; for he says, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law." Rom. 3: 31.

The question may be asked, How do we establish the law through faith? Answer. "Faith will have its perfect work." It is a work of love; brings forth fruit meet for repentance; turns the heart of man to God; and trusts on him as a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Paul exclaims, "Faith works by love." And Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Here is the beautiful consistency of faith. Working love in the soul, and love toward God induces us to keep his commandments.

In the christian character, faith, love, and keeping the commandments, must be established and exercising graces. We cannot begin to build upon works. Faith must be the foundation; works the crowning excellence, that they may testify visibly the effect that produces them. "By their fruits [works] ye shall know them." "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit." And faith in its pure and elevating influence is the only seed, rooted and grounded in the truth, that yields the fruits of the Spirit, "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

Let us strive for an increase of faith like this, that we may dwell in the Spirit. Says the apostle, "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." Enter into that rest that dispels all doubt, banishes fear, and is finally rewarded with eternal life.

S. T. Wheelock.

For the World's Crisis.

BEHOLD HE COMETH.

"Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be."

What a beautiful sound to a christian; how it refreshes a follower of Christ; but what an unpleasant sound to one who is not a follower of that blessed Shepherd. Yes, what a beautiful thought to know that he is soon to be here. Then the lambs of his flock will have their rewards. How important that our work should be worthy of that reward. That blessed day will soon arrive when he will appear with his holy angels; when the heaven and the earth shall pass away, but his word shall not pass away. When the chief Shepherd shall appear, then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.

Dear reader, are you one of those who are going to shine forth as the sun in that glorious kingdom? If you are not, O how miserable will be your case in that great and glorious day. Perhaps you are a person whose hair is whitened with age; if so, thanks to God that your life has been spared. Whether old or young, if you have never yet known what it is to become a follower of that blessed Savior, I beg of you to come at once to Jesus, and seek for pardon. He will receive you just as you are. Perhaps you are one that is well off in regard to wordly goods, and have a good time, and think you do not need any thing more; if so, you are greatly mistaken. I ask you, my dear friend, where will you stand if you neglect so great an offer? "For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4: 1. Are you intending to be one of those who shall be destroyed by fire? I beg you, dear friend, to flee from the wrath to come; place yourself so you will be able to stand in that great day. "Now is the accepted time." Will you come to this blessed Savior? Fidelia Belcher.

Fayville, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

"PEACE! PEACE!"

The apostle spoke not in vain when he uttered those mysterious words attending the approaching judgment: "For when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh, and they shall not escape." The nations have caught the sound, and from the halls of legislation throughout the world the cry goes up, "Let us have peace"; and the anticipated response of the numerical world-wonder "beast" comes, "The empire is peace." The barefooted Carmelite catches the sound, but with bated breath says the "Lord may have said war." Hear him:

"As those days draw nigh, as in the days of Israel's calamity, men cry peace! peace! But the Lord has perhaps said war! The monarchs go about one to another calling each other brother; and then, as if they doubted it, saying it over again. The people do but make echo to their kings. From the coasts of the Atlantic to the shores of the Mediterranean, interests in coalition protest against war, now by the dull silence of business, now by the noisy complaints of working-men. The talking men and the writing men come to the support of business interests in the name of ideas, and once more (as in the days of ancient Israel) the whole world is crying Peace! And yet, as under some overhanging storm, we seem to feel the thunder in the air, so the people vaguely perceive in their atmosphere that terrible gathering of electricity which Christ has spoken of as 'rumors of wars.'

"Son of Bethlehem! Father of the age to come! Prince of peace! O grant us that peace which is peace indeed! Scatter these 'rumors of wars,' save each nation by itself, regenerate France by her own children! So grand she is even yet, so peaceful and so prosperous she might be, if only left to her own instincts. But if it is too late—great God, if in thy wisdom thou hast otherwise ordered, then bring back to us on the battle-field that faith which on the battle-field we first received; that faith which made us great, but which it is sought to ravish from us. Pour out in war the blood of our young men, too precious to dry up in sterility, or be corrupted in the pleasures of an unworthy peace. Leap from the scabbard, thou sword of the Lord and France, and do thy work. Do it speedily, and do it to the end."

What hath inspired so vast a policy in the mind of Fr. Hyacinthe? The answer is at hand. The "Apollyon" or "Napoleon policy." How cheering to the weary pilgrim to look upon these prophetical guide-boards amid the perils of the shore. Bride of the Lamb, arise, put on thy beautiful garments, for He cometh.

H. Pratt.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?

Exodus 32: 26.

Are those who make long prayers, and all their prayers in public, on the Lord's side? Are church fairs and church festivals on the Lord's side? Was popular opinion ever on the Lord's side? Is modern theology, as proclaimed from the lips of D. D.'s, on the Lord's side? Are the so-called orthodox churches, and do they exert an influence on the Lord's side? Is the doctrine of eternal torment on the Lord's side? Are moderate wine drinkers on the Lord's side? Are those who roll tobacco as a sweet morsel under their tongue, or inhale its smoke as if it contained more oxygen than pure air, or snuff it up their nostrils as if it were some fragrant perfume, on the Lord's side? Are they who take more pains to promise than to perform, on the Lord's side? Are they who lay up more treasures on earth than in heaven, on the Lord's side? Are those who use the property of God for selfish purposes, instead of using it for the support of the gospel, and the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, on the Lord's side? Are those who put on religion for a Sunday garment only, on the Lord's side? Are those who profess much and love little, do little, on the Lord's side? Are those who are more careful to entertain themselves than strangers, on the Lord's side? Are those who talk more Christ in a day than they get in a year, on the Lord's side? Are those who pretend to believe in the soon coming of Jesus, but put their money so deep in their pockets that charity never can find it, on the Lord's side? Am I on the Lord's side? A. L. Adams.

Adamsville, W. Va.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE NEW EARTH."

Translated from "Young Stilling," a German Commentator, in 1796.

"When the harlot woman, the beast out of the bottomless pit, with the false prophet, the dragon himself, and last of all, Gog and Magog, shall have been overthrown, and forever received their doom, then also sin and death must be forever utterly destroyed. But this last is not possible so long as the present condition of our earth, with its atmosphere, if our own corruptible body and the whole physical nature continue. Therefore will God, after the termination of the great week of six thousand years, and a Sabbath of one thousand years, inaugurate a new reformation of the physical nature, or a new creation. The whole earth with its atmosphere will be purified, and cleansed by fire, and receive a heavenly form and surface; and in consequence hereof, the atmosphere will also become pure and etheric. And as the body of man, after his resurrection, will be immortal, incorruptible, and glorious, so will our present earth be, and all her products will be of a refined nature. Then there will also be no more seas and oceans, but the also refined water will moisten the then paradistic fields in the form of springs, brooks and rivers, clear as crystal.

"All this proves, without the possibility of a doubt, that redeemed mankind will for all eternity dwell upon this our globe, and that then heaven will in the fullest sense of the term be on our earth. So John saw a new heaven and a new earth, without sea, all new, without any sin, every thing perfect and in paradistic beauty. At the same time he saw also the new Jerusalem, the eternal capital of the people of God, coming down from heaven, whose description we read in chapter twenty-one, from verses ten to twenty-seventh.

"Now, after our whole earth and all the inhabitants of this new earth have become immortal and incorruptible, there is also need of a new and incorruptible city; and this is the heavenly Jerusalem, the mother of all, that has ever, in a literal as well as in a figurative sense, been called Jerusalem. John sees this city in all her splendor coming down from heaven; for so long as corruption, sin and death yet reign upon the earth, this heavenly residence of the King of all kings could find no place thereon; but now the time has come, when the glorious city, prepared as a bride for her bridegroom, comes down upon the new earth, where she forever will remain as the universal capital of redeemed mankind, and the glorious residence of our King Jesus Christ."

L. Reimer.

THE USE AND VALUE OF THE TERM "AION."

The reason which gives to this word aionian what I do not scruple to call a dreadful importance, is the same reason, and no other, which prompted the dishonesty concerned in the ordinary interpretation of this word. The word happened to connect itself with the ancient dispute about the duration of future punishments. What was meant by the aionian punishments in the next world? Was the proper sense of the word eternal, or was it not? The popular argument may be stated thus: The ordinary construction of the term aionian, as equivalent to everlasting, cannot possibly be given up when associated with penal misery, because in that case, and by the very same act, the idea of eternity must be abandoned as applicable to the counter-bliss of Paradise. Torment and blessedness, it is argued, punishment and beatification stand upon the same level; the same word it was, the word aionian, which qualified the duration of either; and if eternity in the most rigorous acceptation fell away from the one idea it must equally fall away from the other. Well, be it so. But that would not settle the question. It might be very painful to renounce a long-cherished anticipation, but the necessity of doing so could not be received as a sufficient reason for adhering to the old unconditional use of the word. The argument is, that we must retain the old sense of eternal, because else we lose on one scale what we had gained upon the other.

Meantime all this speculation, first and last, is pure nonsense. Aionian does not mean eternal; neither does it mean of limited duration; nor would the unsettling of aionian in its old use, as applied to punishment, to torment, to misery, etc., carry with it any necessary unsettling of the idea in its application to the beatitudes of Paradise.

What then is an aion? In the use and acceptation of the Apocalypse, it is evidently this, viz: the duration or cycle of existence which belongs to any existence, not individually for itself, but universally in sight of its genus. Man, also, has a certain aionian life, possibly ranging somewhere about the period of seventy years assigned in Psalms. This period in such a case merely represents the aion of an individual; but the aion of the race would probably amount to many millions of our earthly years; and it would remain an unfathomable mystery, deriving no light at all from the Septuagenarian aion of the individual; though between the two aions I have no doubt that some secret link of connection does and must subsist, however undiscoverable by human sagacity.

The crow, the deer, the eagle, etc., are all supposed to be long-lived. Some people have fancied that in their normal state they tended to a period of two centuries. I myself know nothing certain for or against this belief; but, supposing the case to be as represented, then this would be the aionian period of these animals, considered as individuals. Among trees, in like manner, the oak, the cedar, the yew, are notoriously of slow growth, and their aionian period is unusually long as regards the individual. What may be the aion of the whole species is entirely unknown. Amongst birds, one species at least has become extinct in our own generation; its aion was accomplished. So of all the fossil species in Zoology which Paleontology has revealed. Nothing, in short, throughout universal nature can for a moment be conceived to have been resigned to accident for its normal aion. All periods and dates of this order belong to the certainties of nature, but also at the same time to the mysteries of Providence. Throughout the Prophets, we are uniformly taught that nothing is more below the grandeur of heaven than to assign earthly dates in fixing either the revolutions or the duration of great events such as prophecy would condescend to notice. A day has a prophetic meaning; but what sort of day? A mysterious expression for a time which has no resemblance to a natural day—sometimes comprehending long successions of centuries, and altering its meaning according to the object concerned. 'A time,' and 'times' or 'half a time,' 'an aion,' 'aions of aions,' and other variations of this prophetic language are all significant.

Under the old and ordinary view of the Apocalyptic aion, which supposed it always to mean the same period of time—mysterious, indeed, and uncertain, as regards our knowledge, but fixed and rigorously certain in the secret counsels of God—it was presumed that this period, if it lost its character of infinity when applied to evil, to criminality, or to punishment, must lose it by a corresponding necessity equally when applied to happiness and the golden aspects of hope. But, on the contrary, every object whatsoever, every mode of existence, has its own separate and independent aion. The most thoughtless person must be satisfied, on reflection, even apart from the express commentary furnished by the Apocalypse, that every life and mode of being must have hidden within itself the secret why of its duration. It is impossible to believe of any duration whatever, that it is determined capriciously. Always it rests upon some ground, ancient as light and darkness, though undiscoverable by man. This only is discoverable, as a general tendency, that the aion, or generic period of evil, is constantly toward a fugitive duration.

The aion, it is alleged, must always express the same idea, whatever that may be; if it is less than eternity for the evil cases, then it must be less for the good ones. Doubtless the idea of an aion is in one sense always uniform, always the same. Arithmetic could not exist if any caprice or variation affected these ideas—a tenth is always more than an eleventh, always less than a ninth. But this uniformity of ratio and proportion does not hinder but that a tenth may now represent a guinea, and the next moment represent a thousand guineas. The exact amount of the duration expressed by an aion depends altogether upon the particular subject which yields the aion. It is, as I have said, a radix; and like an algebraic square-root or cube-root, though governed by the most rigorous laws of limitation, it must vary in obedience to the nature of the particular subject whose radix it forms. Meantime, as the summary of what I have written on this topic, accept these three propositions:

1. That man who allows himself to infer the eternity of evil from the counter-eternity of good builds upon the mistake of assigning a stationary and mechanic value to the idea of an aion; whereas the very purpose of Scripture in using this word was to evade such a value. The word is always varying for the very purpose of keeping it faithful to a spiritual identity. The period or duration of every object would be an essentially variable quantity were it not mysteriously commensurate to the inner nature of that object as laid open to the eyes of God. And thus it happens that everything in this world, possibly without a solitary exception, has its own separate aion: how many entities, so many aions.

2. But if it be an excess of blindness which can overlook the aionian amongst even neutral entities, much deeper is that blindness which overlooks the separate tendencies of things evil and things good. Naturally, all evil is fugitive and allied to death.

3. I separately, speaking for myself only, profoundly believe that the Scriptures ascribe absolute and metaphysical eternity to one sole Being, viz: to God; and derivatively to all others according to the interest which they can plead in God's favor. Having anchorage in God, innumerable entities may possibly be admitted to a participation in the divine aion.

But what interest in the favor of God can belong to falsehood, to malignity, to impurity? To invest them with aionian privileges is in effect, and by its results, to distrust and to insult the Deity. Evil would not be evil, if it had the power of self-subsistence, which is imputed to it in supposing its aionian life to be co-eternal with that which crowns and glorifies the good.—Abridged by James H. Whitmore.—Advent Christian Quarterly.

For the World's Crisis.

IS DEATH A FRIEND?

O death, death, art thou a friend, come to tear from my arms this precious babe, so dear to us all? Only an angel, sent from the high courts of heaven for the little lamb, to bear him so tenderly to the waiting arms of the blessed Jesus? Shall a jeweled crown encircle the pure, young brow? Shall the chubby hands hold a golden harp, whilst my angel baby's spirit shall hover near me? Is it the voice that Jesus sends to call my Edward to his arms?

Preposterous! Away with your heathen dogmas. Good old Abraham said, "If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved." This was the language of my heart, as I looked upon our dying infant. "If a man die, shall he live again?" "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border."

Ever since I was nine years and six months old, I have loved the blessed Son of God; although during some of the intervening years, I have followed him afar off; and again have found him the chiefest among ten thousand, my rock, refuge, and shield. Yet he never looked so precious, so unspeakably lovely, as in that lonely night-watch when my little one was fading; the rosy cheek becoming livid, the beautiful blue eyes sunken and deathly, and the chubby hands folded over the guileless young heart. Could I have it so? Was he "going to be an angel"? No, no; but the sure promise, "He shall rise again," comforted me. Such a view of my Savior, and the gift of God—eternal life, through his death, burial, and resurrection, I never had before. Would I could find words to describe it. I was comforted somewhat, and enabled to carry the darling sleeper in white garments, and silently lay him in his coffin, to await the resurrection morning. S. V. Whitaker.

Marlboro, Vt.

— Aim to do some permanent good, that your existence may be crowned with [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Jan. 26, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ J. M. SNOOK—The Crisis has gone regularly to you and Sr. Bedell. Have sent again.

☞ ELMER P. SHEPPARD—Please let us know where your paper now goes.

☞ M. G. S.—It will be sent the 28th.

☞ We have now a good supply of "Admonitions," by I. K. Lombard. Price by mail, postpaid, 15 cents per dozen; 75 cents per hundred.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

ALL INVITED.—The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at Library Hall, Chelsea, Ms., Wednesday evening, Feb. 2nd, at 7 o'clock. All christians are invited to be present.

L. BOUTELL.
M. GRANT.

LAWRENCE.

We spent Sabbath, Jan. 23d, with the church in Lawrence, and had a good time. There is life in that church, and many of its members are seeking earnestly to be real christians. Large audiences attend their meetings, and listen with marked attention. Seven rose for prayers, and several gave stirring testimonies.

TRACTS.

We have some liberal donations for the tract fund, which have gladdened our hearts. We are made glad because it makes others glad. Donations to the tract fund are no benefit to any one connected with the Crisis office, but they are a benefit to those who receive the tracts. The more tracts we are able to give away, the more free work is done; but it is done cheerfully for the Lord. We have true men in the office—Brn. A. P. Moore, and C. Goodrich—who love their business, and will not grumble if their labors are increased by sending out more free tracts to those who are thirsting after light on the blessed hope.

Let all who can, send something to help in the free distribution of tracts.

WHO WILL HELP?

Bro. S. Wyttenbach, Evansville, Ind., writes Jan. 5th, 1870:—"After searching many years for 'light, more light,' I at last found it in Adventism—the last place where I expected to find it. I was brought up in the Methodist Episcopal church, and led to believe the less one meddles with prophecy the better; but, after searching long for more light concerning our times, I at last found it in an expository treatise, which demonstrated to my mind clearly and convincingly the truth of the pre-millenial advent of Christ. Ever since, I have had an unquenchable desire and conviction of duty, to become a missionary to disseminate the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ. I have none to sympathize with me. My relatives, friends, and the members of most of the Protestant churches, turn a deaf ear to this solemn and all-important truth, that Christ is coming speedily.

I am poor. I have spent much time in studying the prophecies lately, and my means are all exhausted. As a final resort, I have concluded to write you, in order to see whether you could and would render me any assistance, by sending me papers, tracts, pamphlets and books. I think a great and good work could be done here in a short time. If I only had tracts to distribute, I think I could soon organize a self-sustaining society. I have been living mostly on bread and black coffee, in order that I might have time and means for studying the prophecies. I have studied much and prayed much lately about this subject."

A GOOD WORK.

Bro. Wm. Mellen, 11 Blossom Court, Boston, spends his time in visiting hospitals, houses of correction, alms-houses, homes of the poor, jails, and other places where kind words and prayers are needed. We learn that he spent Sabbath, Jan. 16th, at the House of Correction in Ipswich, and visited fifty-one cells. He afterwards preached to them, when fifty-five rose for prayers, and subscribed to the following:—

"Mr. Mellen: Please remember us in your prayers, that we may become followers of Jesus, for we are sick of sin."

Let others pray for them. Would that there were more like Bro. Mellen. For about eleven years he has been engaged in this noble work. Pray for him.

STRIKE IN FRANCE.—The French working men are having an important strike at La Creusot, which is one of the greatest iron manufacturing towns in Europe. The strike is occasioning heavy losses to their employers, and is becoming more and more severe. A military force of two thousand infantry and [illegible] have been [illegible] among the strikers, and other troops are on the way.

TWO QUESTIONS.

BRO. GRANT:—I have two questions to ask. First, I see by the Crisis that soul is breath. And you say in your works that spirit is breath; then what is the difference between soul and spirit?

The next is, that every man must give an account for the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. A man of few sins and a man of many are to be burnt up. I know that this text sets aside the hell torments, but how can you reconcile this text with a God of love and a God of justice? I ask for information. J. DALEY.

Baltimore, Md.

The Hebrew word nephesh, rendered soul in the Old Testament, occurs seven hundred and fifty-two times, but it is not rendered spirit once. The Greek word psukee, rendered soul in the New Testament, occurs one hundred and five times, but is not rendered spirit once; therefore soul and spirit are not synonymous terms. The word nephesh is once rendered breath in the Old Testament, in Job 41: 21, where we have a description of the leviathan, as follows: "His breath [nephesh] kindleth coals, and a flame goeth out his mouth." It would be as proper to render the passage his soul kindleth coals, as to render it his breath. The verb from which nephesh is derived signifies to breathe, or to blow. It expresses the act of breathing.

Again "his soul" is equivalent to himself, he or him; and the same word nephesh is rendered in all these ways. Hence it would be correct to say he "kindleth coals," instead of saying his nephesh kindleth them. We do not think this one example in Job 41: 21, where nephesh is rendered breath, proves that nephesh means the same as ruah, the word commonly rendered breath and spirit in the Old Testament.

Suppose that, instead of destroying the finally impenitent, God should torment them eternally; how could such a view be reconciled with God's love and justice? The least sinner would then be tormented eternally, and the greatest no longer. Does this look like justice? How could the eternal torment be reconciled with the love of God?

When God destroyed the Sodomites, he gave an example of the manner in which he will finally destroy the wicked. Peter says, God turned "the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly." In the "example," we do not find that the different sinners were tormented according to "the deeds done in the body;" but all were destroyed, or burnt up alike, and together.

If the punishment was death, would it be unjust to kill a very wicked man as quick as possible? All civilized nations do this when they execute a man for murder. He is either shot dead at once, dropped from a platform so as to break his neck, or the head is severed from the body by a single stroke of the guillotine. If long torment was introduced by a mangling process of killing, it would become cruelty, as is sometimes practiced by heathen nations. When death is the penalty, justice, love, and mercy require a hasty execution.

Inasmuch as it would be in harmony with the principles of justice to kill quickly a very wicked man, when his punishment was death, would it be any less an act of justice to kill quickly one who had not committed as many crimes? When we turn to the "ensample" at Sodom, we find all classes of sinners destroyed quickly by fire and brimstone. They could not breathe more than once or twice in those elements, before death would take place. The destruction of Sodom was an act of love and justice, as truly as will be the final destruction of all the wicked in a similar manner. The Lord was as merciful in the days of Sodom's overthrow as he is now. And, according to the "ensample," love and justice require the speedy execution of all classes of sinners.

SAUL AND SAMUEL.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you give me, through the Crisis, a comment upon 1 Sam. 28: 14? "And he said unto her, What form is he of? And she said, An old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul perceived it was Samuel, and he stooped with his face to the ground and bowed himself."

WM. PELTON.

In the account of Saul's interview with the women at Endor, we have a record of a spiritual manifestation such as are common at the present day. In the third verse of the chapter we read: "Now Samuel was dead, and all Israel had lamented him, and buried him in Ramah, even in his own city."

After the death of Samuel Saul got into trouble with the Philistines; but he had so far departed from the Lord, that he could get no answers to his petitions. In this condition he sought a woman who had a familiar spirit. The record reads as follows:—

"And the Philistines gathered themselves together, and came and pitched in Shunem; and Saul gathered all Israel together, and they pitched in Gilboa. And when Saul saw the host of the Philistines, he was afraid, and his heart greatly trembled. And when Saul inquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets. Then said Saul unto his servants, Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and inquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at Endor. And Saul disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night: and he said, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and bring me him up, whom I shall name unto thee. And the woman said unto him, Behold, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath cut off those that have familiar spirits, and the wizards, out of the land: wherefore then layest thou a snare for my life, to cause me to die? And Saul sware to her by the Lord, saying, As the Lord liveth, there shall no punishment happen to thee for this thing. Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel. And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice: and the woman spake to Saul, saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou art Saul. And the king said unto her, Be not afraid: for what sawest thou? And the woman said unto Saul, I saw gods ascending out of the earth. And he said unto her, What form is he of? And she said, An old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and he stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself."—1 Sam. 28: 4-14.

Why did Saul go to a woman that had a familiar spirit? Because that spirit, or demon, had a part to perform in the manifestation. His work was to present to his medium—the woman—a mental picture of the person with whom Saul wished to communicate; let her describe what she saw, so as to convince Saul that she saw Samuel, and then the familiar spirit would talk through his medium—the woman—what he thought Samuel would be likely to say, if he was really present. In this way the demons sought to get control over those who consulted their mediums, just as they do at the present day.

After the demon had presented to the woman mental pictures of "gods ascending out of the earth," Saul feels anxious to know if she has seen Samuel. The demon then changes the sight, and she sees "an old man, . . . covered with a mantle." Yet, all this time the real "Samuel was dead," and buried at Ramah, some sixty miles from where the woman was operating with her "familiar spirit," who knew how Samuel looked, and was dressed when alive, and had only to form a mental picture of him, and present it to the woman, just as a mesmerizer presents mental pictures to his subjects. Had Saul inquired of the woman where she saw the gods, and Samuel with his mantle, and ventured to have stepped to the spot and given it a careful examination, he would have found no gods, Samuel, nor mantle present, any more than we find the substance in the place of the shadow. After the woman had described what she saw, "Saul perceived [from her description] that it was Samuel." Saul did not see Samuel. Why not, if he was really present?

After the familiar spirit had presented a mental picture of Samuel to the woman, and had gained Saul's confidence, he proceeds to speak through his medium—the woman—what he thought would be most likely to make Saul think that Samuel was actually present.

THE CHRISTIAN UNION.—Is the name of an independent weekly journal, claiming to be unsectarian, published by J. B. Ford & Co., 39 Park Row, New York, at $2.50 a year. It is for christians of all denominations. Henry Ward Beecher is Editor-in-chief. It contains sixteen pages, large quarto size, and is neatly executed.

THE MANUFACTURER AND BUILDER is a valuable monthly for mechanics, well illustrated, and ably conducted. It has thirty-two large quarto pp. It is published by Western & Co., 37 Park Row, N. Y. Price $1.50 a year.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

CHICAGO.

Dear Crisis:—Your friends here still live. Yes, and more alive than ever before, for they are continually drawing water from the wells of salvation. This being so, it is inevitable that good results should be witnessed. For some months there has been little of what is ordinarily understood as "special interest," but there has been an appreciable deepening of the religious current; a gradual growth in grace and power; so that to-day we believe nearly every one interested in and acquainted with the progress of the cause in Chicago will say there is very much to encourage. The spirit of unity prevails, and a desire for the salvation of souls is becoming, at least with some, the absorbing thought.

The correspondence of our papers very often misleads readers by its high coloring of common-place events, and results in disappointment to those readers when they get a personal acquaintance with the facts. The intention of the writer may be good, but he is misled into an exaggerated idea of that of which he writes. We will try to avoid that mistake. It is true, though, that some of God's people here have been brought through trials to enjoy a higher walk, and, from the grave of loved ones, the sick bed, or the disappointment of earthly hopes, have come nearer the throne.

Why should n't we live near God? 'T is his hand that feeds and protects us; 't was his love which moved to the salvation of our souls from death; and at the end he has promised to give us the victory. Yet, some deny him; some follow a great way off; and others the Lord has somewhat against because they have left their first love. Jesus is wounded in the house of his friends; his name is forgotten, and his cause is dishonored. Religion's covering is seen on the devil's back, and where all belongs to Christ, the world is master, and holds a mortgage on precious souls, for which the "price of blood" has been paid by Jesus.

Why should n't we stand up for the truth in theory, and the true in practice, when the mass of those who have a name to live are dead? O, if Jesus and his word ever needed firm friends, they do now. How it touches our sympathy to see the already grief-burdened Savior pierced anew so heartlessly by those who say they are his followers; and how it stirs the mind and hand to activity in the cause of the Lord, when we see it waning for want of faithful supporters. We must, dear ones, be all on one side or the other. If we make the choice ourselves, and elect to stand among the tried and pure ones, then the coming day will not have any terror for us; but, oh! how sad it will be to see those who have hoped to reach the kingdom, but have still all along been undecided, standing with one foot in the narrow way, and the other in the death road, at last forced to take the position they hoped to avoid, and the decision they failed to make, made for them.

"Wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Don't forget the instruction; and while we defend the truth, and do our duty, let us be gentle, full of love and faith, and so by our example hold up Jesus. J.

Chicago, Jan. 14th, 1870.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$287.07
R. R. Holbrook	5.00
E. W. Latham	.70
Sarah Taylor	1.00
Mary S. Barker	1.00

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$40.06
Lydia Shipman	1.00

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$555.65
J. B. Morgan (payment of pledge)	10.00
S. L. Hubbard " " "	2.00
Mrs. A. A. Munger	1.00

S. N. A. CAMPMEETING FUND.

(To help make up the deficiency in the receipts.)

Previous acknowledgments	$102.00
C. S. Sherman	50.00
G. H. Bundy (payment of pledge)	5.00

For the World's Crisis.

CHELSEA CONFERENCE.

The late session of the State Conference at Chelsea was an exceeding good meeting. It commenced well, and grew better every day till its close. The peculiar characteristics of the meeting were love and good fellowship, and quite an interest for more effort for the salvation of men by the preaching of the gospel, where the door could be opened.

Those who attended were made as comfortable as possible by providing for them in the lower hall, so they could readily attend all the prayer-meetings, which were spiritual and lively, and added to the interest of our meeting. The preaching was excellent, and adapted to the times. All said it was good to be there. And I am happy to say it has left us in a better condition than before the meeting. These conferences of days, if we had more of them, would be better for the cause of Christ.

But there is a culpable neglect on the part of the brethren, in making an effort to attend them. They might be made an agency of great good in the State. I hope when one is called in the future, all will attend and help forward the good work. L. BOUTELL.

For the World's Crisis.

GOOD TIDINGS FROM HOME.

Letter after letter has reached us, of late, from Concord, N. H., bearing such good news, that we cannot help feeling to exclaim, Oh that we, too, could have enjoyed the conference meetings, and met the dear children of the Most High, as they blended their voices in songs of praise to his blessed name. A little while since, and many harps were hung on the willow, because of the coldness and division among the flock. We saw it, and were sad. But while at Alton Bay camp, what a good work was commenced, and it did our heart good to behold the spirit of love and union that characterized the social meetings, held in the Concord tent; and bless the Lord, we still hear the good work goes on.

It was then our privilege to go home and spend a few weeks, and how different the church atmosphere seemed from what we had sometimes felt it. We labored pleasantly in both meetings, and among the children, with Sr. Mellen, and the Lord still poured out his Spirit, and from night to night we enjoyed a feast, first at one house, then the other. For all this we sincerely thanked the Lord; and though it so soon came time to bid adieu to loved ones, and return to the mission field, where toil, privation, and danger awaited us in this great city, to be isolated and alone, though surrounded by thousands of people, our heart still lingered with the loved ones, with whom we had taken such sweet counsel, and we have been continually hearing just what we expected to, that the blessed work "still goes on." Love and harmony prevails, and sinners are being converted. To all who have sent us such word, we have long desired to respond, and now do so by saying, Glory be to God in the highest. Let us be ever faithful to him, and let our light shine as those who are looking and waiting for our Lord.

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." Rom. 13: 12.

"And when that bright morning in splendor shall dawn,
Our tears will be ended, our sorrows all gone;
The saints then immortal in glory shall reign,
The Bride and the Bridegroom forever remain."

Pray for those whom the Master has bidden to go out at the eleventh hour, and compel them to come in, that his house may be filled; for the time is fast approaching when the guests will all be chosen, and the Master will rise up and shut the door. We grow weary and worn now; but we are calmly looking forward to that time for rest, when Father's family will all be gathered, to part no more.

Yours in the Lord, M. E. DOW.

New York, Jan. 14th, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

AN EXPLANATION AND APOLOGY.

While I was in the east last fall, I was solicited by authorized members in various churches, to come and spend some time in preaching to them. I then purposed to visit the east again during the winter, at which time I would favor as many as possible, intending to arrange my appointments long enough beforehand to secure an open door. Circumstances unavoidable seemed to forbid my coming at all, and when at last I decided to come, it was at a late hour, only giving me time to reach the quarterly meeting in our association, with no arrangement for further appointments.

On my return to Boston, I hastened to the office of the "Crisis," and carefully looked over the list of appointments, and found that the churches in Maine, New Hampshire, and Mass., where I had been solicited to come, were supplied for two and three weeks to come. I felt that the Lord would have me return to my field in the State of New York, where the cry comes constantly, "Come over and help us."

I trust this will serve as an apology, and release me from the obligation I am under to those to whom I made a conditional promise, that I would remember them should the Lord guide my steps eastward. I am still in the work, and at the work, which claims my highest ambition and noblest affection. I left the State of New York after a series of meetings in four different places, not having visited the spot which I call home for more than eight weeks. God's ways are not our ways. May it be mine ever to be found walking in his way, and doing his work. One of olden time said, "And being in the way the Lord led me;" and truly if we are "in the way," we shall be led aright, though it may be in a way that we know not. Let us still trust the hand that doeth all things well.

Boston, Mass. ELVIRA S. JENNINGS.

For the World's Crisis.

WARNING.

Brethren and Sisters:—Please remember that hypocrites are not that class of unfortunate persons on whom we are required by Christ to bestow our money and care. Remember that there are those traveling for a living, who claim to be our brethren, and Christ's ministers, who give false names and get money and shelter from our brethren. Last summer one claiming to be Elder Geo. Thomson, of Wis., appeared in various parts as a sick brother, borrowing money to get home; claiming acquaintance with me, and giving me credit for giving him money, which is false, unless he is the impostor who has been prowling about some five years, as an invalid soldier, under the name of Bigelow; who claimed that his mother was an Adventist, and had the pictures of Miller, Himes, and others; lived in New Hampshire; was acquainted with Bro. Grant, Bro. Wellcome, and others, who had aided him.

This same Bigelow is the one who now tells of the same acquaintances and friends, and who calls his name Eld. Wm. Sweet, of Minnesota; and tried a game in Bath lately, telling the brethren he knew me, and would like to see me. The Lord seemed to direct me there the same day, and he sought to avoid me; but being obliged to come to the scratch, he left town suddenly, to deceive others perhaps, under another name. Look out for deceivers. I. C. WELLCOME.

MORE RASCALITY.

Although the pretended George Thomson has been exposed in the Times, and also in the Crisis, we learn he still continues his swindling tricks upon our brethren east. His last operations were at Springfield, Mass. George Thomson, the real George Thomson, is in Wisconsin; has not been out of the State for months.

We hear, also, of another swindler traveling among our brethren in Maine. His trick is revealed in the following letter:—

"INFORMATION WANTED.—Bro. Himes:—When at Bath, Maine, Sunday, Dec. 26th, I found a man amongst our brethren who called himself Eld. W. Sweet, of Backsville, Brown Co., Minn., whose name is in the list of preachers of Minnesota in the Times. He claims to have been in Maine several months, preaching; to have been robbed of his money in the cars, and to be much out of health, and a subject of charity and sympathy. He is some forty years old, light complexion, lame in a leg and arm, wears a moustache, high cheek bones, medium size, weighs one hundred and sixty pounds. His manner, general appearance, and various statements, caused misgivings whether he is Elder W. Sweet. Who can tell us whether Eld. W. Sweet is absent from home? I. C. WELLCOME.

Elder Wm. Sweet is an elderly man—over sixty years of age, and is not lame, and was, the last we heard of him, at work in the Lord's vineyard in Western Minnesota.

Will our brethren please remember this one thing: that all western ministers have a certificate, renewed annually, and signed by the proper Conference officers of the State to which they belong. If a man comes along asking for money, ask him for his letters from his conference. If he does not have a certificate of membership in good standing, less than one year old, set him down as an impostor. Be very careful how you give or lend money to strangers anyway; but be sure and ask begging ministers for their letters, and if your suspicions are aroused in any way, write at once to those who are likely to know about the matter. We cannot afford to spend money on impostors.—Christian Times.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?

BRO. GRANT:—I send an extract of a letter from a sister, with some remarks of my own. She says:—

"I am in great perplexity. The Christian church in this place has been holding a protracted meeting for more than five weeks, and there has not been a convert yet. Now the perplexity is this: What is the reason that so little good is done? I never had such feelings about meetings in all my life. When they first talked of having them, I felt to rejoice, and hoped much good might be done, and went to meeting with a great anxiety for the salvation of sinners, and felt like taking right hold in the work, if it should seem to be duty. Well, when I got there all of my anxiety was gone. I felt perfectly indifferent. I thought it was the work of the adversary to keep me from doing anything, and prayed the Lord to help me feel right about it; but it made no difference. When the hour for the meeting came round, it would seem as though I could not stay at home; and as soon as I got to the church, the same feeling would come again. I did not know but what it was prejudice, though God knows I desire to be free from that."

The writer, in speaking of a sermon which she heard, quotes from it as follows:—

"If an angel were commissioned to go to the most distant planet in the universe, and bring from it a grain of sand, and it should take a million of years to go and return, and he was to work until he had gathered every grain of sand in the whole universe of God together, the torments of the damned in hell would be only just begun."

How can any church expect to prosper under such preaching, so opposed to God and his truth? Does God love the poor sinner? if so, will he keep him forever burning, and never burn up? Is this love? Nay, rather let the word stand: "I will early destroy all the wicked of the land."—Ps. 101: 8. "The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy."—Ps. 145: 20. How important that those who have the truth should hold it up in the love of it. I trust that sister has by this time, with all others, found out that it is not prejudice, and that she must let her light shine. O God, bless all the standard-bearers. Thine for the truth.

GEO. A. STREETER.

NEWS FROM ALL THE WORLD.

ISTHMUS OF SUEZ CANAL—ROME AND THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

The papers are teeming with eloquent descriptions of the opening of the Suez Canal. Supposing that you will not find room for a hundredth part of what has been written, I send the best short quotation that I have seen, clipped from the correspondence of the N. Y. Times. It is well worth reading.

POLITICAL ASPECTS OF THE CANAL QUESTION.

Yet a few paragraphs upon the national and political aspects of the canal question, and this series of articles will be ended, unless a few bits of incident and gossip shall remain to be gathered up. A certain silent retributive justice lives, and its hand is sure to deal a return to nations, as well as individuals, for their acts; not always, perhaps, in what we should call an exact proportion, but sufficiently so to indicate the existence of unavoidable laws and principles. Therefore the general sentiment I feel about me may be expressed as: "England and Turkey combined to oppose the inception and completion of the canal; England and Turkey shall suffer through the canal." There can be no doubt that it was largely owing to English influence at first, and to the Sultan's jealousy of the Viceroy afterward, that the sublime Porte so long refused to sanction the firmans of concession. England saw in this enterprise of French capital and French labor more than a commercial undertaking, and England feared the sudden development in Egypt of Napoleon the First's great ideas of empire, and she feared for her supremacy in the East. Between England and the English there is often a great gulf fixed; and thus it was that while many Englishmen greeted heartily the project, and while M. de Lesseps was begging in his famous letter the good offices of the English Ambassador in Turkey, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, the influence of the Palmerston Government succeeded, through that very Ambassador, in deciding the Sultan in his obstinacy, which was only broken down at last by the general sense of Europe, as implied in the determined attitude of Napoleon III. And it was engineering England that scouted the plan, and threw every moral obstacle in the way of the projector.

Now, with the opening of the canal, the scoffers are stultified, and the scale seems ready to turn. Not that England is to be less welcome and less privileged in the transit than any other nation, but that a part of her rich trade and carriage is likely to pass from her hands. Italy and Greece are arousing themselves, and the Venetian steamers calling at Brindisi are already anticipating even the swift vessels that ply between Alexandria and Marseilles, although the laborious surmounting of Mount Cenis is still a cause of great delay and cost. The way is now clear for all these keen, quick traders into the East, where their ancestors found fame and fortune, and they mean to avail themselves of the opportunity. Their vessels are new, of light draft, and of great speed, and they themselves have the greatest sympathy with real Orientalism, and the readiest capacity for assimilation with it. The Peninsular and Oriental Company will no longer be sure of a virtual monopoly of the Indian travel, for the Brindisi line only needs a little encouragement to push its boats down through the canal to the Red Sea and the Indian waters; it is already making its mark by a rapid passenger and mail service between Paris and Egypt, and when the municipality of Brindisi shall have ready its new hotel, and the railway shall have laid its track to the pier, nobody who does not love the chopping, churning Mediterranean will hesitate a moment before deciding in favor of this route. To a certain extent France will assume the same position relative to England, distributing from Marseilles as England does from London and Liverpool; but France will not be benefited so greatly as Italy and Greece and Austria. She has a great connection already, while theirs is small; her growth will be slow and theirs rapid. Venice with her boats and her merchants: Milan and Turin with their splendid shops;—Vienna reaching far down the Danubian country, and Athens with her adventurers—these are the cities to profit most perceptibly from the freedom of trade through the Isthmus of Suez, and while commerce must extend its limits and its activity, a portion of their enrichment must still come from a diversion of the privileges enjoyed for so many modern decades by the merchants and shipmen of Great Britain.

The only political event which at present seems possible to connect with this maritime highway, is a conflict between Egypt and the Porte, and the subsequent conquest of Turkey by Russia. It needs no intimate or exhaustive comparison to show that Ismail Pacha, with all his vanities and littlenesses, has yet in him the spirit of an enlightened age, and that he covets for Egypt all the advantages that the railway, the telegraph, the post office, uniform laws, and an immigration of intelligent foreigners can confer; while the Sultan, with his ostentatious splendor, and his precepts of obedience and good governance, has the spirit only of a barbarous boor, and despises the civilized stranger, disguisedly perhaps, but with the rancor of a true Turk. The Khedive's ambition and the fame he has justly won for himself by the marvelously increased production and trade of Egypt, the sting of his professedly docile reply to the letter of the Porte, and the position in which he now stands among progressive men, have evidently aroused the jealousy of the Sultan against a vassal who is likely to become a rival. The rumors from Constantinople begin to take on a warlike tone, and it is not improbable that the Sultan may seek to coerce his viceroy into a becoming submission and stolidity. If this be so the fate of Turkey is sealed, unless her salvation comes from a unlooked-for hand. Russia, chagrined and checked, but unconquered and unchanged by the campaign in the Crimea, will need no better escape than the aid of Egypt, struggling for civilization against Turkey the uncivilized, and her long lines of railways would almost in a day be able to throw into action the armies which she could not move in her last effort to win the domination of the Bosphorus. She will never be contented till Constantinople is here, and, although her rule is a despotism, yet it is a despotism so much more intelligent and moderate than the arbitrary brutality of Turkey, that I, for one, am not ready to believe that any European Power would risk its own peace and material prosperity by another interference in behalf of the Sultan, especially if his effort were tending to the deposition of a Governor who is in harmony with the general sentiment of the age, and a support to the institutions of civilization. Strange enough would it be if, after all, this noble work, whose prospective interests were all in behalf of peace, as M. de Lesseps pleaded in his Egypte et Turquie, should be the means of making Egypt a Kingdom and Turkey a Province!

Next may naturally follow some account of

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

The following is condensed mainly from the Rome correspondence of the London Times:—

In the year 50, after the birth of our Lord, some differences having arisen between the apostles Peter and Paul concerning the admission of heathens (Gentiles) in the Christian community, the worldly unknown, poor, and persecuted first Presbyters of narrowly limited christendom met in Jerusalem. Besides Petrus, and Paulus, several apostles belonged to this assembly. Golgotha's bloody hill overlooked them, and many a citizen was yet alive who had been a witness of the gloomy sacrifice achieved on its summit. In what poor wearing, under what simple roof, have these fervent believers met, who, professing self-denying, brotherly love, equality and poverty, were ready to undergo martyrdom for these principles of their divine Master. Now let the scenery change and lead us to the left wing of St. Peter's Church in Rome, where, under the gigantic roof of the grandest masonry of the world, which, laid out in velvet, silk and gold, is converted into a splendid hall, assemble the Catholic bishops of our modern times, dressed up in garments of gaudy glittering gold, surrounded by life guards in splendid uniforms, and attended by innumerable many-colored footmen, in richly gallooned liveries. What apostolic problem does this assembly inspire? Have they not met to seize the fading rule over kings and nations again in a last and desperate effort? Will you find the christian virtues in these proud and worldly minds, who are claiming empire lost and forfeited? Will they aspire to martyrdom who aim at sovereign rule.

Public opinion finding in religious matters no reason whatever for the convocation of this Council, is compelled to suppose it taken in with political ends, and several dispositions lately adopted by the Roman curia seem to fortify such a surmise. None of the Catholic Powers have been invited to send a representative to this assembly, and although such a measure has been taken merely to exclude the revolutionary and unacknowledged Italy, with the rest, still it seems to conceal a yet deeper meaning. Secondly, the strictest secrecy had been imposed on all the congregations, a species of boards, who prepare matters on which the Council will have to decide. What in the world has the Council to do in political matters, if not to condemn, in a solemn and general way, the very foundation of our modern laws, which endeavor to introduce in Europe the principles of liberty? You happy citizens of a free country will scarcely be able to understand that an assembly of priests manifests the presumption to combat, in the nineteenth century, such principles as confessional liberty, civil matrimony, lay instruction, the freedom for scientific researches, the liberty of the press, publicity in all acts of Government, and the representative system. Imagine the difficulties which throng on such an assembly from all sides, in our days, where the positive sciences have attained such marvelous results in natural history, physiology and chemistry; and where the studies of compared philology lead us through the former labyrinths of our history and origin in such an ingenious manner. Will it not be very difficult for this quintessence of clerical learning to satisfy the claim which contemporaneous curiosity is entitled to lay on such an extraordinary meeting of eight hundred bishops? And if now, as it seems more than probable to impartial reasoning, expectation should not be satisfied, the authority of the Roman curia should be lost in general contempt, and the Popedom drowned in universal hilarity.

On due consideration of all the mentioned difficulties which await the future Council, it appears with striking evidence that Pius IX. has placed Popedom in a great dilemma by his vanity, and that the very fact of its convocation hides a vital question.

I have not the time just now to unfold the web of the great party contest that has been silently brewing and the rival forces which at this moment face each other for the first time in the lists. It is indeed a great contest, with far vaster issues at stake than can be taken in a glance. It is not merely points of speculative substance, brave and immediate questions of practical politics, that will be materially affected by what comes forth as the decision of the Fathers now in Council.

The more tremendous an engine is, and the more completely under command, the greater is the responsibility of using it. Thus if Pius IX. could, by a word, overthrow every heretical or schismatical throne in Europe to-morrow, he would certainly hesitate to plunge the world into anarchy, and hand it over probably to a reign of democracy. Small weapons, with small results and a little uncertainty of action, may be used lightly; not so with weapons of precision and deadly force. Even our own statesmen, trained in the school of faction, and well prepared for all the emergencies likely to occur to common politicians, have sometimes found themselves suddenly armed with too large and too willing a majority. What if the Pope should find himself driving a runaway team, one only too anxious to brave the wrath of Emperors, kings and nations, without thinking much of the certain consequences to the charioteer. However, by means of the presidents, secretaries, and under secretaries, of his own appointment; the Pope will always be able to apply the brake as well as to put on the steam; and it may turn out that he has to do the former rather than the latter."

The voting by nations, according to the above programme, is fixed for to-morrow (Tuesday,) and the streets are positively dangerous with Bishops driving about in every direction canvassing for votes. I have been out a good deal to-day, as it happened, in that vast labyrinth between the Tiber and the Corso, and could not think what was the matter. I said to myself I certainly shall be run over by a Bishop at last. I was now told the reason, but I can assure you no county town could be more lively at a contested election.

On the above occasion, the tenth the reports of the preparatory Commissions were delivered to the Council—to the assembled fathers I believe I ought to call them. There is a cry of indignation, strong and wide, I hear, at the contents of these reports, and the Bishops declare that they are treated like children, in what way or ways I shall soon know more. But they are called on to receive in their integrity, and without doubt or qualification, all sorts of propositions, on which it is needless they should be committed. There is a rumor I cannot believe, that one Bishop has been positively frightened away by the sight of the work cut out for him, or something else in the proceedings. Of course, flight in such a case would be leaping down a precipice to escape a bear, for the victims of terror or of conscience would certainly lose his See.

C. COLEGROVE.

For the World's Crisis.

NORTH BENTON.

God has been moving by his Spirit on the people of No. Benton, N. H. We commenced a meeting in the above named place with Bro. T. E. Lang, Jr., Dec. 29th, and held it nearly two weeks. Numbers of the most hardened sinners were converted, many reclaimed, and some baptized. The prejudice of outsiders gave way, and the way of truth seems to be open there. All praise to him who "hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

A. A. HOYT.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE CONN. A. C. CONFERENCE.

The conference convened according to notice. But few of the preachers and delegates were present; yet from the reports made by them, we found that the cause was by no means without its advocates. The delegates reported union among its membership, and some additions; while the ministry reported good interest where they had labored, with some conversions. Sabbath Schools were found in some places to be in a flourishing condition. The following resolution was offered:

Whereas, it is desirable that the ministry belonging to this conference may so labor together as not to neutralize each other's efforts in the gospel; therefore,

Resolved, That a meeting of the ministry be called at this conference for the purpose of conferring together in relation to the best means of promoting the above object. Passed.

It was voted that the conference issue certificates of recognition to preachers belonging to the conference in good standing, and a committee was appointed to draft blanks for the purpose. The following resolution was offered and passed:

Whereas, it has been published in the papers throughout the State that Lewis Andrews, of Winsted, is an Elder in the Second Advent church; therefore,

Resolved, That we, the Conn. A. C. Conference, do not, neither have we ever recognized Lewis Andrews as a member of this body, or an Elder in the church. Also the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that no church should be entitled to representation in this conference, either by its ministry or by delegation, that is not called an Advent Christian, or a Second Advent church. Passed.

It was voted that we withhold a certificate of recognition from Elder A. D. Flagg until the sitting of the next conference. Adjourned.

G. L. Teeple, Sec. of Conf.

Correspondence.

From Bro. E. O. Allen.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to say something to my brethren and sisters in the love-feast department.

Dear brethren and sisters, I always love to read the out-gushing experience from your pens in the Crisis. What little experience is printed is precious, and I hope the testimony on experience will increase. For the first time, I will give you a little of my experience in the Crisis, if Bro. Grant will allow it a place.

I entered the school of Christ Jan. 25th, 1835. When I entered, my sins were pardoned, and I was free and happy. My evidence was so clear that I have never doubted but that my sins were forgiven and I then was saved by grace; but I soon learned it was only the first letter in the alphabet of experience. After a very bright and clear season of rejoicing, my next lesson was in tribulation, both in temporal and spiritual things. In my first start, I would not pray about temporal things, for fear of worldly-mindedness; but I soon found my wisdom insufficient to steer my own boat in temporal things, and run her aground, and would have been shipwrecked if I had not turned to the Lord for wisdom and deliverance. In order to get a helping hand, I confessed my wisdom was not fit to do a common business. I prayed the Lord to pardon and deliver me, by letting me sell and pay my debts, or I must be crushed by officers. I submitted my business unto the Lord, with a promise that if the Lord would open my way to sell, I would consecrate my business unto him. To my surprise my way was opened, my place was sold, my debts were paid without reproaching the cause of Christ by not paying my debts. This was such an opening, I truly saw it was of the Lord, and I felt to praise him for the blessed hand of providence stretched out to me. I had tried to sell to the same person, and every other person I could think of, and could not open my own way; but when submitted to the Lord, my way was opened with ease.

From that time, I have trusted myself and all I possessed in the hands of the Lord, and have found him to be everything I need against enemies without and within, Satan not excepted. As to my property, he has been my wisdom to manage. He has been my insurance on every hand. Glory be to his name.

What I wish to say to you is, consecrate yourselves and all you possess, and pray about yourself and business, and do no business without prayer; and all you can give, in the name of the Lord, will help make your insurance the stronger; and all you can consecrate to the Lord's hands, to be guided by him, is perfectly safe. The devil cannot take it out of the hands of the Lord.

This is only one point in my experience. I may take up some other point, if it would be in order. Come, brethren, give some one point at a time of your experience. Let us have a little exchange of trade in experience. I wish you all a happy new year.

Springfield, Jan. 3d. E. O. Allen.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to drop a few lines to the children of the Lord.

Dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, we have entered on the first month of 1870. It may be the last year that we all shall have to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, to save souls. Are we all ready ourselves for the judgment? if not, may the Lord help us to get ready and keep ready till Jesus comes. O God, help us to do all we can to save some. O that I had my health as I had it once. But I cannot do but a little. I mean to do what I can. Blessed be the name of the Lord, for what he has done for me.

Dear brethren and sisters, do you try to follow Jesus fully, and to do all you can in the name of the Lord to save men and women, so that you may have it said to you all—"Come"? O my God, have mercy on the people, and save all that mercy can save.

Well, brethren and sisters, as to my health, it is about the same as it has been for two or three months. I do not know as it ever will be any better till I see Jesus, and be made like him. I am striving to live a holy life every day and hour. O how blessed good the Lord is to me. My dear brethren and sisters, do be faithful to God. Do try to serve him with all your hearts, till deliverance comes. I ask your prayers for me, that I may be holy till I see Jesus and be made like him. Farewell. Thy brother in Christ,

B. P. Manning.

Goffstown, N. H., Jan. 13th, 1870.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. J. W. Morrow writes from Greensburg, Ind., Dec. 6th:—"I was born and raised by Methodist parents, my father being a local preacher from the time I can remember until his death; consequently I had imbibed all the dogmas of that sect, for at least fifty-four years, being now in my sixty-fifth year. In the year 1859, being postmaster in Laurel, Ind., and having access to the periodicals coming to that office, there was one came which attracted my attention more than all the rest,—the Bible Expositor. I picked it out, being a Bible believer, and examined it, and laid it aside, saying to my old friends—J. L., and T. H., should they ever make me believe the doctrine the Expositor advocated, I would burn the Bible as soon as I could put it in the fire; but as David said, this 'I said in my haste'; for the more I read it and compared it with the word of God, the more I found I had been led by the blind, and I was leading the blind into a deep and dark ditch. I stopped suddenly, after having served the M. E. church in the capacity of a class-leader for twenty-five years. It was a trial, but my eyes were opened, and I thank my God for it. I have been reading the 'World's Crisis' occasionally, as I could get it, and I find more substantial Bible reading matter in it than all the religious periodicals I have had access to for forty years past. Many of my old Methodist friends are looking this matter over, and are coming to the conclusion that they too have been mistaken, and are ready to embrace the truth, as opportunity may serve them.

O how I would love to write as my heart feels toward you. I would gladly talk with you a day, a week, a month; yes, brother, at all opportunities, if you were near. I am trying to contend for the old apostolic faith, and this, of course, brings upon me the scorn of the members and ministers of the so-called orthodox church; but I have hitherto withstood them, because the truth has nothing to fear from investigation."

Bro. P. A. Smith, Jacksonville, Fla., writes, Jan. 17th, 1870:—"My health is better. I am now among the pine woods of Florida, in the by-ways, sounding the last message to the sons and daughters of Adam, to prepare for the great day, which hasteth greatly."

Bro. E. McCulloch, Brimfield, Ms., Jan. 14th, writes:—"We have just closed a series of meetings in Brimfield, in connection with Bro. Preble. The Lord has blest us abundantly. The church has been comforted and strengthened, sinners have been converted, and three young men and one young lady have been buried with Christ in baptism, and others have made up their minds to go forward when an opportunity shall present itself to them. This has been one of the best meetings we ever attended. To God be all the glory."

Bro. E. Owen writes from Honeoye, N. Y., Jan. 14th:—"The Lord is graciously reviving his work in this place. Union meetings have been held some two weeks. The Advent and Presbyterian churches unite and hold meetings alternately at our hall and their church. Such a feeling was never known to exist here before; so say those who are best qualified to judge. Quite a number have professed conversion. To God be all the glory. Meetings are to continue for the present."

A Service in Rome.—Dr. Samuel Osgood writes in his latest letter from Rome:

"I attended a festival at the Church of Maria in Via the first Sunday, and the services were a flood of beauty. It was in commemoration of Jesus of Nazareth, and was, I think, an effort to revive and represent his early home life by appropriate pictures and music. The altar was a little paradise of lights and flowers; and the music was of the most exquisite character, with a union of a grand organ and orchestra, and a choir of men, among whom the tenor voices showed a marvelous sweetness and power, such as I never heard before. A bishop presided with great dignity, and his voice was full of tenderness, of reverence. There was nothing of the sham so often seen in our Catholic churches, but there were real flowers, marble, silver, and gold. My companion, a thorough Puritan, allowed that he was charmed, and that he had seen this Catholic worship in its beauty for the first time in his life."

A Non Sequitur.—An English clergyman in Lancashire was lately endeavoring to prove that doers of good were always in the minority, and by parity of reasoning, that the Conservative party, being in the minority, were right. To illustrate, he said: "Paul was in a minority, but who was right? Peter was in a minority, but who was right? Christ was in a minority, but who was right?" But the reverend orator was literally "sat upon" when some one in the gallery shouted—"Judas Iscariot was in a minority, but who was right?" The effect was laughable. The lecturer was struck dumb, and for some minutes could not utter a word; and the audience roared.

Obituaries.

Paul. Died in Stoneham, Me., Nov. 1st, 1869, Bro. Joseph Paul, aged sixty-six years and eight months.

I have been acquainted with Bro. Paul ever since I was a mere child, and believe he is now resting in hope of the first resurrection. Bro. Paul was loved most by those who knew him best. He leaves a large circle of children and friends to mourn. Among them is the writer,

Elisha Johnson.

Umberhind. Died in Richmond, Me., Dec. 28th, 1869, Deacon John Umberhind.

He lived and died a good man. He died firm in the faith of soon living again. Words of comfort were spoken to the mourning circle, from Rev. 14: 13. L. L. Howard.

Hunton. Died at Mt. Vernon, Me., Oct. 27th, 1869, Horace W., son of David and Susannah Hunton, aged thirteen years, nine months and twenty-three days. L. L. Howard.

Pray. Died in Providence, R. I., Nov. 1st, 1869, Thomas Pray, aged sixty-five years.

S. A. A. P.

Cheney. Died of consumption, in Rutland, Vt., Jan. 15th, 1870, my wife, Salome F., aged fifty-three years.

Sermon by S. G. Mathewson, founded on Ps. 88: 10. Thos. A. Cheney.

Fisk. Died in Epsom, N. H., Jan. 18th, 1870, Sister Jerusha A. Fisk, in the thirty-fourth of her age.

She sleeps in Jesus. J. Parsons.

Fogg. Died in Epsom, Jan. 8th, 1870, in the 19th year of his age, Clarence A. Fogg, son of James M. and Sr. Lucy Fogg. J. Parsons.

Married.

PICKROY—McCULLOCK. At the house of the bride's father, Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 11th, 1870, John Pickroy, of La Moille, Bureau Co., Ill., and Ella M. McCullock, of Rochester, N. Y.

TILDEN—CRANDELL. In Dearborn, Mich., at the house of the bride's father, Wednesday P. M., Jan. 5th, 1870, by Eld. J. M. Snook, Mr. Clifton H. Tilden and Miss Sarah A. Crandell.

FRAZIER—BAKER. In Casco, St. Clair Co., Mich., at the house of the bridegroom's father, Sunday A. M., Oct. 10th, 1869, by Eld. J. M. Snook, Mr. Franklin Frazier and Miss Anna Baker.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Paris, Jan. 18, 1870. There was a great demonstration last night on the boulevard Montemartre by the friends of M. Rochefort.

The crowd was dispersed by the military without a conflict, and the Boulevard occupied by the troops till after three o'clock this morning.

The police was also very active all night.

There was considerable disorder and many arrests were made.

Paris, Jan. 19. Copies of Belgian journals intended for circulation in France have been intercepted and seized by the French authorities.

This act, coming after the declaration that foreign journals were to be freed from censorship, excites much surprise, and the radical journals charge the Government with inconsistency and bad faith.

The preliminary examination in the case of Prince Pierre Bonaparte, charged with the murder of Victor Noir, has commenced before the Police Court, and will probably be completed this week. M. Rochefort has been summoned to appear before the court on Saturday as a witness in the case. The High Court of Justice will be convened in a few days to try the accused.

Ten thousand men have struck work at Creusot. They have made no further demonstrations as yet. President Schneider, who is proprietor of the works at Creusot, goes there to-night. The strike is considered a grave affair.

Paris, Jan. 19. All symptoms of agitation have disappeared, and the city is perfectly tranquil to-night.

Paris, Jan. 20. The Ministry has declared its intention of proposing that all offences of the Press be tried before a Jury. But as this proposition cannot for some time become a law, M. Rochefort, whose trial soon takes place, will not have the privilege of a Jury trial. The Radical journals charge the Government with pressing the arraignment of the Deputy for the purpose of avoiding the operation [illegible] in his case of the proposed law.

Florence, Jan. 20. The National Parliament is summoned by royal decree to meet on the 7th of March.

Rome, Jan. 20. The organization of the Committee on Easter rites and Apostolic Missions is now complete. The committee is largely composed of Eastern prelates, but includes among its members the Bishops of Angouleme, Toronto and Burlington. Cardinal Antonelli has assured the French Ambassador that the Pope will never hesitate to maintain the rights of the Church as equal to those of the State.

Rochefort's Sentence.—Paris, Jan. 22. Henri Rochefort's trial was brought to an end to-day. He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 3000 francs. This sentence does not disturb his position as a Deputy in the Corps Legislatif.

Paris, Jan. 20. A new cable, in the interest of the French Company, to connect England and Brest, has been successfully laid. The shore end, at Salcombe, England, was completed last night.

Berlin, Jan. 21. The Prussian Chamber of Deputies have adopted a bill abolishing the restriction on the liberty of the press.

Florence, Jan. 21. Garibaldi is lying very ill at Caprera, and is confined to his bed-room. Only his family are permitted to see him.

London, Jan. 21. The Lancet has an article respecting the health of the Queen, which occasions much comment and anxiety. It says she has suffered serious attacks of neuralgia, which are attributed to a derangement of her nervous system. This nervousness is due either to exposure, worriment, or excitement.

Rome, Jan. 21. The German Bishops in attendance at the Ecumenical Council had a meeting to-day, and resolved that unless the number of members in dioceses be taken into consideration in the votes held in the Council they will return home in a body. Their action has caused much excitement. Archbishop Dechamps, of Mecklin, who is at the head of the infallibility party in the Ecumenical Council, has been appointed Primate of Belgium.

DOMESTIC.

The St. Louis, Republican of Monday contains full and graphic details of the storm which swept over that city the previous night, brief mention of which we have had by telegraph. Between seven and eight o'clock Sunday evening a full moon shed its radiance over the city, and there was hardly a breath of wind. We copy from the Republican:

"A little past eight o'clock the symptoms of a change began to be evident. Now and then a fitful illumination of lightning exhibited a tumultuous conflict of awful shapes. The gloom deepened and the moon disappeared. The churches were filled with evening congregations, and other places of public gathering different in character had their usual number of spectators and amusement seekers. In fact, everything was as it usually is on a quiet Sunday evening, and consequently in an excellent position to be suddenly thrown into confusion by any startling event. Now the hoarse bellowing in the heavens grew more frequent. Great round heavy drops of water fell like pellets of lead, and little eyrie-like gusts flitted here and there, and vanished—sound and stillness alternated. A general wierdness pervaded the city and people began to feel decidedly uncomfortable. Things being thus made ready, the magnificent drama of the tempest opened, with thunder, lightning, and with rain. An incessant illumination showed the grand chaos of clouds, laced with fluttering ribbons of lightning; while the thunder, the rush of the rain-torrent and the wind formed the diapason of the uproar. Having once commenced, the storm reached its full fury in a marvelously short time, and probably in ten or fifteen minutes had passed its climax. At first a deluge of rain accompanied the wind, and, blown into spray, filled the air and swept in billows through the streets. Then, for a few minutes, hail ensued, but fortunately did not last long, and was not very heavy—sufficient, however, to cause some damage. So sudden were the wind gusts that hats parted company with heads in a manner that utterly outdid the Davenport spirits. Like a whip of cords the rain smote the face and blinded the eyes. All was confusion. Men ran against each other, and fell over curbstones and rolled in the mud. Women were blown out of mortal shape, or into that of a wrecked umbrella. Children were bowled along the streets until deposited against some immovable substance. Horses ran away. Signs blew down. Chimneys tumbled into ruin; boards and shingles and tin roofing and other things, really 'too numerous to mention,' were sucked into the invisible vortices of the whirlwind, and danced and dashed about as if possessed by an animate principle, or swept along the streets like a charge of cavalry. Lamps were blown out, while here and there the dreadful fingers of the wind wrenched massive beams in pieces and burst in the front of buildings, particularly where there were large windows. A thousand fantastic tricks were played by the imps of Euroclydon. In many instances men were caught up bodily and carried some distance, to fall on the slippery and muddy street, or to be banged breathless against a wall or railing."

As usual in St. Louis, notwithstanding it was Sabbath evening, the theatres were in full blast. At the Varieties, which was crowded with people, a terrible panic was occasioned by the fall of a neighboring chimney, which came crashing down upon the roof of the theatre with a noise "louder than the bolts of heaven." A frantic rush was at once made for the doors, and a terrible scene of confusion followed. The approaches to the doors became choked by a confused, screaming mass of scared humanity, while those who were fortunate enough to be nearest the doors, tumbled down stairs headlong, or any other way they could, and communicated the alarm outside. Many leaped from the windows to the ground, a distance of seventeen feet, with perfect recklessness of limb or life. Women fainted and were trodden under the feet of the excited mass, but strange to say, no lives are known to have been lost.

At the Olympic theatre religious exercises were in progress. Here also there was a panic, and the scene at the Varieties was re-enacted, only to a less extent. Many persons suffered from contusions, bruises and broken limbs, but no one was fatally hurt.

A New European Mail Arrangement.—Washington, Jan. 19. The Postmaster General has completed arrangements for an additional weekly mail from New York to Great Britain by the Hamburg American Packet Company's steamers, making a tri-weekly steamship mail trip from New York on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. The mails for Great Britain will hereafter be regularly despatched from New York by the Hamburg line on Tuesdays, by Williams and Guion's line on Thursdays, and by the North German Lloyd's line on Saturdays of each week.

The mails for France direct will be dispatched from New York on Tuesday of each week by Hamburg, and on each alternate Saturday by the French mail line. The mails for North Germany direct will be dispatched from New York by the steamers of the Hamburg line on Tuesdays, and by the steamers of the North German Lloyd's line on Saturday of each week. In addition, the Canadian line will convey a weekly mail to Great Britain, the boats sailing from Portland in winter and Quebec in summer. The Baltimore line of North German Lloyd steamers will convey a semi-monthly mail direct to Germany.

Passing Events.

☞ A curious phenomenon has lately been observed in Germany. Some weeks ago an opening was observed in the earth on a chain of hills near Mergenthiem, close to the road leading from Ingelsingen to Eberstahl. It has gradually increased in extent, assuming the form of a long fissure, about five feet in breadth with perpendicular sides, and of a great depth, estimated at four hundred feet.

☞ Steamboat navigation was resumed with Albany last week, a thing unknown in January for thirty-two years.

☞ The Conn. State prison has never been so crowded as at the present time.

☞ There are great numbers of people out of employment at Montreal. The houses of industry and refuge are full, and there are numerous applicants for charity.

☞ Portland has not a single ship afloat. The last one was sold a few days since.

☞ Rev. Henry Ward Beecher announced to his congregation that he declined to receive the offer recently made to him of an advance of his salary from $12,500 to $20,000 a year. The first intimation he said he had had of such advance having been resolved upon was from the newspapers.

☞ The season is not an exceptional one, in this country alone. At Prince Edward's Island sap-gathering from the maple trees has begun.

☞ Kossuth is in Turin and in abject poverty.

☞ Russian Jews in large numbers are about to emigrate to this country to escape religious persecution.

☞ A. T. Stewart's establishments in New York employ more than eighteen hundred persons, male and female.

☞ Great freshets have occurred in the Province of Chiapa, Mexico. It is reported that over 200 lives have been lost by drowning, and that many valuable farms have been destroyed. Fears of a general revolution in Mexico are daily increasing.

☞ At a meeting of the Washington branch of the Evangelical Alliance, it was stated that there would be a large attendance at the Evangelical Conference, in New York, from Europe, in September.

☞ A Russian paper contains a long article purporting to show that Russia is now in a position to call out a force much more considerable than that of any of the European Powers, in consequence of the completion of the railways, and the new organization of the army, which has rendered it more numerous and better drilled than it has ever been.

☞ All but one of the members of the French Cabinet are bald.

☞ During the present year the first Sunday School ever known in Spain assembled in a building in Seville, over the very spot where lie the ashes of the martyrs of many centuries. And so it comes to pass again that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church.

☞ The Suez hospitalities cost the Khedeve $6,000,000.

☞ English steamers are reported to be going through the Suez canal without let or hindrance. The steamer Stirling, from Glasgow, recently passed through in twelve hours, on her way to Bombay, and other steamers were following. On the Tyne they are building East India steamers constructed specially for the purpose of passing through the canal.

☞ There was one of the biggest snow storms on record in Minnesota, a week ago Sunday. The snow fell to the depth of twenty inches, and was followed by a severe blow, which piled it into drifts and pretty thoroughly blocked up all the railroads; while, to crown all, the mercury went to twenty degrees below zero, Monday night. That is something like the weather we used to have in New England.

☞ An enterprising journalist got into the secret session of the Ecumenical Council as an Eastern Bishop. His Latin betrayed him, and the Papal police escorted him to prison. The tailor that made his Bishop's robe was sent to keep him company.

☞ Certain subterranean noises, says a Spanish paper, similar to those made by a train just starting, have recently been heard at Cadiz. These sounds are produced at intervals in different points of the city, and what is very strange is, that the Governor is almost always informed by anonymous warnings of the hours when the noise will be heard. Several families have quitted Cadiz, not believing themselves in safety.

☞ A fresh and large immigration of Jews from Russia, on account of recent persecutions, is promised by Jewish papers. Funds are about being raised in Europe to aid the movement.

☞ The Pope has a bad cough.

☞ Peas are blossoming in California.

Agricultural Items.

— St. Albans, during the year 1869, shipped 2,395,884 pounds of butter, and 614,267 pounds of cheese. The average price of butter during the year was 40½ cents, and of cheese, 14 cents.

— Dried Eggs. Beat the eggs to a uniform consistency and pour in thin layers upon polished iron plates which are placed in a current of hot air; the paste rapidly dries, and must be packed in hermetically sealed cases. When required for use the dried egg can be dissolved in cold water and beaten to a foam like fresh eggs. It is said that eggs can be preserved for years in this way, and that they retain their agreeable flavor to the last.—Jour. of Applied Chemistry.

— The olive has been cultivated in Florida and on the coast islands of Georgia for nearly a half century. The oil produced from it is represented is fully equal to the best quality of French oil.

— Mr. Charles Arnold, a well-known Canadian horticulturist, says he has tried, with good success, the plan of whitewashing the soil under fruit trees as a protection from the curculio. He pours the whitewash on the ground, and spreads it with a brush so as to completely cover the surface, and says the larva of the curculio will not enter the ground—remaining and dying in the fallen fruit.

—The latest information upon the crops show that in New England the corn crop is less than that of last year by about 16 per cent. The corn growing sections of the West will average a reduction of 20 per cent. Taking everything into consideration, less corn has been grown this year than last. The cotton crop is little more than 10 per cent. above the yield of 1868, or about 27,000,000 commercial bales, or 3,000,000 bales of 400 pounds each. The potato crop is very large.

Notices.

Bro. Hook's Tent.

Bro. Wilfong, of Philadelphia, was brought to Christ through the instrumentality of Bro. J. G. Hook, about two years ago. Before his conversion, he was "a servant of sin" indeed; but for two years has been "a servant of Christ" indeed. He wishes to procure for Bro. H. a tent, as a thank-offering for what the Lord has done for him, and is doing what he can himself for that object; but he needs assistance, and I am authorized to receive contributions from any one I meet in my travels, who may wish to lend a helping hand in the matter. The tent is to be owned by Bro. H., and used as a traveling Bethel, in which perishing sinners may be won to Christ.

Yours in Christ, F. H. Burbank.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. Smith.

Notice.

I will commence a series of meetings in the red school-house, Columbus, St. Clair Co., Mich., beginning Monday evening, Jan. 31st, 1870, and continuing till Feb. 9th. John Snook.

Michigan Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the eastern district of Michigan will be held at the school-house, at Baker's Corner's, Berlin, St. Clair Co., commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, and continuing over Lord's day. Those coming by R. R. will connect at Ridgeway, on the Grand Trunk R. R. with the Mich. Air Line R. R. for Armada Station, where teams will be in attendance to convey friends to Baker's Corners.

John M. Snook.

That Prussian Instrument, the Resuscitator, seems to gain favor by acquaintance. I have become satisfied that it is a valuable instrument, therefore I keep a stock on hand to supply any friends in Maine who wish them; also the oil to replenish when used up.

I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will commence a series of meetings, Sunday, Jan. 30th, 1870, and continue as long as the Lord may direct, at the Advent house, Chichester, N. H. Come and hear the word. E. Cotton.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. Lang.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broom Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Feb. 11th, and continue over the Sabbath following. A general invitation is extended to all. By order of the church.

J. W. Taylor.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. Whitehead, West Meriden, Conn., Box 4.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and-by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. George E. Lee, Brimfield, Mass.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. Albert Libby, West Poland, Maine.

German Tracts.

Bro. Reimer has a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 106 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Lowell Street Chapel.

John G. Hook .... every evening this week, and over Sunday, January 30th.
Henry Pratt .... Sunday, Feb. 6th and evenings, Feb. 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th.
A. Simpson .... Sunday, Feb. 20th

Boston, South End, (Minot Hall), corner of Washington and Springfield Streets.)
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
T. M. Preble .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
J. S. White .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Geo. A. Streeter .... Sunday, Feb. 20th

East Boston.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
B. Finney .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
B. Woodside .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. Simpson .... Sunday, Feb. 13th

Chelsea, Mass., (Library Hall.)
H. Munger .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
A. Simpson .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
S. S. Brewer .... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Couch .... Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell .... Sunday, March 13th

Charlestown.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 23 Main Street), every Lord's day.
J. S. White .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
S. W. Thurber .. Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th

West Winsted, Ct., (Camp's Hall) ... Sabbath, Feb. 6th and onward. Miles Grant.

Fairhaven, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Exeter, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. Goodrich.

Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Lynn, Mass. .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Athol, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 20th
L. Boutell.

East Weymouth, Mass., (where Bro. Tuttle may appoint), Saturday evening, Jan. 29th, and over Sunday, Jan. 30th. Enoch Morrill.

Lowell, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Joseph W. White.

Plymouth, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Lake Village, N. H .... Friday evening, Feb. 4th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Lowell, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 20th
London Ridge, N. H .... Sunday, Jan. 27th
John Couch.

Wakefield, Mass .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
C. Richardson.

Lynn, Mass .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
M. Batchelor.

Dinsmore Hill .... evenings, Jan. 25th and 26th
South Vershire, Vt. .... evenings, Jan. 27th and 28th
West Fairlee, Vt. .... evening and Sabbath, Jan. 29th and 30th.
North Springfield, Vt. .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th and 13th
H. P. Carpenter.

Abington, Mass .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Charles E. Barnes.

Haverhill, Mass .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H .... evening, Feb. 3d
Concord, N. H., (at the Bethel) .... evening, Feb. 4th
Lake Village, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall) .... evening, Feb. 9th and over the following Sabbath.
Wm. C. Stewart.

Nashua, N. H., (55 Vine Street) .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
John H. Dadmun.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sun., Jan. 30th
Hopkinton, (Town Hall Building) .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Seabrook, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
Lake Village, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 27th
C. W. Sargent.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House) .. Sabbath, Jan. 30th and over Feb. 6th. Baptism the 30th.
John H. Evans.
Daniel Eastman.

East Landaff, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
E. S. Moulton.

Swift Water, N. H .... evenings, Jan. 28th and 29th and over the following Sabbath.
Warren Summit, N. H .... evening, Feb. 4th
Lake Village, N. H .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
A. A. Hoyt.

Warren Summit, N. H ... Saturday evening, Feb. 29th and over Sunday, the 30th. Daniel D. Page.

Barnstead, N. H., (Tuttle school-house), Sun., Jan. 30th
John Parsons.

Piermont Village, N. H., (Town House) Sab., Feb. 6th
C. W. Nelson.

Lovely Street, Ct .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Westfield .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Wm. J. Ripley.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Feb. 6th
Lake Village, N. H .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H .... Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
Webster, N. H., (Methodist meeting-house), Sabbath, Feb. 13th. Simeon Roby.

South Casco, Me .... evening, Jan. 28th
Stowe, Me., (as Bro. Geo. Howard may arrange), Jan. 29th and 30th.
East Stoneham, Me .... evening, Feb. 1st
North Northway, Me .... Feb. 2d and 3d
South Livermore, Me .... Feb. 4th to 6th
Lewiston, Me .... Feb. 7th and 8th
Belgrade Depot, Me .... Feb. 9th
South Sangerville .... Feb. 11th to 13th
South Atkinson .... Feb. 14th to 15th
Emerson's Mills .... Feb. 16th
Machiasport .... Feb. 20th, and onward indefinitely.
I. K. Lombard.

As I cannot sell my team, I have given up the idea of going west. I. K. L.

Mechanic Falls .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
J. Albert Libby.

North Somers, Ct .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. Morse.

Bowdoin, Me .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Brunswick, Me., (Ham's school-house), eve., Feb. 5th
Bath, Me .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Reed meeting-house .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
Sabbattusville .... Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. S. Mitchell.

Rawsonville, Vt .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Z. T. Wood.

Bristol, Ct .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. H. Dickinson.

New Haven, Ct .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Bridgeport, Ct .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple.

Webster, Mass .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Abington, Ct .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
South Windsor, Ct .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
C. H. Sweet.

Hartford, Conn .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Nevada, Ohio .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
E. McCulloch.

Putnam, Conn .... Jan. 28th, 29th and 30th
Clarksville, R. I .... Monday, Jan. 31st
Pascoag .... Tuesday, Feb. 1st
North Scituate .... Wednesday, Feb. 2nd
Rockland .... Thursday, Jan. 3d
A. Durfee.

Bradley, Me .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
E. V. B. Edgerly.

East Haddam, Ct .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
I. B. Potter.

North Hermon .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Holden, (at Chapel) .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Geo. W. Brown.

Wakefield, Mass .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Manchester, N. H .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. Mooney.

Porter, Me .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
East Canaan .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
If these conflict, please write me.
D. F. Leavitt.

Brunswick, (yellow school-house), Sabbath, Jan. 30th
H. D. Reed.

East Savoy, Mass., (at the new Chapel just built), Sunday, Jan. 30th, to commence a series of protracted meetings. H. K. Flagg.

Melvin Village, N. H .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
T. W. Piper.

Keene, N. H .... Sundays, Jan. 23d and 30th
Stowe, Mass .... Sunday, March 6th
A. Simpson.

Seabrook, N. H .... evening, Jan. 25th and over the following Sunday.
Alton, N. H., (Stockbridge Corner), Sunday, Feb. 6th
J. Pinkham.

Elliot, Me .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
F. H. Burbank.

Strafford, N. H., (Roberts' school-house) Sun., Jan. 30th
Keene, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
J. G. Smith.

Suncook, N. H .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Farmington Village, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
Alton Corner .... Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. M. Bryant.

South Wolfborough, N. H., Thursday evening, Jan. 27th and over the following Sabbath. S. S. Mooney.

Northville, Newport, N. H., Saturday evening, Jan. 29th and Sabbath, Jan. 30th. C. H. Fletcher.
F. Nelson.

North Sutton, N. H., (at Bro. L. Andrews'), Sunday, Jan. 30th. Sr. Julia Buswell.

West Salisbury, N. H., (Union meeting-house), Saturday evening, Jan. 29th, and Sunday, Jan. 30th.
D. W. Davis.

Pleasant Valley, Pa., (as friends may arrange), Jan. 29th, and over Sunday.
Little Cooly .... Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Edinboro .... Feb. 4th and over two Sundays
Compton's Corners, (four miles from Edinboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sturgis Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Cohocton .... Feb. 19th and 20th
C. F. Sweet.

East Canaan, N. H., (at the Chapel), commencing Jan. 27th, and continue over the following Sabbath.
J. A. Cleaveland.

Scitico, Ct .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Morris, Ct .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
G. L. White.

Morris .... evening, Jan. 27th
New Preston .... evening, Jan. 28th
New York City, (Cooper Institute), Sunday, Jan. 30th
West Abington, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
W. S. Campbell.

Webster, Mass., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, Jan. 26th and 27th.
Worcester, Mass .... Friday evening, Jan. 28th
Stoneham, Mass .... Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Lynn, Mass .... Tuesday evening, Feb. 1st
Vernon, Vt .... Thursday, Feb. 3d and over the following Sabbath. H. Munger.

Lafayette, R. I .... Monday evening, Jan. 31st
Joseph D. Brown.

Bristol, R. I .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Millville, Mass .... Monday, Feb. 7th
Geo. A. Streeter.

Bonny Eagle, Me .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Kennebunkport, Me .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Kennebunk Depot .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Blue Point Scarborough, Me .... Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Hollis Centre, Me .... Sunday, Feb 27th
T. P. S. Hampson.

South Casco, Me .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
East Pownal, Me .... Friday evening, Feb. 11th and continue one week, if thought best.
J. T. Jordan.

Bath, Me .... evening, Jan. 27th
Great Isle .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Israel Damon.

North Scituate, R. I .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
John T. Dixon.

Camden, N. J., (corner of Federal and Second Streets), Jan. 30th, at 3 and 7 o'clock P. M.
S. P. Babcock.

Alton Corner, N. .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Strafford, N. H., (Roberts' school-house), Sun., Feb. 6th
Farmington Village, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
East Rochester, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 20th
Wm. Bodge.

Belgrade Depot, Me., Saturday evening, Jan. 29th, and over the Sabbath. Will Bro. Fifield meet me at the depot, Saturday, P. M., from Portland?
Mrs. A. M. Tripp.

Woodstock Valley, Ct .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
J. W. Bentley.

Canaan Corner, Vt .... Feb. 2nd and 3d
Colebrook Corner, N. H., (where Brn. J. Little and Moon may appoint), evening, Feb. 5th, and over Sunday. Z. Ford.
Uriah G. Ladd.

Wrightville, Ct .... Lord's day, Jan. 30th
New Milford, Ct .... Lord's day, Feb. 6th
Wrightville, Ct .... Lord's day, Feb. 13th
North Somers, Feb. 20th, through the week, and over Lord's day, the 27th.
If any of the churches between Somers and Boston wish my labors in a protracted effort, write me immediately. A. D. Flagg.

East Otis .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
Waterbury .... Sunday, Feb. 12th
☞ No Name.

Great Falls, N. H .... evening, Jan. 29th and over Sunday.
Gonic Chapel .... evenings, Feb. 1st and 2nd
East Rochester .... evenings, Feb. 3d and 4th
Strafford, (Robert's school house) ... evening, Feb. 5th and over Sunday. J. L. Chute.

Rogersville, N. Y ..... Jan. 27th, and over the Sabbath
Cohocton, N. Y ..... Feb. 4th, and over the Sabbath
Great Bend, Pa., (Dulk hill) .... Feb. 8th to 10th
J. W. Taylor.

I have regular appointments at East Shelby and West Barre, in Orleans Co., N. Y., as follows:
East Shelby, N. Y., Sunday, Jan. 30th, morning and evening, and once in two weeks thereafter, until further notice.
West Barre, N. Y., Sunday, Feb. 6th, and once in two weeks thereafter. J. H. Whitmore.

Salem, Mass.
B. Woodside .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
C. E. Barnes .... Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

Springfield, Mass., (Bethel Church.)
Wm. N. Pile .... Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th

Westfield, Mass.
Wm. A. & M. L. Durand .... Sunday, Jan. 30th

Lawrence, Mass.
Miles Grant (in City Hall) .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
F. H. Burbank .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
J. S. White .... Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th

Wilbraham, Mass.
P. S. Butler .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th

Stoneham, Mass.
A. P. Moore .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
B. Woodside .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. Simpson .... Sunday, Feb. 27th

Exeter, N. H.
A. M. Higgins .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
Joseph Harvey .... Sunday, Feb. 6th

Concord, N. H., (Centre Street.)
D. M. Leavitt .... Sabbath, Jan. 30th
J. Hemenway .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Ross .... Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th
C. H. Fletcher ... Sabbaths, Feb. 27th and March 6th
J. Couch .... Sabbath, March 13th

Concord, N. H., (at the Bethel.)
F. H. Burbank .... Sunday, Feb. 27th

Portland, Me.
A. Ross .... Sundays, Jan. 30th and Feb. 6th
Henry Pratt .... Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

Biddeford, Me.
W. H. Mitchell .. Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, 20th, and 27th

Square Pond, Ct.
B. Hitchcock .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
P. S. Butler .... Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Hiram Munger .... Sabbath, Feb. 13th

New Britain, Ct.
Wm. Stuart .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
S. C. Hancock .... Sunday, Feb. 6th
H. H. Dickinson .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. H. Sweet .... Sunday, Feb. 20th

Wolcottville, Ct.
G. L. Teeple .... Sunday, Jan. 30th
B. Hitchcock .... Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple .... Sunday, Feb. 27th

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)
Joseph D. Brown .... Sunday, Jan. 30th

Portland, Me.
Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block, 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

Star of Hope Mission, 14 Laurens Street, New York City.
Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock
Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M.
Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M.
Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M.
Friday, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M.
Come one, come all. A. E. Smith, Principal.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. Eggleston.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. Thomas J. Spinney.

☞ Bro. Joseph A. Philbrook has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with N. McCulloch, 4 Eagle Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. York, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with Albert Burgess, Cor. Sec.

☞ Augustus E. Snow, 1715 M..kham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. Hitchcock, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. Carpenter, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. Pownell, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hoagh [illegible]

Business.

Letters Received.

W A Sheffield, J R Cook, I C Wellcome, C H Hard, F H Chamberlain, D. G. M., J A Cleaveland, G A Streeter, A L Forrester, Orlean, H J Baldwin, L B Weaver, C Colegrove, J. P., S S Brewer, S Jackman, E Little, Geo. Thomson, E Miller, W K Emerson, G W Howard, S Bush.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, post-paid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 35c.; roan, 80c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlineary Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERYBODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 4c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 12c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 224. 50c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 33c.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 30c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.35. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.35.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $5.00; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $4.50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2 50; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.50; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $3.50; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition, 180 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition, 31 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of [illegible] in various versions, on the most important [illegible], in sections; to which is added much [illegible], Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $2.00 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man; the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Resurrection, Reign of Christ, Millennium, Time [illegible]. Third edition. 400 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.

A thorough examination of [illegible]; a valuable exposition of the [illegible], and clear exposition of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. [illegible]

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

For the World's Crisis.

TRUE PRAYER.

BY ORISON.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
 Unuttered or expressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
 That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the christian's vital breath,
 The christian's native air;
His watchword at the gates of death,
 He enters heaven by prayer."

Prayer is the christian's morning star,
 The saint's prophetic chart;
'Tis hope's assurance from afar,
 An index of the heart.

Not many words, though aptly said,
 Produce the greatest prayer;
The struggling spirit, seeking aid,
 Knows not the waste of air.

Prayer is appointed to convey
 Blessings ordained by heaven;
The presage of approaching day,
 A sign of mercy given.

Parent of hope, thine own fulfill;
 Let our desires accord;
Not only with thy gracious will,
 But wisely with thy word.

In vain to heaven we lift our voice,
 And leave our heart behind;
Deceitful souls may thus rejoice,
 But shall no blessing find.

The hypocrite cannot deceive
 The One to whom he prays;
Show mercy, and thou shalt receive;
 'Tis thus that God repays.

For the World's Crisis.

SCRIPTURE AND PHILOSOPHY AGREE.

WHAT IS LIFE?

The circulation of the blood, both in the fœtus and after birth, is powerfully corroborative of the Scripture doctrine, that "blood . . is the life of all flesh," and that in the blood resides "the life thereof." Moses, who makes this declaration, seems to have been acquainted with a fact in philosophy and physiology, that has only been discovered by the scientific world in the seventeenth century, when Harvey discovered the circulation of the blood. The prevalent philosophy of the heathen was, and is, that life is the result of an inherent immortality, a supposed entity, they call the spirit; and an apostatized christianity imbibed this theory, prompted, no doubt, by a desire to compromise for advantage, partly through worldly lusts and to avoid persecution; for the doctrine of mortality, and the consequent necessity of a resurrection, in order to the enjoyment of eternal life, as taught by all the apostles and the immediate disciples of Christ, was the great cause of persecution, from both Jew and Gentile, to the early Christians. In conformity with these, and the teachings of their master, Jesus Christ, Moses tells us that the life of man, and even "all flesh," is a something that exists in the blood, causing it to impart vitality to the body, or flesh; or rather making it—the blood—"the life of all flesh."

In his description of the creation of man, he tells us how this principle of life got into the blood. He says, after man was made of the dust of the earth, the Elohim "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," and the man—thus made—"became a living soul." The word in the Hebrew, here rendered "living soul," is applied to all animals, so that "man," in this matter of life, "hath no preeminence above a beast"; and so says Paul, too: if there be no resurrection of the dead, then are we like the beasts that perish. Thus Moses, Solomon and Paul agree; and why cannot Christians, since the Pagans can no longer persecute, now subscribe to what these say, and place themselves right with the scientific world? If this Hebrew word, rendered "living soul," has any allusion to an immortal soul, it not only affirms it of the whole man, but also of all beasts in their entirety, so that all created beings, including their bones, flesh, breath, and all that go to make them, is the immortal soul. Moses did not understand it after the fashion of the heathen philosophers; nor did he hold according to the logical conclusion just adduced; but he did teach that man was mortal, as God said: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Thus it appears that inspiration taught four thousand years ago, what science, in its tardy march, has only begun to learn, that by breathing, the blood of man and all animals acquires an element of vitality, essential to the life of all flesh. For corroboration and proof let us look at the as now understood, and clearly demonstrated. Yes, look at these things, and see how beautifully harmonious are the works of the Deity. His word and work agree. And why should they not? But when men turn away from the word of God to spirits that mutter and peep, and to fables, fearing to speak the truth lest they offend; forgetting that the word of God is the sword of the Spirit, and that it alone can sanctify or save, they must expect to walk in darkness.

CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD,

In the independent living organism, we find the food is digested in the stomach; the nutritious part thereof is called chyle, and in its onward passage from the stomach is absorbed by the lacteal ducts, or canals, and is conveyed to the large vein (vena cava) near its junction with the heart, where it pours its contents into the heart. The heart has four chambers, communicating by valves, for ingress and egress of the blood. Now if you will make the shape of a heart, and draw a perpendicular line through the centre of it, then draw another line horizontally through the centre, making a cross, you will have the relative position of the four chambers. The two upper ones are called the right and left auricles; the two lower ones the right and left ventricles. The communication is by valves, and only through one at a time. As one opens, another closes. The blood all passes out of the heart through the arteries, by the force of the contraction of this organ, and is carried to all parts of the system, imparting life and nourishment to every part. The capillaries are the parts in the circumference and extremities, where the arteries and the veins begin. The arteries carry the red, florid blood, that has been oxygenated in the lungs, by contact with the air we breathe. The oxygen in the blood is the flame, and the chyle from the intestines is the fuel, in part, that produces the caloric, or heat we possess, and without which we could not live. Whenever this fire is extinguished we die. If we cease to breathe, we have no flame to eat up the fuel; and if we cease to eat, we have no fuel to feed the flame, and it will consume us, also, while having become fuel for the oxygen. The result of this combination of oxygen through the lungs, in consuming our food, is charcoal or carbon; hence, as the blood is returned through the veins, it has lost its florid, red color, and being charged with carbon it is dark brown or black. In this condition it passes through all the lesser veins, and is emptied into the large trunk vein, or ascending vena cava, that runs up near the spine, and which, as we have shown, receives the chyle. These two liquids are now mingled and flow together into the right auricle; from thence through a valve into the chamber below, or right ventricle; here it leaves the heart, passing through the pulmonic artery into the lungs, charged with chyle and carbon. At every inhalation, we breathe in the atmosphere containing oxygen. As soon as this touches the blood, as it is presented in the delicate air cells that are like a honey-comb and compose the lungs, it disengages the carbon in the blood and sets it free in the shape of carbonic acid gas; this we exhale at every outbreathing. If we did not, its retention would produce death, it being incompatible with life. The blood, by this process, is changed again, and enriched and vitalized. It has acquired more of the life principle, and instantly passes from the lungs through the pulmonic vein into the heart again. It now enters the left auricle, from thence into the left ventricle, thence into the great aorta, or main artery, from whence again it is distributed, freighted with life to all parts of the system. Thus, while we continue to breathe, it keeps up its ceaseless round, telling us with its "still small voice," if we would only listen, that the breath we breathe is "the breath of life"; that the life is in the blood, and that consequently the blood is "the life of all flesh."

THE FŒTAL CIRCULATION

affords another very striking proof of this proposition. Before birth the child, or fœtus, has no independent existence, but is sustained by a continued circulation from the mother. It must have arterial blood, or it could not live. It cannot have arterial blood of its own, for it cannot breathe to produce it. Its lungs have no function to perform before birth, and the circulation is changed accordingly to suit the case. To assist the mother in the force essential to a more extended circulation, the heart of the fœtus is made to act in a different manner from what it does after birth. The vessels from the placenta pass through the umbilicus, and find their way (which it is unnecessary for our purpose to describe) to the right auricle of the heart. In breathing animals there is a complete partition between the two auricles, which prevents the passage of the blood from one into the other; but in the fœtus in utero there is a communication between the auricles which is called the foramen ovale, through which the blood passes from the right into the left auricle; thus the two auricles are filled with blood at the same time, and contracting at the same time, propel their contents into the two ventricles. From the left ventricle the blood escapes into the aorta, as it does after birth; and from the right ventricle into the pulmonary artery; which latter, instead of conveying all its blood to the lungs, as it does in the circulation after birth, in order to get breath upon it for decarbonization, disposes of three-fourths of it through a vessel called the ductus arteriosus, which, proceeding from the pulmonary artery, enters the descending aorta, thus avoiding the lungs of the fœtus, and goes on its way giving life.

By this arrangement, nearly the whole of the blood brought to the heart by the vena cava is sent from both ventricles into the aorta. Part of this blood is returned to the placenta through the funis, or cord, by the hypogastric arteries, and the remainder is distributed through the vessels of the fœtus. Thus the blood in the aorta is compelled synchronously by the force of both vessels, which is probably no more than is absolutely necessary for the accomplishment also of the more distant circulation of the placenta. Immediately on the birth of the child and respiration taking place, the circulation is admitted through the lungs. The foramen ovale becomes closed by means of a valve, and the permanent obliteration is soon affected. Those vessels also which were alone subservient to the circulation of the fœtus in utero soon become obliterated, and exist only as ligaments of trivial or no use.

Thus you perceive the child lives by the breath of its mother. The functions of its own lungs are suspended until they can be used, although its little heart is caused to act doubly in order to assist its mother's circulation. If the child has an independent existence, an immortal soul, why all this adaptation to the circumstance of breathing? Why should not the physician separate the funis before, as well as wait for the child to breathe first? The word and the work agree. The God of the Bible and the God of nature are one and the same. DR. W. K. EVERSON.

For the World's Crisis.

TRUST IN GOD.

God is to be trusted at all times; even in the hour of deepest trials, when all around seems dark; when we feel like one alone in the world, and every door seems shut against us, and we know not which way to turn. Then turn to God, and trust in him, believing that to him it is all light; he knows what way he is going to bring us out of the trial, although we cannot see through the thick darkness. And he is able to throw all the doors open wide, that are shut so closely against us. He often sends trials upon us to learn us to trust in him, in the hour of darkness as well as in the hour of light, in the hour of sorrow as in the hour of joy. For he is alike at all times, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever God changes not. His mercies are ever the same. Then why not trust him? All our moaning and fretting avails us nothing. O let us trust in him, who alone can help us bear our trials, and lead us safely through the thick darkness out of them.

It is good for us to have trials and dark days; for if everything in our lives was all bright and fair, we would have no crosses to bear for Jesus, who bore the cross of shame and suffering for us. He died for us, and ought we not to bear our little crosses and trials cheerfully for his dear sake? knowing that he will help us, for he has said, I will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear. And, then, again, our troubles and trials here are light compared to the joy we shall have beyond this, if faithful. Our trials bring us nearer to him, and make us more consecrated to his service.

Sometimes the Lord chooses certain ones of his disciples to work wholly for him, to give up everything else, and go at his bidding, and labor for him in his vineyard; and he often brings such through scenes of deepest trial to purify them, and prepare them for the work that he has for them to do. So let us trust entirely in him, believing that he tries us for our good, and to work out his own designs concerning us; and let us give ourselves up into his hands, feeling willing to take whatever comes, joy or sorrow; willing with all our hearts for the Lord's will, not ours, to be done. And when we get into that place, we feel that it is sweet to suffer for Jesus, who suffered so much for us.

O can we not trust this blessed Savior at all times, who traveled this same path before us, and who knows all about us? For Jesus was tempted in every point like as we are, and he is therefore able to succor us in every temptation; and soon, at the longest, our trials, temptations and sorrows will all be over and we will be gathered safe into the kingdom of Christ, there to praise him forevermore. There will we shout our sufferings o'er on Canaan's happy shore. Our trials and our troubles here will only make us richer there, when we arrive at home; so let us trust in God at all times, and be faithful until he calls us to that heavenly home.

M. E. CHUTE.

For the World's Crisis.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Dear readers of the Crisis, a happy new year to you all. Another year has passed, and while I look back over the lapse of the short twelve months, the ups and downs, sunshine and shadow of every day life is brought up before me in varied distinctness, and these words come forcibly to mind:

"What have I done that's worth the doing?
What duty have I left undone?
Or into what new folly run?"

Truly, what have I done that's worth the doing! All that is worth doing is worth doing well, is a familiar adage; but has it all been well done? Ah! here is a question that will lead us all to self-examination. Would it not be well for us to look over the events of the past year, and determine, if possible, what path we are pursuing. How many good deeds have we done that we feel meet the approbation of our divine Master? Was there the least bit of the Pharisee's feeling in our hearts, when we extended a helping hand to raise that downcast and half discouraged brother, sister or friend? If so, God help us to get rid of it. If not, he loveth the cheerful giver, and even the cup of cold water he has promised to reward, if given in his name. And now, if we can in all good conscience answer this satisfactorily, shall we not try to think what duty we have left undone?

Where, and in what respect have we turned a deaf ear to the whispering of the Spirit? Where have we neglected to help the sick, bind up the broken-hearted, relieve the afflicted; and, above all, have we ever been ashamed of our profession, and shrank at the cross of Christ? Let us see to this, for if we are ashamed of him, he will be of us, and we shall lose eternal life. Now comes the last—"And into what new folly run?" Where have we left the straight and narrow path, forgetful that we have been purged from our old sins, and run off into the beggarly elements of the world? Have we shown our folly by being too anxious to lay up for ourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal? Jesus was born in a stable, and he said on a certain time, he had "not where to lay his head." "For even hereunto were we called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps." And now if in the past year, we have got out of the way into any alleys or by-lanes, that lead to the broad road, let us take the Bible that teaches us "that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

Warren, Vt. CARRIE E. GREENSLIT.

For the World's Crisis.

PURITY.

"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?"
—Ps. 119. 9.

The word of truth is very pure. And the reply to the above question is found in the same verse, and reads thus: "By taking heed thereto according to thy word." While the blood of Christ atones for sin, the Spirit and the word have a share in the work of cleansing and fitting believers for a place in that land, of which it is written, "there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, or whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

One of the ways by which Paul approved himself was by "pureness." And one of the most frequent and earnest prayers of all who desire to be holy, is like that of David—"Create in me a CLEAN HEART, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." Ps. 51: 10. "Cleanse thou me from secret faults." Ps. 19: 12. And upon the pure a blessing is pronounced in these words, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. When the heart is pure, the language will also be pure. For "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The believer should strive to be pure in thought, word and deed. The things that defile a man proceed from the heart. Now that the fountain is open, whereby all sin and uncleanness may be purged away, let all make haste to "plunge beneath that flood," and wash their stains away! Remember that the time is short. Soon it will be too late, for he that is filthy when Jesus comes will doubtless remain filthy, and be cast into the devouring fire. There may be some who read this, who feel that a good work is begun in them, yet they find that they are not yet perfect, not yet pure. Let all such obey the exhortation to "take heed" according to the word. What does the "word" enjoin?

Do not say that we are imposing a burden upon you which no man is able to bear. You are not required to follow all the forms of the ancient Jewish law, yet our righteousness or purity must exceed all that. That law was in a great measure intended to regulate the outward conduct, and "stood in meats and drinks, and divers washings," externally; while Jesus taught that the "inside" should first be cleansed, and outward purity would then be only an indication of the clean heart within; whereas all outward cleansing, without the inner work, only makes men like "whited sepulchres," appearing well outwardly, but full of defilement within.

Although we do not ask any to come under the yoke of the law, yet you will find great help toward a life of purity, by "eating and drinking" only to the "glory of God." "Be temperate in all things." "Be not among riotous eaters of flesh." "Take heed . . . lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so THAT DAY come upon you unawares." "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Experience and observation, as well as the Bible, teach that the food we eat has a great effect upon our feelings and conduct. And although merely abstaining from certain things cannot save us, yet by so doing we shall be "workers together with Christ," and progress more rapidly toward perfection. Lord, help us to have clean hands, and a pure heart.

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

"A FRIEND TO EVERYBODY."

While talking with Bro. S. on Alton Bay camp-ground last fall, a lady came along and said, "I want to find Elder S——." He replied, "Here I am, a friend to everybody." I have thought of it much since. How it breathes the true spirit of Jesus! "A friend to everybody." He showed himself a friend to all; those that hated him, as well as those that loved him. A friend of sinners. A friend of publicans. Because he was a friend of sinners, it was no proof that he sanctioned their wickedness, but showed himself their friend, so that he could get them to fall in love with him. When a person does love Jesus, he will forsake his sins.

In this day partyism is so strong, that if a person attempts to carry out this same principle, and be a friend to everybody, and an enemy to none, he will be looked upon with suspicion, and be a mark to be shot at in every direction. Sectarianism, or partyism, is the order of the day. It seems to be the lever that moves almost everything at the present time. Masons are sworn to befriend masons, and persecute their enemies. Odd Fellows are sworn to love and befriend their order. This same party spirit is carried into the different sects. Is it right? Think of christians getting together in squads in the kingdom of God, and having their elbows out against all others. But I suppose when this party spirit gets into people, they really think none will ever get into the kingdom but those whom they think are fit subjects; and their ideas are always very limited. O where are the men imbued with the spirit of the Master, who prayed that his followers might all be ONE, who dare to lift up their voices like a trumpet against these things? Where are the men of God of by-gone days? Men of God, stand up. Show yourselves such now. Do not bow and bend to this narrow party spirit of the day. The judgment is at hand. Who will stand then acquitted? "The pure in heart." May the Lord help us to realize what this means.

"A friend to everybody." One sect at variance with another sect, and if a person tries to show himself a friend to both, so that he may do them both good, and will not side with either party, one side is inclined to think if he is a friend to them, he cannot be to us. Individuals get at variance. If a man is a friend to both, and tries to be a "peacemaker," another feels, "if he is a friend to him, he cannot be to me," and wishes to force him to take sides in the matter. Quarrels arise in a church, and if a minister will not take sides and try to put down one side and hold up the other, some think he cannot be a christian. No true minister of Jesus Christ ought to "take sides" in any quarrel, for I never knew a quarrel yet where the blame was all on one side. It always takes two or more to have a quarrel.

When this party spirit rules, the spirit of Christ is crowded out. Both cannot dwell together. When this party feeling gets strong enough for a majority, and this majority decide to put down A, B, or C, simply because he will not fall in with their party spirit, if one wants to see fair play, and will not sanction their party measures, it is unchristian to say, "You are not a friend to us." This us, I apprehend, is the whole trouble. When persons are governed by this spirit, they will want to persecute those that oppose them. If they cannot do it in one way, they will in another. Jesus says, "If ye love them that love you, what thank have ye? Do not even the publicans the same." It is an easy thing to be a friend to those that are friends to us; but when we come to love and befriend an enemy, one that has wronged us, it takes "the love of God" to do it. The apostle says, "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory." If none were allowed to go on who would not adopt this rule, many churches would be closed, and many ministers that now live in ease and pleasure through the week, and preach Sundays, would have to go to work and earn their living. Many institutions, and societies, and companies, would come to a speedy terminus, because they were organized on this spirit of strife to try and outdo some other society, or party, or company.

O that the Spirit of God might rule, if it throws many man-made institutions into chaos. O that men would get the love of God deep down in their hearts, which moved Him to give "his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." When a person gets this love shed abroad in his heart, by the Holy Spirit, how soon his heart enlarges. O that we might see more of the enlargement of the heart. A. P. MOORE.

Boston.

For the World's Crisis.

QUERY.

Is it right for christians, and especially ministers of the gospel, to engage in light, trifling conversation, jesting, etc., at any time, and especially at the close of religious exercises? We have often been pained to see the good effect of a religious meeting almost entirely destroyed by this pernicious habit, which some persons have. No sooner is the benediction pronounced, and the congregation out of doors, than church members, as well as the world's people, are chatting and laughing about the most trivial matters, seemingly forgetful of everything of a sacred or religious nature. Ah, says one, I can't see where's the harm? and then I have such a propensity for fun and mirth, that really, I can't overcome it, and a good brother remarked in his sermon a few Sabbaths since, that he thought christians ought to be the most cheerful persons in the world. Well, we have no objections to that; but to our mind there is a wide difference between cheerfulness and levity, and it is well to distinguish between the two.

But, says one, Why do you emphasize ministers of the gospel? Haven't they just as good a right to enjoy these trifling pleasantries as any one? Most assuredly they have, if it is right. But I think the word of God speaks explicitly of their being examples to the flock; and now while we believe that the word of God has much to cheer, comfort, and encourage him in the precious promises of the gospel, we also believe that the word of God strictly forbids christians from indulging in vain and foolish jesting, and trifling conversation. The Savior in discoursing to the Pharisees uses these words: "A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man, out the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things. But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." The apostle Peter, in addressing his brethren, exhorts them in this wise; "As he which hath called you is holy; so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; . . . forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, . . . but with the precious blood of Christ." Again, the same inspired writer, in alluding to the day of the Lord, and the incidents connected therewith, says, "Seeing that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be, in all holy conversation and godliness?" We might enumerate many other passages of Scripture referring directly to this matter, but we forbear. A word to the wise, etc.

Reading, Mich. M. E. ORR.

A WORD TO THE SOWER.

Sow in the morn thy seed,
 At eve hold not thy hand;
To doubt and fear give thou no heed,
 Broad cast it o'er the land.

Beside all waters sow,
 The highway furrows stock;
Drop it where thorns and thistles grow,
 Scatter it on the rock.

The good, the fruitful ground,
 Expect not here nor there;
O'er hill and dale, by plots 'tis found;
 Go forth then everywhere.

Thou know'st not which may thrive,
 The late or early sown;
Grace keeps the precious germs alive
 When and wherever strown.

And daily shall appear
 In verdure, beauty, strength,
The tender blade, the stalk, the ear,
 And the full corn at length.

—Selected by S. L. B.

For the World's Crisis.

PICTURES OF TRUTH.

Ever since the Roman governor's interrogatory, "What is truth?" the mind of man has been attempting to discover it; preferring often to ignore the rightful means of accomplishing this most desirable object. Little did Pilate imagine that he himself was but the agent, or engine of Omnipotence, when he wrote that all the world might read, "This is the King of the Jews." Beneath the rule of men entirely great, the pen is mightier than the sword. So wrote the ancient bard; but chance and human will had naught to do with that of which it was said, "What I have written, I have written." How priceless all fundamental knowledge.

Truth is the rarest of all earthly pearls; the dearest treasure man can win. Its price cannot be told, or paid in gold and silver. How many praters like to quote: "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again;" but meanwhile manifest the spirit of those who crucified their God, and drew a veil over the sun that had enlightened them. It is natural for many to scorn every ray of celestial light reflected by unpretending instruments. In every age, great truths have been reviled, mocked, scourged, spit upon, smitten, condemned, and "crushed to earth;" but, rising again, truth, too good for earth, to heaven ascends unscathed, unsullied; and shall remain unhurt amid the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds. A. L. FORRESTER.

Gems.

— When Drexelius was asked by his friend Faustinus how he could do so much as he had done, he answered: "The year has three hundred and sixty-five days, or eight thousand seven hundred and sixty hours. In so many hours great things may be done. The slow tortoise made a long journey by losing no time."

— The sun is full of heat and light, and it asks no questions as to how it shall do good, but is perpetually pouring out its golden flood. The spring that sparkles at the foot of the hill is full; and asking leave of no one, is forever welling forth its sweet waters. So the christian, if only full of love of God and man, and shedding around him benign influences, as a natural result, cannot help doing good.

— Sinners are like sheep grazing on a common; the butcher comes continually and fetches away one, and another, and another; while the rest feed on unconcerned, until he comes for the last.

— Just in proportion as christians come nearer to their common centre, the cross of their adorable Redeemer, the nearer they will come to each other.

— Were we as eloquent as angels, we should please some men, some women, and some children, much more by listening than by talking.

— That woman has blessed me a great many times. "What woman?" She that would get so near to Jesus, even to touch the hem of his garment. Every one who gets near to him blesses others.

— Pride is incompatible with piety towards God, as it is with the repose of own hearts.

— The rays of the sun shine upon the dust and the mud, but they are not soiled by them. So a holy soul, while it remains holy, may mingle with the vileness of the world, and yet be pure in itself.

— He that is truly polite knows how to contradict with respect, and to please without adulation, and is equally removed from insipid complaisance and low familiarity.

— One of the consequences of good breeding is a positive disinclination to pry into the private affairs of others.

— The living 'righteously, soberly and godly,' are the effects of divine and gracious teaching.

— Modesty is to merit, what shades are in a picture; it gives strength and relief.

— We suffer more from anger and grief than from the very things for which we anger and grieve.

— God hath two dwelling places—the highest heavens, and lowest hearts; that is the habitation of his glory; this, of his grace.

— Every real christian is an advancing christian. Like Paul he will be able to say, 'This one thing I do, I press toward the mark.'

— I want to feel myself an accountable creature to God for every moment of my time, and desire not to have a word or a thought, which does not more or less prove that I am spending it to his praise.

— I have nothing to do with to-morrow. Let to-morrow's temptations come, and I will fly to Christ for strength to overcome them. Let me fight my battles to-day.

— If any man desires to see the benefit of religion, let him observe how those spend their time who have no religion.

A SMOKING MINISTER.

Smoke? Yes, he does— in his study—in his family, in the streets. I see him day after day in a bookstore, in Park Row, N. Y., with a cigar or dingy pipe in his mouth. Awful! shameful! Need we marvel that young men in the church and out of it—little urchins, and rag-a-muffins—are seen in the streets, chewing and smoking the vile "Indian weed," when ministers of the gospel, elders, deacons and class-leaders set the example? Example kills, example cures.

Need we marvel that there are in New York city, as Dr. W. Parker says, 235,000 smokers; and that allowing each of these smokers only two cigars per day, at the low price of ten cents, $47,000 is puffed away daily, making an expenditure annually of $17,155,000—aside from drinks which are almost sure to accompany, for tobacco and rum are twins, and go hand in hand. . . .

But to return to this smoking minister: his breath is repulsive, intolerably offensive. The whole atmosphere around him is a stench, even the sacred emblems of bleeding love at the communion table seem more or less impregnated! "The cup of blessing!" And when reproved for this sensual gratification—this unnatural and worse than beastly appetite, what is his apology? "What the harm?" says he, "Tobacco like strong drink, is one of God's 'good creatures?' to be used in moderation, with thanksgiving. Smoking and chewing tobacco make a man neither better nor worse in the sight of God. 'Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth this defileth a man.'—Matt. 11. 15:"

Thus this man in sacerdotal garb goes smoking on, searing his conscience, gratifying his fleshly appetite, a slave to habit! When the leaders of our worshiping assemblies hold these views, what hope of reform! The evil goes on increasingly.

"Dearly beloved, I beseech you," says the apostle, "as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul. —1 Pet. 2: 11. If one member in our churches is allowed in this filthy, degrading habit, why not another and another—till we have a whole assembly of smokers, chewers and snuffers? "One sinner destroyeth much good. "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth." . . . .

The excuses for using the dirty tyrant are numerous and frequent. One uses it for his teeth; another, for his general health; a third, for his corpulency; a fourth, for his leanness; a fifth, for a watery stomach; a sixth, to help digestion; another because some ignorant sottish, wine bibbing, tobacco chewing or smoking doctor recommended it:—thus and thus, till the catalogue of excuses and subterfuges is filled out.

It is a matter of devout and hearty thanksgiving to God, that the most respectable, learned and eminently successful of the medical faculty, with united voice, veto "the accursed thing," and warn their patients to lay it aside forever.

As Paul said to Timothy, so say we to you, reader, "Keep thyself pure." Be clean in your person, and be clean in your heart. But depend upon it you can be neither if you use tobacco. No tobacco user is fit for a bed companion. He is giving forth pestilential vapors from all the pores of the skin. He is an embodiment of perpetual miasm. The immediate atmosphere surrounding him is inevitably impregnated and polluted with the constant effluvia which emanates from his whole surface. He becomes a perfect walking distillery of the deadly essence, sending forth its fumes and vapors into the surrounding atmosphere. His mouth is the mill which grinds out the weed, and his whole body the distillery for the essence. But a chewer or smoker into a vapor bath with no tobacco in the room, and in a short time the whole room will be strongly scented with tobacco effluvia that emanated from his body. Put him into a warm bath and get up a perspiration; then put that water upon flies, or vermin, or plants, and it will destroy them.—D. F. Newton, in Adv. Herald.

LOST TIME.

More time is lost by ministers in listening to the foolish, unimportant matters with which visitors absorb their attention, than by the actual work which they perform. We therefore heartily commend the following plan for avoiding such useless and trivial customers:

An aged American minister states that in the early part of his ministry, being in London, he called upon the late Rev. Matthew Wilks. Mr. Wilks received him with courtesy, and entered into conversation, which was kept up till the most important religious intelligence in possession of each had been imparted. Suddenly there was a pause—it was broken by Mr. Wilks:

"Have you anything more to communicate?"

"No, nothing of special interest."

"Any further inquiries to make?"

"None."

"Then you must leave me; I have my Master's business to attend to. Good morning."

"Here," says the minister, "I received a lesson on the impropriety of intrusion, and on the manly method of preventing it."

STOP, FRIEND, AND THINK.

Think about what? About the questions which I have now to put to you in the name both of Christianity and humanity.

1. Is your family the better for you? It must be either the better or the worse for you; which is it?

2. Is your town the better or the worse for you? Are you part of the salt that is keeping it from corruption, or are you part of the corruption?

3. Is your land the better for you, and would you be missed were you taken away? Would it lose a loving, praying, believing man?

4. Is the world the better for you? Are you, however feeble, one of its lights? Would the church miss your help were you away? Would the heathen miss your faith and prayers? Would the world be poorer at your death?

PUNCTUALITY.—A committee of eight gentlemen had been appointed to meet at twelve o'clock. Seven of them were punctual; but the eighth came bustling in with apologies for being a quarter of an hour behind the time. "The time," said he, "passed away without my being aware of it. I had no idea of it being so late." A Quaker present said, "Friend, I am not sure that we should admit thy apology. It were a matter of regret that thou should'st have wasted thine own quarter of an hour, but there are seven besides thyself whose time thou hast also consumed, amounting in the whole to two hours, and one-eighth of it only was thine own property."

TERSE SAYINGS.—When a cover can be made large enough to cover itself, then may a lie be covered.

Religion is the best armor in the world, but the poorest cloak.

Be afraid of nothing; those who trust in the Lord have no occasion to fear.

The last words of Horace Mann were,—"Man, God, Duty."

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

TELL YOUR MOTHER.

I wonder how many girls tell their mother everything. Not these "young ladies" who, going to and from school, smile, bow and exchange notes and cartes de visite with young men who make fun of them and their pictures, speaking in a way that would make their cheeks burn with shame if they knew it. All this, most credulous and romantic young ladies, they will do, although they gaze at your fresh young faces admiringly, and send or give you charming verses and boquets. No matter what "other girls" do, don't you do it.

School girl flirtation may end disastrously, as many a foolish, wretched young girl could tell you. Your yearning for some one to love is a great need of every woman's heart. But there is a time for everything. Don't let the bloom and freshness of your heart be brushed off in silly flirtations. Render yourself truly intelligent. And, above all, tell your mother everything. Never be ashamed to tell her, who should be your best friend and confident, all you think and feel. It is so very strange that so many young girls will tell every person before mother that which is most important that she should know.

CONFESSION OF WRONG.—A little girl once gave her mother the following note:—

"Dear Mother:—It was I who lost your thimble; I was afraid to own it. I have felt unhappy since I told you I didn't know. Mother, will you forgive me? I told it all to God; I prayed to him. From your sorry daughter. HANNAH."

This note, you see, made a confession of sin. For days and nights, perhaps, this child suffered under a sense of guilt—it took away her comfort—until at last, no longer able to bear the burden, she came and acknowledged it.

This teaches an important lesson, which you should early understand and act upon—that, when you have done wrong you will never have real peace of mind till you have confessed it. And confession, to be worth anything, must spring from real sorrow for the fault, and a desire to do better in time to come. "Whoso confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall find mercy."

FAITH.—"Willie," said a little orphan boy to his brother, "now we are all alone in the world; father, and mother, and auntie are gone, and there is nobody to take care of us; what shall we do?" "O, I am not afraid," said Willie; "don't you remember the verse that dear mamma taught us? 'When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up.'"

A little girl five years of age on being asked what is faith, artlessly replied: "It is doing just what God wants us to do, and ask no questions about it." This covers the whole field; perfect trust, combined with implicit obedience.

A GOOD RULE.—A certain man, who is very rich now, was very poor when he was a boy. When asked how he got his riches, he said, "My father taught me never to play till my work was finished, and never spend my money until I had earned it. If I had but an hour's work in a day, I must do that the first thing, and in an hour. And after this I was allowed to play; and then I could play with much more pleasure than if I had the thought of an unfinished task before my mind. I early formed the habit of doing everything in time, and it soon became easy to do so. It is to this I owe my prosperity."

CHRISTIAN RETALIATION.—"I strike 'oo," cried a little boy in a sharp tone to his sister.

"I kiss 'oo," said his sister, stretching out her arms, and putting up her rosy lips in a sweet kiss.

Tommy looked a look of wonder. Did his little ears hear right? They did, for there was a kiss on Susy's lips. A smile broke over his angry face, like sunshine on a black cloud.

"I kiss too," he then said; and the little brother and sister hugged and kissed each other right heartily. A kiss for a blow is better than tit for tat, isn't it?

CHOCK FULL OF BIBLE.—A little boy was on a ship with a company of wicked men. He was a pious, praying boy. The sailors wanted to teach him to drink rum, and chew tobacco, and to swear, but he would not. They tried and tried, but in vain. At last one of the sailors said to the rest: "We might as well give up. We cannot spoil that boy, for he is chock full of Bible."

Yes, the way to be safe is to be "chock full of the Bible."

PRAYING FOR HER ENEMIES.—A little girl in an Italian Sunday School complained that some of the children had hissed at her.

"Why did you not do your best to defend yourself, or complain to the master?" inquired her mother. The child hung down her head and was silent. "What did you do," added the mother, "when they were seeking their pleasure in tormenting you?"

"I remembered what Jesus did for his enemies," replied the child: "I prayed for them."

DON'T TATTLE.—Children, don't talk about each other. Don't call one of your schoolmates ugly, another stingy, another cross, behind their backs. It is mean. Even if they are ugly, stingy, or cross, it does you no good to repeat it. It makes you love to tell of faults—it makes you uncharitable—your souls grow smaller—your heart loses its generous blood when you tattle about your friends.

— Bad books are the public fountains of vice.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance....................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address.......$5.80.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

Over all matters not intended for publication write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY, and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.
An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.
TERMS.
PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Single copy, 30 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.
Ten copies, and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 25 cts. a year for each copy.
Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 20 cts. a year for each copy.
To Canada subscribers at the same rates. No extra charge for American postage.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 746. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 20.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ADVENT.

The church has waited long
Her absent Lord to see;
And still in loneliness she waits—
A friendless stranger she.
Age after age has gone,
Sun after sun has set,
And still in weeds of widowhood
She weeps, a mourner yet.
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

Saint after saint on earth
Has lived, and loved, and died;
And as they left us, one by one,
We laid them side by side;
We laid them down to sleep,
But not in hope forlorn;
We laid them but to ripen there,
Till the last glorious morn.
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

The serpent's brood increase;
The powers of hell grow bold;
The conflict thickens, faith is low,
And love is waxing cold.
How long, O Lord our God!
Holy, and true, and good,
Wilt thou not judge thy suffering church,
Her sighs, and tears, and blood?
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

We long to hear thy voice,
To see thee face to face,
To share thy crown and glory there,
As now we share thy grace.
Should not the loving bride
The absent bridegroom mourn?
Should she not wear the weeds of grief
Until her Lord return?
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

The whole creation groans,
And waits to hear that voice
That shall restore her comeliness,
And make her wastes rejoice!
Come, Lord, and wipe away
The curse, the sin, the stain,
And make this blighted world of ours
Thine own fair world again.
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

—Selected by B. W. Davis.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

"Wherefore, receive ye one another, as Christ also received us, to the glory of God."—Rom. 15: 7.

The church of Christ is a unit, from the fact that they are baptized by one Spirit, into one body, and that body is the church, or Christ's body. "We are all the children of God by faith." So says Paul; and, as there is but one true and living faith, so the children of faith are one. In his last pathetic prayer, Jesus prayed that his children might be "one," even as he and the Father were one. Why then all these divisions and subdivisions; the mangling of the body of Christ? Because the words of this text are not heeded. The disciples are not ready to receive one another, as Christ hath received them; hence differences have arisen, and they have substituted tests of fellowship, unauthorized by the great head of the church. Thus the wicked work of dividing the living body has been going on, till they are almost numberless.

The question now arises, What can and shall be done? In the first place, stop making or help making any more divisions. How can it be done! I answer, by receiving one another as Christ hath received us. If this rule had been followed out, the church would have presented itself an unbroken body. But there have been innovations upon this golden rule, by bringing our opinions of Bible into a formula, then taking that as the standard for church building, so that those, and only those that can subscribe to it are, or can be, members of "one body." Now what is the test of fellowship?—Can you subscribe to our articles of faith? So you see a variety of foundations for church building, by putting the peculiarities of good men's opinions of Bible into their creeds, substituting as many tests as there are creeds, all contrary to the doctrine of Christ and his apostles; for Paul says, "Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." But did the gospel contemplate this oneness of the church, that they should be one? Yes. Says Jesus, "That the world may know that thou hast sent me." This was to be the most convincing argument that our religion was of heavenly origin.

But can christians, with opinions varying from each other, stand on the same foundation? They can most surely, because they take the Bible to be an infallible rule of faith and practice. Standing on that, they are to receive one another, even with all their differences, and to love one another, and to have good will and fellowship; and by doing it, they will fellowship Christ their Savior; but by withholding, they withhold fellowship for the dear Savior. How blessed it would be to see the directions of the gospel lived out in this wicked and adulterous generation.

Our prosperity depends upon our carrying out this scriptural programme. All in whose hearts the love of God has been shed abroad, by the Holy Ghost given them, are brethren; they are our brethren. And while we are led by the Spirit of God, we shall love as brethren, and treat them as members of the same family. There must be, there will be, no saying, Stand off, "I am holier than thou."

This I understand to be the true position, and this our true direction for future operations, if we would prosper. Not let down the standard, but lift it up, and be filled with the Spirit, and have your faith grow exceedingly; taking all along with you possible. Be as liberal and kind as the grace of God will make you, contending "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," and all will harmonize with the oneness of saints, and will unite all in the bond of gospel fellowship and love.

L. BOUTELL.

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE SOUL OF MAN A PERSONALITY?

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

To assume a point in the absence of proof, and contrary to proof, is not w[illegible]. Faith must stand on evidence, not on [illegible]. The doctrine of the personality [illegible] in man rests only on arbitrary assumption. To pronounce it a personality is one thing, but to prove it such is quite another thing. This is the first point to settle. If it is not a personality, but the life or mind of a personality, all the talk about its immortality is worthless, till the immortality of the personality is proved to which it belongs, for the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain. The term soul is not a specific, but a generic term; that is, it does not have invariably one signification to the exclusion of all others; but is a term applied to more than one thing. A specific term can apply to but one thing, while a generic term may apply to several.

To illustrate: travel is a generic term; it may mean a journey on a steamer, or on foot, or on the cars, or in a wagon, or on horseback. But walk is a specific term; it has but one meaning; it cannot mean a boat ride, a car ride, or a wagon ride. Soul, being a generic term, is sometimes applied to man as a personality, sometimes to the mind of man, and sometimes to the life of man, and also to the life of the beasts, as we shall show; but it is never used to indicate a personality within man. These three meanings are found all through the Bible. As samples, notice the following passages: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" [or person].—Gen. 2: 7. This dust-made man "became" a living soul, or person; not received one, but "became" one. "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David."—1 Sam. 18: 1. "The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter."—Gen. 34: 8. Here soul is used as a synonym of mind, for it is the mind that "longeth." "In whose hand is the soul of every living thing."—Job 12: 10. Here soul is used as a synonym of life, and the life of beasts too.

With only two exceptions, in the Old Testament, the term soul is translated from nephesh, a word that occurs seven hundred and fifty-two times in the original, being translated soul four hundred and seventy-five times; person, or creature, and other words of the same meaning, one hundred and three times, being applied to man and beast; life, or words of like import, one hundred and twenty-four times, applied indiscriminately to the life of man and beast; mind, or some of its passions, fifty times. And when nephesh is translated soul, it has no other meaning than (1) a physical being; or (2) life of a being; or (3) mind of a being; hence, the soul of man is sometimes expressive of man himself, sometimes of his life, and sometimes of his mind. Soul does not always mean man, does not always mean life, nor does it always mean mind; but it always has one of these three significations when applied to man. It never signifies a personality in man.*

Mind, being the result of organization, dies with man. Life, in man or beast, can be obliterated; but the christian possesses by faith a future life which man "cannot kill," rendered soul in Matt. 10: 28,—"not able to kill the soul,"—the term soul here being psuche, elsewhere forty times rendered life, and lives in the New Testament. "Our life is hid with Christ in God; and when Christ WHO IS OUR LIFE shall appear," we will come in actual possession of it; but we now have it only by faith; for "God hath given to us eternal life, and this life IS IN HIS SON."—1 John 5: 11. Our future life cannot be extinguished by those who kill the body, for it is deposited in Christ, and is eternal; but the sinner's future life will be destroyed in hell with his body, it not being eternal life.

Psuche is the only term rendered soul in the New Testament, and occurs in the Greek one hundred and five times, being rendered soul fifty-eight times; life, forty times; mind, or equivalently, five times; "you" and "us," referring to personal beings, twice. As in the Old Testament, the meaning of soul is (1) a physical being; (2) the life of a being; and (3) the mind of a being, but never a being within a being. Man, as a personality, is often styled a soul; but the soul of man is never brought to view as a personality. The only two instances in which soul comes from other terms than those already referred to, do not signify an invisible personality distinct from the body, as all will admit by reading the texts: "Neither will I be always wroth, for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls which I have made."—Isa. 56: 16. Here the soul is spoken of as liable to "fail," or cease to be. Job says, "They pursue my soul as the wind."—Job 30: 15. Job's enemies would have made poor headway in pursuing an invisible personality, if such an entity had left him. But Job was still alive; his soul had not left.

IS THE SPIRIT OF MAN A PERSONALITY?

That there are spirit-personalities, as God, angels, and demons, we fully believe; and the term spirit is sometimes used as a synonym of man as a physical personality, as in 1 John 4: 1;—"Believe not every spirit . . . because many false prophets have gone out into the world"; and again, "That the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus"; also, "The spirits in prison." But a being, as a spirit, whether Divine, satanic, or human, is different from the spirit of a being. Who would be wild enough to regard the spirit of God a personality distinct from God; or the "seven spirits of God" as seven personalities distinct from God; or the spirit of the devil as a personality distinct from the devil? Then why imbibe the erroneous impression that the "spirit of man" is an entity distinct from man? The spirit of a being may signify an influence proceeding from a being, an offshoot of power from the mind; or an element within a being. This principle is illustrated in magnetism. Satan operates on the human mind on the same principle; and this influence is called the spirit of the devil. When the spirit of man is spoken of, reference is made either to the life principle in man, called the "breath of life," or, critically, "the spirit of life," an element that causes man to live, instead of being a personality; or to the mental spirit—the mind, resulting from our organization. Trace the word spirit through the entire Bible, where applied to man, as the "spirit of man," and it will be found always to signify either (1) the "spirit of life" which God "gave" at man's creation, which is the only spirit to "return to God"; or (2) the mind, or some of its numerous passions, as feeling, courage, anger, etc.

No one would ever have imbibed the impression that the spirit of man is a personality within man, if they had kept up the simple distinction between spirit as a being, and the spirit OF a being. But if any will be rash enough to insist, in the absence of proof, that the "spirit of man" is an invisible man, within man, let them not shrink from the revolting conclusion, which is inevitable from their assumed premises, that the "spirit of the beast" is an invisible beast within the beast. "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, or the spirit of the beast?"—Eccl. 3: 21. In this same verse we read of the "ruah of man" and of the "ruah of the beast"; and in the 19th verse we read, "They all have ONE ruah"—one in kind; so if an invisible organization in man is meant, the same is meant in the case of the beast. But if this is not true of the beast, but indicates the spirit of life, the same is true of man, for they have ONE ruah.

* The phrase "my soul," so often used in the Bible, does not signify an inward entity, for it is as really applied to God as to man: "Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth" (Isa. 1: 14.) "If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him" (Heb. 10: 38.) Here we learn that God possesses a "soul" as really as man, and speaks of it as "my soul"; so if this phrase, when applied to man, signifies a personality within a personality, independent of the outer personality, it must signify the same when applied to God, thus proving the awful absurdity, that aside from Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, there is another person in the Godhead, called "soul." The phrase "my soul" simply signifies "my mind," or myself, but never indicates a distinct personality.

* Man possesses the "spirit of life," or breath of life," or lives,—not the breath of air, but the breath of LIFE; " an element that produces life alike in man and beast, and is manifested long prior to birth or before inhaling the breath of air—not an entity but an element. This spirit will return to God who gave it; and "the body without [this] spirit is dead;" with it we live, without it we die. The spirit that returns to God is simply the one he "gave; and the record says that was the "breath of LIFE," or "spirit of life" (Gen. 2: 7.) We inhale and exhale the breath of air several hundred times each hour; but never does the "breath of LIFE," or spirit of life," leave us till death; and after death a large amount of air still remains in the lungs; but life is extinct when the "spirit of life" leaves—an element of life, perhaps akin to electricity, different from mere air, though it may be one of its ingredients.

Man possesses a mental spirit;—the mind, or some of its passions, often being referred to under the term spirit; but mind, instead of being an organized personality, or entity, is simply the result of a well-arranged organism. The character and nature of the mind clearly proves this, for (1) the mind is feeble in infancy; not a feeble spirit-entity. (2) Mind matures with the body; not a spirit-entity thus maturing. (3) Mind is often affected by disease; and a spirit-entity could not be thus affected. (4) Mind frequently becomes insane; and a spirit-entity could not get deranged. (5) Mind becomes childish in old age; a spirit-entity would not thus reach maturity and then decline. (6) Mind, on a smaller scale, is developed in the beasts, for the ox KNOWETH his owner, and the ass his master's crib" (Isa. 1: 3); but this is not regarded as proof of a spirit-entity in the beast. (7) Mind dies; "In that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146: 4.)

So while the mental spirit, or mind of man, may die; the spirit of life cannot properly be said to die, because it never lived, but simply produced life, or caused man and beast to live. An element cannot die or live. So while it is true that man has a spirit, it is never spoken of as masculine, or feminine; but always in the neuter gender; for it always signifies either the mind, which dies with the body, or "the spirit of life," an element that leaves man at death.

If man possesses an immortal spirit-entity, what is its origin? How and when is it connected with the body? (1) Is it transmitted? Mortality cannot transmit immortality, as the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain; hence it cannot be transmitted unless the spirit propagates its species independent of the body; and if it does, why not continue to do so after leaving its prison-house of clay, and thus eternally augment the number of spirit-entities in the spirit land? If we say this spirit-entity is transmitted, since mortality cannot transmit immortality, it must be transmitted by spirit entities, involving the idea of male and female spirits; and furthermore; if spirits propagate their species either in or out of the body, it involves them in mortality, for that which is transmitted is divisible, and that which is divisible is destructible, and hence not immortal. This is plain to all.

(2) If not transmitted, is it created at birth? If so, it makes God sanction all the whoredom in the land, by imparting a spirit-entity to every illegitimate child. Is God thus compelled to obey the mandate of every vile prostitute? Is he continually laboring to help men transgress his own commandments?

(3) If this spirit-entity is neither transmitted, nor directly created at birth, is it a pre-existent entity? If so, why do we not remember our former existence? Could a spirit-entity forget its former existence by coming into a tabernacle of clay? If so, why do not those spirits who enter spirit mediums forget the scenes in the spirit land, and even forget their former existence, and remain in the medium till the death of the body, instead of giving their history of the spirit land, and departing again? But if memory is not destroyed by coming into the body, why do we not remember our former existence, if we ever had such an existence?

We can easily find the origin of man's spirit of life (an element that causes man to live), and also the origin of his mental spirit, resulting from his organization; but if man has a spirit-entity within, give us its origin.

The Bible asserts that man has a spirit, but theologians assume in the absence of proof that that spirit is an entity, and that it is also immortal. The Bible also asserts that the beast has a spirit; then why do they not claim that that spirit is also an entity, and likewise immortal? If one is an immortal entity, why not the other?

To prove that the spirit is an entity distinct from the body, we are often referred to 1 Thess. 5: 23: "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless." This simply proves that man has a spirit and soul as well as a body; but if it proves the spirit an entity distinct from the body, it as clearly proves the soul an entity distinct from the spirit; hence, soul and spirit are not the same; and the same kind of proof that is used to show that the spirit is a personality within man, would as clearly prove that the soul is a personality also; and that would prove two entities in one man, as really as one. Soul and spirit are separable; see Heb. 4: 12: "Piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit"—showing that they are not one.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

In nothing more than in the discipline of our religious organizations has the spirit of change, so characteristic of recent days, been so apparent. If old Richard Baxter could be reanimated for a month, and he were to take a stroll through the streets of our cities, towns and villages, where he would see the walls placarded with strange announcements made professedly in the interest of the church of Christ, we fancy the stern old Puritan would break his big heart with sorrow; for the change from the primitive practice and unpretending self-denying simplicity of his times to the new Jerusalemism of the 19th century has been greatly for the worse. This spirit of the world seems to be largely pervading the churches of these last days, and consequently frivolity and worldliness are making a steady advance in town and society. While we write, church fairs, of a most gorgeous nature, bazaars and feasts, are being held in all directions, and are crowded by the gay, the fashionable, the vile, the idler and the blasphemer, the gambler, card-players, theatre-goers, pimps and their victims, christian and infidel, deacons, church members and ministers, are all together on a common footing at these fancy fairs, and thus help swell the crowd that throng "the broad road that leadeth to destruction;" while the prayer room is nearly vacant, and revivals of pure religion are almost unknown.

If such questionable contrivances for "raising the wind" were confined to the big Sodoms,—if our rural villages retained the "old fashioned prejudices" against these modern abominations, the simple christian might then find one drop of comfort. But it is not so: city, town and parish are all baptized in the one overwhelming benumbing intoxication in favor of those financial make-shifts;—the young get a "good time," the middle-aged recreation, the old an hour of excitement, and the parson gets a handsome subscription towards "the church." All this is very sad—if not very wicked; but how is it to be helped? Well, we cannot say. We know how shocked we feel under the conviction that these things are deemed, by both good and God-fearing men, essential features of church machinery. Pulpit, press, and people, good bad and indifferent people, all seem affected with the leprosy of this religious sensationalism, which, we are satisfied, is slowly destroying our veneration for religious things, turning our churches into trading halls, and our ministers to traders and diplomats. Let us do with fewer churches and plainer ones, rather than pursue the policy of increase by means so worldly.

BRO. GRANT:—When articles like the accompanying, which, under the above heading, I clipped from the editorial of one of our local papers—the "Richmond Guardian," of last Saturday, appear in print from the pen of a man of the world, one who makes no claim to christianity, is it not high time that the professed followers of Jesus should open their eyes to these glaring sins of the day, and repudiate them in toto? Shall the torn and bleeding cause of the dear Redeemer be left to the mercy of the worldling, to be defended by unrenewed men; and the Lord's children keep silent, lest by rebuking the open, unblushing conformity to the world in these "last days" by professed christians, who should be a "separate" people, some lukewarm or backslidden members of the churches—not "the church" of Christ—should be offended by thus having their consciences pricked? No, no! Let all lovers of Jesus say no with a loud voice, and en masse rally in defense of the truths we love, the teachings of the meek and lowly Jesus, who has exhorted us by his apostles to "be not conformed to this world," and who has said, "the lord of that servant" who eateth and drinketh with the drunken, and saith "in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming, shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

O, if christians did but know how their influence, either for good or ill, tells on the society around them, and how their every act is watched and treasured up in the memory of the ungodly, it seems to me we should be more careful to have our daily walk and conversation correspond with the profession we make. We say we love Jesus and are looking for his soon coming. "Actions speak louder than words." Let us live as if we believed the King of all the earth is about to come to judge the world in righteousness; then, instead of being thus cuttingly rebuked by men of the world, whose active minds are intently watching the movements of the times in which we live; whose veneration for the doctrines of the Bible, and whose confidence in the integrity of the professed religionists of the day, are fast being swept away by what everywhere meets the eye—the inconsistencies of christians, our friends and neighbors will take knowledge of us that we have "been with Jesus," and may by our good example "be constrained to enter through Christ the Living Way"; prepare to "live for ever in realms of endless day."

SARAH R. GILMAN.

Melbourne, Q., Jan. 18th, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

SERVING THE LORD.

"Wherefore, we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably."—Heb. 12: 28.

An article in the "Crisis" of Jan. 12th, arrested my attention, by a remark like this: "We must not try to hold on to the world with one hand, and serve the Lord with the other; but let go of the world and serve the Lord with both hands." Does not every one, who has tried this way, find that it is a great deal easier to serve the Lord with both hands, than to serve him with one hand, while the other keeps fast hold of the world? For while we hold on to "the world," we also have "the flesh" and "the devil" to contend against; a threefold adversary; but putting far from us the world, and the things of the world, and being transformed by the renewing of our mind, we receive "grace upon grace," enabling us to crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts, and so to resist the devil that he will flee from us. Thus "proving what is acceptable unto the Lord," "in whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith [illegible]. We are "strengthened with might [illegible] Spirit in the inner man;" and do the w[illegible] God from the heart. Then does he m[illegible] himself unto us as he doth not unto the [illegible] even according to his promise. "If a [illegible] love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him [illegible] our abode with him." Then do we love one another with pure hearts fervently, and do good unto all men as we have opportunity. Then, too, we can endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, counting it all joy when we "fall into divers temptations," because of the grace that is made manifest in us, so that we may see the "way of escape" which is prepared.

Oh, lovers of Jesus, all who look for the Lord from heaven, let us gird up the loins of our minds; be sober; be watchful; preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; "redeeming the time because the days are evil;" and let us "hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. The day is not far distant. Soon, oh how soon, we know not, but our almost overburdened hearts unceasingly cry, "Come, Lord Jesus," and "he which testifieth . . . . saith, Surely, I come quickly." Amen.

CARRIE W. BIXBY.

Francestown, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

JESUS DIED FOR ALL.

When the world was dark and drear,
When no helping hand was near,
When the chains of sin were strong,
Binding men as with a thong;
When upon a ruined earth
Error reigned, and sin had birth,
When hope died through [illegible] fall,
Jesus [illegible]
When abro[illegible]
"Cain ha[illegible]
Whe[illegible]
Abel['s] [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Stood [illegible]
[illegible]
When b[illegible]
And man's [illegible] lost;
When through ages dark as night,
Men in vain then sought for light;
When in hope of gaining life,
Men fell into bitter strife,
Jesus felt sin's pressing call—
Jesus died for all.

SOPHIA JACKMAN.

REVELATION AND SCIENCE.

Much that claims to be scientific and revealed truth is human error. True science and true revelation, being both from God, cannot contradict each other, for God cannot contradict himself. True science is a revelation from God, worthy our intense interest and study, not to be neglected without serious loss. Paul, the great and learned apostle to us Gentiles, declared that "The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." The day is coming when the wondrous harmony between revelation and science will give new faith and joy to the christian. Permit one harmony to be traced in your columns.

THE HEAVENS AND EARTH RESERVED UNTO FIRE!

Revelation declares, "Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water perished; but the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire." The water was literal. The fire must be so, too.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This quotation from Peter, being in direct connection with the first passage, must also be literal. Many passages in the Bible declare the agency of fire in purging the world. Isaiah says, "For Tophet is ordained of old; yea, for the King it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large; the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the Lord, like a stream of brimstone doth kindle it." The prophet seems to say, "as Jerusalem is purified from its carcasses and filth by the fire of Tophet (valley of Hinnom), so shall the earth be purified for the new Jerusalem, by the fires of the great day." "Death and hell were cast into the lake of fire." This appears to me to teach that the subject of death and hades (or the grave) are to be burned to "ashes," "root and branch," in "the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone." As your readers are generally familiar with the Scriptures, further quotations are unnecessary.

GEOLOGY ALSO REVEALS THE LAKE OF FIRE.

Geology is comparatively a new science. It numbers among its votaries noble intellects and truly christian hearts. It does not profess to know all the history and facts regarding the earth, but holds some things as well established. It teaches that the interior of the earth is a lake, an ocean of fire, and it gives strong reasons for this teaching. Some of these will now be given.

FIRST REASON. In boring deep artesian wells, the temperature of the earth is found to increase with the depth. The water of the deepest wells is warm enough for tepid baths.

SECOND REASON. Immense quantities of intensely hot and fused rock are vomited from volcanoes in many parts of the earth. In a single eruption, Mount Hecla threw out enough lava to cover the State of Connecticut twenty-five feet deep, by the computation of observers. So intense was the heat of this lava, that a hill on which an observer stood, and from which he retreated, was speedily melted down and washed away by a stream of lava. The hill flowed like wax in a flame. After these eruptions the surrounding district does not cave in, as it would naturally do if [illegible] are solid, and local causes should [illegible] blow out and undermine one district. [illegible] interior is fluid, the vacant space would [illegible] again from the interior [illegible]. During earthquakes which [illegible] volcanoes, hot water, steam, and even flames issue from fissures in the soil, indicating internal heat.

FOURTH REASON. During earthquakes a rolling motion like the progress of waves is sometimes felt, and these waves are very visible as they roll across level tracts. This phenomenon could not occur were the globe a solid mass. When an imprisoned body of water, lying deep in the caverns of the earth, is reached by the heat and converted into steam or gas, the imprisoning crust above is heaved upward by the great force, while the melted matter beneath is forced downward and sidewise, creating waves in the ocean of fire.

FIFTH REASON. Earthquake waves traverse immense distances. One is said to have crossed from South America, beneath the Atlantic Ocean, to the western shore of Europe. Persons at sea, walking the decks of vessels, were thrown on their knees by the sudden upheaval of the ocean.

SIXTH REASON. Liquids [illegible] assume a spheric form. Water drops and melted metal when falling from a great height become round. Shots are manufactured by the aid of this property. Now the earth and all the planets and satellites of our system have this round form. Moreover they are slightly shortened in their polar diameter, and assume the oblate spheroidal form, in consequence of revolving on their axles. And this is precisely the form a revolving fluid mass assumes. The earth has this form. A solid mass could not assume this form.

SEVENTH REASON. Rocks in every quarter of the globe are found penetrated by veins or seams of other kinds of rock not soluble in water. These veins are sometimes as thin as a knife blade. The material then injected, must have been in a liquid state. Where veins pass through layers of bituminous coal, the heat converts the coal to coke or anthracite. The evidences of heat are undeniable. Therefore melted rock must exist extensively beneath the solid rocks.

But the inquiry is made, "What sustains the heat of this vast lake of fire?" "What fuel feeds its furnaces?" The answer is easy and simple. When a flat iron is heated and withdrawn to a cool place, it soon parts with its heat. If it be wrapped in several folds of flannel or other poor conductor of heat, it remains hot for hours. The larger the heated mass, and the thicker the badly conducting wrapper, the slower the cooling process. A heavy iron casting, even in winter, requires days to cool sufficiently to be removed from the mold. Could the wrapper be absolutely a non-conductor of heat, the mass would never cool and solidify. Apply this simple and obvious fact. The crust of the earth is a very poor conductor. It is many miles thick. It wraps a mighty mass of melted rock at white heat, thousand of miles through. Were the crust infusible by the heat within, it must require almost an eternity for the melted mass to cool. No new fuel were needed to sustain the heat through a million periods as long as a man's history covers.

The sun is a thousand times larger than all our moons and planets united. It is the only body of our system whose surface has not been cooled and crusted over. Its surface is still intensely hot and in violent commotion.

The moon is the nearest of the heavenly bodies. It also bears strong marks of internal fires. Several times, and even quite lately, volcanic eruption has been seen with the telescope. Its craters are of vast size, almost visible to the naked eye. A good spy-glass shows them distinctly.

Our earth has been the theatre of awful convulsions. Ocean shell fish are found imbedded in mountain summits. Vast layers of rocks have been displaced, heaved up, torn and ground into soil. Mighty ranges of mountains, thousands of miles long, have had their summits lifted above the clouds. Long the ocean of water seems to have baffled with the ocean of fire. Again and again the former must have retreated from the conflict as an ocean of steam, then being cooled and condensed on its outer surface, must have descended to renew the struggle until it conquered from its great enemy a solid crust for its bed.

Ages of repose have followed. The crust separates the combatants. But steadily and stealthily the ocean of fire is dissolving the barrier, occasionally reaching a cavern filled with water, expanding it into steam and gas, and disturbing the truce of the enemies by an earthquake or a volcanic eruption. As the inner fires melt their way outward, these commotions multiply rapidly, there will be "earthquakes in divers places, forewarning man of the time when the war will be once more fully renewed, when the ocean of fire shall reach the ocean of water, the crust of the earth be shattered, the ocean flash into steam ("there shall be no more sea"); then "shall the heavens (atmosphere) pass away with a great noise, and the elements melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are within shall be burned up."

Then will the saints, raised above the conflict, safe forever with their Lord, look upon a scene of grandeur and sublimity such as it hath not entered into the mind of man to conceive.

Such convulsions may precede the formation of the new heavens and new earth (the third in the series), in which dwelleth righteousness.—Ex.

— Charity is never lost; it may be of no service to those it is bestowed on; yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.

FALSE INTERPRETATION.

The cause of truth is always promoted by a clear, logical, and honest interpretation of Scripture, in perfect harmony with the primary and intended sense. It is always injured, on the contrary, by forced and unnatural constructions of the sacred word, founded either upon ignorance or sophistry. This remark is forcibly illustrated by the unfortunate blunder which is sometimes made, in putting the words—"Lord Jesus, receive my spirit"—into the mouth of Stephen's enemies. Though this interpretation of Scripture might seem to remove a difficulty, and thus favor the Bible doctrine of man's unconsciousness in death, we must still protest against it, as being utterly unwarranted by the original Scriptures. No scholar in the land would accept such a rendering for a single moment. The passage reads thus: "And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." (Acts 7: 59.)

It is very doubtful whether even the English version would allow us to refer the prayer of the text to Stephen's persecutors; but when we consult the Greek, the question is settled at once, beyond the possibility of dispute. The Greek words rendered—"Stephen, calling upon [God] and saying"—are the following: Stephanon, ewikaloumenon kai legonta. The two participles are thus seen to be in the accusative case, singular number, and masculine gender, agreeing with the noun Stephen. It was Stephen that called upon God. It cannot possibly be otherwise. If the doctrine of the unity of man, or the unconscious state of the dead, depends upon our success in taking this petition out of Stephen's mouth, and putting it into the mouths of his murderers, then the doctrine is false; but thank God, there is an abundance of Scripture testimony in the case, without wresting any passage from its legitimate meaning.

A. A. PHELPS.—Christian Times.

For the World's Crisis.

"PEACE! PEACE!"

I had already said something about peace, as presented by Father Hyacinth, but not of that armed peace, which is emphatically Napoleonic. In a speech before "the peace league," Father Hyacinth says:—"I put the question, What is it that the nations demand to-day? Is it war or peace? From the shores of America to those of Europe, and from all lands of the earth, there comes up a great cry that answers, Peace! . . . . What is it but peace that stands with Christianity at the beginning and the end of all things? Peace as origin and result. Peace always and everywhere! Woe, woe, if the war trumpet sounds. . . . . Away with these hateful images! Let us pause a moment before two great spectacles of the passing hour." Yes! The man cry of peace and the God proclamation of war. My brethren, they are before us. They (the two spectacles) are presented; more, they are stereotyped. Do we sufficiently recognize them? Shall we permit others, who see — — trees walking" to be more zealous for the cause of peace, than we are to show that it is a signpost for the 'alarm bell?' or, more accurately, a signal for Zion's trumpeters? 'Tis but the voice of despair, the harbinger of their 'sudden destruction.'"

Hear again this monk of Napoleon;—"And now, as all countries are calling, and stretching out their hands to one another, the hour is at hand for the government of mankind by itself." What would this preacher of Notre Dame propose? "I scarcely see any effectual institution other than that of a soverign international court of justice, commissioned to adjudicate the disagreements arising among nations, and by authoritative judgments to prevent bloody collisions. The future will perhaps enjoy such an institution." What about the army? "I believe that properly restricted, and properly organized, the army is one of the most potent instruments of peace. The pure type of the soldier seems to me, in the epoch which we live, to be almost as necessary to consideration as that of the priest. . . . The nations of Europe must maintain among themselves dispositions like those of provinces of the same country." Provinces of what? Now comes the Napoleonic "idea." He says:—

"Does the prosperity of one of our provinces produce invidious feelings in the rest? No; because in their individuality—too important in my opinion, but real, nevertheless,—they form the grand unit, France." What is his opinion of France? "I turn," says he, "toward the East, whence morning by morning comes the sun, whence comes the gospel, and at the point which divides Europe and Asia, I see no longer division, but the sign of glorious union. It is the admiration and advantage of the world, but it is the work of France. My France hath wrought it. I turn to the West, I see that gigantic cable plunging with the noise of thunder, and with the swiftness of lightning! It stretches from Europe to America to carry messages not of war, but of peace. It is France still!" Will Father Hyacinth have no associates in this wonderful government? This French cable, that is not to carry messages of war but of peace, "is to fix as a reality the union of three nations, which form the aristocracy of the world, and which, whenever they shall choose, have power to establish throughout our planet the reign of peace—America, England, and France!" Shall these nations constitute themselves? "Instead of nations constituting themselves, I behold mighty predestinated individuals, who create nations, giving birth to them, so to speak, from their own great souls. Make way, then, for the hero! Let him step into the unoccupied place, be the instrument of righteousness and peace, and, dying, leave the sovereignty to children and children's children, an inalienable and uncontested inheritance!" The secret is out! The mystery solved! "The Empire is peace." "Blessed is he that watcheth."

H. PRATT.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Feb. 2, 1870.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money [illegible] in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount [illegible] in the order, if these names are given. Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too. Send all the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

Who wrote to have their Crisis changed from Lewiston to Strong, Me.? No name signed.

W. N. PILE, and all others interested.—"Christ our Life" is out of print.

E. V.—Money received.

THE COMMUNION appointed for Wednesday evening, Feb. 2nd, at Library Hall, in Chelsea, is deferred for the present.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

Do not fail to read with care the article on "Christian Union," by Bro. Boutell. The subject is a very important one, and demands the hearty co-operation of every follower of Christ. Brn. and Srs., let us come up to the true standard of "christian union." Points of doctrine should never separate those who truly love Jesus. Let us cultivate christian sympathy and union with all who follow Christ. If we have more light and truth than others, let us manifest the better spirit, and win others by our extra kindness into the same happy position we profess to enjoy. Let elbows be down, hands extended, hearts open, and full of love to God and man.

PERSONAL.—We are rejoiced to inform our readers that Bro. M. Batchelor is able to go out again and preach. He is not well, but is anxious to do all he can. The Lord blest him greatly during his sickness, with love, joy and peace.

BRO. ADAMS is improving, but is not yet able to be about. Pray for him.

VENTILATION.

Do not fail to read the article in the hygienic column, headed, "An economical way of ventilating living rooms." But few seem to be aware of the importance of having fresh air to breathe, if they wish to feel well. We constantly need the pure "breath of life," if we would have the blood in a good condition, and feel a cheerful animation, and a relish for the duties of life. It is no wonder that so many are feeling "poorly" when they have so little fresh air in their rooms. With air-tight stoves, double windows, tight doors, it is impossible for one to feel well, and have mental and physical energy. It cannot be expected that women thus shut up can be healthy; [illegible] in addition to all this they compress their lungs and other vital organs, so as to receive even but a small amount of the corrupted air in their close rooms. The blood cannot be pure very long in such a situation.

The air we breathe becomes heavier, and falls to the floor; hence all rooms should have some place for this heavy air to escape below our heads; the nearer the floor the better. This subject derives special attention by those who are building meeting-houses, or public halls; or have the care of them. One of the most unpleasant parts of a minister's labors is in being obliged to speak in houses not properly ventilated. One can preach three sermons in pure air as easy as he can one in most of the meeting-houses, halls and school-houses where meetings are held. This want of fresh air not only breaks down the minister, but it is a great injury to the meeting. A lack of pure air produces dullness, stupidity, and a disinterested state of feeling, so that the same sermons preached in the impure air, if given in that which is pure, would accomplish a much greater amount of good. It is an actual loss to the church when the place of meeting is not properly ventilated.

The temperature of the air should have attention as well as its purity; hence there should be a thermometer in every meeting-house, and in all rooms where people live; and the temperature should not be allowed to go above sixty-eight Fahrenheit. We would urge our Brn. to attend to these things in their meeting-houses, halls and school-houses, where meetings are held. It often happens that a prayer or class-meeting is almost spoiled in consequence of too much heat, and for want of fresh air. It is very unhealthy to sit in such rooms, and it is a common cause of colds and fevers.

We know of intelligent men who are acquainted with the evil effects of the confined air in crowded rooms, who will not run the risk of attending meetings in such places. They think the moral effect is not good. When the whole evil can be remedied for a few dollars, and frequently without a dollar's expense, it is a great grief to preachers to find the matter so sadly neglected. Last Monday (Jan. 24th,) a faithful minister of the gospel came into our office, complaining of the prostration of his system, caused by preaching in impure air the day before. He remarked that the want of pure air exhausted and wore upon him more than the labor of preaching. Shall not the subject of ventilation receive the attention it deserves? We would again urge those whose duty it is to see to these things to attend to them at once. Have some [illegible] near the floor, [illegible] feet long and eight inches wide, or six several smaller ones, where the bad air can run out; and another as large where the pure, fresh air can come in, and not blow on the [illegible] when a window is lowered [illegible] to have the wind blowing in [illegible] window upon one's head; and [illegible] unwilling to endure it. Beside[illegible] the windows does not remedy the evil [illegible] partially; because the heavy air, that [illegible] been breathed over falls to the floor, and cannot go out at the top of the window without mixing with the whole atmosphere [illegible] room; hen[illegible] its impure [illegible] than cold air, [illegible] rise [illegible] room, and escape at a venti[illegible] but this is not the case with the [illegible] been breathed, and which it is so i[illegible] should not come back into our lungs [illegible]. Diseased persons may be [illegible] ing out [illegible] such exhalation [illegible] less impregnated with their di[illegible] this way contagious diseases are spread. There would be no danger of taking diseases from others if we did not inhale the air that came from their persons. Hence sick rooms should be well ventilated, not only for the good of the patient, but for the safety of others. Many sick people would be able to take up their beds and walk, if they and their attendants could be persuaded to have their rooms properly ventilated; but as it is, their chance of recovery is very small. It would make a well person sick to live in such air as we find in many sick rooms. Give every body plenty of fresh air. Let them have "the breath of life." When God has provided it in great and free abundance, do not scrimp any one. Especially let the man have it who comes to preach the word of life. His other burdens are sufficient, without oppressing him with impure air, while he is proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom.

Now please read the article to which we have referred.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

The outside world knows but very little about what is said and done in the Ecumenical Council at Rome. Secrecy is enjoined upon all who are connected with it. There are some unmistakeable tokens, however, which show that the august body there assembled is not having a very sunshiny time.

NAPOLEON'S POWER.

The power of Napoleon is truly "wonderful." It is astonishing to see how skillfully and successfully he handles the French people, and also other nations. We do not know his superior in the history of the past. He seems to know just what to say, when to say it, how to say it; what to do, how to do it, and when; so as to accomplish his object, and keep master of his position. He has just passed through a critical period; and yet managed everything with such "consummate ability" as to confound and astonish his enemies. He is a man adapted to the control of great events.

The following from the foreign correspondent of the Boston Journal will pay for a careful reading: PARIS, Jan. 14, 1870.

To the Editor of the Boston Journal:

As I have had for a few days past some rather extraordinary chances for knowing the Second Empire's method of protecting itself against the people, when the political horizon is full of storms, I am going to give you a few details which have not appeared in other American papers, and certainly not in those of France. You may rely on their perfect accuracy; and they possibly partake of that general interest with which Americans seem to find everything Parisian invested.

In a previous letter I have given you an account of the murder of Victor Noir, and the protest which his funeral was transformed into. The excitements of the day were followed by a very quiet evening, and the few who remained about the wet and muddy streets to sing an occasional Marseillaise, or wave an arrant red flag, were fitter subjects for ridicule than enthusiasm. I could not comprehend the sudden change from storm to calms, and it was not until midnight, after I had dropped Revolutions for Montaigne, (which Thackeray says is the best bedside book,) that I was finally shown the mysteries of the Empire's system of defence.

Just as the tower of the old church of St. Vincent Paul, which stands on a hill not far from my Lares, was clanging twelve, there came a furious knock at my door. Owing to the fact that I expected no one, and did expect to hear the outburst of a riot in the streets, I was somewhat startled; and by the time I had let in this ghastly visitor from the nights Plutonian shore, I was still more surprised. In habit of soiree, yet with marks of fatigue on every feature, and in headlong haste, rushed in one of those chance acquaintances which one makes so easily in Paris, and are often so advantageous. In Government employ he had more than once astonished me by queer revelations, but his story of the day of the 12th was the queerest of all. It was through his influence, too, the next day, that I was admitted to the Conciergerie and into the presence of the redoubtable Bonaparte himself, whose portrait and conversation I will shortly give you.

It seems that the chiefs of the army began making preparations for a vigorous defence at least two hours only after the news of Noir's murder reached Paris. For a long time it had been expected that the growing quarrel between Bonaparte and Rochefort would result in trouble for the Empire; and for that reason the columns of the Marseillaise were watched with tigerlike ferocity; and the paper was seized the moment anything unusually offensive to Bonapartists was observed. How much credence is to be given to the story that Rochefort was intending to have had Noir for his second in a duel which he proposed to fight with Bonaparte, and only failed through Noir's previous engagement by Grousset, I know not. Every one on the imperial side seems anxious to prove that Noir was a bully and assassin, and went to Prince Napoleon's house at Anteuil with the express intention of killing him. This is hardly probable, but the high court, before which the imperial prisoner expects to go, will doubtless prove by the mouths of many witnesses, that Noir intended murder, and that he had a very bad character. Pietre, the Chief of Paris Police, and the Emperor's almost inseparable companion, prepared a fine ambuscade for the people on the twelfth; and had any one attempted to form a funeral procession to bring Noir into Paris, he would have inaugurated such a massacre as has not been seen for many a year. The news had been widely spread that the workmen who were to assist at the demonstration were armed with revolvers; that, in fact, 15,000 had succeeded in putting themselves into good condition of defence. [illegible] to have created [illegible] Prefecture of Police [illegible] more [illegible] had [illegible] be a riot. [illegible] was certain [illegible] toward [illegible] "Ah! [illegible] thousand men [illegible] was, in fact, quite a [illegible] republican enthusiasm. But the [illegible] trust to Providence. He put [illegible] very strong battalions. All [illegible] the qui vive driving in a private [illegible] from Casette to Caserne, and [illegible] to the Tuileries, chatting [illegible] demonstration very much as he [illegible] Prussians arrived outside the [illegible] Neuilly, and been attempting [illegible] down to the Arc de Triomphe. [illegible] himself very freely at several [illegible] the day in favor of a severe lesson [illegible] it is said to have been by his advice [illegible] of the generals announced that he [illegible] kill 40,000 men if a single soldier was [illegible] by a citizen. The arrangement of troops [illegible] magnificent. Twenty thousand men in different barracks in the city remained under arms all day; the operators were at the telegraphic machines which are in all the buildings, and the cavalry was kept ostentatiously promenading. The secret police, of whom there are several hundred always employed on such occasions, went and came incessantly from Neuilly, and it is said that fully two-thirds of the people around the grave of the young journalist were police disguised in plain clothes, but amply prepared against any riot. Rochefort was the object of the greatest watchfulness. Orders were issued for his instant arrest if he attempted to bring his funeral procession into Paris, and in case there was any attempt made to rescue him, or to riot on his account, he was to be court martialed and shot within twenty-four hours.

There was great agitation on the governmental side towards five o'clock on the 12th, when the procession of fully 100,000 people began to come down the Champs Elysees, returning from the funeral. The spies and sergeants de ville, who had been watching, became thoroughly frightened, and word was sent to the Corps Legislatif, to the Tuileries, and to the Great Barracks on the left bank of the Seine, that the ball was open. But there seemed to be no stir, no confusion. No cavalry appeared in front or rear, and the motley crowd marched on, singing "Mourir la patrie." All at once, as the head of the procession approached the palace of Industry, a loud, sonorous drum beat broke on the air—R-R-R-Ran, ran, ran. The workmen pricked up their ears. The sidewalks, which had two minutes before been vacant, were swarming with black frocked, queer looking policemen, each with a hand on his sword hilt. Behind the palace the measured tread of soldiery was heard, and up into line gradually came at least 5000 of the Chasseurs, [illegible] crying to get into a fight. [illegible] would have been a fight, and not merely a massacre, for the workmen and civilians would have been so [illegible] had they been fired upon that they could have [illegible] one wonders [illegible] But no one had anticipated [illegible] soldiers rise, as it were, out of the ground, in this astonishing manner, and the avant garde of the [illegible] began to [illegible]. Whereupon an estafette [illegible] tell the Emperor that there was nothing more to fear. A judge of the peace advanced, read in rattling tones the sommation to retire, and the second drum beat came in loud and vivid. Then up marched a regiment away at the rear, and, as at the third, the word "fire!" is generally given in this decisive country of imperialism, the procession decided to go no further that day.

OUR EXCHANGES.

A CAPITAL NUMBER is the issue of the American Agriculturist for Feb. 1st., an advance copy of which has come to hand. The tinted cover contains a beautiful engraving of animals, while through the body of the work are scattered thirty-four fine illustrations, some of exquisite beauty, and all pleasing or instructive. About an equal number of articles on various topics, for the farm, garden, and household (the little ones not forgotten), include the practical experience of leading farmers in different localities, which furnish much real instruction; an important illustrated chapter on Maple Sugar Making, etc. These, with the Calendar, a list of work to be done during the month, and with the "Basket" containing exposures of humbugs, and some eighty shorter articles on various topics, together furnish an amount of useful, practical, reliable information, probably nowhere else to be found—at least nowhere for the same cost: $1.50 per annum, or four copies for $5. Single numbers 15cts., post paid. Orange Judd & Co., Publishers, 250 Broadway, New York.

"GOOD HEALTH" for Feb. is at hand, and contains some very valuable articles, that every one should read. This number is worth all that is paid for a year's subscription. The articles on "The Brain and Nerves," and the "Mental Treatment of the Sick," are the best we have seen on those subjects. If it were not for their length, we would publish them entire in the Crisis.

THE EARNEST CHRISTIAN and Golden Rule is a valuable christian monthly. It stands up boldly for a pure religion; is opposed to pride and fashion, war, intemperance, and secret societies. It is published by the Free Methodists, edited by Bro. B. T. Roberts. It breathes the spirit of primitive Methodism more than any other modern publication that we have seen. It is published at Rochester, N. Y., at $1.25 per annum, in advance.

THE ADVENT HERALD is still published at 46 Kneeland St., edited by Bro, J. M. Orrock, and contains good reading matter relating to the coming kingdom.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

MATTAPOISETT.

BRO. GRANT:—Do any of the servants of God know that there is such a place as Mattapoisett? do they know that there is a little flock who are looking and waiting to behold the King in his beauty? who have covenanted together to walk in harmony with the word of God; to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present evil world, looking for that blessed hope? We want some one to come and set things in order. Where is Bro. Burbank? can he not come? It is good missionary ground. Who will come and help us? In behalf of the brethren,

Mattapoisett, Mass. C. H. BOOK.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the [illegible] Society, September 2nd, [illegible] it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND Dollars for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

[illegible] the year [illegible] of tracts. The value [illegible] in the work of enlightening and strengthening [illegible] darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in the good work. Send on your names and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. H. HUSSEY, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$[illegible]
H. D. Sharp	10.00
John H. Dadman	.25
"Pilgrim"	1.00
A. D. Peaslee	.25
"W. W."	1.00
Rufus Pike	20.00

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$41.06
S. G. Hancock	2.50

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$568.65
H. D. Sharp	10.00
P. W. Higgins	5.00

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

PAPERS GRANTED.

100 copies to Sunday School in Pa.	$35.00
25 " " " N. York	10.00
Total granted	$45.00

DONATIONS RECEIVED.

W. F. F., Pa.	$12.00
Cora, West Winsted, Ct.	50
Total Donations	$12.50

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass.	$12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

MEMPHIS.

I write [illegible] to the brethren and sisters, that we [illegible] here in Memphis. The city [illegible] the old hue and cry of "Mormonism," "free-loveism," and, as the worst charge of all, "Millerism"; and with this nominal reason, they refuse to longer recognize the school as a public school; and if [illegible] here is one: A colored [illegible] yesterday, and said that Mr. [illegible] of the School Board, for whom [illegible] ordered the boy to [illegible] to do so, as he was [illegible] and, by the way, one of our best scholars. He appealed to his mother, [illegible] told him to continue his schooling [illegible] even if he lost his place. The "School Board" man was some stirred by this, and remarked that in one year from this time there will not be a Yankee in Memphis. This threat, however, amounts to nothing; but their recent course shows that if it could be, it certainly would be carried into execution. This much has been done: they have withdrawn support from several colored schools for merely nominal reasons, but they have been especially hard on us despised Adventists.

Now we must look to the Lord to send us means, by the hands of his servants in other parts of the country, if the work is to go on. If the poor and needy are to be cared for; if the young are to be taught, and the gospel of the kingdom to be preached to these poor ones, that have been in darkness all their lives; if the sick are to be visited, and the dead put in decent graves; in fine, if we are to remain as missionaries here, our support must come from some other place; for it is impossible for us to attend to this work, and at the same time be engaged in anything else, by which we can provide for ourselves. Our time is all employed, and we actually need at least one more in this house, for the work there is to do here, to say nothing of the urgent need of laborers all about us.

O, ye that are God's children, and have the cause of Christ at heart, awake, and of your abundance cast into the treasury, that the work may not flag.

Any thing to help the poor and the sick; any thing to sustain the cause here, now so well begun; prayers for our health, strength, and success in the work, and once in a while a word of sympathy, will certainly redound to the glory of God, and help prepare a people for his coming, which is so near at hand.

We wish to acknowledge the receipt of a barrel of clothing, etc., from the friends of Jesus in Brewer, Me. That Bible, with Sr. H.'s name in it, told us where they came from; else we should not have known even now. Many, many thanks from the hearts of those who have received of your bounty; and may the Lord stir up more to the same pitch of generosity. There is need enough of it. I have received a barrel of clothing from Brn. G. T. Adams and L. Boutell, Boston, with $3.00 to pay freight on same; also $6.00 to pay freight on a barrel now on the way, from No. Carver, Mass. May the Lord bless the donors, and grant them the riches of his glory when he comes. Yours laboring for Christ, L. F. COLE.

Memphis Mission, Jan. 22nd, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still teaching a Freedman's school, and have a large attendance. I expect to teach until the first of April; then, if the Lord will, I intend to go to New Jersey and stay through the spring and summer, and return to my labors again in the fall. I have received through the mail, from Eliza A. B. Benton, Vergennes, Vt., a package of papers, tracts, etc., together with fifty cents "to buy a Testament for some needy one." God bless you, dear sister, for your words of kindness. Also a package of "The Christian," and a Testament with the name J. Whitman on the yellow slip of paper; also a package of "The Young Pilgrim," with the name Carrie P. Williams.

Dear friends, God will reward you for your gifts to this poor and despised people. If you could see how eager they are to get reading matter, and with what interest they read, and see those who cannot read gather around me at noon time to hear me read to them, you would feel already rewarded. Pray for me. Yours in Christ, MRS. ROBERTA LANNING,

Cookwell, Amherst Co., Va.

For the World's Crisis.

[illegible]

People [illegible] easier to go to extremes than to take a medium course. A well balanced mind is one of the rarities of humanity. To what extremes will not the mind of people attain in this age of reckless daring. Extremes among the learned and unlearned are seen. Scientific men are not content to investigate what is spread out before them, but they seem to have gone crazy to peer into the mysteries of the past, and seek to analyse the elements that hang around the earth in the mists of creation. They are not content to study into the scientific structure and nature of earth's surface; but must needs dig deeper, and learn if possible what is in the very heart of the earth. They go to earth's extreme limits and there make scientific investigations until their mind penetrates the wonders of the inner world and brings its hidden mysteries to light. They tell us we walk earth's surface with molten rocks rolling just under us, and with the lightnings blaze above us; and there are gases enough in our bodies, and phosphorous enough in our [illegible] to [illegible] our flesh, or turn all our [illegible] taking in every breath that [illegible] slight change of form, would [illegible] destruction; and under [illegible] strong sunbeams which themselves have strength to kill. We walk amid these tremendous physical forces in safety, because they are in balance one against another; because a greater than they—one whom science calls law and whom faith calls God—holds them under perfect control, and they do his bidding.

What a wonderful change have a few years seen! How many questions which have been regarded by scientific men as forever beyond the scope of knowledge, are now their cherished subjects of investigation. Men and earth are [illegible] toward a final climax. [illegible] no longer satisfied to know what forces are at work on earth's crust, but he demands the knowledge of the beginning of earth itself. The physicist cannot accept the living frame and its laws of vital action for his study, but he asks how life begun, and why. Politicians are not satisfied short of extreme radicalism; and they carry a point so far that each opponent becomes disgusted with the other in proportion as the one is an exact counterpart of the other's folly. Everything mystical, unnatural, and of obscure meaning, is received with unwonted zest; and everything profound is acknowledged as truth. Simplicity does not seem compatible with truth.

Scarcely any are exempt from going into extreme, either in thinking or acting. Some of us talk too much; some too little. Some lack caution and run into foolish errors; some are so cautious that they run into the other extreme. Misers go to one extreme, and prodigals to the other. Some have a religious zeal that borders on fanaticism; while some have only the name to live, and in reality are more dead than alive in the work of salvation. Some run into the extreme of eating and drinking to excess, and kindred indulgences; while others are radically the reverse; and these two extremes are in open combat, and many are wounded by the means.

Let us, as christians, try to draw a medium line and walk by it. Let us keep in view the Latin maxim—"In medio tutissimus ibis,"—Safety lies in a medium. Let us hold every element of our being in check that tends to lead us to extreme results. Let the image of Christ so shine in us, and be reflected in our lives, that others may see that we are pursuing a straight and well-balanced course toward the kingdom of God.

SOPHIA JACKMAN.

For the World's Crisis.

AN APOLOGY.

Probably all who read this are familiar with the proverb, "a drowning man will catch at a straw," and I think a majority of those who have watched the progress of affairs in regard to the "Monitor" will make the application, if they have not already done so. But I not only find that the "straw" fails to support me, but there is a more serious view of the case, which I must now meet, and plead my own cause as best I may. As the case now stands, if I do not at once notify all who are interested to stop sending money to me on account of the Monitor, I shall lay myself liable to the charge of attempting to obtain money by false pretences. It is but a day or two previous to this writing, that I have had any definite knowledge of the state of affairs at the Monitor office, though I have repeatedly and urgently requested Bro. Angell to tell me how many subscribers he had, and what the prospect was, in his view, of the Monitor being sustained. I now learn that after some four months of effort, he has "obtained only twelve names, and but few of them have paid," yet he writes that "things look encouraging." Perhaps they do to him, but I cannot see the ground of encouragement. I did not see any very flattering prospects of success at the beginning; and in all my communications in regard to this subject, I have presented the case, as not yet well established, as it seemed to me but an uncertain ray of light, glimmering in the darkness.

In regard to the amount which I have received for the Monitor, it is only about one tenth as much as I was receiving from the readers of the Crisis in the same length of time, one year ago, as a free gift. And I have not one word of fault to find with the course pursued by the brethren in this case. I now wish to have all understand, that I cannot consent to receive any more money on account of the Monitor. I never wished to be considered as a "proprietor," or even as an "editor" of the Monitor, or to be in any way involved in the business transactions therewith connected. If Bro. A. could establish and sustain the periodical, I was willing to write for the same, but did not desire to be anything more than corresponding editor; yet he had it his own way in regard to that; though I do not feel justified in allowing him to make it appear that I was an equal partner in the concern. But certainly I do feel justified in now declaring the partnership dissolved, by this act, and I must henceforth be free from all responsibility as editor or publisher of the Monitor.

I hope and trust that "enlargement and deliverance" will yet arise for me; but I pray that I may be saved from the folly of catching at "straws" again; for I do not find myself sustained by them; and I prefer to settle down till I find my feet well established upon the Rock of ages. I know that underneath are the "everlasting arms," and whether I abound or suffer need, all will at least be well. In conclusion, I ask all my friends to pray for me, often and earnestly, that I may be delivered [illegible] good and [illegible] body, and spirit, [illegible] blameless at the coming of the Lord.

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW MANY SOULS?

Philosophers of the 19th century tell us the soul is located in the "Pineal gland," between the right and left hemisphere of the brain. They also tell us that after the soul leaves the body, the body will never be resuscitated, but the soul can pick up floating particles of matter, and make itself a body at pleasure. Now, there is on exhibition, going through the United States, a young lady, eighteen years of age, with two heads,—perfectly natural—and only one body. Who knows but what two of these souls got to quarrelling over some "floating particles of matter"—not enough to make two bodies, and finally compromised the contest, as both could not occupy one head, making the wonderful creature called "the two-headed girl."

[illegible] the case, then we ask "Orthodoxy," if the "immortal soul" is the "mind," and the [illegible] is the seat of the mind, how many immortal souls has she? Or, if the soul corresponds with the outlines of the body, has she a two-headed immortal soul? Respectfully submitted. J. W. TAYLOR.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE SEVENTH MAINE MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

The conference convened at Bangor, Jan. 11th, 1870, at seven o'clock, evening. Sermon by Eld. F. A. Baker, from Matt. 13:3. As there was not snow enough to travel with sleighs, many of our ministers and lay brethren of the western part of the State could not attend this conference.

Wednesday, 12th, 9.30 A. M., met for prayer and conference, and enjoyed a precious season in the Lord. At seven o'clock, the President called the meeting to attend to business. The constitution was called for and read, after which the following brethren were chosen as officers for the coming year: Eld. C. Goud, President; Eld. F. A. Baker, Vice President; Eld. I. C. Wellcome, Secretary and Treasurer; Elders E. M. Haggett, Wm. H. Mitchell, R. R. York, Executive and Disbursing Committee; Eld. Thos. Smith, Tract Agent. The Chair appointed a committee of three, to prepare and present business for the conference; viz., R. R. York, F. A. Baker, I. C. Wellcome. Voted, to invite all lay brethren who attend this conference to participate with us. Adjourned to meet at the close of the P. M. sermon. At 3.30 P. M., resumed business.

The subject of quarterly conferences was freely talked of, and their great importance shown by accounts of past results. Voted, to advise all our preachers and brethren to re-organize their quarterly conferences, and seek to convene in each section of the State as often as once in three months. Adjourned.

Thursday, 13th, nine o'clock A. M. After prayer, listened to the reports of the Tract agent and others.

REPORT.

Tracts passed over from agent for 1868, to R. R. York, agent for 1869, valued	$20.00
Cash from Solomon Wagg	5.00
Cash from H. B. Eaton	1.00
	$26.00
Distributed in various ways	5.00
	$21.00

Accepted. I. C. Wellcome has furnished and distributed tracts amounting to $5.20, which was allowed him. F. A. Baker had received and passed over to the cause $100 worth, from the A. C. P. Society, in consequence of a legacy of $1000 willed them by the late Joseph Turner. Of these had been distributed in the Mission Tent and otherwise, $75 worth, leaving in the hands of all concerned, $40.80 worth of tracts, to be passed to new account. Approved.

Voted, that we try in the future to do all our tract business through our tract agent. Voted, to instruct the executive board to give certificates of membership to all ministers who belong to this conference. Voted, that the mission and tract cause be considered and called one. Heard the Treasurer's report; being satisfactory, it was agreed that it be merged into the Tent-mission report of finances. Voted, to hear the Tent-committe report.

REPORT OF TENT COMMITTEE.

Dear Brethren:—It becomes our duty at this time to report to you our labors and success in performing the work assigned us by your conference at its last session. We found it difficult to engage any one of our ministers to take charge of the tent, with its responsibilities, for a summer campaign. After all had declined, Bro. I. C. Wellcome, though overtasked with other work, consented to assume the position, calling such other ministerial aid as he could from time to time obtain.

The tent has been pitched in seven different towns and cities; viz., Brewer, Bangor, Winterport, Rockland, Bethel, Bryant's Pond, and Bridgton. Bro. D. W. Griffin, who during two previous seasons has proved a capable, faithful and judicious tent-master, was engaged to fill that position and to convey the tent with his team. Our gatherings have generally been large and orderly, the people manifesting a deep interest to listen to the gospel of the kingdom of God, and signs of the immediate coming of Christ. It is probable that fifteen thousand persons have been in attendance at the various meetings, the most of whom were strangers to our views and hope. Many have been deeply impressed by the word preached, and in the social meetings. One hundred and forty sermons were preached, and eighty-seven social meetings held. Many christians of other churches united in our social worship, who were interested and much edified by our teachings. Some sinners have been converted in nearly every town, and wanderers reclaimed, while many christians have been quickened, and led to see the Bible hope, and the signs of the immediate coming of Christ to judge the world and establish his kingdom. We are happy to be assured that very much good has been accomplished in these communities, while much good seed has been sown which the Lord will yet bless and cause to bring forth fruit. New doors have also been opened in these and surrounding towns for the Advent message to be proclaimed in the future.

Brn. F. A. Baker, A. Damon, L. F. Cole, S. Hall, Wm. H. Mitchell, J. A. Libby, and E. M. Haggett, have been engaged to aid in preaching the word. Others have visited us and preached some, and many of our brethren and sisters have rendered effective service in our meetings, and obtained great blessings also. We have also scattered about eighty dollars worth of tracts, and a good number of books, which are preaching to the people.

We believe we cannot too highly recommend to our brethren this mode of mission labor. Several well conducted tents would find abundant room in Maine, and accomplish a great amount of Mission work; but this work must be sustained by those who love their fellow men enough to sacrifice of their own substance for their salvation; and we would here remind our brethren that such an important instrumentality in the Lord's vineyard should be sustained by the more liberal donations of those who have the Lord's money.

Our expenses (as per schedule) in travel, repairs, food, lanterns, oil, tent-master, and preachers' allowance, amount to $435.55. Our receipts from all sources, including cash in treasury, $329.77. Leaving us in debt to our servants, $105.78. All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was accepted and adopted.

Resolved, That we, the members of this conference, believe it a matter of great importance that all the friends of the Second Advent cause in Maine combine their efforts to sustain and increase its mission work. We therefore ask all our brethren, sisters, children and friends, to become members of the Maine Second Advent Mission Society, by the payment annually of one dollar, more or less, as they feel able, into its treasury; and all who are able and believe they can glorify God in this work, we ask to give larger sums. We purpose to raise ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS; and to further this object, we advise each of our ministers to solicit, or to appoint one or more persons in each church, society, and locality throughout the State, to solicit and collect such membership and sums as may be collected, and forward the same, as often as convenient, to the Secretary and Treasurer.

Friday, 14th, nine o'clock A. M. Opened by prayer. Voted, to try the fellowship of the ministry. On examination, all were found in good fellowship as far as known. On motion, Elds. F. A. Baker, E. M. Haggett, and I. C. Wellcome, were chosen a committee on ordination. The Secretary read letters from Elders H. D. Reed, Austin W. Taylor, and Brn. Jeremiah Hill and Edwin B. Wells. On motion, Brn. A. W. Taylor of Byron, Edwin B. Wells of Kennebunk Depot, Jeremiah Hill and J. P. S. Hampson of Biddeford, and John Morrill of Newburg, were received as members of conference.

Resolved, That inasmuch as there are impostors traveling from state to state, and place to place, claiming to be gospel ministers of our society, and getting sympathy as such; we therefore advise all our societies and brethren to request all strangers who come among them with such claims, to show a certificate of membership with some conference; or, of good standing in society, and thereby prevent imposition.

Voted, That Elds. T. Smith, E. M. Haggett, and D. W. Griffin, be a committee, in absence of the tent-committee, to audit the financial report of the tent, and make the appropriations of the same.

Voted, That Thomas Smith, J. M. Jewett, and D. W. Griffin, be a committee to nominate seven brethren to constitute a Board, to be called "The Maine Tent and Mission Board." Elds. Wm. H. Mitchell, F. A. Baker, I. C. Wellcome, R. R. York, H. D. Reed, and Brn. J. M. Jewett and Dr. H. B. Eaton, were nominated. I. C. Wellcome declined in favor of E. M. Haggett, which was accepted, when the above were chosen said Board.

Voted, To hear reports from churches and societies.

REPORTS FROM CHURCHES.

Bangor church.—In good condition; prospering, with an increasing interest in the work of Christ, and signs of the conversion of sinners. They have an excellent Sunday-school. Preaching by Brn. Baker and Smith.

Brewer Village.—A good interest to hear the word. Several have come to Christ the last year through the labors of Bro. F. A. Baker. There is a faithful working company of believers there.

Bath church.—This is an active, working body. Is prospering in the Lord. Some lately converted. Good congregations, and good Sunday-school in summer. Good field of labor. Various preachers labor there.

Biddeford church.—Prosperous. A working church, and having frequent accessions by conversions, and from other churches. Large congregations, and an excellent Sunday School.

Bonny Eagle.—The Lord has blessed his truth there. A good work has been done; light and truth are spreading, and a house of worship has been built.

Bristol.—An increased interest at New Harbor. A church has been organized by Elder M. B. Patterson, who has preached there some. Light is spreading in that and other places in the vicinity.

Bearing.—Bro. John R. Hall, from the Provinces, reported (being present) that he and others had held four tent-meetings in Bearing, Princeton, Milltown, and Calais City, with good success. A good interest was awakened which opened new doors for labor around them. A deep interest is manifested to hear the word of life in the eastern part of the state, and ministerial labor is much needed. In New Brunswick and Nova Scotia the truth is making progress, and the Advent message listened to with much interest. Sinners have been converted, and believers multiplied. A Provincial Conference is organized.

Brunswick.—An increased interest; good hearing; a revival; three or four lately converted. Brn. H. D. Reed, York, and Goud, preached there. Adjourned.

Afternoon, 3.30. Resumed church reports. Byron.—A good working interest there; light is shining, and there are some who love the Lord. China-Branch.—Prosperous. Some lately converted, baptized, and joined the church; others will soon. Weeks Mills church steadfast and working. Carthage church.—Yet alive and at work. Some interest; several have lately found the Lord. Dixfield.—Some there who love the word of the Lord, and are looking for his return. Bro. and Sr. A. W. Taylor had preached there some. Greene.—Some interest to hear the truth. Some believers there. Bro. Haggett preaches there occasionally. Holden.—Good interest. Several have been converted, and others reclaimed. Bro. Israel Damman has labored with them, and organized two churches the past year; one in North and one in South Holden. Hartford.—Increased interest; some opposition. The Lord is at work there. Bro. Haggett preaches to them some. Twelve lately baptized. Jay.—A good work of the Lord the last year. Several were converted and baptized. Bro. H. B. Sevey has labored there. Has organized a church of eighteen members, and others are to join soon. Livermore.—Some are holding fast and [illegible] joy some good meetings. Levant.—A peculiar state of society. A goodly number love the Lord, and look for his return. One lately converted, and one reclaimed. Have a Sunday-school. Are building a meeting-house. Hermon.—A free place to preach. Some who love to praise God. The truth is spreading. Peru.—Some interest. Several reclaimed. Getting light on the gospel hope and signs of the times. Portland.—Passing through trials, but having excellent meetings, with large congregations. A faithful, working membership. Good Sunday-school. Stark.—Some progress. Feel encouraged to go on. Light is spreading. Bro. Haggett preaches there some. TOPSHAM CHURCH. Have had some trials. There is much opposition to the truth. Have lately been obliged to give up their hall. Are hoping to obtain another place of worship soon. WELD. The people are interested to learn the truth. Some there who look for the Lord. A good field of labor.

There were many other items of interest reported, and many other societies not reported. The Lord has given us much prosperity in his work the past year, for which we feel to give him praise.

SATURDAY, 15th, 9 A. M. Opened by prayer. The subject of Sunday schools was taken up, and earnestly discussed, after which the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That this conference feels a deep interest in the subject of Sunday schools, and hereby calls upon our brethren and sisters throughout the State to put forth special efforts to organize and sustain Sunday schools.

Resolved, That we urge upon the writers and publishers of our works to write and publish more books suited to the use of our children and Sunday schools.

Resolved That we hereby instruct the executive committee to seek to immediately raise means by subscriptions or loan, to pay our kept for mission labors expended.

Resolved, That we hereby invite Bro. Austin W. Taylor and wife to labor in Maine, in the gospel, with their mission tent, the coming season as the Lord may open the way.

P. M., 3–30. Resumed business. Conference expressed their heart-felt thanks to the brethren and friends of Bangor and Brewer, for their invitation and hearty welcome of this session among them, and their kindness and hospitality to us who attended.

Resolved, That we hold an extra session in June next, at such place as may be appointed, at which time to so arrange the name of conference, and otherwise amend the constitution as to signify its work, also to transact other business.

Resolved, That the Secretary be instructed to prepare the records of this session for publication in the "World's Crisis," "Advent Herald," and "Advent Christian Times." Adjourned without day. C. GOUD, Pres.

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

Yarmouth, Me., Jan. 19th, 1870.

We also had preaching afternoons and evenings, and several social meetings, which were precious seasons. The preaching was good and listened to eagerly. The social meetings were characterized by earnest and true faith, with deep devotion to the work of the Lord, and anxious waiting, for his coming.

SUNDAY, A. M., 9 o'clock. Sunday School session under the superintendence of Bro. J. M. Jewett. This was the most interesting and impressive exercise to us of any we enjoyed during conference. It is an excellent school, well managed. The little ones did great credit to their teachers and to themselves. P. M. and evening, the audiences were large and very attentive to the word. At the closing service three rose for prayers. Thus closed another of our yearly gatherings. It was one of the most harmonious and united conferences we ever held.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

"BEREAN'S CASKET AND REPOSITORY."

I have received the above book, issued by Bro. I. C. Wellcome, and given it a cursory examination, and find it contains a variety of Biblical subjects, and the most important passages of Scripture referring to those subjects, systematically arranged into sections; and also, a valuable amount of historical and statistical information; making it a work of great worth to the Bible student. We can say we are pleased with the work. It will be a valuable accession to the Bible student's library. We hope it will be extensively circulated. Buy it, read it, lend it to your neighbor, and thus do good. A. W. SIBLEY.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. E. Glover.

BRO. GRANT:—Eld. N. Glidden came here last spring, and has been here more or less ever since. Before he came, I never went to meeting any where. I went to the first meeting he had in our neighborhood, and after that I could not stay away. The more I went, the more I wished to go. I am truly thankful that the good Lord put it into his heart to come here and preach the truth. His meetings have been attended with the Spirit of God. Some have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, and God's children blessed. Two have been buried with Christ in baptism. I have been led to see the truth, and I thank the Lord for what I feel in my heart to-day.

New Hampton, N. H. M. E. GLOVER.

BRO. W. K. EVERSON, M. D., writes from Chicago, Jan. 17th, 1870:—"The brethren in Chicago, like the Bereans, are searching the Scriptures, to see if these things are so. Some of the word of the kingdom, sown by yourself and others here, has fallen on good ground. It was not only heard, but understood, and is bringing forth fruit. The interest is growing, and the disposition on the part of brethren to drink deep of the truth is manifest. I have been preaching once each Lord's day for several weeks past, on the south side, near the Stock Yards. Last Lord's day, Bro. Ramsay being absent in Iowa, I preached in the chapel on Green St., morning and evening. By the help of the Lord, I shall continue to bear witness as he opens the way."

BRO. GEORGE HESS writes from Dansville, N. Y.:—"Please give place in your columns for a few words of our heartfelt thankfulness to our God, and those christian hearts who, last spring, saw in the Crisis a notice of my misfortune, when my house and nearly all that was in it was burned. Although strangers to us, yet from the east and west, north and south, came tokens of relief to us. The donors perhaps have never since known or heard of us. We wish to say, we thank our God that there are christians to be found with willing hearts and ready hands to help in time of trouble. The liberal hands of charity have given us means to erect another house over the ashes of the other; one where we are again comfortably situated. [illegible]

I am hoping and looking for a better home than this, where I shall see loved ones, that could not return with me to this new home. There I hope to meet my dear brothers and sisters, who have been so kind to me, and the loved ones now sleeping in Jesus."

SR. M. J. BRIGGS writes from Fair Haven, Vt., Jan. 11th, 1870:—"Although a communicant in another church, I am a full believer in the comparatively soon coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. At the early age of fourteen years (I am now in my thirty-fifth year) I began to pray, "Thy kingdom come." In the month of Oct., 1860, I had a glorious and indescribable experience, or vision, as one might call it, of the personal coming of Jesus to claim me personally as his own. Again in the month of Dec., 1864, I had a more powerful and glorious experience still, of the personal second coming and advent of our Lord Jesus Christ. I do not believe it is the will of God that I should keep all he has done for me to myself.

Five years ago this past December, a Second Advent lady, living then in Northern Illinois, but who has since fallen asleep in Jesus, had the kindness to send me a 'World's Crisis.' It was the first one I ever read, and I perused it faithfully, reading every word of it, right through of course, from the 'Behold I come quickly,' at the head of the paper, to the last page. Since then I have begged, or borrowed one occasionally, I should be glad to take the Crisis constantly, if I could. It would be a great blessing to me; but I am utterly and entirely unable to pay for it. It is good for me to read it."

We will send it.—Ed.

BRO. A. S. WILLIAMS writes from Philadelphia, Jan. 25:—"I praise the Lord for what he has done for me, since I came to Philadelphia. Love is increasing among those that love the truth. Though others may differ with us on points of doctrine, we are to endeavor 'to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.' My heart is in the work. Jesus is coming; he is even at the door. May we all be ready, cut loose from everything that hinders us from running the race set before us with patience; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; for we have an High Priest that can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. Blessed be his name. May God help us to carry every thing to him in prayer.

"We can smile at Satan's rage,
And face a frowning world."

Dear Bro. Grant: May God help you to be faithful. May he give you richly of his wisdom to direct you in all things; and may your face be set as a flint Zion-ward."

Obituaries.

EDGECOMB. Died in Parsonsfield, Me., Jan. 11th, 1870, Sister Betsey Lougee, wife of the late James Edgecomb, aged seventy-seven years, ten months, and sixteen days.

The subject of this notice experienced religion at an early period in life, as we humbly trust, and at the age of thirteen was baptized by Elder John Buzzell, and united with the church in Parsonsfield, in which she remained a faithful member ever after. She quietly rests in hope of glory, honor, immortality, eternal life, when the Prince of life comes again on earth to reign.

SWASEY. Died in Ossipee, N. H., Jan. 17th, 1870, Sister Sarah E., wife of Allen Swasey, aged twenty-eight years and five months.

She left a bright evidence that she would have a part in the first resurrection. M. STEVENS.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

ROME, Jan. 28. The Archbishop of Algiers has left Rome for Paris, to ascertain the views of the Emperor on the dogma of the personal infallibility of the Pope. The uncertainty as to the Emperor's position on this question causes the Holy Father serious uneasiness.

LONDON, Jan. 29. It is reported to-day that the Pope has yielded to France and withdrawn the project of infallibility.

ROME, Jan. 26. It is said that the Council will suspend its proceedings, and possibly dissolve the assemblage, about Easter, on account of the insalubrity of the climate of Rome at that season.

Easter Sunday will fall on the 17th day of April, at which season the weather is particularly warm and unwholesome in and around the Holy City.

ROME, Jan. 30. The Pope yesterday visited the American College, where he assisted at mass and delivered a sermon. He afterward took breakfast with the students and a number of American visitors, including several ladies. The Holy Father expressed his gratification at the progress of the Church in America. He declared that the Republic of the United States was the Republic of intelligence and virtue. He added that the condemnation of the Church applied only to licentious infidel revolutionists, who were as dangerous in the United States as to Europe.

PARIS, Jan. 30. The organization of the new company for the canalization of the Isthmus of Darien was completed last evening, and the capital all subscribed. Four French bankers and a dozen American capitalists are at the head of it. Such are the powerful combinations existing, that concessions from the Isthmus Government will be secured. The company wait the report of the United States exploring expedition to go to work.

DOMESTIC.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25. A salute of one hundred guns was fired in the Park at noon to-day in honor of the admission of the State. About five thousand persons were present, two-thirds of whom were colored. National flags were raised on the Custom House and Capitol. Gov. Walker spoke a few minutes, congratulating the people on the admission of Virginia and predicting a glorious future for the State. A colored Conservative and a number of colored Republicans made political speeches, the burden of the latter being that if the State did not follow in the spirit of the reconstruction acts she would be put back as a Territory.

After the proceedings in the Park this morning relative to the admission of the State, the colored people organized a political meeting and kept it up until night, when they adjourned with cheers for the admission of Virginia. The guns used to-day were the same that were used in the salute of the United States flag when the troops occupied the city in 1865.

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 28. The Courant has news from Robert P. Kemp, Consul at Athens, of the total destruction by an earthquake, on the morning of December 29, of the town of Santa Maura, on one of the Ionian islands of that name. At the date of advices, January 1st, ten dead and fifty wounded men had been taken from the ruins. Not a house was left standing. The survivors slept in the open air under tents.

THE GREAT TORNADO IN KENTUCKY.—A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from Cave City, Ky., under date of January 18, has this to say of the fearful tornado which swept over that region, accounts of which we have heretofore given:

"The particulars of the doings of the tornado which cut off and demolished nearly one-third of this little town yesterday morning will never be known. The storm had a beginning and an end, and the end was not more than two minutes later than the beginning; but a description of the scene during those two minutes, or of the sad havoc which was the result of the storm, can have no beginning, and can never be made complete. The storm began about 5 o'clock in the morning, with a heavy fall of hail, which continued but for a moment, and was immediately followed by a long, continuous sheet of flame, lasting another moment. The wind storm then commenced its terrible work. No words can portray an idea of the scene. Those who had witnessed the most terrifying battle scenes say they never saw or heard, or felt or conceived of anything so perfectly hideous and terrifying as the howling of the winds, the vivid flashes of lightning, the crashing of houses, the drenching rain, the heart-rending shrieks and piteous wailings of the terrified and the wounded, the whole of which occurred in two minutes, or probably less time. The wind shrieked, screamed, howled and roared. By the occasional flashes of lightning it could be seen that the air was filled with flying trees, timber, houses, fragments of houses, stables and buildings of all kinds, furniture, stoves and cooking utensils, clothing, bedding, animals, fowls, and every conceivable thing, visible and invisible, that were within the range of the storm. If the flood had form, it was that of a heavy, angry cloud, which swept the earth and tore everything it touched from its fixed place. The crash was quick and terrific, but the noise of the breaking houses was mute, compared with the bellowing winds that preceded it. The destruction was complete. About fifty houses were demolished, and there is not to be found a portion of a building, a piece of furniture, an article of jewelry, an article of clothing or bedding, a book or a piece of ware of any kind that is worth the sum of fifty cents. The remains of the houses may serve for firewood, the fragments of furniture for kindling, the clothing and bedding for old rags, but there is nothing left within that track of a half a mile in width, and extending at least twelve or fifteen miles in length, except in two or three singular instances, that is worth a farthing, or ever will be, in the way it was originally designed. The total loss can never be estimated. It is enough to know that several hundred persons are homeless, without clothing or food, except such as they have received from kind-hearted citizens. Most of the destitute are poor and unable to purchase clothing or furniture, or even food, even if they could find houses to live in. Eleven will be taken to their narrow homes to-day. It is indeed wonderful that this number is so small. How any creature could exist in that storm and survive is a mystery beyond the comprehension of even those who were in the thickest of it. Many of the survivors were terribly lacerated and bruised by the flying splinters and timbers, and some of the dead were shockingly crushed and mangled."

Passing Events.

☞ On the day of the funeral in Paris of Victor Noir, Marshal Canrobert, the commander-in-chief of the forces about the city, was asked what he would do in case of a riot. He replied: "I shall shoot down 40,000 men if necessary, and I only ask five minutes to quiet Paris."

☞ It is said that Victor Noir was to be married on the 13th, and the young lady who was to be his wife has gone mad. His old father was lying ill. It is now feared the news will kill him. The brother of Noir is in a state of exasperation bordering upon madness, so that out of this murder much trouble can but arise.

☞ The Pope has sent a Cardinal on a mission to the French Emperor,—probably to get the imperial aid in putting down infidelity to which he has ordered the bishops to give their attention. The Emperor at heart believes as much in the sacredness of Roman Cardinals as Pontifex Maximus Cæsar believed in the sacredness of the Roman chickens.

☞ According to Professor Gould, the velocity of the electric wave in the Atlantic cable is between 7000 and 8000 miles a second. Telegraph wires placed in the air on poles conduct the electric wave about double the above velocity, and the curious fact has been discovered that the rapidity of transmission increases with the distance of the wire from the earth.

☞ An apparatus has been contrived in England, by which new-mown grass is placed in a strong current of hot air, set in motion by a fan, so that moist grass may be converted into the best quality of hay in ten minutes, sweeter and greener than can be made by sun-drying. It works in all weathers, and dries grain, corn, and roots, so that farmers will not have to watch the weather as anxiously as now.

☞ The meeting of the World's Evangelical Alliance is to take place in the city of New York on the 22nd of September, and continue to the 3d of October. Delegates will be present from Great Britain, the Netherlands, Germany, France, Switzerland, Turkey, and other countries. The subjects to be considered: Christian union, Christianity and its antagonists, religion and civil government, Christian life, foreign and home missions, Christianity and social evils, the theology of the reformation. The meeting will be one of the great events of the age.

☞ The Russian Government talks of building a railroad through Siberia to China. Its length in Asia will be a thousand miles.

☞ Less than one-third of the policemen of Chicago are Americans.

☞ The construction of iron buildings is said to be largely on the increase in all our principal cities, employing millions of capital and the use of thousands of tons of iron annually. The first iron structure ever seen in America was erected in Boston in 1842.

☞ Thousands of tons of apples and pears will be wasted in the San Jose Valley, California, this season, for want of a market.

☞ The walls of Constantinople, completed fifteen centuries ago by the Emperor Theodosius, are to be pulled down, and their stones employed in various municipal improvements.

☞ Rochefort is said to be an infidel.

☞ Postage cannot be prepaid on letters from Boston to, or through, France.

Religious Items.

— There are about fifteen thousand ministers of the gospel in this country.

— The Episcopalians support twenty-five newspapers and periodicals, having an aggregate circulation of 128,000.

— Religious services have been held in the Olympic Theatre, St. Louis, on Sunday evenings, for the last nine months, with most favorable results. The congregations are overflowing, composed of fashionable and plain people, Catholics, Israelites, Christians, Infidels, clerks, laborers, seamstresses, hackmen, saloon keepers, newsboys, bootblacks, and some of nameless vocations. Every week reclamations and conversions are reported.

— British Methodism has contributed $25,000,000 for foreign evangelization, and the Wesleyan Society has more communicants in its mission churches than all other British missionary societies combined.

— A revival is in progress in Oberlin College, resulting in the conversion of a great many of the students.

— A great religious revival is in progress in Fort Wayne, Ind., under the labors of Dr. and Mrs. Palmer of New York. One hundred and twenty have professed conversion, including about thirty of the students of Fort Wayne College.

— The English Unitarians are all Universalists. Twenty clergymen are said to be ready to unite in organizing a distinct Universalist Church in England.

— The New York Methodists have bought a camp meeting site at New Rochelle for $30,000, and will abandon the old ground at Sing Sing.

— A butcher in London, and a christian only seven years, began telling others what God had done for him, and the result was their salvation. He now has a chapel that holds fifteen hundred, and has six hundred members. He has a large business, but preaches five nights in a week in the streets, in halls, and other places in the city.

THE DOME OF THE CAPITOL.—The dome of the Capitol at Washington is the most ambitious structure in America. It is 180 feet higher than the Washington Monument at Baltimore, sixty-eight feet higher than Bunker-Hill, and twenty-two feet higher than the Trinity Church spire of New York. It is the only considerable dome of iron in the world. It is a vast hollow sphere of iron, weighing 8,000,200 pounds. How much is that? More than 4,000 tons, or about the weight of 70,000 full-grown people, or about equal to a thousand laden coal-cars, which, holding four tons apiece, would reach two miles and a half. Directly over your head is a male figure in bronze, "America," weighing 13,985 pounds. The pressure of the iron dome upon its piers and pillars is 14,477 pounds to the square foot. St. Peter's presses nearly 20,000 pounds more to the square foot, and St. Genevieve, at Paris, 65,000 pounds more. It would require to crush the supports of our dome, a pressure of 755,280 pounds to the square foot. The cost was about $1,000,000. The new wings cost $6,500,000. The architect has a plan of remodeling the old central part of the Capitol, and enlarging the Park, which will cost $3,200,000.

MEAN MEN.—Henry Ward Beecher says of mean men; "I have great hope of the wicked man—slender hope of a mean one. A wicked man may be converted and become a prominent saint. A mean man ought to be converted six or seven times, and right after the other, to give him a fair start, and put him on an equality with the bold, wicked men. I have known men who thought the object of conversion was to cleanse them as a garment is cleansed, and that when they are converted they were to be hung up in the Lord's wardrobe, the door of which was to be shut, so that no dust could get at them. A coat that is not used, the moths eat; and a christian who is hung up so that he is not tempted, the moths eat him. And they have poor food at that!"

☞ Bickersteth states, upon careful examination, that at least one verse in thirty of the New Testament points onward to the resurrection life.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
Henry Pratt..........Sunday, Feb. 6th and evenings, Feb. 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th.
L. Boutell..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. Simpson..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. Munger..........Sunday, Feb. 27th

BOSTON, SOUTH END, (Minot Hall), corner of Washington and Springfield Streets.)
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
J. S. White..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Geo. A. Streeter..........Sunday, Feb. 20th

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
B. Woodside..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. Simpson..........Sunday, Feb. 13th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
A. Simpson..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
M. Batchelor..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
S. S. Brewer..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Couch..........Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell..........Sunday, March 13th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 33 Main Street), every Lord's day.
S. W. Thurber...Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th

West Winsted, Ct., (Camp's Hall)...Sabbath, Feb. 6th and onward. MILES GRANT.

East Boston..........Thursday evening, Feb. 3d
Boston, (Minot's Hall)..........Friday evening, Feb. 4th
Dover, N H., Sunday, Feb. 6th, and through the week following.
New Dover, (school-house, at the junction of Concord, Loudon, and Chichester), Sunday, Feb. 13th.
Dear brethren, New Dover is half a mile from the place where I first preached, more than twenty-seven years ago, and Sunday, Feb. 13th, will be my fiftieth birthday. Come and help me praise the Lord.
JOHN G. HOOK.

Exeter, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Fayville, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
C. GOODRICH.

Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Athol, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
L. BOUTELL.

Lowell, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Lake Village, N. H..........Friday evening, Feb. 4th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Lowell, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Loudon Ridge, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN COUCH.

Lynn, Mass..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 1st
Vernon, Vt..........Thursday, Feb. 3d and over the following Sabbath. H. MUNGER.

North Springfield, Vt.....Sabbath, Feb. 6th and 13th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Southington, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
New York City, (24th Street)..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Cheshire Street, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

Woodstock Valley, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
P. S. BUTLER.

New Haven, Ct..........Friday evening, Feb. 4th
Hartford, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Nevada, Ohio..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
E. McCULLOCK.

Bethel, Vt., (Camp Brook), Friday and Saturday evenings, Feb. 4th and 5th, and over the Sabbath.
Braintree, Vt..........evening, Feb. 7th
East Roxbury, Vt..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
East Montpelier, Vt., (where Bro. E. M. Morse may appoint), evening, Feb. 12th, and over the Sabbath.
J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Pownal Centre, Vt..........Sabbath evening, Feb. 6th
Pownal, Vt..........Monday evening, Feb. 7th
Williamstown, Mass..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
North Adams Mass..........Wed. evening Feb. 9th
Savoy, Mass..........Thurs. eve., Feb. 10th
North Adams..........Friday evening, Feb. 11th
If these appointments should conflict with others will the Brn. please inform me immediately?
Z. DUBOIS BAIRD.

Seabrook, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
ENOCH MORRILL.

Limerick, (Tuft's neighborhood)...Sunday, Feb. 20th
B. S. EMERY.

Warren, N. H., (as Brn. may arrange), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Haverhill, N. H., (where arrangements may be made), Feb. 17th.
Lake Village, N. H..........Feb. 18th
A. ROSS.

Manchester, N. H..........evening, Feb. 3d
Concord, N. H., (at the Bethel)..........evening, Feb. 4th
Lake Village, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)..........evening, Feb. 9th and over the following Sabbath.
WM. C. STEWART.

Hopkinton, (Town Hall Building)...Sunday, Feb. 6th
Seabrook, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Lake Village, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
C. W. SARGENT.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House)...Sabbath, Feb. 6th
JOHN H. EVANS.
DANIEL EASTMAN.

East Landaff, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
E. S. MOULTON.

Warren Summit, N. H..........evening, Feb. 4th
Lake Village, N. H..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
A. A. HOYT.

Piermont Village, N. H., (Town House) Sab., Feb. 6th
C. W. NELSON.

Westfield..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
WM. J. RIPLEY.

Rawsonville, Vt..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Goshen, N. H., (where Brn. may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 13th, and through the week.
Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house)..........Feb. 20th
Z. T. WOOD.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Feb. 6th
Lake Village, N. H..........Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
Webster, N. H., (Methodist meeting-house), Sabbath, Feb. 13th.
SIMEON ROBY.

South Livermore, Me..........Feb. 4th to 6th
Lewiston, Me..........Feb. 7th and 8th
Belgrade Depot, Me..........Feb. 9th
South Sangerville..........Feb. 11th to 13th
South Atkinson..........Feb. 14th to 15th
Emerson's Mills..........Feb. 16th
Machiasport.....Feb. 20th, and onward indefinitely.
I. K. LOMBARD.
As I cannot sell my team, I have given up the idea of going west. I. K. L.

North Somers, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
A. MORSE.

Brunswick, Me., (Ham's school-house), eve., Feb. 5th
Bath, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Reed meeting-house..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Sabbattusville..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. S. MITCHELL.

New Haven, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Bridgeport, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
G. L. TEEPLE.

Holden, (at Chapel)..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
GEO. W. BROWN.

Wakefield, Mass..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Manchester, N. H..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. MOONEY.

East Canaan..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
If these conflict, please write me.
D. F. LEAVITT.

Stowe, Mass..........Sunday, March 6th
A. SIMPSON.

East Rochester..........evenings, Feb. 3d and 4th
Strafford, (Robert's school house)..........evening, Feb. 5th and over Sunday.
Alton Corner..........evening, Feb. 8th
W. Alton, (where Bro. Flanders may appoint,) Feb. 9th
Guilford, (Pond school-house, near Davis' Bridge), Feb. 10th and 11th.
Center Harbor, (where Bro. Emery may appoint) evening, Feb. 12th, and over Sunday.
Holderness, (Brick school-house..........Feb. 15th and 16th
Lake Village, N. H., (North Church)..........Feb. 17th
Meredith Village, where Bro. Lang may appoint, Feb. 18th.
Meredith Centre, Dolliff school-house..........Feb. 19th and Sunday.
J. L. CHUTE.

Suncook, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. RICHARDSON.

Farmington Village, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Alton Corner..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. M. BRYANT.

Sandwich, N. H., (Vittum school-house)..........Feb. 6th
Watter Village, Ossipee..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Porter Village, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Melvin Village..........Feb. 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Bristol, Ct..........Wednesday evening, Feb. 16th
Plainville..........Friday evening, Feb. 18th
Southington, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
New Britain..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 22d
Westfield, Mass..........Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d
Danielsonville..........Friday evening, Feb. 25th and the following Sunday, the 27th.
Bridgeport..........Tuesday evening, March 1st
ANNA E. SMITH.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)
G. L. Teeple..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Anna E. Smith, of New York..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. Hitchcock..........Sunday, Feb. 27th

Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, March 6th
Preach and break bread. M. BATCHELOR.

Warner, N. H., (Wm. G. Flanders'), Sabbath, Feb. 13th
D. W. DAVIS.

Edinboro..........Feb. 6th, and [illegible]
Campton's Corners, (four miles from Edinboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sharps Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Cohocton..........Feb. 19th and 20th.
C. F. SWEET.

Morris, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
G. L. WHITE.

West Abington, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
W. C. [illegible]

West Barre, N. Y., Sunday, Feb. 6th, and onward for two weeks thereafter.
J. H. [illegible]

Bristol, R. I..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Millville, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Southbridge, Mass..........Feb. 9th and 10th
At Bro. Hall's..........evening, Feb. 11th
Charlton, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Brimfield, Mass..........evening, Feb. 14th
Holden, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
River Point, R. I..........Sunday, March 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Abington, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Webster, Mass..........evening, Feb. 9th
Charlton, Mass..........evening, Feb. 10th
North Somers, Ct..........evening, Feb. 11th
South Windsor, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Wallingford, Ct..........evening, Feb. 15th
Yalesville, Ct..........evening, Feb. 16th
Cheshire Street, Ct..........evening, Feb. 17th
Bristol, Ct..........evening, Feb. 23d
Collinsville, Ct..........evenings, Feb. 23d and 24th
Pleasant Valley, Ct..........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Wrightville, Ct..........Sabbath, March 6th
C. H. SWEET.

Bangor, Me..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Will some one meet me at the depot Friday evening? MRS. A. M. TRIPP.

Lewiston, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
ALLEN DAMON.

South Windsor, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
East Haddam, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Prospect, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
S. WOODRUFF.

Collinsville, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Keene, N. H..........Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, and 20th
Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. SMITH.

Frankfort Mills, Me..........evening, Feb. 4th
North Searsport, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Searsportville, evening, Feb. 8th, and in that vicinity a few days.
Canaan (Chase school-house), Sunday, Feb. 13th, to commence a series of meetings. Those who love to labor for souls, are invited to come and help.
South Holden (days)..........Feb. 26th and 27th
Emerson's Mill, Levant..........evening, Feb. 24th
Levantville..........evening, Feb. 25th
ISRAEL DAMAN.

Hungerford school-house, south of Byersville, Sunday evening, Feb. 13th. D. COGSWELL.

Worcester, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Westfield, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Woodstock Valley, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
I. B. POTTER.

Meredith Centre, N. H..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Meredith Neck, N. H..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff school-house)..........Feb. 20th
N. GLIDDEN.

East Rochester, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Discourse on the death of Sr. Julina C. Shorey, at half past one P. M. D. M. LEAVITT.

Brimfield, Mass..........Sabbath, Feb. 16th and continue till Thursday evening.
Bristol, Vt..........Sabbath, Feb. 20th and onward until Friday evening.
Addison, Vt., Sabbath, Feb. 27th, and continue through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
T. M. PREBLE.

Alton, N. H., (Stockbridge Corner), Sunday, Feb. 6th
Hampton Falls, N. H., (where Bro. Johnson may appoint), Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, and over Sunday, the 13th. J. PINKHAM.

Middlebury, Pa..........Feb. 20th
Lyon's District, Steuben Co., N. Y., Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d.
Merchantville, N. Y., Feb. 24th, and over the following Sabbath. J. W. TAYLOR.

Pittsburgh, Pa..........Sunday, Feb. 13th and remain there as long as it shall seem to be duty. J. WENDELL.

Providence, R. I..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Hartford, (Talcott and Post's Hall), Sunday, Feb. 20th
W. N. PILE.

North Canton, Conn..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
S. C. HANCOCK.

Warehouse Point, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. M. HIGGINS.

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
A. M. Higgins..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
P. S. Butler..........Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 27th
M. E. Otis..........Sabbath, Feb. 20th

SALEM, MASS.
C. E. Barnes..........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
W. N. Pile..........Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

LAWRENCE, MASS.
F. H. Burbank..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
J. S. White..........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.
B. Woodside..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. Simpson..........Sunday, Feb. 27th

EXETER, N. H.
Joseph Harvey..........Sunday, Feb. 6th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
J. Hemenway..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
A. Ross..........Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th
C. H. Fletcher....Sabbaths, Feb. 27th and March 6th
J. Couch..........Sabbath, March 13th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
J. Couch..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Communion at the close of the afternoon service.
P. H. Burbank..........Sunday, Feb. 27th

BONNY EAGLE, N. H.
B. S. Emery..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
William Joy..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Jeremiah Hill..........Sunday, Feb. 20th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
A. M. Higgins..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
L. Boutell..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
D. M. Leavett..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
C. Goodrich..........Sunday, Feb. 27th
E. S. Moulton..........Sundays, March 6th and 13th

RICHMOND, R. I., (Clark's Hall.)
J. T. Dixon..........Sunday, Feb. 6th

PORTLAND, ME.
A. Ross..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Henry Pratt..........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

BIDDEFORD, ME.
W. H. Mitchell...Sundays, Feb. 6th, 13th, 20th, and 27th

SQUARE POND, CT.
P. S. Butler..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Hiram Munger..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
S. W. Bishop..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Rufus Wendell..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Wm. Stewart..........Sunday, March 6th
W. N. Pile..........Sunday, March 13th

NEW BRITAIN, CT.
S. C. Hancock..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
H. H. Dickinson..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. H. Sweet..........Sunday, Feb. 20th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.
B. Hitchcock..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple..........Sunday, Feb. 27th

Kennebunkport, Me..........Sabbath, Feb. 6th
Kennebunk Depot..........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Blue Point Scarborough, Me..........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Hollis Centre, Me..........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
T. P. S. HAMPSON.

South Casco, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
East Pownal, Me..........Friday evening, Feb. 11th and continue one week, if thought best.
J. T. JORDAN.

Strafford, N. H., (Roberts' school-house), Sun., Feb. 6th
Farmington Village, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
East Rochester, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 20th
WM. BODGE.

Colebrook Corner, N. H., (where Brn. J. Little and Moon may appoint), evening, Feb. 5th, and over Sunday.
Z. FORD.
URIAH G. LADD.

New Milford, Ct..........Lord's day, Feb. 6th
Wrightville, Ct..........Lord's day, Feb. 13th
North Somers, Feb. 20th, through the week, and over Lord's day, the 27th.
If any of the churches between Somers and Boston wish my labors in a protracted effort, write me immediately. A. D. FLAGG.

East Otis..........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Waterbury..........Sunday, Feb. 13th
☞ NO NAME.

PORTLAND, ME.
Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block, 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION, 14 LAURENS STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M.
Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M.
Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M.
Friday, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M.
Come one, come all. A. E. SMITH, Principal.

NEW YORK CITY.
The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 40 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Dellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Wyoming, R. I..........1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I..........2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I..........3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I..........4th Sabbath in each month
[illegible]

Notices.

Bro. Hook's Tent.

Bro. Willing, of Philadelphia, was brought to Christ through the instrumentality of Bro. J. G. Hook, about two years ago. Before his conversion, he was "a servant of sin" indeed; but for two years has been "a servant of Christ" indeed. He wishes to procure for Bro. H. a tent, as a thank-offering for what the Lord has done for him, and is doing what he can himself for that object; but he needs assistance, and I am authorized to receive contributions from any one I meet in my travels, who may wish to lend a helping hand in the matter. The tent is to be owned by Bro. H., and used as a traveling Bethel, in which perishing sinners may be won to Christ.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents, themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. SMITH.

Michigan Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the eastern district of Michigan will be held at the school-house, at Baker's Corner's, Berlin, St. Clair Co., commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, and continuing over Lord's day. Those coming by R. R. will connect at Ridgeway, on the Grand Trunk R. R. with the Mich. Air Line R. R. for Armada Station, where teams will be in attendance to convey friends to Baker's Corners.

JOHN M. SNOOK.

Notice.

A protracted meeting at Manchester, N. H., is appointed to commence Sunday, Feb. 6th, and probably to continue every evening through the week. We cordially and heartily invite all of God's children, of whatever name or order, to come and labor for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, the comforting and perfecting of the saints. Come with the love of God burning in your hearts, and work in this glorious cause. E. COTTON.

Notice.

The second quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord willing, at Loudon Ridge, to commence Thursday, Feb. 24th, at ten o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to attend. May the Lord greatly bless. T. W. PIPER.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. LANG.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broom Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Feb. 11th, and continue over the Sabbath following. A general invitation is extended to all. By order of the church.

J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. WHITEHEAD, West Meriden, Conn., Box. 4.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. GEORGE E. LEE, Brimfield, Mass.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. ALBERT LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

German Tracts.

Bro. Reimer has a good supply. Send your orders to L. REIMER, 1006 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. ECCLESTON.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with N. MCCULLOCK, 4 Eagle Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 Markham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hocock.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with JOSEPH CURTISS.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.
Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.
Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 81 pp. 15 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.
A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2.00; by mail, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.
BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.
A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.
A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. [illegible]

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Business.

Letters Received.

I T Cunningham, J A Cleaveland, A M Seymour, C Mendenhall, J Ridley, J E Clark, E S Moulton, C Colegrove, Geo W Ashdown, J N Berry, G H Beck, J W Taylor, S Jackman, A S Williams, M D Stevens, S P Green, H. P. Manning, T Foote, S S Brewer, H Munger, B W Davis, M J Briggs, M E Glover, H D Law, E A Gardner, C W Bixby, H Holcomb, George Thomson, D Boreal.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, postpaid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (12mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 15c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlineary Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.13.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.30; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and destiny. By P. A. Smith. 15c; by mail, [illegible]

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each. In paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 234. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

THAT MAN OF SIN. By Eld. O. R. Fassett. To which is added "The Only Hope." Price, 5c. single, postage 2c. 50c. per dozen; postage 6c.

"THE PENALTY OF SIN." By O. R. Fassett. By mail, single copy, 5c; 40c per dozen.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 5c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 460 pp. $1.25.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 70 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9[illegible] per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 15 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $5.00; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $4.00; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2 50; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $1.50; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $3.50; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth..........75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers..........60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers..........50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home..........16 pp.
2. Life Insurance..........16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!..........8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?..........8 pp.
5. About God (for children)..........4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing..........4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ..........4 pp.
8. New..........[illegible]

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent, postpaid:
One set (64 pp.)..........[illegible]
1000 pp..........[illegible]
1000 pp., by express, not prepaid..........[illegible]
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

HYMN.

"Father, merciful in prayer,
Take, oh! take me to thy care;
Far away, in times untold,
I have wandered from thy fold.

Like a sheep astray, from birth,
I have clung to things of earth;
Wickedness is still my lot—
What is good, that do I not.

Gracious Father, hear and bless,
Oh! forgive my wickedness;
Make me clean and pure within,
Free from every secret sin."

Evening Hours.

BY

E. P. WOODWARD.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

GREETING.

Each passing hour brings labors of its own. The preparation of the morning, the steady toil at mid-day, and the finishing strokes as the sun goes down, all have their place. To the quiet evening hours belong the words of counsel, warning, reproof, encouragement and hope; impartial review and criticism of the day gone by; calm and careful planning for the labors of the day to come; friendly greetings of fellow-workers; mental culture and intellectual growth; and, at last, that gradual yielding of both soul and body to the gentle influences by which Nature fits us for the heat and burdens of another day.

Let not the sturdy laborer of the morning despise the evening's growth and rest. If he bear life's heaviest burdens, the laborer of the eventide may do much to guide, instruct, and inspire. And so the work will move steadily on, and the heart be cheered with hope from day to day.

So may the words spoken in these EVENING HOURS make many new friends, and warm the hearts of old ones, thus adding another to the influences by which our Father is fitting us to learn from his own lips the mighty lessons of eternity. E. P. W.

"THE MASTER CALLETH THEE."

Darkness broods over the earth; the camp-fires burn brightly; and from the groups of grim-visaged men, the sounds of mirth and revelry ascend. The dangers of the past, and the stern possibilities of the future, are alike forgotten. What unseen dangers threaten, what dark eyes of hate glare on them from the rocky cliffs, they know not. The cares that cloud their commander's brow, the plans which task his fevered brain, are naught to them. The merry song, and the careless jest, betoken neither watchfulness nor fear. The charms of beauty, and the soft blandishments of love, are binding valiant hearts with bands of steel. But suddenly, above all this, comes the word of command—"Forward!" Ah! now we shall know the true soldier. Now we shall know him whose heart is enlisted in the contest, and him who wars for selfish ends. Little power have words of love, or winning smiles, to hold the heart, when the loved leader's voice is heard. Sternly he dashes aside the hand that would keep him from the path of duty. Begone, all selfish, effeminating pleasures; the stern realities of the coming conflict must be met with a heart calm and brave.

Christ's soldiers often linger by the way. Worldly allurements may for a time charm the soul, and earthly splendor dazzle the anointed eye; but when the voice of our King breaks in on the scenes of mirth, the spell is broken. Cast aside the weights, forsake the besetting sin, and speed to the conflict. And let him look well to his heart; who trembles at the danger, or shrinks from the sacrifice, when he knows that the next hour he must meet the foe. Only he who with joy answers his Master's call, and casts aside his idols with energy and without regret, is fit for the kingdom of God. E. P. W.

"MEAN ENOUGH TO OWN IT."

A faithful teacher once caught one of her pupils in a lie. By a wise union of gentleness and authority, she drew from him a full confession of his fault, and a promise to sin no more. She forgave the offence, and at night accompanied him home. To the mother's inquiry if Johnny had been a good boy, she said, "Johnny has not done quite right today. He was sorely tempted this afternoon, and told a lie. But that is all settled now: he has confessed his wrong, and will try never to do so again."

"Told a lie!" said the agonized mother; "told a lie! Oh, Johnny! how could you be so wicked? And then"—with a husky whisper, as the greater shame loomed up before her—"mean enough to own it!"

Ah, Johnny, you are not the only one whose greater shame lay in being "mean enough to own it." Many there are who spend their best energies in disproving charges which are founded on their own actual imprudence and indiscretion, while the real stumbling-blocks remain untouched from the want of earnest effort for one single hour. The stones come crashing through their glass houses, and out they go in hot haste to discover the offender,—and the winds whistle through the broken panes, and the storm drifts in,—but the damage is not repaired, nor a better dwelling sought. The weight of human displeasure, and the bitterness of human scorn, have to most men more of terror than the holy indignation of Him who never slumbers nor sleeps; before whom the darkness is as the light; who, in the infinite calmness of Omniscience, looked down through the flimsy covering with which those sins sought to conceal their hideousness, and beheld, as He alone can behold, the overt act, and the secret motive, which told of the terrible pollution that enchained the soul.

O, if men could but get one glimpse, such as God alone can give, of the terrible guilt of him who, by willful, deliberate sin, defiles the temple of the Eternal Spirit;—if they could stand, as David stood, and, looking beyond the fearful wickedness against his fellows—the base ingratitude, the dark and damning treachery—see the inexpressibly greater crime against the High and Holy One of Israel, so that from his soul was wrung the bitter cry, "Against thee, THEE ONLY, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight!"—if they could feel this, as every one must, who knows the joy of a full and free forgiveness, little would they heed what others say. The holy calm of the pardoned one cannot be broken by sneers or words of scorn; the agony of remorse for sins unpardoned, is only made deeper and more terrible by the knowledge that within the soul is hidden a mortal foe, whose presence is the harbinger of eternal death; a foe unseen by those who love, and those who praise; while without all is fair and pure.

O, the hollowness of earthly praise, the poverty of worldly esteem, when corruption destroys the life within! O, the light and glory of a Father's smile, though all men despise and hate! If Christ has cleansed us with his blood, we shall never tremble lest the book of our life be read by the eye of mortal man. "If God be for us, who shall be against us?" E. P. W.

"IF SHE HAVE WASHED THE SAINTS' FEET."—1 Tim. 5:10.

The following extract from "Buckingham's Travels among the Arab Tribes," p. 24, may give some light on the Eastern usage in regard to feet-washing, and perhaps suggest the true force of Christ's words in John 13.

"We broke up, dispersing before nine o'clock, when we were taken to another house to sleep. The mistress of it, who was a widow, and related to my guide, received us kindly, and insisted on going through the ceremony of washing my feet,—observed, as I understood, among the Christians of Assalt, to all strangers who come among them as guests or visitors." E. P. W.

GEOLOGY AND THE BIBLE.

The credibility of the Bible does not rest on its apparent or real harmony with the facts and deductions of science. Men may scoff at this assertion, but it is nevertheless true. And when the real foundations are once discovered, and their beautiful simplicity and marvelous strength fully comprehended, questions of science will have little power to shake the Christian's confidence.

Of course, if the Bible is of God, we may justly expect this harmony; and we shall surely find it when all the facts of science are known, and their full import understood. But he who has studied God's demonstration of the truth of his word, will be in no haste to draw rash conclusions from real or supposed facts, nor will he fear the final result.

Could it be shown that the Bible is in perfect harmony with all true science, that would be no proof that it is divine; the God of truth is not dependent on the researches of the Geologist or the Astronomer to prove that the Bible is his book. That, he has proved long ago. That haven of rest has long been the refuge of the weary wanderer. And if, beneath the sheltering shadows of the Rock of Ages, we drag our anchors, and drift toward the lee-shore of Despair, our hopes will be wrecked, but the Refuge is there still. Our doubts will not destroy the foundations of faith; our fears will not put out the "light" which God has set to be "the light of the world."

Yet, all Christians will rejoice to see the confirmations of Bible truth which are daily being discovered, nor sorrow to see the assumptions of men set at naught in the light of truth. The following, from the Cincinnati Gazette, has an important bearing on some supposed facts which have seemed to clash with the statements of the Bible:

The geologists have laid down a principle that the chalk, sandstone, and other formations, belonged to distinct periods. It was on this supposed fact that it was assumed that the earth had been forming during immense periods of time, and that, therefore, the conception we have of the creation from the Mosaic account is not correct. Fair-minded persons have always been willing to admit that the term day did not necessarily mean our day, and that it might be a long period. But, admitting that this might be, we never believed the geologists had proved it. There is no way of proving it, but by establishing what may be called a creative or formative unit. That has not been done, and there is no approach to it. Consequently we neither know or can know whether it took a long or short period to create or form different parts or strata of the earth. The geological theories in regard to time have always been imaginary; and both geologists and astronomers have created worlds in fancy, which never existed in fact. In the advancing science and discoveries of the world, we shall, after a while, get at some solid truth on these subjects, like what we have already got in the departments of mathematics and chemistry.

But to the discoveries. A recent article in the London Spectator furnishes us with the main discoveries made by deep-sea dredgings, and from that we take the following striking paragraph:

"If there is one theory which geologists have thought more justly founded than all others, it is the view that the various strata of the earth were formed at different times. A chalk district, for example, lying side by side with a sandstone district, has been referred to a totally different era. Whether the chalk was formed first, or whether the sandstone existed before the minute races came into being which formed the cretaceous stratum, might be a question. But no doubt existed in the minds of geologists that each formation belonged to a distinct period. Now, however, Dr. Carpenter and Professor Thompson may fairly say, 'We have changed all this.' It has been found that at points of the sea bottom, only eight or ten miles apart, there may be in progress the formation of a cretaceous deposit and of a sandstone region, each with its own proper fauna. 'Whatever similar conditions are found upon the dry land of the present day,' remarks Dr. Carpenter, 'it has been supposed that the formation of chalk and the formation of sandstone must have been separated from each other by long periods, and the discovery that they may actually co-exist upon adjacent surfaces has done no less than strike at the very root of the customary assumptions with regard to geological time.'"

Dr. Carpenter very properly calls the geological theories of times assumptions. They have never been anything else than creations of the imagination. When the granite, or primary rocks, were formed we have no evidence; but we have evidence that the secondary formations, such as limestone and sandstone, may be formed in comparatively short periods. Close observers in the Ohio Valley may find limestone in process of formation; and what we call petrifactions, which are vegetable or animal substances, filled with limestone till the original substance has decayed and left the form in stone, are made in a short time. They must be, or the vegetable would have been decayed before the stone was formed around it. The whole of the delta of the Mississippi has been formed within a comparatively short period. Any inference that the secondary formations required an extraordinary period of time, or that there were any long periods between them, has never had any evidence to support it, and is now completely disproved by the deep-sea dredgings. The Mosaic account of creation remains unimpaired by anything which real science has yet discovered.

Let every Christian wait with patience, and every doubting heart be still. The God of Nature will in his own good time vindicate his ways before men, and bring confusion on all who know him not. E. P. W.

KEY-NOTE IN ROME.

OPENING OF THE COUNCIL.

And now I see Rome for the first time. One writes a huge point of ejaculation after writing that, and draws a long breath after saying that. There is no doubt of it—there is no exaggerating it—one feels a restful sense of satisfaction, to begin with, upon finding himself at last in Rome. One of the objects of living is attained—one of the harbors of the voyage of life is reached. Coming to Rome is an achievement—a graduation. When you have seen Rome, you may take your diploma. I will not write now more about Rome, than to say out this feeling upon getting to it. Indeed, I have not seen Rome yet. I must write this time wholly about what is going on in Rome. So, down memory, down! A truce to thy clamor of thick-coming recollections. Let the past be patient. It shall have its turn. The present must come first, for it is first.

Yesterday the Sixth Œcumenical Council was opened. I was there. We arrived, the Doctor and I, the day before, very weary, after sixty hours of smashing-ahead traveling. We were determined to be present. The grand High Mass, with all its amplifications and ramifications, was to begin at about 9 A. M., everybody said. But we must be inside St. Peter's by six, everybody said, or we would not get inside St. Peter's. So we ordered breakfast to be ready at six. We went to bed. It was just as it always is—we were so anxious to wake up early enough, that we did not get to sleep until it was time to be awake. The door was rapped, however, at a little past six. We jumped out of bed and into our clothes, ran down the five stories of staircase, gobbled down our breakfast, and jumped into a vetturino, and were on our way to St. Peter's. It was raining. It rained and rained and rained, poured and poured and poured. We splashed through streams and puddles and pools. The street was miserably narrow and cramped. Tall houses, hundreds of years old, rose up gloomy and gray on either side. And on either side there was a hurrying stream of people—monks in their dirty brown gowns and shaven crowns—priests in broad-rimmed hats and long black robes—peasants in every variety of costume, and in no costume to speak of—tourists by the hundreds, of all climes; men and women and children; the gray and old and bent; the gay and young and elastic. Memories will flood and lift the soul, but we have no time for them; no time have we for them, even when the church of all churches bursts upon us from out the clouds of rain of the memorable morning of the eighth. We can take but one glance of the illustrious pile, and bound up its massive sweep of steps along with the impatient thousands and thousands. On they come—in they pour. Some must have been there at five in the morning—if indeed it be not true, as the report is, that some hundreds of poor devotees from the country round crouched close to the feet of, because they could not get into the bosom of, the Great Mother Church, all the livelong rainy night.

But now we are in, and thousands upon thousands are in with us. And still they come. It is now eight o'clock, and still they come. In they pour, choking the huge entrances, and the great heavy sort of carpet which hangs over them is continually up. How can the edifice, seemingly illimitable as it is, hold any more? But in they come. Look now—up and down the knave, into all the arches and chapels. People, people, people! And such people! They are people indeed. They, of every kindred and tongue are chattering around you. I can distinguish immediately around me Spanish, French, English, Italian, German, Turkish, Hungarian. Since wandering afterward and comparing notes with others, I add to these, Coptic, Chinese, Japanese, Syriac, and the dwellers in Judea and Asia and Africa, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers at Rome, Jews and Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians—alas, that I cannot add what follows in our fascinating old book of the Acts, whose light so simple and sweet they have been so long and so successfully trying to refract and distract! But the thought came to me over and over. Suppose, O, suppose, there should come down upon this assembly of every nation under heaven the cloven tongues of fire, and we should all be filled with the Holy Ghost, and every one of us should hear them speak in our own tongue wherein we were born! And suppose, O suppose, instead of that black bronze Peter (alias the heathen statue of Jupiter), sitting there with his toes worn off by centuries of kissing, the apostle should come down from heaven, and stand up in our midst and lift up his voice, what would he say unto us? And would he or would he not say unto his successor—whom we know by the chanting of the choir over the main entrance is now coming, attended by his council and borne on the shoulders of his spiritual serfs—what his Master said unto him (Peter)? And suppose I should be called upon to preach the opening sermon of the council, how could I better touch the keynote of the august occasion, than by taking these words herein alluded to for my text. Say I should set out in this wise:

Santo Padre, Servus Servorum Dei!—(Here my "ecclesiastical latin" would probably break down under the torrent of my irate Protestantism, and I should continue) I humbly beg to address your Holiness on this august occasion in the same language with which your first predecessor was addressed by his and your Master—that is to say, you will find the words of my text in the gospel according to Matthew, XVI. chapter, 23d verse: "He turned and said unto Peter, Get the behind me Satan, thou art an offence unto Me; for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men."

Then I would add, with a transfixing gaze straight into the Supreme Pontiff's countenance—Thou art Satan, and an offence unto me, and savorest not the things that be of God, and upon thee I will build my church, aye, old gentleman! What do you think of that logic! Then the "infallible" Felix would tremble, and the Holy Father would get down out of his throne rapidly, and would rapidly skedaddle, with all his council, in their white and gold robes and white mitres, à la Hamlet's unholy step-father and all his council, and that other play within a play—conceited conceit, is it not? Well, it is a place and time for conceits and thickening fancies—for sublime thoughts, as you look out into the sublime dome, "the mind expanded by the genius of the spot;" for historic thoughts, as you look into the council-chamber, where the approaching hierarchy will presently assemble; for odorous thoughts, as you look into the frowsy head and filthy shawl of the little fat perspiring peasant woman who has squeezed in under your elbows, and stands right under the sublime dome and under your sensitive nose. And just before the little fat and perspiring peasant woman stand two Sisters of Mercy, or of Charity, or of something, in their white bonnets, with their broad leaves of starched muslin (if that's what it is), which the peasant woman holds up and peeps under, in search of the procession, turning to grin over her cuteness into my face. Others join in the conspiracy to remove the muslin expanse of obstruction. The attempt to pin up the two leaves is unsuccessful; the pin won't go through the muslin. The peasant rams her frowsy head in between the two prim, clean heads of the Sisters, and the spirit of Raphael descends, with easel and brush, to catch the gem of pathetic humor. He will find lots of such gems.

I people the sublime dome and the grand nave with these spirits of the artists of olden Rome, picking up their gems from the depths of this "sea of upturned faces." A fathomless, boundless sea, indeed it is. I shall never, never forget it,—or any part or feature of the marvelous occasion, which now rises to its culmination, for the hundreds of thousands of eyes are turned to the main entrance, and there is a great getting on tiptoe. The peasant woman almost mounts upon the shoulders of the Sisters. A beautiful young German mother holds up her equally beautiful little girl, and both seem strangely to rise above us all. The vast crowd becomes alarmingly compressed. A priest faints, and a woman, and a young thing who looks bewitching in her paleness. How they will ever get out I cannot imagine. A glance over the heaving multitude fills one with terror. The announcement.

"They are coming," is furiously whispered in every language under heaven. And they do come. The choir over the entrance chant. Heads, and heads, and heads in procession up the aisle—that's all we see. One, two, three, four, five, yes! six hundred and fifty heads of Bishops and Archbishops, besides about fifty Cardinals, all in white robes ornamented with gold, with attendants who carry the mitres. They come slowly, six abreast. The chanting of the superb choir (and it is a superb choir) has dead pauses which heighten the impressiveness of the effect. We are near enough to scan the faces. We see the thoughtful, spiritual face of Manning, the hard and wily face of Antonelli, the dissatisfied face of Dupanloup, the indecipherable face of Bonaparte. We recognize some "American" Prelates, Spalding, of Baltimore, Wood, of Philadelphia, and Lynch, of Charleston. There are some splendid heads in that procession. The spirits of the old sculptors will find tempting subjects in that procession. I tell you the truth—these Catholics have reason to be proud of that procession. If it hasn't brains, and learning, and dignity, and imposing physique, its looks do belie it mightily.

The Pope comes, carried in a sort of, I don't know what. He is too low to be seen well by the eager crowd. The little fat perspiring peasant woman almost sits on the top of the white expanse of bonnet. The beautiful German lady elongates more and more strangely than before. I receive a torrent of profane Anglais by reason of an unconscious use of a fellow countryman as a step-ladder. But by that means I get a hurried view of the Holy Father. He has a benign, patient face, with soft skin, and gentleness in his gesture of benediction. His sheep are quite right, I think, in claiming him as an ideal chief shepherd, considered personally. His life is pure, and his spirit tender. He is paternal in his disposition. His paternal bearing is not an affectation. He is personally very popular in Rome, and I think very likely his Swiss guards, who attend him to-day in all their antique splendor, would defend him from downright love of him. If he were liberal instead of ultramontane, he would have been a great hit for the old church. Perhaps he is, as it is. We shall see. He has made an audacious venture. He will certainly fail—or succeed. There is no middle ground. He is in his 78th year—an old man carrying a great burthen and passing a great crisis. The Council may be too much for him physically, as well as for his church politically. And then—well, nobody knows anything about anything. It may all be headed, like one of Carlyle's rapsonousenses—"Shooting Niagara and after?"

The Council takes its seat, the Pope is carried to his throne. Now tell me (if thy Protestantism be not a very malady and a blindness) whether that is not an impressive spectacle! I say it is. There are seven tiers of benches covered with Bishops (650) to the right and left of the broad aisle, at the end of which is the throne of the Pontiff. Surrounding the throne sit the sixty Cardinals. In boxes on either side of it are the Empress of Austria and the Queen of Wurtemburg. This is all His Holiness has to show in the way of backing, to his temporal power. Where is Napoleon the "eldest son," and Prim the youngest, and Victor the nearest at hand? Where is the King of Catholic Belgium, and where is the Emperor of Austria? and where is the poor old Queen Isabella? Those royal boxes are the most eloquent part of the spectacle.

So far, then, Pio Nino's move is a failure. So far so good. From all the thrones of Europe there comes to the Pope's ear the word "Check." And there is a sneer in the word, and a snap of the fingers with the word. So the boxes are a gorgeous irony. The handwriting is on them. It reads that the world has moved since the Council of Trent, and that the temporal power is doomed, and that it dies of a diet of imperial cold shoulder.

I will get off the track, you see. It is hard keeping on the track of description, when there are so many tempting stations of thought to get off and walk round in.

Above the Bishops sit a gallery full of theologians, and above them a gallery full of Ministers Plenipotentiary. There are seats for twenty-three reporters—sworn to secresy!

The decorations and furniture of the hall are exquisite. Brussels carpet covers the floor, costly tapestry hangs here and there. It is a magnificent chamber.

Over the Pope's throne is a powerful painting, executed for the occasion, of the gift of tongues and descent of the Holy Ghost. On the left of the Pope is a painting of the Council of Trent, on the right one of the Council of Ephesus, above the Diplomatic gallery is the Council of Nicea, and near it the Council of Jerusalem. Then there are pictures of Augustine, Chrysostom, Jerome and Ambrose.

Then the music of the mass, executed by the best windpipes of Italy, and the responses taken up by the Council and borne out over the five acres of people—a mighty wave of harmony. Sweetness and awfulness, gentleness and majesty—O, as my soul liveth, it is all too much for adjectives. Writing about it is trifling with it.

O, so I shall remember them, and feel them, and revel in them, and rise by them, and go to school to them, and keep forever learning something from them—those ten hours under the dome of St. Peter's, at the opening of the Sixth (and last) Ecumenical Council. It was worth being born to see and feel. KEYNOTE.

Rome, Dec. 9th, '69.

It seems hardly necessary to suppose that any of your readers will be misled by all this picture of dignity, intellect and imposing parade. It is precisely what the apocalypse of God has tersely portrayed. We see the grandeur and magnificence of "Mother Church," as she is called, in her utmost painstaking of decoration. (Mother Rome more strictly.) But we perfectly well understand that Mother Church is the mother of harlots and abominations, the woman drunk with the blood of the saints. There may be a momentary exaltation, and a momentary exultation, and then she is given over to judgment, while for another moment, upon her downfall rises the last terrible power of blasphemy, the ten-horned therionic enemy of God and man, inspired with demoniac energy to combat even the host of God. Meanwhile, christian, are you ready to join the cavalry of Christ?

C. COLEGROVE.

ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERIES.

Astronomy, in conjunction with optics, has been making some extraordinary discoveries in the last few months. The spectroscope is a wonderful aid to the telescope, and as the latter brings to view distant worlds, the former indicates the materials of which they are made. The late eclipse of the sun demonstrated that immense volumes of hydrogen gas stretch upwards hundreds of miles above its surface, making in reality the oceans of flame which have often figured in hyperbole.

A thought has occurred to us in this connection, which we venture to commend to the attention of our astronomical and geological friends. It is a well-known fact in geology that in past periods a vastly greater heat has pervaded the earth than at the present time. The flora and fauna of a tropical climate flourished at the poles. Scientific men have been ingenious in speculations about the causes of the change. Some have ascribed it to the internal heat of the earth, which has been gradually evolved in successive ages. Others have attributed it to a different relation of the axis of the earth to the plane of the ecliptic. Possibly others may have suggested a change in the internal constitution of the sun, though we do not remember to have seen it in our limited reading.

But the phenomena finds an easy solution on this hypothesis. During the last year a small star in the constellation of the Northern Crown suddenly became bright as a star of the first magnitude. Astronomers at once resorted to the telescope to explain the mystery, but could find only a confirmation of the fact, with no hint of its cause. Opticians applied the spectroscope, and at once the mystery was revealed. A vast ocean of hydrogen was in flame, and its combustion melted the small star, one of the most brilliant in the firmament. The mathematicians took up the data given them in the increase of light, and proved that for any worlds of which this star may be the central sun, there must have been an increase of heat to seven hundred and eighty times the normal standard. If these worlds are made of similar materials with our earth, they must have dissolved under this intense heat, as in the final catastrophe of our globe predicted by Peter.

Our thought, then, is simply this: If by internal changes, or combustions in the central sun, the condition of all the planets must be sensibly affected; and, if our sun is liable to such changes as this star in the Northern Crown, (we know it has untold volumes of hydrogen above its surface,) why may not the former extreme heat of the earth have been due simply to atmospheric changes in the sun? And why may they not occur on a larger scale in the future, heralding the final judgment?—Providence Bulletin.

HATRED A COSTLY LUXURY.

Joseph's brethren hated him; and, prompted by hatred, they sold him into slavery. But it was to them a costly hatred. It cost them some sharp twinges of conscience when they saw their father's distress, as he looked upon Joseph's bloody coat. It cost them years of disquiet, ere they met him in Egypt; for thoughts of their enslaved brother would come, though unbidden to the mind. It cost them shame, remorse, and agony of soul, when Joseph made himself known to them, and showered his tears of forgiveness upon them. And after their father's death and burial, how miserable they were under the fear that now, as Jacob no longer stood between them and Joseph, he might after all take vengeance upon them for the wrong they had done him so many years before. Conscience, with her scorpion sting, would not let them rest. Theirs was a costly hatred.

And what was the cause of their quarrel against Joseph? A little many-colored coat, and two dreams! How great a matter a little fire kindleth! Quarrels that have drenched battle-fields in blood, and rent empires in twain, have originated from causes as small. And churches have been torn and divided, and the cause of God kept back for years, to the loss of many souls, by trifles even less than a little coat.

The writer knows of one church that was almost ruined—has not even yet recovered, though the event took place several years ago—by a dispute about a cushion on a seat! Trustees had solemn meetings—the entire membership excited and agitated—men and women of average intelligence leaving the church in holy horror (!)—and all the real interests of the church forgotten; and all because some one had laid a cushion on a seat to sit upon! Poor human nature! What an awful straining over a gnat, while the camel slips down like oil?

If you think you ought to quarrel a little for the loving Jesus' sake, don't quarrel about little things. But Jesus never said, "Go ye into all the world and quarrel for me."

Remember, too, that a little wrong done unto your brother, may produce a large harvest of sorrow for you. Neither is there any excuse for wrong-doing—even though some one may have grievously wronged you.

"Why do ye not rather suffer wrong one of another?"—Earnest Christian.

Gems.

— Heaven sends us ten thousand truths, but because our doors and windows are shut to them, they sit and sing awhile upon the roof and then fly away.

— Watch! The unseen enemy is after you. He is lurking unseen along your path. Keep your armor on, for he will strike unawares. Have your shield with you, for you know not when his blows will fall.

— There may be preachers who consider themselves complimented by being called deep; but when was there a preacher more profound than Jesus Christ; and yet "the common people heard him gladly," because he was so intelligible and simple.

— A person of the greatest abilities is liable to error, but he who blazons it without delicacy or politeness, affords a much stronger proof of his vanity than of his knowledge.

— There are many christians who heap coals of fire on their enemy's head in order to love him, but are very much disappointed if the coals do not scorch.

— Could we read the motives of the emotions of hearts around us, we should judge very differently of their words and conduct. We should often praise where we now condemn.

— Our lack of confidence in our own abilities does us great harm. We hesitate and waver on the threshold of duty, not thinking that the longer a reformation is deferred the harder at last it is to accomplish our purpose.

— Every parent is like a looking-glass for his children to dress themselves by. Parents, therefore, should take care to keep the glass bright and clear.

— Appearances are often deceptive. Hence it is written, "Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment."

— Better, by far, not start an object if its pursuit is to be abandoned at the first difficulty.

— A distinguished divine has eloquently said, "The Bible is the prophet of hope, and its loftiest strains are of glory to come."

— Sin is bad in the eye, worse in the tongue, worse still in the heart, but worse still of all in the life.

— Things should not be done by halves. If it be right, do it boldly; if it be wrong, leave it undone.

— Be deaf to the quarrelsome, blind to the scorner, and dumb to those who are mischievously inquisitive.

— A cheerful wife is a rainbow set in the sky, when her husband's mind is tossed with storms.

— A man proves himself fit to go higher who shows that he is faithful where he is.

— We look most effectually to the Lord, when we feel ourselves helpless and empty.

— The door of mercy is closed to none but those who shut it against themselves.

— Harsh or rash judging is one of the greatest hindrances to the spread of religion.

— Kindness, like the gentle breath of spring, melts the icy heart.

— Love is not a judge, but a benefactor.

— Think twice before you speak once.

— Holy poverty is heavenly riches.

THINGS I WONDER ABOUT.

I wonder if all christians think about what they are doing.

I wonder if christians think they have something to do.

I wonder if christians who find fault with others ever do anything themselves.

I wonder, if the world is ever converted, whether it will be by those who receive, but never give.

I wonder if those who profess to love Christ would go to work, if their love would not increase.

I wonder why christians, so called, get angry when you talk about using tobacco.

I wonder when I see men calling themselves ministers, with pipes and cigars in their mouths, whether they think they are keeping their bodies fit temples for the Holy Ghost to dwell in. I wonder when such men say it costs them more for tobacco than for their bread, that they do not quit it. I wonder such men are not ashamed of themselves on account of their wives, whose clothes are so smoked that strangers can smell tobacco smoke without trying, when they meet them.

I wonder how ministers, who claim they are called to preach the gospel, can pass the door where persons are assembled to worship God, without going in and taking part, when they are invited to take part.

I wonder if Jesus, when he called them, told them who they should preach to, and who they should not. I wonder if they ever read where Jesus said, Go preach my gospel to every creature. I wonder what kind of an account they will give to their Master when he comes and finds them idle.—The Church.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

AN ECONOMICAL WAY OF VENTILATING LIVING-ROOMS.

The first thing to be considered in ventilating any apartment is the introduction of fresh air. But while a room is already filled with air, an additional volume cannot be brought into it, unless it is forced in by machinery. Motion is essential to perfect ventilation. All the air in a room must be removed every few hours, and an equal quantity of fresh air introduced. So long as there is no draught to draw out the foul air, and to introduce fresh air, a room may remain filled with an atmosphere that is poisonous to animal life.

The large room in Cooper Institute, where the Polytechnic Society and the Farmers' Club are accustomed to hold their weekly sessions, was formerly so badly ventilated that people who always want pure air recoiled from attending the meetings of those societies. But that room may now be filled with an audience to its utmost capacity for a day, and no one will be able to perceive any impurity in the atmosphere; neither will a person sitting in any part of the room perceive a draught of either cold or warm air. The ventilation is as complete as could be desired. About every hour the entire volume of air in the room is changed by the following arrangement: The rostrum, or platform, was raised bodily about three inches above the main floor, and a large aperture was made in the chimney, through which the foul air could pass out. Then one outside window was raised a few inches, and a box tube, about one foot square, made of boards, was extended from the window to the "nest" of steam heating-pipes employed to warm the room. The tube allowed a stream of pure air to flow directly to the nest of steam-pipes, where every particle was warmed. Of course the warm air would rise to the wall overhead, and flow to the further side of the room. By this means a movement in the air is obtained, and the equilibrium of the atmosphere is disturbed. Consequently a current of foul air must be started immediately out of the flue beneath the rostrum.

A similar system of ventilation has been adopted in one of the editorial rooms of the New York Times, which could not formerly be ventilated without great inconvenience. The proprietors permitted an aperture about eight inches by twenty to be made in the large chimney, close to the floor, in an adjoining water-closet. Then one outside window of the large room was opened about four inches at the bottom, so that a box tube could convey fresh air from outside, directly to the nest of steam-heaters in the room. By this means the equilibrium of the atmosphere was disturbed, so that the impure air flowed out through the water-closet into the chimney in a perpetual stream, while the fresh air from without was constantly rushing in to the nest of steam-heaters, from whence it spread all through the room so gently that no one could perceive any draught. The full corps of editors and reporters may now close the door and every window, and remain at their desks for an entire day, without perceiving the least unpleasantness in the atmosphere.

Carbonic acid gas, which is destructive to animal life, is generated in every apartment where men or animals live and breathe. Of course this gas is not free, but mingled with the atmosphere. As it is heavier than atmospheric air, the apertures through which this foul air is to escape should be made near the floor.

One of the cheapest and most effectual ways to ventilate a school-room would be to have perforated base-boards, so that the foul air could enter the large spaces between the joists, and thence pass away through a large chimney flue. Then a current of fresh air could be conducted in a pipe to the stove, or heater, so as to produce a current. By this simple and cheap arrangement every pupil in a large room could always be supplied with pure air of an agreeable temperature. In case there is no flue or ventilating shaft, a wooden flue, about eighteen inches square, could be erected at one end of the building, having an aperture in the side for the foul air to escape. But it is always more satisfactory to open a passage into a large chimney, as the heat and smoke will promote a draught from the room to be ventilated. If fresh air can be forced into a room by any means, when there is no flue, the lower sash of every window may be lifted an inch or more, to provide passages for the impure air to escape. By this means any living room can always be supplied with pure air at small expense.—Manufacturer and Builder.

SALT FOR THE THROAT.—An exchange says: "In these days when diseases of the throat prevail, and particularly a dry, hacking cough, which is not only distressing to ourselves but to those with whom we are brought into business contact, those thus afflicted may be benefited by trying the following remedy: Last fall we were induced to try what virtue there was in common salt. We commenced by using it three times a day—morning, noon and night. We dissolved a large table spoonful of common salt in about half a tumblerful of cold water, and with this we gargled the throat most effectually just before meal time. The result has been that during the winter we were not only free from the usual coughs and colds to which, as far as our memory extends, we have always been subject, but the dry, hacking cough has entirely disappeared. We attribute it entirely to the salt gargle, and do most cordially recommend it to those of our readers who are subject to diseases of the throat.—Ex. Paper.

WHOOPING COUGH.—As a remedy for whooping-cough breathing the air of gas works an hour or two a day has been highly recommended. But to the majority of people gas-works are not accessible. Lately we have seen the tea of chestnut leaves claimed as a certain cure. But still more available than either is a prescription which a prominent Boston physician has tested with success for several years. It is simply a tea made from red clover blossoms. He gets a cure in ten days. The blossoms are steeped four hours, and a wine-glass full of the tea taken often during the day.

P. O. Address of Preaching Brethren.

Massachusetts.

C. Goodrich—No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.
Enoch Merrill—Crisis Office, Boston.
J. S. White—46 Decatur Street, East Boston.
L. Boswell—Chelsea.
S. W. Thurber—Chelsea.
T. M. Preble—Lynn.
H. Munger—Chicopee Falls.
Geo. A. Brown—Plymouth.
Geo. A. Cole—Plymouth.
D. Churchill—Lowell.
Matthew Batchelder—New Bedford.
S. S. Brewer—Ashburnham Depot.
H. Pratt—Springfield, 87 Cedar Street.
E. Ford—Box 302, Springfield.
W. N. Pile—Springfield.
F. S. Butler—Collins Depot.
Geo. A. Streeter—South Dana.
C. H. Sweet—Millville.
Alvah Beem—Lowell.
J. W. Thomas—Lowell, 16 Rock Street.
Benj. Finney—Wakefield.
S. S. Brasse—Cold Spring.
W. B. Hathaway—North Carver.
Rufus Baker—Warren.
J. W. Brittan—Westboro.
Dr. A. M. Higgins—Palmer.
H. K. Flagg—Savoy.
E. M'Culloch—Savoy.
E. Owen—Westfield, Lock Box 616.

Maine.

S. K. Partridge—North Whitefield.
I. C. Wellcome—Yarmouth.
H. D. Reed—Richmond.
H. S. Mitchell—Richmond.
J. Carr—South Albion.
Allen Damon—Corinna.
N. F. Nason—Weeks Mills.
C. Goud—Topsham.
Jesse Gay—Casco.
Thomas Smith—Bangor.
Thomas Rhynes—Augusta.
R. R. York—Portland.
M. B. Patterson—Richmond.
J. Albert Libby—West Poland.
J. T. Jordan—West Poland.
E. M. Haggett—Livermore.
F. A. Baker—Levant.
Israel Damman—Corinna.
Jared Whitman—Mechanic Falls.
H. B. Sevey—Mt. Vernon.
M. W. Corliss—Milltown.
N. G. Reed—Bath.
Wm. H. Mitchell—Kennebunk.

New Hampshire.

L. C. McKinstry—Tamworth Iron Works.
A. W. Sibley—West Thornton.
J. Couch—Concord.
A. Simpson—Concord.
D. N. Chadsey—Whitefield.
Caleb Richardson—Salem Depot.
N. C. Twombly—Strafford Centre.
J. B. Brown—Laconia.
A. A. Hoyt—North Haverhill.
T. R. Lang, Jr.—Meredith Village.
E. S. Moulton—Whitefield.
Wm. C. Stewart—Exeter.
John H. Evans—Holderness.
Levi Allen—Lake Village.
O. D. Eastman—Landaff.
Joseph Kimball—Unity.
Joseph Pinkham—Dover.
N. S. McMurphy—Gilmanton.
A. Rees—Amherst.
C. H. Fletcher—Newport.
T. L. Hall—Keene.
Wm. W. Sutherland—Newport.
S. S. Mooney—Pittsfield.
N. Wheeler—Whitefield.
C. W. Sargent—Box 426, Concord.
Simeon Roby—Warner.
D. F. Leavitt—London Ridge.
T. W. Piper—Melvin Village.
D. M. Leavitt—Holderness.
N. Hartshorn—Laconia.
J. G. Smith—New Durham.
Joseph W. White—Portsmouth.
N. Glidden—Meredith Center.

Vermont.

H. F. Carpenter—North Springfield.
J. A. Cleaveland—Marshfield.
A. Gordon—Canaan.
R. G. Chadsey—Richford.
C. P. Dow—Franklin, Vt., or Stanbridge, C. E.

Rhode Island.

M. R. Phetteplace—West Gloucester.
D. O. Hopkins—North Foster.
B. Roberts—Knightsville.
A. Durfee—Woodville.
J. T. Dixon—Rocky Brook.

Connecticut.

William J. Ripley—Pleasant Valley.
S. M. Tatro—No. 51 Windsor St., Hartford.
W. S. Campbell—New Britain.
H. Rockwell—West Winsted.
Wm. A. Durand—Cheshire.
S. Woodruff—Unionville.
B. St. John—Wolcottville.
Dr. Samuel Wellis Treat—Middlebury.
Geo. L. Teeple—Monroe.
S. C. Hancock—Forestville.
A. D. Flagg—Torrington.
I. B. Potter—West Stafford.
R. Bellows—South Killingly.
B. Hitchcock—Forestville.

New York.

Anna E. Smith—Star of Hope Mission, New York City, 14 Laurens Street, above Canal.
E. S. Jennings—President of "F. U. M. Association," Honeoye, Ontario Co.
J. K. Bellows—19 Orchard Street, New York City.
J. B. Cook—Brooklyn.
Wm. Ingmire—Lincklaen, Chenango Co.
Jacob Blain—Buffalo.
Chas. P. Greenman—Rapids, Niagara Co.
Arthur King—145 Nassau Street, New York.
Wm. A. Fenn—Rochester.
Phineas A. Smith—Rochester.
Z. Dubois Baird, Centre Falls, Washington Co.
C. Pike—Hebron, Washington Co.
C. H. Leverton—Honeoye, Ontario Co.
C. F. Sweet—Albion, Orleans Co.
Warren J. Hobbs—Honeoye Falls.
C. W. Low—Fredonia.
M. R. Miles—Wolcott, Wayne Co.
J. Wilbur—West Hoosick, Rensselaer Co.
A. C. Newell—Darien City.
C. H. Williams—West Martinsburg.
S. P. Stevens—South Butler.
D. Cogswell—Dansville.
Herbert H. Brown—Honeoye, Ontario Co.
Cornelius Pike—Caldwell, Warren Co.

New Jersey.

S. P. Babcock—Malaga.

Pennsylvania.

W. Taylor—Little Marsh, Tioga Co.
John T. Ongley—Lincolnville, Crawford Co.
Jonas Wendell—Edenboro, Erie Co.
E. Cotton—Edenboro, Erie Co.
Wm. Stuart—1314 Vineyard Street, Philadelphia.

Ohio.

H. G. McCulloch—Nevada, Wyandot Co.
G. W. Stetson—Olena.

Tennessee.

Dr. L. I. Leslie—Box 634, Memphis.
L. F. Cole—Memphis, Box 634.

Kentucky.

John B. Wadsworth—166 No. 2nd St., Louisville.

Indiana.

R. H. Scott—Scottsville, Floyd Co.
David Shankland—West Lebanon.
E. C. Andrus—Big Indian P. O.
Dr. N. Field—Jeffersonville.
S. A. Chaplin—Pierceton.
Edward Cordray—Lakeville.
Dr. C. H. Cass—Holton.
Dr. J. W. Warman—Muddy Fork P. O.
Dr. Case—Nebraska.
G. W. Green—Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co.

Illinois.

George W. Foster—Victoria, Knox Co.
O. D. Gibson—Amboy.
J. W. Burroughs—Neponset.
F. Burr—New Rutland.
Wm. McCulloch—New Rutland.

Michigan.

J. R. Preston—Wallaceville, Wayne Co.
J. M. Snook—Romeo.
A. N. Seymour—Reading.

Iowa.

Peter S. W. Deyo—Strawberry Point, Clayton Co.
A. P. Dugger—Simpson.
Ambrose H. Eggleston—Parkersburg.

Wisconsin.

Wm. Sheldon—Brodhead, Green Co.
N. A. Hitchcock—Prairie Du Lac.
George Thompson—Attica, Green Co.
P. W. Hough—Mendoro, La Cross Co.

Minnesota.

Edwin T. Himes—St. Paul, Box 258.
Wm. Sweet—Backsville, Brown Co.
Philip Ramer—Winona.
Thos. K. Allen—Box 241, Winona.
Ruth M. Rowell—Winona, Box 521.
D. D. Reed—Crow Wing.
O. R. Fassett—Minneapolis.

Nova Scotia.

Wm. M. Ingham—Clementsport.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance.......................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address........$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE, Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper, FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 747. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 21.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ISAIAH 32: 2.

Thou art our "hiding place," oh, Lord!
When we are sore distress'd,
In thee we shelter find from fear,
In thee is perfect rest.

"A covert from the tempest," wild,
A shield in danger's hour,
Thou art to all who serve thee here,
A King of mighty power.

A "river" in a sultry spot,
Where all is parched and dry,
Thou art to all who live beneath
Thine own Almighty eye.

"A shadow in a weary land,"
To those with heat oppressed,
And who to thee for refuge come,
Shall be forever blessed.

—Selected by J. N. B.

For the World's Crisis.

DAMNATION.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"Damnation," from the Greek term kima, signifying condemnation, or the pronouncing of judgment, implies a condemnation to some fate, a fate to be really experienced; in other words, damnation, in the fullest sense, involves the execution of that to which the sinner is condemned. Men may be "condemned already" by their own enlightened judgment, but this is not a finality. They may repent and get rid of the fate that otherwise would be inevitable; but when the Divine Judge shall pronounce damnation, or condemnation, as our position, our fate will be irreversibly fixed. "He that believeth not shall be damned." "How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Thus spake the Savior concerning the future doom of the incorrigible sinner.

Damnation awaits the finally impenitent in some form, at some time, in some place. But how, when, and where will this damnation be experienced? Will it be the damnation of the physical man, or of the soul only, or of both? If of both, will the soul enter upon its damnation before the body does? Will this damnation be experienced at death, or not till the arrival of the great judgment day? Will it be experienced in some remote planet called hell, or on earth when the Judge of quick and dead shall come? Will it consist in an eternal life of misery, or will it ultimate in the second death? These questions claim attention. In this examination we firstly raise the question—

IS THERE A HELL OF PUNISHMENT FOR DEAD MEN?

The doctrine of going to hell at death, to writhe in fire, is a prominent ingredient of modern theology, but conflicts with reason and inspiration. Both reason and revelation agree that the ungodly are entitled to punishment; but when?

1. Reason repudiates the idea of a hell of punishment at death, because (1) it would admit of inequality of punishment for sinners of the same character, whether the punishment is endless in its infliction, or destined to end after the judgment, as one sinner must enter torment hundreds of years before another equally as wicked; thus, for the same degree of sin, giving one man more punishment than another. (2) It would admit of more punishment for a few sins in one case, than for many sins in another case; as for instance, Cain, who is supposed to have gone to hell nearly six thousand years ago, for committing one murder, will suffer almost six thousand years longer than the man who dies to-day, after having committed forty murders; thereby rendering himself deserving of forty times more punishment than Cain; but poor Cain, owing to dying early, suffers thousands of years longer than the man who is forty times deeper in sin than he was, who chanced to live later in the world's history. (3) It sends men to hell before devils* go there, which is a shocking conclusion, they being the instigators of man's rebellion, and the greatest class of sinners, and being still among men, having often been cast out of men, once crying out, "Art thou come to torment us before the time?" knowing the time for destruction had not then come. (4) It torments men longer than the devils are to be tormented, thus giving fallen men a severer punishment than fallen angels are to experience. (5) It gives man his punishment before the result of his evil doings has been realized. For instance, if Mohammed went to hell about twelve hundred years ago, the evil workings of his wicked system for twelve hundred years cannot be charged upon him, as his case has been disposed of; and as it is not to be supposed that he sent himself to hell, God must have sent him, if he has gone there, and when God does his work, it never needs to be done over after him; so Mohammed's case must be a finality, and he gets clear of the twelve hundred years of sin which he has caused. (6) It gives the sinner his reward before the judgment day comes. (7) It supersedes the necessity of a judgment to come, when death must deliver up the dead to be judged, by rewarding the sinner independent of the judgment. (8) It assumes the existence of a hell without giving us its geographical or chronological location; leaving us in the dark as to where it is, or when it commenced. (9) It makes it the receptacle of immaterial, deathless souls, that literal fire can no more inflict pain on, than on Deity himself; for that which is deathless is just as really painless. (10) It leaves the body unpunished, whereas "both soul and body" are to enter hell; and no intimation can be found in the Bible that the soul will go to hell first, and that afterward the old body, without a soul, will go to hell to hunt up its soul, to burn with it, or to burn without a soul; nor that the soul will leave hell and hunt up the old body, and take it down to hell.

A hell for disembodied souls is not taught in the Bible. And if "soul and body" are to be cast into hell together, when sinners go to hell, they cannot go to the hell of punishment at death, nor before the resurrection; for the body simply goes to the grave at death, and not into hell-fire; and it must sleep in the grave till the slumbering dead "come forth."

2. Revelation negates the doctrine of a hell of punishment at death, by specifying another epoch as the time of their judgment and reward. Peter tells us, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment TO BE PUNISHED" (2 Pet. 2: 9); from which we learn they are not "to be punished" previous to the day of judgment. Now when will men be judged? at death, or at some other time? Christ affirms, "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."—Matt. 12: 36. This does not tell when the judgment is due—at death, or at some future time, but teaches that retribution is deferred till men are judged, and leads us to repeat the question in the plainest language, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12: 48.

What point of time is meant by "the last day"? Not the dying hour, for Jesus elsewhere makes it synchronize with the epoch of the resurrection. In referring to the sleeping saint, he says, "I will raise him up at the last day."—John 6: 40. So "the last day" is not at the dying hour, but at the time of the resurrection; and as the sinner's retribution is not due till the last day, he cannot go to a hell of punishment before his resurrection. This agrees with the statement of Christ—"They that have done evil [shall come forth] unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5: 29. Christ elsewhere threatens the sinner with the "damnation of hell," and here locates that damnation chronologically subsequent to their resurrection. What testimony could be plainer? (1) Sinners are to be "reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished"; (2) that judgment is "in the last day"; (3) then sinners who have long been reserved in the silence of death, experience the "resurrection of damnation," even "the damnation of hell"; showing clearly that there is no hell of punishment for the wicked at the hour of death, or before the resurrection. The Revelator also teaches us that the judgment day, instead of being at death, is at the time when sinners meet their doom: "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hades delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."—Rev. 20: 11–15.

Here the time comes when death DELIVERS UP its dead, and they are JUDGED; then, and not till then, sinners are cast into the lake of fire, to experience the "second death." Up to the time when the great white throne appears, with its heavenly occupant, the dead remain unjudged, and consequently unrewarded; and this agrees with Paul's statement that Christ "shall judge the quick and the dead AT HIS APPEARING."—2 Tim. 4: 1.

The sinner's punishment will be the result of judgment, or the judgment-sentence executed; hence, it cannot precede the judgment. Peter's testimony is in harmony with this sentiment: "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, RESERVED UNTO FIRE against the day of judgment and PERDITION OF UNGODLY MEN." 2 Pet. 3: 7. Here the "perdition of ungodly men" is located not at death, but at the judgment day, in connection with earth's fiery deluge. This agrees with the Savior's statement: "As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of the world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth."—Matt. 13: 40–42.

Here Jesus points not to death, but to the "end of the world" as the time when sinners are to enter the "furnace of fire," or "hell-fire," to experience damnation, or the fate to which they are condemned as criminals. In another discourse Christ again specifies the same time for punishment. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another. . . . . Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom. . . . THEN shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire. . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." Matt 25: 31–46. The strong language here employed will convince all that the hell of punishment for the ungodly is brought to view; but the time when sinners enter it is not at death, but "when the Son of man shall come in his glory." We remark: (1) Reference is here made to "everlasting fire," in the same sense that "eternal fire" is mentioned in Jude 7, indicating a fire not to be stayed in its work of destruction. The words "everlasting" and "eternal" in the two texts, coming from the same Greek term, aionion, the phrases "everlasting fire" and "eternal fire" must signify the same; so if we can learn the import of "eternal fire" in Jude, we shall know its meaning in this case, and especially so as the case in Jude is pronounced "an ensample" of the sinner's doom: "Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an ensample, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Jude 7.

Before inquiring into the nature and duration of "eternal fire," it may be well to notice that some have set up the claim that the fire here referred to is now burning; insisting that the term "suffering" indicates present, and not past suffering; but the fallacy of this claim will be apparent, when we pause to notice that the same tense is used several times in this text as "giving themselves over to fornication." Are they doing this now? Again: "going after strange flesh." Are they engaged in this now? If the "suffering" mentioned in this text is now being experienced, because the word suffering indicates something now transpiring, then "giving," and "going," being in the same tense, indicate present action just as strongly as suffering indicates present endurance; and this would involve the absurd idea that ghosts are fornicators in hell, "going after strange flesh," where flesh has no existence; and all this going on in the fire! Who will accept the conclusion? Not one; yet it is inevitable from the premises; and the only way to avoid the conclusion is to abandon the premises. The sentiment of the text is this: they were then "giving themselves over to fornication," then "going after strange flesh," and then "suffering the vengeance of eternal fire."

Dr. Macknight's Translation reads: "As Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, which, in a manner like to these, had habitually committed whoredom, and gone after other flesh, are set forth an example, having undergone the punishment of an eternal fire." Peter speaks thus on this point: "And turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly."—2 Pet. 2: 6. This fire, instead of burning for ages, turned the cities "into ashes," including the people, "making them an ensample." This is what eternal fire has done in the past, and what it will do in the future. It did not preserve them, but, as Christ says, "The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."—Luke 17: 29, 30. This "eternal fire" was rained from heaven, and "destroyed" both the people and the cities, reducing them to ashes. And this destruction by eternal fire is made "an ensample" to the sinner; so we know from the past what eternal fire will do in the future. It "destroyed them" then, and so it will do at the judgment, or the "ensample" given will fail to illustrate the sinner's future fate.

After looking upon one display of the effects of eternal fire, and after receiving an inspired assurance that this display is set forth as "an ensample," can we dishonor God by insisting that a future display of the same fire will produce an opposite result? that instead of again destroying wicked men it will preserve them? Whether this fire is called eternal, in consideration of its being an agent to inflict punishment direct from God, or because of the total destruction effected by it, matters not. We have had one exhibition of it as a sample, which is a guarantee that the future exhibition will be on the same principle.

(2). "Everlasting punishment" does not imply on everlasting process of infliction, any more that "eternal judgment," or "eternal redemption," or "eternal salvation," signifies an eternal session of the judgment, or an eternal process of redeeming man, or an eternal continuance of the work of saving men, which would be tantamount to saying, Nobody will ever get judged fully; nobody will ever get redeemed fully; and nobody will ever get saved fully. All can see plainly that the import is, the result of the judgment, of the redemption, of the salvation, is eternal; but not the process. Why not see the same thing with reference to punishment—everlasting in its result? None make eternal judgment equivalent to eternal judging, or eternal redemption equivalent to eternal redeeming, or eternal salvation equivalent to eternal saving; then why insist that "everlasting punishment" must signify everlasting punishing? The nature of this punishment is intimated in the text itself, by being held up in contrast with the "life eternal" promised to the righteous—"these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." God will reward the righteous with life, and the sinner with death; "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life." Rom. 6: 23. The life of the righteous will be unending, and so with the death of the sinner; eternal life awaiting the one class, and eternal death the other class.

* Devils are no where in the Bible represented as being now in a hell of punishment; but "the prince of the power of the air," with his angels, was simply cast down to tartarus, which is never rendered hell except in 2 Peter 2: 4; "If God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell (tartarus), and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." They were not cast down to tartarus to be punished, but to await the judgment; and while thus being confined in tartarus, the atmosphere encircling our globe, they once inquired of Jesus, "Art thou come to torment us before the time?" Their reward is yet future.

The apostle Paul not only gives us the duration of the sinner's punishment, but also clearly states its nature; "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints."—2 Thess. 1: 9, 10. This "destruction" is inflicted upon the sinner as a punishment, and it is everlasting. Destruction is not preservation. Thus "everlasting punishment" is everlasting destruction; not an everlasting process of inflicting punishment, but a punishment that is, in its result, final, irrevocable, endless; the "second death" from which there is no escape, or reprieve; the light of life put out to all eternity; shut away from the glories of endless life; reduced to irrevocable oblivion.

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 2.

BY S. S. BREWER.

"Fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven. But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake."—LUKE 21: 11–12.

It is very evident, from the above prediction of our Lord and Master, that the tribulation of his disciples was to be accomplished "before all these" visible evidences of his near approach should be witnessed. The relentless-hearted and persecuting hands of Pagan and Papal-Roman tyrants have been laid upon the Man of Sorrows, through the long, cruel ages of dragonic and Papal-Roman domination. The dark, dismal confines of the horrid Inquisition, kept in diabolical secrecy pent up from public gaze, seems of worse than savage barbarity. I have often, in tracing the blood-reeking footprints of this out-grown masterpiece of Satan, been led to think that the prophet must have had some, if not a direct reference to the Inquisition in this instance: "For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it." Hab. 2: 11. At any rate, Christ's disciples have drank the bitter, bitter cup, as predicted in Luke 21: 12. Dens of wild beasts, deep and lonesome caves and mountain fastnesses, the valleys of Piedmont, the plains of Languedoc, have echoed back the groans of dying innocence, to the fire-doomed victims expiring at the stake, on the great days of Pontifical "Auto de Fe."

That intensely intensified period of unparalleled suffering under papal rule, so long and cruel, can be none other than that predicted in these words: "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be."—Matt. 24: 21. After the termination of the period during which the saints were to remain in the hands of kings, rulers, and mitred tyrants, as the Almighty predicted by the prophet Daniel, the lucid season that inspiration designates "the time of the end" arrived. This, doubtless, was intended by infinite wisdom, goodness and mercy, to be a season extending from "the time of the end" to the time when "many shall run to and fro," without let or hindrance of Papal bulls, anathemas, inquisitions, or faggot fires.

The time of the end came, and with it the doom of Papal intolerance. Ever since the drying up of the symbolic Euphrates, that had with an uninterrupted current flown into "the great city"—"BABYLON THE GREAT"—knowledge has been increasing in all its multifarious departments, until over three hundred tongues have been added to the Holy Scriptures, in addition to the few in which they were limited previous to that time. But while popular theologians either neglect, or refuse to investigate the condition of the elements at this late hour, so portentously alarming, and refuse to warn their flocks of earth's approaching doom, the Almighty is causing tongues of fire to utter it in flaming signals from heaven, that is soon to "pass away with a great noise."

Clerical indifference only tends to augment the unbelief that mantles the mental elements in darkness, that now takes fast hold upon near and swift approaching death. O mortals! beware of the fetters that bind, and the vail that obscures both your mental and natural vision, before it is too late. Since the dark day of 1780, multitudinous and varied have been the prognostics of a celestial nature. Some are more alarming than others. One of the most noted was described in a London paper of Sept. 13th, 1839. Says the writer:—"It had a most alarming appearance, and was like that occasioned by a terrific fire." See "Last Day Tokens," No. 3. Men have become, in a great measure, so hardened on account of a repetition of these evangels, that they scoff with an impunity really afflicting to a humble believer in the Holy Scriptures.

"Nor less,
These prodigies occurring night and day,
Perplexed philosophy. The Magi tried—
Magi, a name, not seldom given to fools
In the vocabulary of earthly speech,—
They tried to trace them still to second cause;
But scarcely satisfied themselves; though round
Their deep deliberations, crowding came,
And wondering at their wisdom went away,
Much quieted and very much deceived;
THE PEOPLE ALWAYS GLAD TO BE DECEIVED.
These warnings passed, they unregarded passed,
And all in wonted order calmly moved;
The pulse of nature regularly beat,
And on her cheek the bloom of perfect health
Again appeared. Deceitful pulse! and bloom
Deceitful!—and deceitful calm! The earth
Was old and worn within; but like the man
Who noticed not his midday strength decline,
Sliding so gently round the curvature
Of life, from youth to age. She knew it not,
The calm was like the calm which oft the man,
Dying, experienced before his death;
The bloom was but a hectic flush, before
The eternal paleness. But all these were taken
By this last race of men for tokens of good;
And blustering public news already proclaimed—
News always gabbling ere they well had thought—
Prosperity, and joy, and peace; and MOCKED
The man, who kneeling prayed, and trembled still;
And all in earnest to their sins returned.
—Pollock.

Scientific minds in England have very lately given an account of an astonishing electrical phenomenon that has recently transpired there; and do not hesitate to predict events of surpassing magnitude, before this year shall have terminated its appointed limit. But as this is in the category of mere human assertion, we let it pass, and await the unfoldings of the brief and narrow point of time allotted us.

Not the least of celestial phenomena, for interest, are those chromatic twilights seen every evening on the summit of the Rocky Mountains, "seeming as though a tremendous bonfire was ablaze below." The writer pronounces it "gorgeous and fearfully beautiful." Old Sharshay, called "the learned Ute chief, stands in silence each night, gazing at this wonderful phenomenon"; and when questioned, replies in his aboriginal simplicity, slowly and sadly, "Ugh! the Great Spirit is mad! He blows fire! His wigwam is in trouble! White man and red man better be afraid, for the Great Spirit is mad; he is heap angry."

"If it be true," as one of the Professors of the Cincinnati Observatory says, "that immense volumes of hydrogen gas were thrown out from the centre of the sun to the earth's surface, during the recent solar eclipse, how long will it be before the oxygen will be thrown out, and the carbon become the ruling and destroying element?"

We are not able to present a definite answer to the above question, but feel safe in saying that there is becoming a necessity in view of the exhausted condition of prophecy, that the Lord must very soon reveal the last act in the prophetic chain, by arising "to shake terribly the earth." But unbelief will mantle the minds of this last generation up to the above inaugurating event of earth's doom. Before I close, allow me to introduce two testimonies.

"METEOROLOGICAL PHENOMENA.—Two days have produced a remarkable series of astronomic scenes. Last evening, at eight o'clock, there was a very brilliant display of northern lights, extending from the northwest, where the broadest and most luminous exhibition took place to the southeast. The evening fog, however, which presently turned to rain, dispelled the lights, and all was darkness. On the previous evening, there was the occultation process, which we noted yesterday. And before that, was the notable thunder-storm, and the dark hour. Thunder, lightning, hail, darkness, occultations, auroras, and all, indicate that these are very remarkable times. The Millerites, were there any of them left, would have it the world is coming to an end. Not so."

By comparing this last opinion with the following, the reader will not fail to perceive the antagonism there is. An English prognosticator, in closing an article, says:—

"If any of our readers are therefore yet disposed to complain of the weather and the earthquakes, let them remember that, by this time next year, they may have an entire new line of experiences to explain and endure; in comparison with which the fitful winter, and rough, rude autumn of to-day, may seem like a June morning in paradise, and the earthquake's shock and lightning's storm a placid rocking in the cradle with a pleasant lullaby of thunder."

The face of heaven is strangely flushed,
The silver moon in blood hath blushed,
Meteors flit with luminous trail,
The stars have fall'n to earth like hail,
Aerolites in glowing red
Have whizzed and roared above our head;
"Pillars of smoke" and fire on high,
And fearful sights gleam in the sky;
Redemption's hour is drawing nigh.
"The tribulation" hath passed by,
When mitre'd tyrants, drunk with blood,
Martyr'd the helpless church of God.
Rome's "mene, tekel," flames on high,
God has written it on the sky;
The harlot stands upon the brink,
When, as a "millstone," quick she'll sink;
Then every saint with joy exclaims,
Rejoice, the Lord our God now reigns.

OUR POSITION.

Rolling years bring their changes. Several years ago thousands of people lifted up their eyes to heaven in expectation of the speedy appearing of the sign of the "Son of man." The vision tarried. Many have turned away from the promised joy of the event to seek vanities. We cannot go away. To whom, to what shall we go? We have opened our mouth unto God, and our solemn vows must be fulfilled. The world affords us no substitute for our blessed hope. We believe, and therefore we must speak and act in the preparation for the kingdom of God. We are dreaming no idle dream. The great day of the Almighty is almost upon us. It is our work to proclaim this fearful truth to an apostate church, and unbelieving world. This work must be done. We must do it or perish! The echoes of our Master's voice are in our souls. No apology will be taken if our duty is not done. Jehovah shakes the bright sword of slaughter over the nations. He calls on us to proclaim this among the Gentiles. Shall we turn away to minor questions? Shall we be harping about tests, individual notions, personal policy or other trifles? God help us! "Blessed is that servant" who gives "meat in due season."

Now is our time of effort. It is the last hour. O ye hosts of God, now for the charge. Forward! Let us not stop to talk with the vain talkers. Let us not stop to mend the breech in our reputation made by some ungainly croaker. We are embattled for God. Two kinds of blood are concerned—"the blood of the covenant," and the blood of souls." Eternity opens before us with all of its glories or dire reflections. Shall we cease all strife and contention on unimportant questions, and attend to our high calling? Shall we act brotherly? Shall we put away all evil speaking, selfishness, and prepare to meet our God? It is time for general reformation.

The great matter in which we are now interested is more than theory—more than talk. O the judgment, the judgment! God of mercy, pity us and fit us for it. Who of us shall stand? It is almost here. I am not writing fiction. Jesus is coming. Let us put on the wedding garments. Let us haste to be ready.

O backbiter, slanderer, false-accuser, evil-speaker, man or woman of strife, backslider, cold professor, sinner, the Judge is upon you! Your race of iniquity is almost run. Your evil thoughts will be revealed. Your bitter words will pierce your own soul. Your vile acts will shame your shrinking spirit. What will you say? How will you turn when the Mighty One shall drive his flaming chariot in the heavens to redeem his elect and thunder damnation on his foes?

Now is the purity and patience of the saints. Now is the hour of triple strife—strife of heaven, earth and hell. Now is the fourth and last watch. Spirit of the everlasting God, come upon us. Mighty One, Eternal, hold us in thine hand. The perils come thicker and faster. On the right and on the left our numbers fall. Some, too, are gathered with us. "When the son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"—Edwin Burnham.—Adv. Herald.

LIFE AND DEATH.

The Scriptures do not, I think, afford us any ground for expecting that those who shall be condemned at the last day as having wilfully rejected or rebelled against their Lord, will be finally delivered; that their doom, and that of the evil angels, will ever be reversed.

What that doom will be, whether the terms in which it is commonly spoken of in Scripture—"death," "destruction," "perishing," etc., are to be understood figuratively, as denoting immortal life in a state of misery, or more literally, as denoting a final extinction of existence—this is quite a different question. It is certain that the "life," "eternal life," immortality," etc., are always applied to the condition of those, and of those only, who shall at the last day be approved as "good and faithful servants," who are to "enter into the joy of their Lord."

"Life," as applied to their condition, is usually understood to mean "happy life." And that theirs will be a happy life, we are indeed plainly taught; but I do not think we are anywhere taught that the word "life" does of itself necessarily imply happiness. If so indeed, it would be mere tautology to speak of a "happy life; and a contradiction to speak of a "miserable life;" which we know is not the case, according to the usage of any language. In all ages and countries, "life," and the words answering to it in other languages, have always been applied, in ordinary discourse, to a wretched life, no less properly than to a happy one. Life, therefore, in the received sense of the word, would apply equally to the condition of the blest and of the condemned, supposing these last to be destined to continue forever, living in a state of misery. And yet, to their condition the words life and immortality never are applied in Scripture.

If, therefore, we suppose the hearers of Jesus and his apostles to have understood, as nearly as possible in the ordinary sense, the words employed, they must naturally have conceived them to mean, (if they were taught nothing to the contrary) that the condemned were really and literally to be "destroyed," and cease to exist; not that they were to exist forever in a state of wretchedness. For they are never spoken of as being kept alive, but as forfeiting life; as, for instance, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life;" "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." And again, "perdition," "death," "destruction," are employed in numerous passages to express the doom of the condemned. All which expressions would, as I have said, be naturally taken in their usual and obvious sense, if nothing were taught to the contrary.

That these expressions, however, are to be understood, not in their ordinary sense, but figuratively, to signify an immortality of suffering, is inferred by a large proportion of christians, from some other passages: as where our Lord speaks of "everlasting punishment," "everlasting fire," and of being "cast into hell, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched."

This last expression of his is taken from the book of the prophet Isaiah (chap. lxvi. 24), who speaks of "the carcasses of the men that have transgressed, whose worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh:" describing evidently the kind of doom inflicted by the eastern nations on the vilest offenders, who were not only slain, but their bodies deprived of the rites of burial, and either burned to ashes (which among them is considered a great indignity), or left to moulder above ground, and be devoured by worms.

From such passages as these it has been inferred that the sufferings, and, consequently, the life of the condemned, is never to have an end. And the expressions will certainly bear that sense; which would, perhaps, be their most obvious and natural meaning, if these expressions were the only ones on the subject that are to be found in Scripture. But they will also bear another sense; which, if not more probable in itself, is certainly more reconcilable with the ordinary meaning of the words "destruction," etc., which so often occur. The expressions of "eternal punishment," "unquenchable fire," etc., may mean merely that there is to be no deliverance, no revival, no restoration of the condemned. "Death," simply, does not shut out the hope of being brought to life again; "eternal death" does. "Fire" may be quenched before it has entirely consumed what is burning; "unquenchable fire" would seem most naturally to mean that which destroys it utterly.

It may be said, indeed, that supposing man's soul to be an immaterial being, it cannot be consumed and destroyed by literal material fire or worms. That is true; but no more can it suffer from them. We all know that no fire, literally so called, can give us any pain unless it reaches our bodies. The "fire," therefore, and the "worm" that are spoken of, must, at any rate, it would seem, be something figuratively so called; something that is to the soul what worms and fire are to the body. And as the effect of worms or fire is not to preserve the body they prey upon, but to consume, destroy, and put an end to it, it would follow, if correspondence hold good, that the fire, figuratively so called, which is prepared for the condemned, is something that is really to destroy and put an end to them; and is called "everlasting" or "unquenchable" fire, to denote that they are not to be saved from it, but that their destruction is to be final. So in the parable of the tares, our Lord describes himself as saying, "gather ye first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my garner;" as if to denote that the wheat is to be (as we know is the practice of the husbandman) carefully preserved, and the other, completely put an end to.

We must not indeed venture to conclude at once, from our conviction of the divine goodness and power, that evil will ever cease to exist; since we know not how to explain the existence of any evil at all. We can only say there is some unknown cause for it; and that it is a foolish presumption to think of assigning a limit to the effects of an unknown cause, except where revelation guides us. But when we are told that Christ is to "reign till he shall have put all things under his feet," and that "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death;" this does afford some ground for expecting the ultimate extinction of evil and of suffering, by a total destruction of such as are incapable of good and of happiness. (1 Cor. 15: 25, 28; Heb. 1: 13; Rev. 20: 14; 21: 4, 5.) If "eternal death" means final death, death without any revival, we can understand what is meant by "death being the last enemy destroyed," viz: that none henceforth are to be subjected to it. But if "death" be understood to mean everlasting life in misery, then it would appear that death is never to be destroyed at all; since, although no one should be henceforth sentenced to it, it would still be going on as a continual infliction forever.

On the whole, therefore, I think we are not warranted in concluding, (as some do) so positively concerning this question as to make it a point of christian faith to interpret figuratively and not literally the "death" and "destruction" spoken of in Scripture as the doom of the condemned; and to insist on the belief that they are to be kept alive forever.—Whately's Revelations of a Future State.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTFUL SKETCHES.—No. 9.

GOD'S BENEVOLENCE.

When God created the human species, either he wished their happiness, or he wished their misery, or he was indifferent and unconcerned about both. If he had wished our misery, he might have made sure of his purpose by forming our senses to be so many sores and pains to us, as they are now instruments of gratification and enjoyment; or by placing us amidst objects so ill suited to our perceptions, as to have continually offended us. Instead of administering to our refreshment and delight, he might have made, for example, every thing we tasted bitter, every thing we saw burthensome, every thing we touched a sting, every smell a stench, and every sound a discord.

If he had been indifferent about our happiness or misery, we must impute to our good fortune (as all design by this supposition is excluded) both the capacity, or our own senses to receive pleasure, and the supply of external objects fitted to produce it. But either of these (and still more both of them) being too much to be attributed to accident, nothing remains but the first supposition, that God, when he created the human species, wished their happiness, and made provisions for them with that view, and for that purpose. The same argument may be proposed in different terms, thus: Contrivance proves design, and the predominant tendency of the contrivance indicates the disposition of the designer. The world abounds with contrivances, and all the contrivances with which we are acquainted are directed to beneficent purposes. Teeth are contrived to eat, not ache. Their aching now and then is incidental to the contrivance; perhaps inseparable from it; or, even if you will let it be called a defect in the contrivance, it is not the object of it. This is a distinction which well deserves to be noticed. In describing implements of husbandry, we would hardly say of the sickle that it was made to cut the reaper's fingers; though from the construction of the instrument, and the manner of using it, this mischief often happens. But if we had occasion to describe instruments of torture or execution, this engine we would say is to extend the sinews, this to dislocate the joints, this to break the bones, this to scorch the soles of the feet. Here pain and misery are the very objects of the contrivance. Nothing of this sort is to be found in the works of nature.

We here discern a train of contrivances to bring about an evil purpose. No anatomist ever discovered a system of organization calculated to produce pain or disease; or, in explaining the parts of the human system, ever said this is to irritate, this to inflame; this duct is to convey the gravel to the kidneys, this gland to secrete the humor that forms the gout. If, by chance, he come at a part of which he knows not the use, the most he can say is, that it is useless. No one ever suspects that it is put there to incommode, to annoy, or to torment. Since then God hath called forth his consummate wisdom to contrive and provide for our happiness, and the world appears to have been constituted for this design at first, so long as this constitution is upholden by him, we must, in reason, suppose the same design continued.

Tyftonborough, N. H. J. L. HENRY.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Feb. 9, 1870.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

MRS. P. F. LYMAN—The money was all credited.

ALBERT GORDON—Money received.

SOME ONE writes to have their paper changed from Norwalk, Ohio, to Rowe, Mass., but forgot to sign their name. WHO WAS IT?

BRO. J. M. TOZIER—It will soon appear. It is good.

We have now a good supply of "Admonitions," by I. K. Lombard. Price by mail, postpaid, 15 cents per dozen; 75 cts. per hundred.

"THE NEW AGE."

The expectations of worldly men are so aroused at the signs of the times, that they think a "new age" is about to dawn. Satan is busy to cause them to believe that science and philosophy will introduce the good time for which they have been looking. They mix up a little Bible, falsely applied, with their philosophy, and the common people think it may be so, because some distinguished man declares it. Many professed ministers seem to be anxious to find out what will please the people, and preach accordingly. Unpopular truths are left in silence; even though they are just what the people most need to fit them for the coming kingdom. Men are dreaming of "a good time coming," not the one promised by the Lord, as the result of the personal advent of Christ, but the fabled one, the counterfeit, prophesied by the deceiver, as the result of mere human institutions introduced by antichristian Spiritualism.

Truly, things are coming to a strange pass. "Perplexity" is the word that best expresses the state of feeling in the minds of thinking, unchristian men. Some keep flattering themselves that the bright days will soon dawn through some happy hit of some noted leader; but, alas! things grow "worse and worse," just as the Bible declares. Many try not to believe it and call evil good, in order to make out their case.

The following is from the N. Y. Sunday Herald, Jan. 30th, 1870:—

"The history of mankind as far as we know it, up to the present age, has been but the introductory chapter of the great volume of the nineteenth century and to the wonderful future that is just opening. . . .

In truth, this is a new age, so new and surprising, and so far in advance of any preceding one, that those who believe in a millennium have no difficulty in fixing this as the period for the regeneration of the world and for the coming of that new heaven and earth foretold in the Apocalypse."

INFIDELITY.

That infidelity is rapidly spreading in christendom there is no room to doubt. Its progress is truly alarming. We are fast approaching a period when the believers in the divine revelation will be the exceptions, and the great mass of the people will be open and avowed infidels. The following is taken from the January number of the London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy:—

The whole world is at this moment leavened with infidelity. Hindooism has become semi-infidel. Mohammedanism has become semi-infidel. Popery has become semi-infidel. Protestantism has become semi-infidel. Three-fourths of the professors of religion in the world (all creeds alike) are infidels, or nearly so. For one conversion to Popery in these ten years there have been a hundred to infidelity. Nobody seems able to stand before this strong delusion. Popery itself is thoroughly leavened with the infidelity of the age; and there is hardly an ultra-montane who is not an infidel. Ultra-montanism is the great modern nursery for skepticism. A few years (perhaps less) will show this."

THE POPE AND NAPOLEON.

The Pope is in a "peck of troubles." He does not know what to do. His plans do not work. He is anxious to be declared infallible; but dare not do it against the consent of Napoleon; thus acknowledging the Emperor his superior, which is a great fall from the former positions occupied by the popes; when crowned heads bowed reverently to their commands.

The following is from the N. Y. Herald, of Jan. 30th:—

"Of all the reports which we have had from Rome regarding infallibility the most important by far are the latest, which state that the Archbishop of Algiers has left Rome for Paris for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the Emperor on the dogma of the personal infallibility of the Pope, and that 'the Pope has yielded to France and withdrawn the project of infallibility.' It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of these announcements. The Pope is trembling. He has no royal or imperial pillar on which to lean. He is painfully alone. If the eldest son of the church would help him he would help the eldest son. The church is in trouble. Napoleon could do much to relieve it of all its difficulties. Will he sanction infallibility? If he does the Holy Father may yet be in Paris, and Napoleon the Third may before he dies become the Lord's anointed. The Council began by despising the temporal princes. It began in the spirit that of old brought emperors, barefoot and on naked knees, for forgiveness and a blessing. This mission of the Archbishop of Algiers shows to all the world that the times have sadly, perhaps badly, changed. The tables are completely turned. The Emperor is now greater than the Pope. Is Napoleon up to the high role of [illegible]? Now is his chance. [illegible]"

WHAT IS SECTARIANISM?

The best definition of sectarianism we have ever seen, is the following from The Church, a paper that makes prominent the important principle, that all christians should be one as Jesus prayed. The writer says:—

"Sectarianism consists in demanding more for church fellowship than for christian fellowship. Right at this point believers divide and build sects with a creed that embodies their opinions, to which all good men cannot subscribe. God's children are necessitated to differ in understanding and in practice, but not to divide or separate. There is to exist the rights of personality. Fellowship should be predicated alone upon piety; and where this is admitted, no action is to separate on the account of ignorance, or mistaken action."

THE SLEEVE PATTERN.

Important results often arise from trifling circumstances. It is true that "tall oaks from little acorns grow." Some little event may turn the whole current of life. One careless word may lead to eternal ruin; so a kind word may lead one to Christ. But what about the "sleeve pattern"? A new subscriber writes:—

"I have been reading my sleeve pattern, cut from one of your papers. I am so pleased with the pieces, I want the whole paper. One corner of the pattern says, 'Direct to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.'; and that is all I know about it."

BRO. P. S. W. DETO writes from Strawberry Point, Iowa, Jan. 31st, 1870, giving the good news that in the meetings held at New Hartford, Iowa, in connection with the dedication of their new chapel, fifteen have been baptized, and twenty-eight have united with the church. Some fifty have been reclaimed and converted. The work is still onward. He has been assisted by Bro. C. C. Ramsey, from Chicago.

HELP THE NEEDY.—We learn that Sr. Champlin, wife of the late Bro. Geo. Champlin, is blind, and in poor health. She has been known as an industrious woman. Shall this widow of a preacher be allowed to suffer for the necessaries of life? Direct to Mrs. Geo. Champlin, 89 Dexter St., Providence, R. I.

THE NEW BOOK.—We would say to those who may wish to inquire concerning the book, to be prepared by several editors, that it will be some months before it will be published. We expect to have it ready for the printer the last of next month.

OUR NEWS.—We endeaver to give our readers the latest and most important news. It is gathered from the New York, Boston, and Chicago dailies.

"HOLD UP HIS HANDS."—Bro. J. A. Cleaveland has said some things on this subject that demand attention. See his article.

THE RESUSCITATOR.—Bro. B. H. Couch, Concord, N. H., wishes us to say that he has the Resuscitator for sale. Address box 902.

DOCTRINES OF DEMONS.

No fact is better established in morals than that the doctrines of Spiritualism are the doctrines of demons. They are just as far removed from Christ as possible. while at the same time it is affirmed that they are the doctrines of genuine christianity. At the Banner of Light office in Boston, a room is set apart for spirit manifestations; where persons are permitted to ask questions of a noted medium, and then questions and answers are published in the Banner. The following are samples:—

"Q. Do you hold that Jesus Christ was superior to any other man that ever lived?

A. No, I certainly do not.—Banner, Feb. 5th, 1870.

"Q. Why is it that some can see spirits while in their mortal bodies, and others cannot?

A. Some are so chemically organized that under certain chemical conditions they can see spirits, or the clothing that covers the spirit—not the spirit. It is simply a chemical difference that exists between human bodies.

Q. Is that clothing made up of chemical particles of matter?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Is the spirit itself matter?

A. So etherealized as not to be, under any circumstances, apparent to human senses.

Q. Can this spirit-body be seen with our natural eyes, or in a different way?

A. No man, woman, or child hath ever seen a spirit at any time, or under any circumstances. They have only seen the outer covering of the spirit.

Q. Is that seen with the natural eyes?

A. Sometimes with the natural eye, sometimes with the clairvoyant eye, or second (inner) sight.

Q. Some assume that they converse with spirits. Is that done orally?

A. Sometimes; but oftener mentally.

Q. Sacred history records the communion of Saul with the woman of Endor. Was she like the mediums of the present day?

A. Yes, precisely the same. The woman of Endor, who called up the spirit of Samuel, was a medium, such as you have amongst you at the present day."—Banner, Jan. 29th.

"ERA OF CRIME."

While careless watchmen are crying, "Peace and safety," the tide of wickedness and infidelity is rising rapidly, and alarmingly. The fact cannot be disguised any longer. Men are becoming perfectly reckless, caring for neither God nor man. Laws are trampled under foot in sight of the magistrate, and the offender passes on with the utmost liberty. The days of Sodom are returning. Says the Cedar Falls (Iowa) Gazette, Jan. 21st, '70:

"From the numerous tragedies occurring throughout the country, we are led to conclude, that the era of crime is upon us. Our exchanges teem with murders, suicides and shocking tragedies by every mail. The startling head-lines in the columns of our daily papers, announcing the elopement of some man with another's wife, or the shocking murders of men, women, and children in different parts of the country, have come to be regarded as amusements for the special gratification of the sensational reader; they are fearfully suggestive of the growth of immorality, drunkenness, passion and crime. From a careful investigation it has been found that idleness in most of these cases, is truly the mother of crime. Parents too frequently neglect to give their children an honorable occupation. It is to be hoped those daily lessons, startling and alarming as they are, and taught in so rude a manner, may not be lost sight of by those who, in the first instance, have the power to control and shape the moral natures of their children."

HALF TRIBE OF MANASSEH.

BRO. GRANT:—There is a Baptist lady here, who says she has asked several ministers why the tribe of Manasseh is called a "half tribe," or is divided, as it is found in Joshua 13: 7. Please send an answer through the Crisis. Your Bro. in Christ,

OTIS L. THAYER.

The half tribe of Manasseh, with the two tribes of Gad and Reuben, had received their portion on the east side of Jordan. The other nine tribes, and the other half of the tribe of Manasseh received their inheritance on the west side of Jordan.

"And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh, the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about." Num. 32: 33. And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the Lord commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half tribe. For the tribe of the children of Reuben, according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance; and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance. The two tribes and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sun-rising. Num. 34: 13-15.

PERIODICALS.

"GOOD WORDS" for Feb. is before us, containing valuable reading matter. We are pleased to find that some have become disgusted with the trashy literature of the day, as sent out in most of the monthlies, and that periodicals containing sensible reading, like "Good Words" and the "Sunday Magazine," find a welcome in many families. They are published by J. B. Lippincott & Co., 715 Market St., Philadelphia. "Good Words" is $2.75 a year, and the "Sunday Magazine" $3.50. They deserve the support of a christian people.

THE EXCELSIOR MONTHLY MAGAZINE for February is on our table. We find it far above most of the monthlies. Its moral tone appears to be good, and is designed to furnish wholesome family reading, in the place of the light, trashy nonsense with which the world is now flooded. It is published by C. L. Van Allen, 171 Broadway, New York, at $1 a year.

THE HEALTH REFORMER and THE LAWS OF LIFE for February are at hand, filled with valuable reading.

PHYSICAL DEGENERACY.—But few are aware of one of the leading causes of the early physical decline of American youth. We have just received a supply of Dr. Andrew Stone's valuable pamphlet on this subject, entitled, "A Treatise on the causes of the early Physical Degeneracy of American People, and the early melancholy decline of childhood, and the youth of both sexes." One of these pamphlets should be in every family. Price 8 cts. postpaid; four for 25 cts.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE QUARTERLY Session of the MASS. ADV. CHRIS. CONFERENCE.

The conference met according to appointment. The President in the chair. The clerk being absent, C. Goodrich was chosen to act as Clerk of the meeting. Preachers present during the meeting: G. A. Streeter, G. A. Brown, J. Boyington, J. S. White, B. Finny, L. Boutell, T. M. Preble, W. A. Hathaway, S. S. Brewer, E. Burnham, B. Woodside, J. Couch, H. Munger, S. W. Thurber, C. H. Barnes, A. P. Moore, and C. Goodrich; who severally reported their labors, and their testimony was, that in their several fields of labor there was more harmony and a greater spirit of union prevalent than they had seen for some years past.

The time of the conference was mostly spent in prayer, conference, and preaching, which was all good. The Lord was with us, and all felt that it was one of the best conferences we had ever had. It left a healthy influence on the church. All was harmony, and it was good to be there.

Bro. S. Ayers gave a good report of the church in Worcester. The church at Brimfield reported by letter. It is in a prosperous condition.

The following resolutions were passed:—

Whereas, There have from time to time persons come among us that have imposed upon us, and in some cases caused division in the church; and Whereas, The Lord by his apostle has commanded us to mark such and avoid them; and that we may better carry out the injunction; therefore,

Resolved, That this conference give to each minister in full fellowship, belonging thereto, a certificate of membership, signed by the President and Secretary; and we request the conferences of other states to do the same, that we may know those who come among us.

Voted, That C. Goodrich be a committee to furnish the conference with blank certificates, to be ready at the next conference, so that the above resolutions be carried out.

Voted, That any brother who makes application for ordination to the Ministerial Committee, must bring letters of commendation from the church or brethren where he is known; and we will not recognise any, who shall be hereafter ordained, without the recommendation of the Ministerial Committee.

Voted, That the acting Secretary furnish the Crisis and A. C. Times with a copy of the minutes for publication. The conference passed a vote of thanks to the church in Chelsea for their hospitality, and then adjourned to the call of the President and Secretary.

C. GOODRICH, Acting Secretary.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. R. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$377.37
J. F. B., Philadelphia	40.00
Right Hand	1.50
S. Scammon	2.50
Geo. Knell	1.00
John Myers	1.00
Thomas Smith	.25

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$43.56
J. F. B., Philadelphia	18.00
Mrs. D. Hatch	.50

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments		$583.65
J. F. B., Philadelphia		30.00
John Couch (pledge paid)		10.00
M. Sunderland		10.00
"A poor Widow" (payment of pledge made at Springfield)		5.00
— Nichols	Collected by Bro. L. Boutell.	1.00
Sr. Ladd		.50
Sr. J. Knights		1.00
— Ingalls		.50
Sr. Vickery		.50

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Previous acknowledgments	$28.00
H. Loud	1.00
Anna E. DeWitt	.50
J. Stockwell	.10

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

DONATIONS RECEIVED.

J. F. B., Philadelphia $12.00

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass $12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

BRO. MANNING.

BRO. GRANT:—I think that some of our good brethren, who may have some of the Lord's money, have overlooked the notice in relation to Bro. Manning, as presented at the last New Hampshire conference, that it would be duty to assist him in this his time of need; as nothing has been sent in since. I would say to the friends of the poor and needy, that Bro. Benjamin Saulpaugh, of Goffstownville, N. H., has been chosen as a steward of the church, to whom they can send what they may feel the Lord would have them; and he will see that it is judiciously used for Bro. Manning's support and comfort. Brethren, shall we turn him upon the town, or county, in his last moments of suffering?

J. G. SMITH.

For the World's Crisis.

PAOLI, WIS.

BRO. GRANT:—Our quarterly meeting for Wisconsin, held at Paoli, from the 14th to the 16th of January, was a glorious success. A goodly number of the dear saints from different sections convened together for purposes of holy communion, and they were not disappointed. Our heavenly Father, in accordance with his promise, met with us, and blessed us. O how good it is to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, and to have our hearts thrilled in unison with the electricity of Jesus' love. We had blessed sermons of truth, warm, glowing exhortations, exhilarating songs of praise, earnest, devout pleadings at the throne of grace. O, what an atmosphere to live in. Sweet earnest of the good time coming, when Jesus shall come. But the communion season, on the evening of Lord's day, was a time which will long be remembered by those who participated. It looks good to see Father's children gather round Father's table, as they did on that occasion. People call some of those children Adventists, some Methodists, and some Baptists, and others United Brethren; but I guess Father calls them sons and daughters.

It was not much of a wonder, after all, that when that old gray-haired sinner rose to request the prayers of God's people, he should make the following statement: "I have often been led to doubt the reality of the Christian religion, from the fact that its professors would not come together to the Lord's table; but now my doubts are removed. I want Christianity." It is best, at all times, to cultivate a spirit of Christian union. Some ten arose for prayers. We are continuing the meetings, and the Lord is still working, up to the present time (21st). Some twenty-one in all have made a start for the kingdom.

Here is an incident illustrating the power of prayer and faith. An aged sister stated that she had been praying for her unconverted husband for thirty years, or more. It seemed almost like hoping against hope, it was so long coming; but she held on to the throne of God with an unyielding grasp. But last spring she concluded that God was about to grant her request, and when preparing to attend the campmeeting at Sauk, her faith became so strong that her husband should be converted at that meeting, that she (unknown to him) took with her a change of clothes for him to be baptized in. And God honored her faith. He was the first to come out in that meeting, and was baptized before he went home. Pray for us. GEO. THOMSON.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ANNIHILATION OF THE WICKED.—This doctrine, according to the Methodist "Home Journal," is taking root and spreading among thinking men, both in and out of that church, and both in and out of its ministry, with a growth that is obvious and threatening. It is asserted that the question whether the Scriptures promise perpetual existence to any but the good, must soon have a thorough rehearsing in that denomination.

The above scrap from the Boston Daily Herald (copied from the Phila. Ledger) speaks volumes for the truth, its "growth," and threatening aspect to the tradition of future eternal misery of the unbelieving. It is a doctrine not philosophical, neither Biblical, and the teaching of it is detrimental to pure christianity; and that a great change is going on in the religious public is most evident.

The question whether the Scriptures promise any but the righteous a perpetual existence, is an important matter, and must have a hearing, as it seems to be almost the foundation of all the so claimed evangelical denominations. "Straws show which way the wind blows." So this admission coming from this source is heart-cheering to those who find the Bible teaching the destruction of the wicked. L. BOUTELL.

M. OLLIVIER'S PROGRAMME OF POLICY.

From a report of the first extended speech which M. Ollivier has made to the Corps Legislatif in his new character of Premier we make extract. After a glance at the past he proceeded to say:

"A further argument was derived from that admirable Napoleonic legend which contains, beside the most moving dramas, the most pregnant examples and the most useful lessons. What was the politic counsel given by the incomparable Captain who, after overrunning Europe at the head of his armies; after having wearied victory by forcing her to follow his giant strides; after having had kings for courtiers; after possessing an amount of power which more than realized the most wildly-ambitious dream; when tarrying at Fontainebleau after his defeat, in one of those sad and fatal moments which follow defeat, when the mind of a great genius attains a peculiar lucidity, what was the counsel given by Napoleon? What did he reply to those who prated about traitors and treachery? He replied these words, which have ever been present to my mind: 'No; there has been no treachery—it is not the armies of Europe that have defeated me, but liberal ideas!' And later, when he returned to resume the crown which had fallen from his brow, what was his first step? What was the first ally whose support he courted? Liberty! That is what we have said for twelve years running. We have ever in the discharge of our duty as advisers of the Crown laid down that it both should and could grant the most extensive and complete extension of public liberties (tres bien, tres bien,bravo.) Our advice was favorably received, and the Sovereign, showing the rare example of a man who after having made authority the chief prop of his rule, knows how and when to adopt generously liberal ideas, instituted a Constitutional Government. That is the reason and the meaning of our presence here. We are the representatives of that idea. We have not courted, or been desirous of office, We have been asked to carry out, at a time which I will not call dangerous, but which may yet be considered as difficult, this idea of the union of the principle of authority with the most extensive liberty. We are honest men—we are personally pledges for what we have undertaken, and we shall carry out successfully into practice the new state of things in which we have faith. That task is not without its difficulties, and those difficulties we do not conceal from ourselves. The struggle continues, but its character has changed. The question is no longer whether liberty shall be granted or not. Beyond all doubt liberty exists; it is a practical fact. Yet a second battle has commenced. Seeing that we, all the adversaries of the former state of things, are now united, a new party, consisting of bold men, entertaining deep convictions, some of them thoroughly respectable, have risen against the Empire founded on liberty. 'We will not accept it,' they proclaim; 'it is constitutional parliamentary bourgeois liberty. We are the revolution, radical, indefatigable, and inflexible, and we commence the struggle.'

Well, gentlemen, the Ministers in the name of the government, reply to that party: 'You want to fight, do you? Very well, we are ready to meet you.' And our mission—I will not say our honor—will be not only to fight staunchly, but to triumph. And triumph we shall, by continuing to represent the legitimate wishes of public opinion. We shall triumph, and become, if need be, the party of resistance; the party of reaction we shall never be. Therefore, I may tell M. de Maupas, when he urges to-day what is our dernier mot, we can't tell you, for in politics such a thing as finality does not exist. The last word to-day may be but an inarticulate sound to-morrow. Our attitude is clear, resolute, and well-defined. We have signed two programmes. We accept them in their integrity. We will carry them out honestly, without being precipitate, without any undue haste, as men who, conscious of their strength, will not swerve from the course they have laid out for themselves. Let M. de Maupas allow me to tell him that protracted negotiations were very necessary to bring about an understanding between the several members of the Cabinet. The difference between the two programmes which I have adverted to was but slight. The programme very inappropriately described as that of the Right Center confined itself to stating in a general way that it was necessary to devise means to bring about municipal decentralization. That of the Left Center was more precise; it thought it necessary to detach from this broad measure a little special law extending the share of the suffrage in the appointment of mayors, to be passed without delay. It was well understood that in no case could the mayors be elected by the municipal councils (tres bien.) That was the first point of difference between the two programmes; the second was on a question which interests the Senate peculiarly. It referred to the transfer to the Corps Legislatif exclusively of the constituent power now vested exclusively in the Senate. On this point and on all other grave subjects the Government will not act without consulting the Legislature. A bill relative to the municipal question will be introduced. Now, gentlemen, you have heard what I have to say. I am sure you will not be a stumbling-block in our path, and I confidently appeal to your support."—N. Y. Tribune, Jan. 31st, 1890.

THE POPE AND THE COUNCIL.

It seems that the Ecumenical Council is likely to have an easy death. A cable despatch from Rome has it that the proceedings of the Council will be suspended about Easter and that the presumption is that the assemblage will then be dissolved. At the same time we hear of all manner of trouble in the Council. The Pope is finding on all hands the reverse of encouragement to the infallibility dogma. So bad have matters become that the latest effusion of the most popular bishop in France, M. Dupanloup, has been condemned by the Papal authorities. It is also said that the popular Father Geratry, superior of the Order of Oratoriens in Paris, is likely to be superseded because of a letter he has published on the Ecumenical Council. What adds to the gravity of the general situation is that the Holy Father is really sick—so sick that his death has been reported, although later reports have it that the end is not yet. The Council does indeed promise to be a grand failure. It will not be wonderful if it fails in its three-fold purpose—the Bodily Assumption, the Syllabus and Infallibility. Already the world is pretty fully convinced that an Ecumenical Council is an anachronism. If the Pope should die during the sitting of the Council what a flutter it would create!—N. Y. Herald.

FREQUENT PRAYER.—Bishop Taylor beautifully remarks:—"Prayer is the key to open the day, and the bolt to shut in the night. But as the clouds drop the early dew, and the evening dew upon the grass, yet it would not spring and grow green by that constant and double falling of the dew, unless some great shower, at certain seasons, did supply the rest; so that customary devotion of prayer, twice a day, is the falling of the early and latter dew; but if you will increase and flourish in works of grace, empty the great clouds sometimes, and let them fall in a full shower of prayer; choose out the seasons when prayer shall overflow, like Jordan in time of harvest."

Correspondence.

From Bro. G. A. Streeter.

BRO. GRANT:—I have this day visited the old burying-ground in Dorchester, and read from the tombstones of those who died in 1767. One little babe three years and seven months old had lain there sixty-five years. In looking over the several graves, I felt like crying out, as did the Savior at the tomb of Lazarus. I never felt the Spirit of the resurrection as then. The thought arose, "Can these bones live?" The answer came back with much force, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction; repentance shall be hid from mine eyes."—Hosea 13: 14. Yes, glory to God, the loved ones will come forth soon. "O hail, happy day."

I then turned away to the top of the hill, and there, fifty feet from the ground, I looked out from the top of the house, and viewed all "the landscape o'er." It was not the one the poet spoke of, but it was this old sinful earth. Those splendid mansions built by man are pleasing to the eye; but happiness comes not there. I cried to God. My whole being was stirred. I never wanted to see the Lord so much in my life. My mind instantly ran and leaped over the hills, and stopped in a humble cottage where dwelleth peace amid suffering. It was the place where the writer's loved ones are. Coming to my pilgrim home. Bro. E. Dennett's, I took up the Crisis, and my eyes rested on the lines from dear Bro. M. Batchelor. He says:

"Dear Brethren, strike for purity in the ministry, and purity in the church. Make the Lord's soon coming appear a fact." Amen, Bro. B. It is a fact, and shall be held up by me as a fact that is soon to be realized. How near we are. How signs do speak in the heavens and in the earth. Dear brethren, let us all be strong. I never felt the Spirit's power as now. O, to be all ready. How often I have said "good bye" to the dear ones at home, given and received the parting kiss, and said, Will Jesus come ere we meet again? "I hope so," would be the reply. The path is narrow, the road is straight; but, glory to God, I mean to enter into heaven's gate. Pray for me, dear Brn., that I may be faithful unto the end. May it come quickly. Thy Bro. in Christ, GEO. A. STREETER.

Boston Highlands, Jan. 22nd, 1870.

From Bro. W. A. Sheffield.

BRO. GRANT:—Eld. Smith preached on the 9th instant at our new church, at Suwannee Shoals; but owing to the inclemency of the weather, there were not more than thirty persons out to preaching. On the 15th inst. met the children at Oak Grove, at 11 o'clock A. M., and instructed them in the Bible truths, impressing on their minds forcibly the fifth commandment, and much other important instruction. In the afternoon, we intended to have a covenant meeting, and partake of the Lord's Supper; but owing to the absence of some of the officers, the covenant meeting was postponed two weeks. The Supper was then administered by Eld. Smith, and all appeared to discern in the elements the broken body and shed blood of Him whom we look for to come soon, clothed with power and glory, bringing our reward. All were melted to tears, and seemed to feel it was good to be there.

On the 16th, Bro. S. preached at 11 A. M. to an attentive congregation; and expects to preach on the 23d near Blount's Ferry, and on the first Sabbath in February at Jacksonville, and then return here and preach in new places, as his health and opportunity may offer. His health becoming improved, and being disappointed with regard to going up on Indian river, he has decided to preach in Jacksonville the first Sabbath in each month, and the balance of the time in this section of country, as his health and circumstances may permit. Bro. Smith is a live christian, a working christian, and a doer of the word, notwithstanding his physical infirmities. Few, very few, North or South, ever stop to enumerate one half that he has to contend with in a new field, where wickedness is increasing in high places and low places; far away from home and loved ones, yet surrounded by many to whom he has become endeared by preaching the glad tidings of good things to come. Yours in hope, W. A. SHEFFIELD.

Suwannee Shoals, Fla., Jan. 18th, '70.

From Bro. J. D. Sheridan.

BRO. GRANT:—My object in writing this time mostly, is to say Amen, just as loud as I can, to the article written by Bro. J. A. Cleaveland, on the subject of harsh and kind treatment of those of different creeds from ourselves. I believe the principle to be correct—"A person may catch more bees with honey than with vinegar." When I first embraced the blessed hope, I started out among my neighbors in full assurance that I could easily persuade others to embrace the same truths that seemed of such vital importance to me; not feeling myself competent to proclaim the good news that I had received in a public manner, that is, before a congregation of people.

I first tried to convince a young man, who was holding revival meetings in the place, who, I thought, was trying to do good; but I could make no impression on his mind. I afterwards tried to convince the clergy, by giving them tracts to read, and all the persuasive arguments that I could use, to cause them to renounce their errors, and preach the whole truth; but I have been met with nothing but sneers and scoffs. I must confess I felt somewhat disheartened with my lack of success, and I did have some hard thoughts towards them, and I have no doubt expressed some of them in words; but I have come to the conclusion that I was too unskilled to go into the vineyard with a knife, and I had better leave the work of trimming to older hands, and I would try and sow what seed I could in a careful way.

I am in a good and populous part of the country, but there is not a church or a preacher of our faith within fifty miles of this place. So you may judge I feel pretty much alone in this part of the country; yet I am not alone while I have my Bible and the Crisis to read. I have scattered a good many tracts, and tried to persuade men to get ready for the terrible and fast approaching events that await this generation; but, as yet, am not able to see any fruit of my labor. I have tried hard to get subscribers for the Crisis, but without success. I am confined to the house the most of the time this winter; have not been able to do any work for nearly a year. The Lord has seen fit to afflict me with sickness for a good many years, and I feel thankful to him for it. If he had not, I have no reason to believe that I should have been brought to the light of the glorious gospel of the kingdom.

I will say, by way of encouragement, to those who are trying to live to the honor and glory of God, by leaving off foolish, useless, and evil habits, that through your influence, Bro. Grant, I have not drank any tea or coffee since the first of last July, except one cup. I was an inveterate tea-drinker; a great lover of good food, and a good deal of it; and was in the habit of eating often. For the last three months, I have eaten but two meals a day; and although my health is not restored, neither is there much prospect that it ever will be, yet I do not suffer any in consequence from my two-meal diet of Graham and milk, without tea or coffee. I spent forty dollars last summer at St. Paul, Minn., with an eminent physician, who thought he could cure me; but without any benefit. I afterwards went to see Dr. C. Rice, of Ill., but he said he could not cure me. I have applied to the great Physician.

Brethren and sisters, pray for me, that I may endure to the end, and meet you in the celestial city, that is prepared for all those that believe in Jesus and love his appearing.

J. D. SHERIDAN.

Three Rivers, Mich., Jan. 28th, 1870.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear ones in Jesus:—My heart is sad today, and my eyes dim from weeping. The Lord has not forsaken me, but the perils of the last days are upon us; and I, for one, feel like striving to be ready to meet the Lord when he shall appear; and try, if possible, to persuade some one to go with me to the kingdom. O how sad this poor old world looks to me, as I cast my eyes over it, and but a small portion of it can I see either. God hasten the time when sorrows shall end, and Jesus come and reign. It fills my heart with joy and rejoicing to know we are almost in sight of land. He is coming; coming to gather his saints all home. O, shall I be there? Shall I hear the sweet sound, Child of sorrow, tears, and suffering, thy warfare is accomplished, and thy sufferings o'er; come and reign with me forevermore? Can I expect it? Can I hope for a crown of eternal beauty and glory? Can I even hope to be made immortal, to suffer no more, to weep no more? Can I hope for these things, and expect them? Yes, through the merits of Jesus, I'll enter the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, and be safe forevermore. Let us cheer up, for the day breaks o'er us. Pray for me. Thine for Jesus,

No. Dana, Mass. THERA B. WEAVER.

From Bro. I. Damman.

BRO. GRANT:—A few words for encouragement. The good work of God is going on in Holden, Me. A few weeks ago four started for the kingdom of God, and gave good evidence of their change. It was good to hear their sweet and heavenly testimonies. The most that started one year ago are holding on. It is blessed to hear them tell the story of the cross. We are hoping for more.

All those servants of Christ that wish to come to Corinna, and other portions of Maine, are requested to hold correspondence with the great Head of the church.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. J. RIDLEY writes from Prospect, Me., Jan. 26th, 1870:—"I love to read the letters of the dear brethren and sisters in 'our paper,' the Crisis, concerning their pilgrimage to the 'celestial city.' Truly they are cheering to their fellow travelers; and, as our Captain has left us orders that as 'ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them,' I will let them know how I am faring on the journey. I believe I am on the right road, for I feel the Holy Spirit is guiding me, and the word of the Lord is 'a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.' I have been scattering tracts and preaching the gospel in Penobscot, Me., this fall and winter, and the Lord has blessed my labors. The Methodist meeting-house was opened by the society, when I went there, as they did not have preaching only part of the time; but soon their preachers began to stir up their minds against the truths proclaimed, calling them 'absurdities,' and the house was locked up by one of the preachers. But thanks be to God, the truth is mighty and will prevail. There is a good school-house, and plenty of private houses open for the Lord's children. More than half of those belonging to the Methodists have come out on the side of truth, and many of them have confessed that they have learned more about the Bible in a few months past than ever before, and backsliders are being reclaimed. One man who had not been to meeting for five years, came out to hear, and has now started anew for the kingdom, and others have resolved to be the Lord's. O praise the Lord, for the praise belongeth unto him. If any of our preaching brethren should feel disposed to go down there, they would be gladly received. They feel that they need help.

My health is quite poor now. I had a bad cold upon my lungs, and preaching and singing strained them so that they have been bleeding, but I hope to be out again soon. Will the brethren and sisters pray for me? The prayer of faith shall save the sick! O what precious promises the Lord has given us. Cheer up, faint-hearted one; in a little while we shall all be gathered home."

SR. E. LEWIS writes from Chicago, Jan. 15th:—"Thinking that you would be glad to hear how we are getting along here in Chicago, I thought I would write a few lines to tell you that we are getting along well. The Lord is blessing us continually. Bro. Ramsey baptized four happy souls last Sabbath, and the prayer and conference meetings are well attended, and full of the Spirit of the Lord. There is a great interest awakened on the north and south sides of the city. There are a great many in the churches getting their eyes opened to see the truth there is in God's word, and turning their ears away from the fables that are being preached in these last days. There are some earnest workers here, and would to God there were more; for I feel we are not half awake to the great responsibility that rests upon us, who believe in the soon coming of the Lord to reward the righteous and punish the wicked."

DR. WM. LEASK, Editor of the Rainbow, London, writes, Jan. 6th, 1870:—"It is well for us that we have such a Master,—so patient, gracious, and tender. Especially do we prize his dealings with us when we are exposed to reproach for his sake. I speak emphatically on this subject. The bitter and unjust things that are said of me in some of our 'religious' papers, by men whose christianity I cannot doubt, are very painful; but I make it a point of duty to reply to none of them; knowing that when the Lord was reviled, he reviled not again. It is enough for the servant that he be as his Lord. My premillennial teachings have exposed me to coldness for many years; but since I began to teach the non-immortality of the creature, fierce anger has broken out, and efforts are being made to extinguish the Rainbow, which some men of the world brand as disgraceful.

All this time, however, what is my personal experience? Calmness, peace, and a consciousness of the love of Christ, surpassing anything that I enjoyed before. This is the fact. The LORD shall have the glory."

BRO. C. C. RAMSAY writes from New Hartford, Iowa, Jan. 25th, 1870:—"I am at present engaged in holding a protracted meeting with Bro. Deyo, in the town of Fairfield, Grundy Co., Iowa. Arrived here one week ago last Friday, and we at once commenced work. The Lord has blessed our labors, and many are turning to the Savior. Backsliders are being reclaimed, sinners converted, and the church revived. On Sunday, Jan. 16th, we dedicated the new church."

BRO. I. K. LOMBARD writes:—"As I am not yet located, and shall not decide where I shall stop permanently for a couple of months or so, I hereby would inform those who would write to me concerning my hymn books, or Admonitions, or on any other matter, that they can address me at Machiasport, Maine, until March 20th. I shall have a supply of hymn books and Admonitions with me there."

BRO. C. O. CHAMBERLAIN writes from Portland, Me., Jan. 28th, 1870:—"I have felt many times to thank God for the dear Crisis, coming, as it does, full of encouragement, and shedding light on divine truth; and that, through the providence of God, I was permitted to read it, and my eyes were opened to read, understand, and believe God's word as it is written."

RICHES.

A SERMON BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Mr. Beecher preached to an unusually large congregation from the text, "But when the young man heard that, he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions." It is impossible to understand this passage without solving a profound question in mental philosophy. The young man was amiable, but he stood on his riches, and when he was to decide between spiritual attainments and earthly possessions, he chose the latter. He meant to have more than riches, but they had greater importance in his eyes than anything of a spiritual nature. He doubtless had a longing for the higher virtues; still, it was not his controling feeling. He wanted to have religion in addition to his wealth. This is what men are striving for to-day. Christ said that this was impossible when He declared that no man can serve God and Mammon. The divine nature must rule supreme or not at all. All men have dominant points, and everything else in their nature has to come into subjection to it. A benevolent center is quite consistent with some shades of pride. A man may be very benevolent, and yet live below the line of selfishness. The tyranny is there yet, though the sceptre is wreathed with flowers. Selfishness may weave a beautiful web around the affections, but it is still there, like a spider in a flower. On the other hand, spirituality may be spotted and still predominate. The nature of things is not altered by external causes. Morality is good as far as it goes. So is a grape-vine two feet high; but it was made to blossom and bear fruit, and nothing short of this will answer the purpose for which it was designed. It is better for a person to be refinedly selfish than grossly selfish; not for himself, but for society. Too often, however, it makes him satisfied with his wrong-doing. Nothing can make a man really better until the dominant part of his nature is changed. Even heaven has no room for selfishness. Mere polish and exterior refinement is not true religion; there must be a fundamental change. A man can soon tell what is the controling element in his character. True benevolence must be the law of all action. The Greek nature never ascends higher than the pleasures of the flesh. This is the sensuous life in the most respectable form, and the whole center of the soul's purpose is self-seeking. Christ says that this shall never lift a man to heaven.

The speaker believed that a rich man might enter the higher life, by the help of God; for with God all things are possible. Wealth should become a mighty factor of righteousness. God demands that the center of a man's life shall be spiritual. Mr. Beecher, speaking of the selfish disposition often manifested in men of talent, said that selfishness in persons of genius is hurtful and wrong. Selfishness can build a nest in the intellect as well as in the passions. One may have many virtues and reside in a realm of beauty, and still be governed by selfish motives. It is by the Holy Ghost that we are to be enfranchised. Then we shall be no longer strangers in a foreign land. May God by the power of the Holy Spirit so bring this love to us that the secret of life will be what we give—not what we receive.—New York Tribune, Jan. 31th, 1870.

Obituaries.

ROBINSON. After a long and severe sickness, which he endured with great patience, Bro. David Robinson, of Richmond, Me., fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 11th, 1870, aged seventy years, eight months.

Bro. Robinson was truly a kind and affectionate husband and father, a faithful servant of the Lord, and an honored and true friend to all. Peacefully he sleepeth beside other dear ones, awaiting the dawn of that blessed day when "mortality shall be swallowed up of life."

"Farewell, brother, soon we'll meet thee
"In our happy Eden home."

R. R. YORK.

PARKER. Died, in Bartlett, N. H., Jan. 16th, 1870, Bro. Samuel Parker, aged forty-seven.

Bro. Parker is the first of the little company in Bartlett, as the fruits of the reformation, to yield to the enemy—death. He had formerly professed to be a christian, but had wandered from Christ. When the interest commenced here, he made a new start, and became deeply interested in the truth. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18,—"Wherefore comfort one another with these words." We tried to preach Jesus and the resurrection. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

STEELE. Died, in the town of Sodas, Wayne Co., N. Y., Jan. 25th, 1870, Bro. Steele, aged forty-seven years.

He embraced the faith under the preaching of Bro. H. L. Hastings, five years ago. He has stood like the lofty oak in the open field. All the winds and storms of persecution could not move him. He had taken deep root in the promises of God. He chose his own text,—Job 14: 13, 14, 15. He died in the full triumphs of faith, praising God with the last breath. He sleeps in Jesus. The funeral was held in the Baptist house. A large audience assembled, and gave the best attention to the word spoken. The Baptist minister assisted in the service. M. R. MILES.

WHEELER. Died, at Cabot, Vt., Jan. 19th, of that distressing disease, bronchitis, Gardner Wheeler, aged sixty-three years, eight months, and two days.

My brother is dead. His "life is hid with Christ in God." Bro. G. embraced the Advent faith in 1842, and has ever since been a zealous advocate of literal Bible truth. He selected Rev. 21: 4, as a funeral text, from which Bro. Jerome Bailey, of Woodbury, preached a very comforting discourse.

[A. C. Times, please copy. N. WHEELER.

EGGLESTON. Died, at Rocky Brook, R. I., Jan. 18th, 1870, Bro. George W. Eggleston, aged fifty-seven years, four months, and twelve days.

The piety of our brother was not of a noisy, officious type, but partook more of the reticent, yet powerful and convincing evidences of good works, with a humble reliance on the grace of God for salvation. His house has been for many years the home of the toil-worn and weary messengers of the gospel. Funeral services in the Rocky Brook chapel, by the writer. A. DURFEE.

DIXON. Died, in South Eliot, Me., Jan. 12th, Bro. Charles W. Dixon, aged forty-seven years.

Bro. Dixon lived an earnest, faithful christian, and died in the Lord. With the praise of God on his lips he fell asleep in Jesus, to be satisfied when he shall awake with his likeness. We have met with a loss, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope. The writer spoke at the funeral, from Rev. 14: 13. GEO. W. BROWN.

SMITH. Died, of quick consumption, at North Port, Long Island, Aug. 15th, 1869, Sarah E., wife of John C. Smith, aged thirty-two years, nine months, twenty-six days.

She sleeps in Jesus. She has been a lover of Christ some twelve years. She died with the blessed hope of soon living again. J. C. SMITH.

STOWELL. Died, in Granby, Jan. 27th, 1870, of typhoid fever, Carrie Estella, daughter of Bro. Lewis and Sr. Elizabeth D. Stowell, aged twenty-one years and six months.

Her young friends half filled her grave with flowers and evergreens, and we left her sweetly sleeping, to await the morn of the resurrection. She could sweetly sing—

"We shall sleep, but not forever;
There will be a glorious dawn."

E. D. STOWELL.

JOHNSON. Died, in Warner, N. H., Jan. 16th, 1870, Charles H., son of Henry and Mary G. Johnson, aged twenty-one years and eight days.

Pray for our afflicted brother and sister. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

D. W. DAVIS.

CLARK. Died, in Strafford, N. H., Jan. 20th, 1870, Sister Polly Clark, aged seventy-eight.

Sister Clark sleeps in Jesus, to awake and meet with the redeemed at the coming of the Lord. Sermon by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13.

J. PINKHAM.

BROWN. Died, in South Eliot, Me., Jan. 29th, 1870, my brother, John S. Brown, aged forty-three years.

F. H. Burbank preached the funeral discourse, from Mark 13: 27. May God sanctify the event to us all. GEO. W. BROWN.

Married.

SWETT—STAPLES. In Carthage, Me., Jan. 23d, 1870, by Elder E. M. Haggett, JOHN S. SWETT and Miss M. ADELE STAPLES, both of Carthage, Me.

HEATH—CHASE. In Lynn, Feb. 1st, 1870, by Elder T. M. Preble, Mr. EZRA HEATH and Mrs. JESSIE CHASE, both of Lynn.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, Jan. 31. Letters from Rome say that Dr. Dollinger's protest against the declaration of the dogma of Papal infallibility provokes much excitement and indignation at the Vatican.

A telegram from Rome to-day states that the Pope refuses to receive an address signed by one hundred and thirty-seven bishops, also protesting against the declaration of that dogma.

BERLIN, Feb. 2. The Faculty of the University of Breslau have congratulated Dr. Dollinger on his opposition to the declaration of Papal infallibility.

ROME, Feb. 2. Since the assembling of the Council seven of its members have died and four have left the city.

The Pope has forced the Chaldean Patriarch to sign a recantation of his speech against centralization, under threat of the withdrawal of the special privilege of independence from Roman jurisdiction now enjoyed by the Chaldean Church. Eminent Bishops of the Church have taken the matter up.

Feb. 4. Another public congregation of the Ecumenical Council was held to day. The Archbishop of Smyrna celebrated mass. The death of the Bishop of Levida was announced.

An official statement, just published, shows that the Ecumenical Council now consists exactly of seven hundred and sixty members.

LONDON, Feb. 4. Dispatches received to-day from India, by the overland line, confirm the previous announcement of the arrival of the steamship Great Eastern at Bombay. She will soon commence the work of laying a cable to the mouth of the Red Sea.

The Suez canal is already in use by merchantmen, and is used with admiration as well as satisfaction by all. Englishmen have been the first to take advantage of it. Vessels have been built on models especially adapted to the navigation of the new route to the East.

ROME, Feb. 5. The Civita Cattolica has a remarkable article entitled "Des mauvais politiques et le concile." After referring to the menaces against the Ecumenical Council for establishing decrees contrary to modern ideas, it says: "The Bishops despise menaces. If governments make laws at variance with the decrees of the Council, the subject will not be held to observe them, and to exact obedience to such laws would be odious tyranny. If governments separate the Church from the State, they must expect terrible revolutions to overthrow them. France alone has been true to the concordat, and the Council will bear this in mind."

DOMESTIC.

THE POPE IN HIS DOTAGE.—A correspondent, writing under a recent date from the "Eternal City," says that Pio Nono has become possessed of the idea that all the world is coming back to Rome. Whenever English converts appear and do obeisance to him he regards it as the forerunner of the return of all England to the ancient faith. So the few Americans who regard him as the legitimate successor of St. Peter are representatives in his feeble mind of the American people. Of what is actually going on in the world he knows little, and his chief advisers take care that he shall not be disturbed in his self-delusion.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH COMMERCIAL TREATY—FREE TRADE OR PROTECTION.—The announcement by cable telegram that Lord Clarendon has personally visited Paris relative to the renewal or obliteration of the Anglo-French treaty of commerce after its expiration on the 4th of February, conveys matter of great import to the trade of the world as well as to the future relations of the two great countries of the Old World. In it we have the secret of the dangerous industrial agitation and trade "strikes" which have just alarmed France as also the ground of the charge made by President Scheider in the French Legislative body to the effect "that Englishmen had fomented the strike troubles" at his works at La Creusot.

Ninety-two Deputies of the French Legislature are pledged against its renewal, and have already prepared an act of "denunciation."

THE TREATY.

Looking at the treaty signed by Queen Victoria and the Emperor Napoleon III., at Paris, January 23, 1860, we find the article which provided for the non-renewal of the contract. It runs thus:—

ARTICLE 21. The present treaty shall remain in force for the space of ten years, to date from the day of the exchange of ratifications; and in case neither of the high contracting Powers shall have notified to the other twelve months before the expiration of the said period of ten years the intention to put an end to its operation, the treaty shall continue in force for another year, and so on from year to year, until the expiration of a year, counting from the day on which one or the other of the high contracting Powers shall have announced its intention to put an end to it. The high contracting Powers shall reserve to themselves the right to introduce by common consent into this treaty any modification which is not opposed to its spirit and principles, and the utility of which shall have been shown by experience.

The exchange of ratification of the treaty took place on the 4th of February, 1860.

THE POLYGAMY QUESTION.—Mr. Cullom's bill to abolish polygamy in Utah has been completed by his committee, and will be reported to the House when the committee is regularly called for reports.

It provides that the President shall enforce its terms by the use of troops, if necessary, and the calling out of twenty-five thousand volunteers among the citizens of Utah. The bill will probably pass the House, and then the question becomes one of most serious interest.

THROUGH TICKETS ROUND THE WORLD.—The general passenger agent of the Erie railroad Company has sent us a neat string of coupon "Through tickets, from Boston round the world," as suggestive of what may soon become a real and general arrangement. The Pacific Road, with the railroad system of East Indea and the Suez Canal, form an unbroken line of travel by first class coaches and steamers around the entire circumference of the globe; and we may soon hear the cry at all our depots, "Baggage checked to Hong Kong, Calcutta, Bombay and only two changes to Shanghai." This fore-runner ticket reads, Boston to New York, nine hours. New York to Buffalo or Cleveland, 625 miles, twenty-four hours. Cleveland to Chicago, 355 miles, fourteen hours. Chicago to Omaha, 490 miles, twenty-three hours. Omaha to San Francisco, 1960 miles, ninety-three hours. San Francisco to Yokohama, 4714 miles, twenty-one days. Yokohama to Hong Kong, 1670 miles, six days. Hong Kong to Calcutta, 3500 miles, fourteen days. Calcutta to Bombay, 1230 miles, two days. Bombay to Cairo, 3600 miles, twelve days. Cairo to Alexandria, 100 miles, five hours. Alexandria to Marseilles, 1800 miles, six days. Marseilles to Havre, 575 miles, thirty hours. Havre to Boston, 3150 miles, nine days.

Here is a picture showing a little of the wonders of the period to which we have come.—Boston Daily News.

CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.—A wonderful spectacle was observed in Germany on the night of the 1st of January. At Meritz, from midnight to one o'clock, the entire northern sky presented the appearance of a sea of fire, from which fell a constant and dense shower of many colored sparks. The immense sheet of surging flame finally took the form of a fiery arch, from which the brilliant rain continued to descend till the whole waxed gradually fainter and disappeared.—Boston Journal.

REVOLUTION PREDICTED IN RUSSIA.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Posen Gazette tells a curious story, which, he says, is now current in the Russian Court, apropos of the newly discovered Socialist conspiracy. Last Autumn, during the stay of the Imperial family at Livadia, an aide-de-camp of the Emperor's suite one day found in his coat pocket an anonymous pamphlet, in which a striking parallel is drawn between the present state of Russia and that of France before the Revolution. The Government of Nicholas is compared with that of Louis XIV., and the rule of Alexander II. with that of Louis XV., the fate of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette being foretold for the present Czarewitch and the Princess Dagmar, who is accused of frivolity, arrogance, and love of dress. The anonymous writer concludes as follows: The Russian Revolution will be far more bloody and terrible than that of France in 1789, for the despotism of the Czars is harder than that of the French Kings, and Russian society far exceeds that of France in immorality, brutality, and ignorance." This pamphlet was given by the aide-de-camp to a lady of the Court, who showed it to the Emperor and Empress. The latter, on reading it, was thrown into a paroxysm of fear; she went immediately to the Princess Dagmar, and after reproaching her with her love of finery and want of devotion, implored her to alter her mode of life; as otherwise she was sure the words of the pamphlet would come true, and both the Princess and her husband would perish on the scaffold. On hearing these reproaches the Princess Dagmar burst into tears, and complained to the Czarewitch. The consequence was that both of them left Livadia a few hours after. Since this family scene, adds the correspondent, the Empress has often had long fits of depression, and passes most of her time in the society of the well-known devote, Countess Bludoff.

WORKING WOMEN IN AUSTRIA.—Women in Austria perform the duties of bricklayers' laborers, and may be seen carrying hods of mortar and baskets of bricks up high ladders. More than this, they actually supply the place of navvies, and dig and wheel barrows of "ballast" almost as nimbly as their lords. They chop wood, they carry water, they offer to black your boots in the street, and perform many other little offices which, according to our notions, hardly come under the denomination of "woman's work." Perhaps this state of things is unavoidable in a country where it is considered necessary so keep a standing army of 80,000 men! The women work inordinately hard, while hundreds of idle men are constantly sauntering about in various uniforms, doing nothing at all, except, perhaps, blowing a cloud of bad tobacco smoke.

Religious Items.

☞ A site has at last been given to Americans in Jerusalem for a Protestant church.

☞ Rev. Dr. Anderson, a Catholic priest, in a lecture recently delivered in St. Louis, stated that that city was the Rome of the West, Catholicism being the prevailing religion.

☞ Revivalists are discouraged at the situation in Massachusetts, and declare that everything is going to the bad there—no warm religious spirit being manifested.

☞ Second Adventists believe that Christ is coming in person again, and very soon. A Michigan exchange says that a newly organized society of this denomination, in Meridian, Ingham County, has refused the donation of a site for their meeting house, because the donator restricted the limits of the deed to ninety-nine years.

☞ The last New York Advocate makes mention of over 640 recent conversions in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

☞ Rev. Dr. Cuyler says many of the New York city churches are "dying of dignity."

☞ In a Methodist meeting in Boston a preacher said that if he must preach endless punishment, he would "lay it on softly."

☞ The interest in Mt. Bellingham Church, Chelsea, is on the increase. More than three hundred have professed conversion. Mrs. Van Coit is still laboring there.

Passing Events.

☞ There are twenty-three short-hand writers in attendance on the Ecumenical Council, eight Italians, four Frenchmen, as many Germans, five Englishmen, and two Americans. They are all priests, and have taken an oath to keep the debates and proceedings secret.

☞ A disease something like the hay cholera is affecting swine in the surburban towns. A business man of this city has lost animals of the value of $800, on his place in the town of Burlington, within a few days.

☞ Kossuth is so poor that he has to live principally on bread and coffee.

☞ The Pope, during a visit to the American College, spoke in high terms of the United States.

☞ Ex-Head Centre Stephens is reported to be dangerously ill in Paris, and in very destitute circumstances.

☞ Victor Noir was buried without religious ceremony, but some of his friends clubbed together to pay masses for the repose of his soul.

☞ The confusion of tongues is so great in the council at Rome that the fathers have been divided into groups according to their nationalities, to discuss important matters separately in their native languages. They then each choose two men to discuss the affirmative and negative before the council.

☞ The Mormon schism is rapidly on the increase. There are over two thousand apostates now in Utah. They intend publishing a daily paper, and promise to make rich and startling developments.

☞ Thirty-eight thousand men have been discharged from the various navy yards of the United States.

☞ The Roman Catholic Bishop of Pittsburgh has threatened to excommunicate all parents who allow their children to attend the public schools.

☞ New York detectives have discovered a stupendous scheme of fraud involving prominent individuals, and extending to the principal cities of the country. The plan was to alter bonds to the apparent value of several millions, and deposit them as collaterals for heavy loans to be obtained simultaneously in New York, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati and other cities. One or two brokerage houses in each city were to negotiate the loans for thirty days, and then close the business and leave the country before the fraud could be discovered.

☞ The fruit trees around Raleigh, N. C., are in bloom.

☞ The sales of two dry goods houses in Chicago for the year 1869 are reported at $12,000,000 and $10,000,000 respectively.

☞ New York spends three times as much money for liquor as for bread.

☞ California doctors say that the sea breeze on the Pacific coast precludes that frightful infantile mortality from enteric diseases, which always come with the heat of summer in the Atlantic cities.

☞ Boston has spent twelve millions in building during the past year, or at the rate of a million a month.

☞ The rumor that Marshal Canrobert said that if the Paris rioters killed one of his soldiers he knew how to destroy 40,000 men in five minutes, has been proved untrue. But great numbers think that Napoleon would blow up the city in an emergency.

☞ The Tiber has left its bed twice to inundate Rome since the Ecumenical Council has been in session, and a third overflow is anticipated.

☞ Disarmament of Europe is once more rumored as certain for the opening spring. The Emperor of Russia is said to be favorable to it.

☞ It is said that probably the oldest house in the United States is in Brooklyn, N. Y., near Greenwood Cemetery, with the date 1666 in wrought iron figures, forming the anchor heads on the outside. It is a brick building, built of bricks brought from Holland, and laid up with mortar probably made of shell lime. The gables are without coping, yet the mortar joints, exposed to the weather two hundred years, are still intact.

☞ Fashionable dressmakers now-a-days require thirty yards of black silk to make what they call "a full short dress." The charge for making varies from fifty to one hundred dollars.

— Small steps lead men often best to the top of high hills.

Notices.

Bro. Hook's Tent.

Bro. Wilfong, of Philadelphia, was brought to Christ through the instrumentality of Bro. J. G. Hook, about two years ago. Before his conversion, he was "a servant of sin" indeed; but for two years has been "a servant of Christ" indeed. He wishes to procure for Bro. H. a tent, as a thank-offering for what the Lord has done for him, and is doing what he can himself for that object; but he needs assistance, and I am authorized to receive contributions from any one I meet in my travels, who may wish to lend a helping hand in the matter. The tent is to be owned by Bro. H., and used as a traveling Bethel, in which perishing sinners may be won to Christ.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. SMITH.

Protracted Meeting.

We shall commence a protracted meeting at Northville, in the town of Newport, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 20th, and probably hold it every evening through the week, and as much longer as duty calls. We heartily and cordially invite all who love God, of every name or order, to come and labor with us for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the comforting and perfecting of the saints. E. COTTON.

Michigan Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the eastern district of Michigan will be held at the school-house, at Baker's Corner's, Berlin, St. Clair Co., commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, and continuing over Lord's day. Those coming by R. R. will connect at Ridgeway, on the Grand Trunk R. R. with the Mich. Air Line R. R. for Armada Station, where teams will be in attendance to convey friends to Baker's Corners.

JOHN M. SNOOK.

Notice.

A protracted meeting at Manchester, N. H., is appointed to commence Sunday, Feb. 6th, and probably to continue every evening through the week. We cordially and heartily invite all of God's children, of whatever name or order, to come and labor for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, the comforting and perfecting of the saints. Come with the love of God burning in your hearts, and work in this glorious cause. E. COTTON.

Notice.

The second quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord willing, at Loudon Ridge, to commence Thursday, Feb. 24th, at ten o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to attend. May the Lord greatly bless. T. W. PIPER.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. LANG.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broom Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Feb. 11th, and continue over the Sabbath following. A general invitation is extended to all. By order of the church.

J. W. TAYLOR.

Acknowledgements.

I gratefully acknowledge the receipt of the following timely aid: Sr. Eliza Ide, Ramway, N. J., $10.00. Eld. B. P. Stevens, South Butler, N. Y., $5.00. $2.00 from friends, by the hand of Bro. William Morrell, New London, N. Y. Four barrels of vegetables, from friends of South Butler, N. Y. Also, one barrel of apples from Bro. D. Otis, North Wolcott, N. Y. MRS. C. B. TURNER.

Syracuse, Feb. 2d, 1870.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. WHITEHEAD, West Meriden, Conn., Box. 4.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for Loudon Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with N. MCCULLOCK, 4 Eagle Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in South Berwick (Great Works), Me., will please correspond with Bro. Harrison Dow, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Vernon, Vt., will please correspond with J. C. Allen.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SHOW, 1215 Markham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hecock.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with JOSEPH CURTISS.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.
Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.
Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 32 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.
A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $1.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.
BY WELLCOME AND COUCH.
A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work received great commendation. Third edition. 400 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.
A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. 140 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, corner of CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Minot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
L. Boutell........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. Simpson........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. Munger........Sunday, Feb. 27th

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
Geo. A. Streeter........Sunday, Feb. 20th
J. S. White........Sunday, March 6th

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
A. Simpson........Sunday, Feb. 13th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
M. Batchelor........Sunday, Feb. 13th
H. Munger........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
S. S. Brewer........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Couch........Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell........Sunday, March 13th
J. S. White........Sunday, March 20th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.
S. W. Thurber......Sundays, Feb. 13th, 20th and 27th

Exeter, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Fayville, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
C. GOODRICH.

Athol, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
L. BOUTELL.

Lowell, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Loudon Ridge, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN COUCH.

Lawrence, Mass........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th
S. S. BREWER.

Webster, Mass........Thursday evening, Feb. 17th
Worcester, Mass........Friday evening, Feb. 18th
Chelsea........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Boston, (Lowell Street)........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Between the two Sabbaths at liberty.
H. MUNGER.

Brimfield, Mass........Sabbath, March 6th
RUFUS BAKER.

Worcester, Mass........Friday, Feb. 12th
New Bedford, Mass........Feb. 13th to 26th
Providence, R. I........March 6th to 10th
Anthony, R. I........March 11th to 14th
New Britain, Conn........March 15th to 25th
F. H. BURBANK.

New Bedford, Mass......Tuesday evening, Feb. 15th
Acushnet........evening, Feb. 17th
Fairhaven, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

North Adams, Mass........Wed. evening Feb. 9th
Savoy, Mass........Thurs. eve., Feb. 10th
North Adams........Friday evening, Feb. 11th
If these appointments should conflict with others, will the Brn. please inform me immediately?
Z. DUBOIS BAIRD.

Great Falls, N. H........evening, Feb. 15th
Dover, N. H........evening, Feb. 16th
Great Works, South Berwick, Me....evening, Feb. 17th
Hampton, N. H........evening, Feb. 18th
D. M. LEAVITT.
JOHN C. SHOREY.

East Rochester, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Raccoonborough, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Rochester Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN & JANE DAVIS.

Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house), Sun., Feb. 13th
C. H. FLETCHER.

Great Falls, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Manchester, N. H........evenings, Feb. 25th and 26th and Sunday, the 27th.
East Rochester, N. H........Sunday, March 6th
WM. C. STEWART.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House), Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th.
JOHN H. EVANS.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House), evening, Feb. 24th and over the Sabbath.
D. M. LEAVITT.
JOHN H. EVANS.

New Durham, N. H., (second division)......Feb. 13th
C. H. WILLEY.
J. T. LIBBY.

Limerick, (Tuft's neighborhood)...Sunday, Feb. 20th
B. S. EMERY.

Warren, N. H., (as Brn. may arrange), Feb. 15th and 16th.
North Haverhill, N. H., (Brick Church) Sun., Feb. 17th
Lake Village, N. H........Feb. 18th
A. ROSS.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)......evening, Feb. 9th and over the following Sabbath.
WM. C. STEWART.

Seabrook, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Lake Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
C. W. SARGENT.

Lake Village, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
A. A. HOYT.

Goshen, N. H., (where Brn. may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 13th, and through the week.
Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house)......Feb. 20th
Z. T. WOOD.

Lake Village, N. H........Sabbath, Jan. 30th
Manchester, N. H........Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th
Webster, N. H., (Methodist meeting-house), Sabbath, Feb. 13th.
Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Feb. 20th
SIMEON ROBY.

South Sangerville........Feb. 11th to 13th
South Atkinson........Feb. 14th to 16th
Emerson's Mills........Feb. 16th
Machiasport......Feb. 20th, and onward indefinitely.
I. K. LOMBARD.
As I cannot sell my team, I have given up the idea of going west. I. K. L.

Reed meeting-house........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Sabbattusville........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. S. MITCHELL.

Bridgeport, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
G. L. TEEPLE.

Manchester, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
S. S. MOONEY.

Guilford, (Pond school-house, near Davis' Bridge), Feb. 10th and 11th.
Center Harbor, (where Bro. Emery may appoint) evening, Feb. 12th, and over Sunday.
Holderness, (Brick school-house....Feb. 15th and 16th
Lake Village, N. H., (North Church)........Feb. 17th
Meredith Village, where Bro. Lang may appoint, Feb. 18th.
Meredith Centre, Dolliff school-house........Feb. 19th and Sunday.
J. L. CHUTE.

Suncook, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. RICHARDSON.

Farmington Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Alton Corner........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. M. BRYANT.

Watter Village, Ossipee........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Porter Village, Me........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Melvin Village........Sunday, Feb. 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Bristol, Ct......Wednesday evening, Feb. 16th
Plainville........Friday evening, Feb. 18th
Southington, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
New Britain........Tuesday evening, Feb. 22d
Westfield, Mass......Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d
Danielsonville........Friday evening, Feb. 25th and the following Sunday, the 27th.
Bridgeport........Tuesday evening, March 1st
ANNA E. SMITH.

North Springfield, Vt........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Bridgewater, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Plymouth, (Union Hall)......evenings, Feb. 22d and 23d
North Springfield, Vt......Sundays, March 6th and 13th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Vernon, Vt........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Scitico, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 27th
A. M. HIGGINS.

North Hyde Park, Vt., (where Bro. Lathrop may appoint), Friday evening, Feb. 18th, and over the following Sabbath.
Whitefield, N. H., Feb. 26th, and during the week following, and will preach, if the brethren wish to have me, evenings and on Sabbath, if they are not supplied.
J. A. CLEAVELAND.

South Vernon, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Will Bro. Marrill meet me at the depot, Feb. 18th?
GEO. W. BROWN.

Warren Village, (as Bro. Kyes may arrange), evening, Feb. 17th.
Cabot, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Groton, Vt........evening, March 3d through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
North Haverhill, N. H., (as the Brn. arrange), evening, March 9th.
Piermont, N. H., (Town House), evening, March 12th and over the Sabbath, March 13th.
Porter Village, Me......Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
T. E. LANG, JR.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall)......Sunday, Feb. 13th
J. T. DIXON.

New York City, (24th Street)........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Cheshire Street, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

Woodstock Valley, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
P. S. BUTLER.

Nevada, Ohio........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
E. MCCULLOCH.

East Montpelier, Vt., (where Bro. E. E. Morse may appoint), evening, Feb. 15th, and over the Sabbath.
J. A. CLEAVELAND.

New Dover, N. H., (school-house, at the junction of Concord, Loudon and Chichester), Sunday, Feb. 13th. Communion at the close of the afternoon meeting.
JOHN G. HOOK.

☞ I hope to see many of God's dear children at this meeting, as the 13th is my 58th birthday; was born near this place, and twenty-seven years ago commenced preaching just opposite. J. G. H.

Brimfield, Mass........Sabbath, Feb. 13th and continue till Thursday evening.
Bristol, Vt........Sabbath, Feb. 20th and onward until Friday evening.
Addison, Vt., Sabbath, Feb. 27th, and continue through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
T. M. PREBLE.

Waterbury, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Tylerville........evening, Feb. 25th
Chester........evening, Feb. 26th
East Haddam........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
G. L. WHITE.

Scitico, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Warehousepoint........Sunday, Feb. 27th
H. H. DICKINSON.

Kennebunk Depot, Me...evenings, Feb. 10th and 11th
Dover, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Wadley's Falls, N. H...evenings, Feb. 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th.
Exeter, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
ALLEN DAMON.
Those wishing to correspond with me, please write to the place of first appointment. A. D.

South Berwick, Great Works......evening, Feb. 12th and over the Sabbath.
S. HAWKINS.

Starks, Me........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
E. M. HAGGETT.

Mechanic Falls, Me........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Lewiston........Sunday, Feb. 20th
JARED WHITMAN.

Bolton, P. Q. (Page neighborhood), evening, Feb. 12th and over the following Sabbath.
Wayville, Barnston, P. Q., evenings, Feb. 16th, 17th, and 18th.
A full attendance is solicited. CHAS. P. DOW.

point), Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, and over Sunday, the 13th.
J. PINKHAM.

Middlebury, Pa........Feb. 20th
Lyon's District, Steuben Co., N. Y., Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d.
Merchantville, N. Y., Feb. 24th, and over the following Sabbath.
J. W. TAYLOR.

Pittsburgh, Pa........Sunday, Feb. 13th and remain there as long as it shall seem to be duty.
J. WENDELL.

Providence, R. I........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Hartford, (Talcott and Post's Hall), Sunday, Feb. 20th
W. N. PILE.

North Canton, Conn........Sunday, Feb. 13th
S. C. HANCOCK.

Warehouse Point, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. M. HIGGINS.

Campton's Corners, (four miles from Edenboro, Pa.), Monday evening, Feb. 14th. Subject, (by request), "the Devil."
Sharps' Corners, Erie Co., Pa., (Methodist church), Feb. 15th and 16th.
Cohocton........Feb. 19th and 20th
C. F. SWEET.

Charlton, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Brimfield, Mass........evening, Feb. 14th
Holden, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 27th
River Point, R. I........Sunday, March 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

North Somers, Ct........evening, Feb. 11th
South Windsor, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Wallingford, Ct........evening, Feb. 15th
Yalesville, Ct........evening, Feb. 16th
Cheshire Street, Ct........evening, Feb. 17th
Bristol, Ct........evening, Feb. 22d
Collinsville, Ct........evenings, Feb. 23d and 24th
Pleasant Valley, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Wrightville, Ct........Sabbath, March 6th
C. H. SWEET.

Lynn, Mass........Sunday, March 6th
Preach and break bread. M. BATCHELOR.

Warner, N. H., (Wm. G. Flanders'), Sabbath, Feb. 13th
D. W. DAVIS.

Collinsville, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th to commence a series of protracted meetings.
H. K. FLAGG.

Warehousepoint, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
S. W. BISHOP.

East Haddam, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Prospect, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
S. WOODRUFF.

Keene, N. H........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th
Lynn, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. SMITH.

Canaan (Chase school-house), Sunday, Feb. 13th, to commence a series of meetings. Those who love to labor for souls, are invited to come and help.
South Holden (days)........Feb. 26th and 27th
Emerson's Mill, Levant........evening, Feb. 24th
Levantville........evening, Feb. 25th
ISRAEL DAMAN.

Hungerford school-house, south of Byersville, Sunday evening, Feb. 13th. D. COGSWELL.

Worcester, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Westfield, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Woodstock Valley, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 27th
L. B. POTTER.

Meredith Neck, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff school-house)......Feb. 20th
N. GLIDDEN.

Kennebunk Depot........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Blue Point Scarborough, Me........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Hollis Centre, Me........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
T. P. S. HAMPSON.

East Pownal, Me........Friday evening, Feb. 11th and continue one week, if thought best.
J. T. JORDAN.

Farmington Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 13th
East Rochester, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
WM. BODGE.

Wrightville, Ct........Lord's day, Feb. 13th
North Somers, Feb. 20th, through the week, and over Lord's day, the 27th.
If any of the churches between Somers and Boston wish my labors in a protracted effort, write me immediately. A. D. FLAGG.

Waterbury........Sunday, Feb. 12th
☞ No NAME.

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
P. S. Butler........Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 27th
M. E. Otis........Sabbath, Feb. 20th

SALEM, MASS.
C. E. Barnes........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
W. N. Pile........Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

LAWRENCE, MASS.
J. S. White........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.
B. Woodside........Sunday, Feb. 13th
A. Simpson........Sunday, Feb. 27th
S. S. Brewer........Sunday, March 6th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
A. Ross........Sabbaths, Feb. 13th and 20th
C. H. Fletcher......Sabbaths, Feb. 27th and March 6th
J. Couch........Sabbath, March 13th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
J. Couch........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Communion at the close of the afternoon service.
F. H. Burbank........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Allen Damon........Sabbath, March 6th

HAMPTON, N. H.
Geo. A. Brown........evening, Feb. 9th and onward over the Sabbath, Feb. 13th.
J. G. Smith........Sabbath, March 6th

SEABROOK, N. H.
J. R. Boynton........Sunday, Feb. 20th
A. P. Moore........Sunday, Feb. 27th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
Joseph W. White........Sunday, Feb. 13th
D. M. Leavett........Sunday, Feb. 20th
C. Goodrich........Sunday, Feb. 27th
E. S. Moulton........Sundays, March 6th and 13th

BONNY EAGLE, ME.
William Joy........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Jeremiah Hill........Sunday, Feb. 20th

PORTLAND, ME.
Henry Pratt........Sundays, Feb. 13th and 20th

BIDDEFORD, ME.
W. H. Mitchell......Sundays, Feb. 13th, 20th, and 27th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)
G. L. Teeple........Sunday, Feb. 6th
Anna E. Smith, of New York........Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple........Sunday, Feb. 20th
B. Hitchcock........Sunday, Feb. 27th

BRISTOL, CT.
G. L. White........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
B. Hitchcock........Sabbath, Feb. 27th

SQUARE POND, CT.
Hiram Munger........Sabbath, Feb. 13th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
S. W. Bishop........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Rufus Wendell........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Wm. Stewart........Sunday, March 6th
W. N. Pile........Sunday, March 13th

NEW-BRITAIN, CT.
H. H. Dickinson........Sunday, Feb. 13th
C. H. Sweet........Sunday, Feb. 20th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.
B. Hitchcock........Sunday, Feb. 13th
G. L. Teeple........Sunday, Feb. 27th

MINNESOTA.
Winona........Sabbath, March 6th
Utica........March 10th and over the 13th
St. Charles........March 14th and 15th
Castle Rock........March 17th and 20th
Rockford........[illegible]
Forest City........April 1st and over the 3d
Prescott, Wis........April 10th
O. R. FASSETT.

Business.

Letters Received.

L E Hatch, F H Burbank, M A Miller, M McKinstry, E W Huson, F L Knowles, I K Lombard, G Downing, L Reimer, L C McKinstry, J M Norman, M D Avery, A Newcome, E S Mellen, L Boutell, S D Sinclair, S M Bosley, W Dowell, E W Warner, H A King, L R Weaver, J A Cleaveland, C O Chamberlain, A L Adams, I Damman, S Taylor, Wm Sheperd, J D Sheriden, J E Clark, M Otis, J Lyle, Mary, B P Manning, R Johnson, G G Berry, P B W Doyo, J. Blain, C H Fletcher, S S Brewer, W S Campbell, W C Clark, S Tenney, A B Shorey, O R Fassett, F H Bolles, W K Everson.

Cash received for Books and Tracts.

M Grant, $6.61; H L Hastings, $12.34; H Holden, $4.50; C C Dow, 75c; H L Woodard, $1.00; B Knapper, 50c; A M Bancroft, $1.50; H Rude, $1.50; J E Clough, $1.20; J E Gage, $1.00; M A Sparks, 70c; J W Warrman, 75c; A A Stiles, 35c; J E Hastings, 40c; M E Steele, 50c; A Barber, $4.25; G W Burnham, $1.00; J E Wilber, 75c; E Lewis, 50c; T Quinton, 50c; T Smith, $1.50; G A Brenner, $5.00; W Ellis, $1.00; L F Field, 50c; G A A Hoyt, $1.45; B F Beck, 50c; C C Child, 50c; C Patnode, 50c; S Roby, $1.75; J M M Gernerd, 50c; S Leonard, $2.25; M Piery, $1.00; W H Doughty, $1.00; J H Dedman, $1.25; A H Perry, $1.20; J Greene, $1.35; R B Currier, $1.00; L Willey, $1.00; C Patterson, 50c; W N Pile, 50c; P C Child, 44c; G W Ashdown, 35c; R S Johnson, 35c; J W Elliot, $1.00; B Lovell, 50c.

Books and Tracts Sent.

BY MAIL.—M A Spark, Mrs. H Smith, J E Phelps, E A Gardner, J W Warrman, M E Steele, A Barker, U Hertzler, A A Stiles, E E Tranis, J E Wilber, Prof. Shaw, C Corsey, G W Burnham, J S Buringer, E Theophelus, Rev. R A Chester, T Quinter, J Barnes, M C Arbet, H Ziegenfuss, E Lewis, S H Bush, B Burgess, P C Childs, B Martin, S T Nichols, Rev. B F Beck, A A Hoyt, C Patnode, R S Johnson, L F Field, J B S Pillsbury, Wm Ellis, G A Brenner, C Wardy, J M M Gernerd, J Thompson, J Frances, T Angelle, F H Sheldon, R. S. Currier, L Willey, J Green, H E Soule, A H Perry, E H Williams, S Leonard, W H Doughty, G W Ashdown, P C Childs, W F Fahnestock, W N Pile, M W Shoecroft, F A Norris, A W Sibley, H P Wade, J W Elliot, R S Johnson, C Roberts, C Brown, C Dennen, F Corker, A L Beard, J D Sheridan.

BY EXPRESS.—H. Rude, A H Wyman, Geo. Tilley, S Roby, E Phelps, Jr., C W Baker, A Stelling.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, post-paid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH, the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36c; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By F. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 15c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 224. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 20c; by mail, 22c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 5c., postpaid.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $56.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9 per dozen; $75.00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 12 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.00; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $3.50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $3.25; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $3.25; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 25 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work. Price in cloth [illegible] Flexible covers [illegible] Paper covers [illegible] per dozen by the dozen, by express [illegible]

"NO NIGHT THERE."

No night of weariness,
No sleepless eye,
No unknown shadow
Hovering nigh.

No night of sorrow,
With bitter moan,
No mournful lament
Of "left alone."

No night of death,
No farewell tear,
No loved ones parted,
No anxious fear;
But harp, and crown, and song alway,
And bright, eternal, joyous day.

Evening Hours.

BY

E. P. WOODWARD.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

"WHAT HAPPENS THEN?"

"There were some curious spiritual experiences connected with his last evenings' adventure, which were working very strongly in his mind. It was borne upon him irresistibly that he had been dead since he had seen Helen,—as dead as the son of the widow of Nain before the bier was touched, and he sat up and began to speak. There was an interval between two conscious moments, which appeared to him like a temporary annihilation; and the thoughts it suggested were worrying him with strange perplexities.

He remembered seeing the dark figure on horseback rise in the saddle, and something leap from his hand. He remembered the thrill as he felt the coil settle on his shoulders, and the sudden impulse which led him to fire as he did. With the report of the pistol, all became blank, until he found himself in a strange, bewildered state, groping about for the weapon, which he had a vague consciousness of having dropped. But, according to Abel's account, there must have been an interval of some minutes between these recollections; and he could not help saying, 'Where was the mind, the soul, the thinking principle, all this time?'

A man is stunned by a blow with a stick on the head. He becomes unconscious. Another man gets a harder blow on the head from a bigger stick, and it kills him. Does he become unconscious, too? If so, when does he come to his consciousness?

The man who has had a slight, or moderate blow, comes to himself when the immediate shock passes off, and the organs begin to work again, or when a bit of the skull is pried up, if that happens to be broken. Suppose the blow is hard enough to spoil the brain, and stop the play of the organs, WHAT HAPPENS THEN?

A British captain was struck by a cannonball on the head, just as he was giving an order, at the battle of the Nile. Fifteen months afterwards he was trepanned at Greenwich Hospital, having been insensible all that time. Immediately after the operation, his consciousness returned, and he at once began carrying out the order he was giving when the shot struck him. Suppose he had never been trepanned, when would his intelligence have returned? When his breath ceased, and his heart stopped beating?"

—From "the Professor's Story," Atlantic Monthly, Feb. 1861.

The hand of death could scarcely have struck a deeper chill through my heart, than did these words from Prof. Holmes. I was, at the time of reading them, a disbeliever in the Bible. The first feeling of certainty, which always followed any radical change in the theories of life, had passed away, and the cold flood-tide of scepticism was slowly but surely overtaking me. The Refuge was gone, and I knew, unless within myself there was power to overcome death, that my last hope had fled. I had appealed from God to Nature, but Nature was dumb. And while I staggered beneath this weight of doubt and fear, these words entered my soul like the arrow of the avenger, and for the time I sank down as one dead. And so my burden grew heavier each day, till He came and gave me rest and peace.

But they were terrible words. It is very easy to attempt an answer to these momentous questions, but is it the right answer? It is very easy to say, as Helen says further along in the story:

"If I was born out of unconsciousness into infancy with many family traits of mind and body, I can believe, from my own reason, even without help from revelation, that I shall be born again out of the unconsciousness of death with my individual traits of mind and body;" and a man may be satisfied to build his hopes on this foundation. But, after all, what does it amount to? Suppose you do believe this from your own reason, and without help from revelation, what do you know about it? Is there any ground for your belief? Are the foundations all right?

No, they are all wrong. There can be but one conclusion to him who allows his doubts to have their full weight. The same blow that blots out the consciousness for an hour, if applied with sufficient force, would have made that hour forever. The quiet forgetfulness of slumber, and the dark vacuity of delirium or fainting, point with shadowy fingers to the silence and unconsciousness of the sleep of death.

This is called a gloomy view of death; a dark and repulsive doctrine. Very likely. The curse of God cannot well be a cause of joy. The penalty of sin is not a pleasant subject. Christians, at least, ought to know that the light and glory of this world departed when sin entered. They ought to know that all the joy there is in life which can abide the storms of time, hangs on the promise of Jesus to come again and raise the dead. And they ought to know that the proof of his power to lift the race from the silence of the grave was only faintly given previous to his own victory over the foe. Then, the "gloomy terrors" of death were for the first time eclipsed—not destroyed—by the radiance of the "King of glory."

Let the gloom of death remain, and fill the sinner with fear. Let him understand that the only light that reaches beyond the tomb shines from the cross and sepulchre of our risen Lord. Let him know if he puts aside the historic certainties of Christianity, and accepts the conflicting theories, and vague possibilities of human reason, that he is adrift, without rudder or compass, on that dark ocean of doubt, on whose shadowy, silent shores, lie the wrecked and ruined hopes of millions. Let him know that he is lost—lost now, not hereafter; that he is now in the relentless grasp of that foe who will finally close the eyes and stop the pulses forever. Let these terrible facts fill his soul, and then he will have abundant reason to cry, "What shall I do to be saved?" And if the glorious simplicity of God's truth breaks through that night of darkness, and brings joy to the weary heart, there is little danger of his forsaking the Lord that bought him, and turning again to fables. O, watchmen of Zion, cry aloud, and spare not: "Eternal life through Christ alone, without money, and without price."

CLEANSED BY BLOOD.

There are many things in the Bible which have a deeper significance than men have ever dreamed. He who formed the earth, has not spoken idle words; and if we fail to understand the whole, we may safely wait for further light, before we charge God with folly. And much that we think is fully understood, has, locked within itself, a world of beauty and grandeur. And when we see all things in the light of the eternal day, then, and then only, shall we begin to comprehend the unsearchable riches hidden in the Word of God.

The men of science have labored long and hard to show the foolishness of God's living words. But the wrath of man has only worked the praise of God. In ways unlooked for, and unsought, Jehovah has vindicated his name, and honored his word.

Perhaps no figure of the Bible has caused more scoffing and reproach than that expressed in the words,—"The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." "What! blood a purifier? A monstrous sentiment at best, and none the less absurd!" And even Christians, who knew the cleansing power of that blood, have doubtless failed to see the reason why this figure is used.

Modern science has shown the cleansing power of blood. Things which water would only destroy can be made by blood, as white as snow. Look at that mass of dark, dirty sugar. Wash it with water, and you wash it all away, and all the dirt is left. But in blood there is power to pick up every particle of filth and corruption, and leave only the clear, beautiful sugar.

So with the human heart. The stain of sin has penetrated every fibre and particle. Water will not purify it. All the tears that have fallen since the first cry of anguish rent the air, could never wash out one sin. And the life itself would go out in a vain endeavor to blot out the past by tears of repentance,—but the sins would be there still. Blood alone—the blood of Christ—has power to go through the whole mass, and, taking out every sin, leave the heart as pure and spotless as the falling snow.

"THE FEMININE SOUL."

The Feminine Soul, its nature and attributes, with thoughts upon marriage, and friendly hints upon feminine duties, by Elizabeth Strutt. Boston, 1870. H. H. & T. W. Carter, 11 Beacon Street.

If there is within the human body an immortal soul, distinct from, as well as co-operating with, the material organism,—a soul which is the real man, and by which, as an internal power, the body was developed, there can be no good reason why we should not admit the claim of a radical difference between souls themselves;—a difference so great as to be best expressed by the words now used to distinguish sex. Those who hold the first opinion, should not shrink from any legitimate conclusion which may result therefrom. The writer of this book has accepted the conclusions, and from them has deduced many practical, common sense views of woman's position and duties, and gives valuable hints in reference to those duties. She takes a view of the matter which is certainly far more in harmony with the Bible, than are the majority of those who have written and spoken on the subject. St. Paul hardly gets his due, however, for inspiration or wisdom, when he gave the reason why woman should not teach. On the whole, laying aside the mysticism of "internal meaning" which abounds, the book will aid in showing men and women their true place with respect to each other and society at large, and thus help maintain the perpetuity of God's order, as opposed to the disorder of modern reform.

E. P. W.

For the World's Crisis.

STAY UP HIS HANDS.

Aaron and Hur stayed up the hands of Moses. Ex. 17: 12. The act of holding up Moses' hands does not look to us as though it would make any difference with the battle; but it seems it did, for when Moses' hands hung down Amalek prevailed. "And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed."

There is nothing that gives more life in meetings, than to see the preacher with his hands up, and his heart full of the good word of the Lord pouring it forth with energy and power, full of the Holy Ghost. If the servant of the Lord occupies this position, his congregation will not get to sleep. Such preaching carries conviction to all, when the Spirit gives utterance.

Brethren in the ministry, let us wake up to this more fully; and as we have entered upon a new year, let us see if we cannot do more for the cause of Christ. Says one, I should be glad to do it, but I have to work so hard, I feel but little energy in the cause. I know this is so with many; I also understand something of the feelings of such, for thus it has been with me many times in the past. I have worked with my hands until my strength was well nigh gone, and then harness my horse, and drive from five to fifty miles and preach Saturday evening and over the Sabbath, and back home again, and do a hard week's work, ready to start the next Saturday. No matter what the weather was, you must not disappoint the people. Often you will get a good round "God bless you"; sometimes not so much as that, but always get "Come again." Well, that kind of pay is good, but it don't pay for oats or hay. The blacksmith won't take that kind of scrip. I cannot make change with the merchant with that kind of money.

These things ought not so to be. This is not staying up the hands of God's servants. There is something for the church to do. You want the servants of God to come and preach to you. You say you are praying for God to send some one along. O I am so hungry for the word, I wish some one would happen along and preach to us. Well, we would be glad to do so, but we cannot. Why? you ask. We have no money to pay expenses there and back, and we cannot do it. Now is this right? No, before God it is not. The Lord bless your dear souls, brethren.

I know some brethren, who profess to be looking for the soon coming of Jesus, who are worth from five to fifteen thousand dollars, and they don't give the interest of over one hundred dollars a year for preaching. Now these things ought not so to be. This is not staying up the hands of God's servants. O that there were more Aarons and Hurs in the Lord. I think if there was more closet prayer, and more family altars erected and kept up, there would be more staying up of God's servants, and a greater good accomplished in the land.

May God wake us all up to the great work of saving souls. Many are perishing for the want of the word. It ought to be preached in every school-district. O may the good Lord wake up the people. Jesus is soon coming. Poor sinner, get ready, for the great day of his coming is just at hand. Soon the loud thunders will roar, the fierce lightnings will flash, and oh, how can you stand? God is calling you. Backslider, get ready, or you will be lost. God help us all to stand at our post. I long to see Jesus, and be like him. I shall be satisfied when I awake with his likeness.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Marshfield, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ETERNAL DAY.

"The long, long day that is coming so soon."
"And there shall be no night there."—REV. 22: 5.

Night is to our minds a symbol of sorrow, pain, grief, care and unrest. But we are assured that none of those shall find a place in the city that is to come, the final and everlasting abode of all the saints; those who have come out of great tribulation, and have "washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "And they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

O day of joy! O day of peace! Day in which all who now hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be "filled." O long-expected day, draw near. O glorious "holy city;" our hearts swell with rapture, while by faith we view thy crystal towers, thy jasper walls, thy pearly gates and streets of gold. A city that has no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God doth lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. There glide the pellucid waters of life's pure river, overarched by the branches of the tree of life, yielding her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations.

And shall we indeed be among those who shall "walk in the light of it"? Shall we dwell in the "city that hath foundation"s? Shall we come to Zion with songs, and everlasting joy upon our heads? Shall we there join in the song of the ransomed, in praise of Him who by his own precious blood hath purchased for us a home in those blessed mansions? "Yea, verily," if we "do his commandments," we shall "have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Blessed hope; thrice blessed fruition. May we all be partakers of it, and thenceforth know

"No midnight shade, no clouded sun,
But sacred, high, eternal noon."

Francestown, N. H. CARRIE W. BIXBY.

For the World's Crisis.

OUR FATHERS IN THE GOSPEL.

BRO. GRANT:—While reading the experience and work of Lorenzo Dow, one of the acknowledged ministerial fathers of this generation, I was more convinced than ever, that we, as a people, must go back to the old way of conducting our meetings, while we push forward the prophetic light of these days. But few of our brethren lived in Dow's day, and cannot appreciate his labors as I do. In 1817, the work of God began to wane, and Dow and others began to ascertain the cause, at a campmeeting. Hear what he says in his fourth edition, page 446:

"Long preaching was one of the evils. The curse at our campmeetings was preach, preach, throughout the day; in consequence of which, the preachers got a habit of drawing out their sermons to such a length, as almost to weary out all patience. By so doing, all the pious, praying laborers and exhorters were necessarily lying idle. This was a sore evil, that was deeply felt, and produced a multitude of other evils, that would have been hindered, if they had had a privilege to have worked in their own sphere, instead of doing nothing, by being thrown into the background. Thus the prayer-meetings ceased, which is the thermometer of a campmeeting. Long and often preaching killed out the work at campmeeting, as well as on the circuit, which resulted in worn out congregations, and the throats and health of the preachers failing by dozens; the strength of the ministry was strangely wasted by long preaching; unbelief and a disregard for preachers crept in, in consequence of the other working part of the church getting discouraged, and prayer-meetings useless; for preachers cannot do the work of the church, and when they try, the converting power is gone."

At this time, Dow says, "Our mode of meetings underwent a thorough change. Long and tedious exercises were swept away, and new resolutions printed and circulated among the people, which were adopted, as follows: Let the preachers be short and earnest, and a conference meeting follow preaching. Prayers three to five minutes; exhortations the same; two or three appropriate verses sung between other exercises; the whole meeting lasting one and one fourth hours, to one and a half, at the outside. This rule was adopted by the church, and the meetings rose in interest and spirituality, and God began to revive his work in power; thus saving the church from falling into a stupid, lifeless form of godliness, that the opposite course always produces. The old rule holds good, 'Long and often preaching produce long and often sitting in the churches.' The most successful ministers have been those that got the church to work, while the other class do all the work, and the church get the nightmare, or numb palsy."

We, as a people, begin to fall into the same snare that others have, and we must take the same method to get out. Brethren, you all know the hardest place to preach in is where the people you are preaching to know the whole doctrine, and if you don't reach others, your labor is lost, and all you have got is the five dollars, which don't pay, unless some one is blest and strengthened. Don't find fault with me for speaking plainly on a subject so important and true, as I know this to be. The little time left me to work, I shall work on this plan of stimulating the body. We have truth enough and tools a-plenty, but only a few to use them. Poor tools well used will produce more and better work than a whole chest full lying idle. See the reformation going on in different places, under the use of old tools, or errors. This fact is revealed. The church go to work with what tools or light they have. In less than two years you will see the need of a change in managing our meetings, or a death-like state of things will appear, or fanaticism take the lead. Remember this. If I did not feel and see these things, I would not speak and give the warning; but I do see them, and have spoken of them, and quoted our godly ministers' experiences.

Now I will close by giving a little of Dow's poetry, which shows he was a worker in God's vineyard, having grace and experience.

LORENZO'S EARLY EXERCISES.

"O that poor sinners did but know
What I for them do undergo;
From God I'm called to bear the news
To heathen, Gentiles, and the Jews.
Permit me one thing you to tell,
What my poor heart doth often feel;
I've left behind my friends, my all,
Upon poor sinners for to call.
O shall I stop now with my theme?
Can people think it but a dream?
How often times my heart is broke
Because my parents are forsook.
Its now and then I do them see,
Which is a comfort small to me.
But with them soon must part again,
Which gives to my poor heart fresh pain;
But this is not all I undergo;
I have to face cold winds and snow,
And often through the desert ride
To seek my Master's Son a bride.
In sultry globes I often pant,
Riding a distance almost spent.
My money's out, I cannot buy,
Were I to suffer now and die.
In dreary lands, I often thirst,
While passing o'er the parching dust;
The scorching sun beats down so fair,
I long for one sweet breath of air.
Through creeks and rivers, swift and wide,
Both high and low, I have to ride.
* * * * * * * *
The worth of souls lies near my heart,
Which causes me with all to part;
Both parent, brother, sister, all,
Upon poor sinners for to call.
Through savage haunts my courses lay,
When I have traveled all the day,
And sleeping in the woods at night,
To take my rest before the light.
The birds of night begin to prowl,
About my camp the woe doth howl,
But down to rest I take my sleep,
Jehovah me doth safely help."

HIRAM MUNGER.

For the World's Crisis.

"A CROWN LIFE."

There is no Bible truth more plain, encouraging, and comforting to the Christian than this: "that we are the children of God; and if children then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." Rom. 8: 16–17. If we are children and heirs, we shall surely inherit something, and that something can be nothing less than a crown of life. James says: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love him." Ja. 1: 12. If this be so, some of the other apostles can tell something about it, I think. Well, Paul, what say you on the subject? Paul,—"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 8.

Now, Peter, will you confirm the testimony of James and Paul? Peter,—Yes, I can assure you, that "when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5: 4. We need not call for any more testimony on this subject, for "in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." Yet St. John gives testimony so beautifully agreeing with the above, I shall be pardoned perhaps for introducing it. Hear the testimony: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2: 10.

I wish the reader would carefully notice the conditions on which, and when, the crown of life will be given. If we suffer with Christ, we shall be glorified with him. I believe that God tries his children in the furnace of affliction, that he may refine their nature from every principle of sin and corruption, so that when the chief Shepherd shall appear he may share with them ["joint-heirs"] his own immortality, and crown them with his eternity.

A. L. ADAMS.

Adamsville, W. Va.

AN IMPORTANT PRINCIPLE.

The church of Christ is of divine origin—founded by Christ in the days of the Cæsars.

I will here lay down one single proposition, sustained by the plainest and most unmistakable declarations of Christ, upon which I rest the whole discussion.

Proposition: If Christ gave no commandment how his churches were to be governed, and his followers disciplined—if he gave no form of church polity for our observance as churches, then it would be heaven daring impiety in man to presume to devise a form of polity, and teach and enjoin it upon christians to observe.

The proof of the above is in the last charge of Christ to his disciples (Matt. 28: 20), "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Here is a specific law; it enjoins the specific class of commands; that class is, all things that Christ himself had commanded, and of course nothing else. This forbade their teaching the commands of Moses or Elias, of Abraham or David, unless Christ had taught them also. It is a fundamental principle of our common law, that where one thing is specified, every other thing is forbidden. The specification of one thing is the exclusion of everything else. This principle is an important one in the civil code; it is well established and admitted throughout the civilized world; nothing could be determined in law without it.—The Church.

For the World's Crisis.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

MR. EDITOR:—A lady correspondent of the Boston Cultivator asks, "What are woman's rights?" As to civil equality, their rights are identical with those of men. My idea of the equality of the sexes is not that they are alike equal in every special particular, but that there is not real equality in difference. Women should have just the same rights before the law, just the same right to security and protection, in all particulars, from the law, that man has. The children of the "bondwoman," says Paul, shall not be heirs of the promise, which is life eternal. Yea, more, woman needs greater security, protection, and freedom, than man; for man's benefit and happiness, she needs much more than he does. For on her freedom, comfort, education, wisdom, and virtue, hang the welfare and prosperity of society.

But if, or because she lives under the same laws that man does; if she is taxed no more, nor other than man, but at precisely the same rate on her labor as man, it does not follow that it is necessarily best for her, or for humanity, that she should share with him in political equality. Woman's true, primary function is that of the home, and all the sacred duties that pertain thereto. For these she is specially fitted and organized, mentally and physically. This is peculiarly her sphere. Man's primary function is to do the heavy, hard, out-door and preparatory labor of life. For this he is stronger physically, possesses more war element, and usually a greater amassing and generalizing power of reason; whether inborn or acquired; so indispensable to prevent laws from being mere special legislation.

But exceptional cases often occur. Men may be little adapted to the usual or average work of their sex; and if so, we must charitably tolerate them as dry-goods clerks, ladies' hair-dressers, and pet-dog tenders. On the other hand, women may be unfitted for wives or mothers; or they may be reluctant to accept such offers of matrimony as may happen to be made to them, or circumstances may so determine their destiny that no marriage offer may chance to be made to them, for their acceptance or refusal. And yet, at the same time, whether married or single, they may possess some talents that might illuminate man's generally recognized sphere of action, a sphere which has usually been tabooed to all women." If so, let them be doctors, or lawyers, or painters, or sculptors, or writers, or speakers, or what not; if the fire of genius, burning brightly within their souls, impels them into any line, however unusual to their garb, or to the customs of society.

But I would not overturn all the institutions of society in the country, and reconstruct society from top to bottom on the theory that all women and all men are like the exceptional women and men. Sex is a truly fundamental distinction, equally mental as physical, and, as a general rule, it entails different tastes, duties, lines of conduct, and courses of action. I believe it to be a very pernicious error, which overlooks the true sphere of woman's power, in the precincts of home, in the cradles of her little ones, and attempts through political action the regeneration of the race. That is the mother's peculiar prerogative; a prerogative which she cannot resign or depute; a power which she must exercise either for weal or for woe. And for this cause, do I exceedingly regret that so many of our truly good women, who for their virtues and heroism I love and honor, should have devoted themselves to the advocacy of woman suffrage, mistakingly, as I think; supposing the ballot to be the foundation of all true republican society. With their splendid talents and spotless nobility of soul, what glorious results for womanhood might not their labors secure, if employed in the one only direction, whereby society can be in any degree permanently renovated; that is, by restoring to woman her true sphere—the home sphere. But it is an old adage, that the duties and truths which lie nearest to us, we most often by their very familiarity and closeness overlook and entirely neglect. And doubtless this is the reason why the primary importance of a better education, and a permanent self-sustainable home for every woman, because she is a woman, has been overlooked in the useless attempt to secure the glittering speciousness of political power and equality.

Woman must return to the inheritance and the sphere in which her Maker placed her; she must take up anew the employment which God first allotted to her; and that is to till the garden, take care of and rule her own home. In the beginning her Creator gave her a garden home. The home sphere, the care, nurture, and admonition of her children, and her own household, is woman's true sphere.

AURORA C. PHELPS.

Gems.

— All sin is hateful to God; any sin, unless forsaken and forgiven, will destroy the soul; but no sin should render one miserable or despised after it is manifestly repented of and forsaken.

— To be forever watching and thinking of self, even for the purpose of improvement, is hurtful to character. The more we can forget ourselves in efforts for the good and happiness of others, the better it is for us.

— No one loves to tell a tale of scandal but to him who loves to hear it. Learn, then, to rebuke and silence the detracting tongue, by refusing to hear. Never make your ear the grave of another's good name.

— He that will often put this world and the next before him, and look steadfastly at both, will find the latter growing greater and the former less.

— We cannot build too confidently on the merits of Christ as our hope, or think too much of the life of Christ as our example.

— The invitation of the gospel is universal. We ought to make it so, when God has made it so—"whosoever will, let him come."

— When on the cross, the more quietly we lie, the less we feel the nails.

— There is more solid satisfaction in enduring than in enjoying.

— The only rule of life to the christian, and the only safety to the sinner, is in looking unto Jesus.

— There is no sin we can be tempted to commit, but we shall find a greater satisfaction in resisting than in committing.

— Gratitude is the music of the heart when its chords are swept by the breezes of kindness.

— The Lord knows all his creatures; but he knows none of them in a way of approbation, but those in whom he sees the reflection of his own image.

— Never was there a saved sinner, who was not a willing saint.

— Put off repentance till to-morrow, and you have a day more to repent of, and a day less to repent in.

— Light is the great source of blessing in the natural world, love in the moral. The excellencies of both are united in the divine nature: God is light, and God is love.

— Each day, though it brings its trouble, brings its help.

— "Drops of rain are small, yet they swell rivers," which will overthrow that house which is "not founded upon the rock; and great is the fall thereof."

— The soldier wastes his strength who fights his shadow.

— Politeness is real kindness kindly expressed.

— Good temper is like a sunny day; it sheds its brightness on everything.

A CRAZY WORLD.—We know not the author of this paragraph, but is it not true? "The world is crazy for show. There is not one perhaps in a thousand who dares fall back on a real, simple self, for power to get through the world, an exact enjoyment as he goes along. There is no end to the aping, to the mimicry, the false airs, and the superficial airs. It requires rare courage, we admit, to live up to one's enlightened convictions in these days. Unless you consent to join in the general cheat, there is no room for you among the great mob of pretenders. If a man dares to live within his means, and is resolute in his purpose not to appear more than he really is, let him be applauded. There is something fresh and invigorating in such an example, and we should honor and uphold such a plan with all the energy in our power."—Ex.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the "Children's Corner."

OUR BEAUTIFUL HOME.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where the flowers ever bloom,
And the children ever roam
In their beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where the wicked never come,
And the idlers never roam
In our beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where the leaves are ever green,
And the flowers are ever seen
In our beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where the children all are blest,
And the weary are at rest
In their beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where the streets are made of gold,
And new beauties e'er unfold
In our beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where all tears are wiped away;
And forever we shall stay
In our beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home;
O, then come and go along
With our young and happy throng,
To our beautiful happy home.

We are going to our beautiful home,
Where with Jesus we shall reign,
And shall never part again,
In our beautiful happy home.

We are going to that beautiful home—
Promised home of love and flowers,
Lovely home in Eden's bowers—
O, that beautiful happy home!

Peru, Ind. H. H. HALL.

THE LOST LAMBKIN.

Was there ever a sweeter creature than dear little golden-haired Flora Campbell, with her light, fairy footsteps and rosy cheeks, and violet eyes? How lovely she looked, as she bounded over the green braes in the morning, or lingered by the lochside at the quiet gloaming? Her heart was all sunshine, and her thoughts pure and fresh as the flowers she twined in her shining tresses.

It is a beautiful story they tell in Scottish valleys, of a poor idiot, ("innocent," as they call him,) who, when a sunbeam fell athwart his sight, as he sat in church, threw his cloak across it, and the mantle hung upon the shining motes. They tell us that Faith worked the miracle—for Heaven would not disappoint the idiot's trust.

Sweet Flora Campbell! she might have thrown her mantle over the sunbeam; ay, and walked the glittering path with her delicate feet, till she reached the bright heavens above—for her young heart was all faith and hope and charity. She prattled with the flowers, and the streamlets, and the birds: and her clear, ringing voice was heard at day-break, amid the heather, when the shepherds led forth their flocks. Oh, sunny and joyful, and happy as the day is long, was dear little Flora Campbell.

All loved the gentle child—and why should they not? Did not her tender hands bring fresh flowers to the sick wife of Robert, the ploughman? And did not her low voice tremble softly in prayer at the bedside of old Elspie, the blind beggar woman? Oh, who would not love the angel-hearted little maiden?

But where is Flora? Twilight is falling over the mountains, and shutting in the vales, like a grey curtain. One by one, the bright stars steal up into the summer sky, and twinkle amid the fleecy evening clouds. The tinkling sheep-bell sounds nearer and nearer, as the flocks return from their mountain pastures, and the lowing of the kine in the farmyard tells that the labors of the day are over. But where is golden-haired Flora Campbell?

She was not used to linger so long from her grandfather's dwelling—for now the evening meal was spread, and the cottage lamps lighted. The aged man clasped his hands together, and murmured a short prayer, while his daughter, the mother of Flora, looked anxiously out of the window, yearning for her child's return.

But Flora came not.

The shadows crept faster and faster around the valley. The old peasants sat at their cottage doors, and the young men and maidens gathered upon the village green, some to walk, and some to talk of love under the broad chest nut-tree—some to play the pipe, or dance to its merry music, and some to hurl the quoit, or wrestle in the ring.

But all was hushed when Gaffer Campbell came hurriedly from his cottage, inquiring of the villagers if they had seen his grand-child. Yes, indeed, had they.

One had beheld her far up in the mountains, plucking wild flowers, and weaving them into a garland of heather; another had met her in the path to the Moss Glen, sitting by the wayside, and plaiting a willow basket for her grandsire, and a third had received some forest fruit from her hand, as she saw her seated with her basket of flowers, near the head of the loch.

"Ah, we must seek Flora!" cried the youths, "immediately. The dear child—no harm can surely come to her."

"Ah, me! Gaffer Campbell," said a white-haired old shepherd, shaking his head, "I feared something—for the youngest lambkin of my flock was lost to-day, and it is a bad sign, they say."

"Heaven grant that my poor lambkin be safe," said Gaffer Campbell, solemnly.

"Amen!" murmured the white-haired peasant.

The villagers now dispersed in various paths, leading to the mountain, the forest, and the loch; and soon torches gleamed upon the heights, and glimmered among the trees, and flashed brightly over the water. Up and down, along the stream, and through the woods, went the young men, calling upon the name of "Flora, Flora!"

But no Flora answered.

Gaffer Campbell leaned upon his staff, and spoke no word. He could not weep, for a heavy weight was on his heart. But the mother of Flora was loud in her grief. She wept, and beat her breast, and called aloud the name of her child.

The aged pastor now approached. He had heard, at the manse, of Flora's disappearance; for every house had been searched within the hour; and he now came to comfort the bereaved ones. "Fear not, daughter," he said—"Flora will return."

"Ah, she is lost—she is lost to me!" cried the mother.

"He who tempereth the wind to the shorn lamb, will protect our sweet child," answered the old pastor. "Fear not!"

And as the reverend man spoke, the loud barking of a dog was heard from the depths of Moss Glen, and the lights appeared passing quickly down the valley.

"Trust in Heaven!" said the minister—"Let us seek, and we shall find, the child."

With trembling, yet hurried steps, the pastor and Gaffer Campbell took their way to the deep glen. But the mother of Flora passed them, and ran wildly down the narrow path. Louder and louder sounded the bay of the dog from the thick gloom, in which the vale was shrouded.

They reached the brink of a wide ravine or chasm, commonly known as the "Deer's Mouth," and passed near a group of villagers, who, with torches in their hands, were listening eagerly to catch the baying of the hound. Again it came, low and deep, seemingly from the gulf beneath them. They bent their torches over the edge of the precipice, and strove to look down; but all was dark and silent, save the barking of the dog, now quick and sharp.

"We must descend!" cried a young man, pressing forward. "That's Luath's bark, and Luath knows Flora as well as I do. Run, Donald, for ropes!"

A half dozen lads started together, at his bidding, and soon stout ropes were brought and held by strong men, while the youth prepared to descend.

"Take heed, Christie," said the white-haired old shepherd—"Remember the omen, my lad—the youngest lambkin of my flock was lost to-day, and I fear me evil."

"Fear nothing for me, father!" cried the young peasant, swinging himself into the dark gulf from the edge of the rock; while again the loud bark of the dog sounded from the chasm.

Down, down, went the youth was lowered, startling the wild birds from their nests under the cliffs, and brushing the twining ivy leaves from the sides of the rock. At last he reached the bottom, and the noble dog Luath sprang upon him, barking loud and joyfully.

The glare of the torch, which the young man held, flashed around, and lit up every object. There, upon a thick bed of wild heather, lay sweet Flora Campbell, holding in her white arms, and close to her bosom, a young lamb. Christie stooped and gazed at her. She breathed calmly, and he knew that she was sleeping. He glanced at the little lamb, and saw that one of its legs was bandaged with ribbons from the child's hat. Then he looked up, and shouted aloud—"She is safe!"

The shout was echoed so loudly and gladly, that it woke the young maiden from her slumber. She glanced around with a bewildered gaze, and recognized the youth. "Dear Christie," she said, in her sweet simplicity, "I am so glad you have come! Now we will save your father's lamb."

Christie and the villagers soon learned all. How Flora had beheld the young lambkin, where it had fallen, at the bottom of the "Deer's Mouth," and saw that one of its delicate limbs was broken; how she had descended from ledge to ledge, of the rocky side, clinging to the ivy, and thinking not of danger; how she had bound up the lambkin's broken limb with her bonnet ribbons, and held the mute sufferer in her arms; and how, at last, weary with her exertion, she had fallen asleep upon the bed of heather, and slumbered on till Christie's shout awoke her.

Joyful and happy the villagers were, when assured of Flora's safety; and the white-haired peasant, Christie's father, blessed the fair child, and gave to her the little lambkin, which she had rescued. And often afterwards might Flora be seen, bounding over the braes, with her pet frisking beside her. And whenever she appeared, the old villagers would smile, and say—"God bless the bonnie child!"

Oh, there is many and many a "lost lambkin" in the great world, wandered from the path of safety, and sunk in the pitfalls of danger. And are there not, likewise, many dear little "Floras" among the happy ones of society, who will aid in rescuing the stray ones, and binding up their bruised bodies and souls? Shall we not hear, in this or, as our Ragged School Reporter, that the happy children of other schools sympathize with our efforts, to better the condition of the poor little "Lost Lambkins" of Society?—Ragged School Reporter.

ADVICE TO BOYS AND GIRLS.

1. Respect and obey your parents.
2. Love your brothers and sisters sincerely.
3. Never speak evil of one another.
4. Never strike, lie, nor cheat, nor steal.
5. Be strictly honest, even in the smallest matters.
6. Save everything you can, to give to the objects of benevolence.
7. Do not mock the deaf, the lame, or the blind.
8. Always be respectful to the aged.
9. Keep your clothes neat and clean.
10. Return articles borrowed or found.
11. Avoid the company of bad children.
12. Never wantonly kill a fly or any animal.
13. Do not covet what is not your own.
14. Improve your opportunities for gaining instruction.
15. Avoid low, vulgar, profane, obscene words.
16. Do not find fault with your food.
17. Let your conduct at table be becoming.
18. Be exact in all your dealings and accounts.
19. Have a place for everything, and put everything in its proper place.

NOTHING WINS LIKE LOVE.

The fear of man which birds and most animals feel, is in a great measure caused by our ill treatment of them. We all know that "every kind of beasts, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed and hath been tamed of mankind." If we always treated them gently—never inflicting upon them needless suffering, or exciting their fears by harsh ways toward them—much of their shyness would disappear. We often see boys creep along carefully, with stones in their hands to throw at harmless birds that are picking up a few crumbs upon the path. What pleasure it can give them to frighten or maim such creatures we cannot imagine. How much pleasanter would be the reflection that by gentle words and actions we have won the love and confidence even of a timid bird.

A BAD MARK.

"I've got a boy for you, sir."

"Glad of it; who is he?" asked the master-workman of a large establishment.

The man told the boy's name and where he lived.

"Don't want him," said the master-workman, "he has got a bad mark."

"A bad mark, sir! What?"

"I meet him every day with a cigar in his mouth. I don't want smokers."

GOOD MANNERS are not learned from arbitrary teachings so much as acquired from habit. They grow upon us by use.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance.....$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address.....$5.50.
Same rate for any number over five.
Ten copies six months to one address.....$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, so that they can be detached without interfering with any other matter.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE, Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper, FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Single copy, 30 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies less than ten.
Ten copies, and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 25 cts. a year for each copy.
Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 20 cts. a year for each copy.
To Canada subscribers [illegible]

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 748. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 22.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

☞ The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST.

Fret not thyself so sorely, heart of mine,
For that the pain hath roughly broke thy rest,—
That thy wild flowers lie dead upon thy breast,
Whereon the cloud-veiled sun hath ceased to shine.

Fret not that thou art seamed, and scarred, and torn;
That clods are piled where tinted vetches were;
That long worms crawl to light, and brown rifts, bare
Of green and tender grasses, widely yawn.

God's hand is on the plough. So be thou still.
Thou canst not see him, for thine eyes are dim;
But wait in patience, put thy trust in him,—
Give thanks for love, and leave thee to his will.

Ah! in due time the lowering clouds shall rain
Soft drops on my parched furrows; I shall sow
In tears and prayers, and green corn-blades will grow;—
I shall not wish the wild flowers back again.

I shall be glad that I did work and weep—
Be glad, O God, my slumbering soul did wake—
Be glad my stubborn heart did heave and break
Beneath the plough—when angels come to reap.

Be glad, O Father, that my land was tilled,
And sown and watered, in the harvest day—
When thou wilt cast the weeds and tares away,
And when with ripened fruit thy barns are filled.

Keep me my faith, I pray! I cannot see,
And fear to intermeddle with thy work.
Oh, though I wince and fret, I would not shirk
The discipline that is so good for me!

I know that thou wilt make my grief to cease—
Wilt send the cool, soft drops of healing rain,
And make my scarred heart green with springing grain;
That after patient waiting cometh peace.

That after faithful labor I shall rest,
And after weeping have my fill of joy.
Thou breakest down, to build up—not destroy;
Thou doest right, O Lord!—Thou knowest best.

—Sunday Magazine.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25:46.

The term kolasis, rendered punishment, is used in a secondary sense in 1 John 4:18, where it is rendered torment: "Fear hath torment"; or as Greenfield's Greek Lexicon defines its secondary meaning: "apprehension of punishment, torment." Fear is not punishment, but a foreboding of punishment; so the murderer may have torment, or "apprehension of punishment," while his real punishment is death on the gallows. But the term cannot be used in this secondary sense in the text that speaks of "everlasting punishment," for if it were, it would entirely blot out the sinner's punishment, and substitute in its stead an "everlasting" "apprehension of punishment," which apprehension would not allow the sinner to reach the punishment, the apprehension to precede the punishment being itself "everlasting," making it impossible ever to reach the punishment. It would sound strange to hear the statement, "These shall go away into everlasting apprehension of punishment," or "everlasting fear of punishment." After this examination, all will be willing to let the text read, "Everlasting punishment," and simply inquire, What is the nature of the punishment? which we have already found to be "everlasting destruction," or the "second death"; not punishing, as an everlasting process, but punishment, as an everlasting result.

Punishment does not always mean one thing. Sometimes whipping is called punishment, sometimes imprisonment, sometimes banishment, and often death is recognized as punishment. So when punishment is threatened, there is nothing in the mere threat of punishment to indicate its nature. We are left to inquire, How is he to be punished? When the sinner is threatened with "everlasting punishment," we should inquire, How is he to be punished? And if we find the word of God unanimously deciding that "destruction" and "death,"—the "second death," is their doom, let that settle the question with all.

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezek. 18:4. This cannot refer to temporal death, for the sinless saint just as really experiences that as the sinner; besides, it is a death incurred by personal sin here threatened, which is not true of temporal death, which comes if we never sin. The prophet says to sinners, "Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit; for why will ye die?"—Ezek. 18:31. A purification from sin and the obtaining of a new heart, does not ward off the Adamic death; so the death here referred to is not the first death, but a death that will be the sinner's punishment,—the "second death." "Why will ye die," when by repenting you may escape such a retribution? "As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die?"—Ezek. 33:11.

Here is a death brought to view, to which the sinner is exposed, as a retribution for his sins, which may be warded off by repentance; but repentance cannot keep us from dying the first death; hence, the death that is threatened must be the "second death"; and this agrees with the statement of the Revelator: "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Rev. 21:9. "And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire."—Rev. 20:14, 15. "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Rev. 2:11. "On such the second death had no power."—Rev. 20:6.

Here is a death from which the saint will be exempt, but which the sinner must experience as a penalty for his sins. It is not the first death, (1) because the saint shares in that as really as the sinner, and (2) it is called the "second death." Often the cause is used to express the effect, as when Christ said, "I am the resurrection and the life," that is, the cause of it; and, "his commandment is life everlasting," that is, the cause of it; so here the lake of fire is said to be the "second death," that is, the cause of it. Who shall say that God means life when he says death, the very reverse of what he says? If so, may he not mean death when he promises life to the saints? If we reverse his threatenings, why not his promises?

The "second death" must not only be a second infliction of a death of some kind, but the second of its own order; otherwise we have brought to view only the first death of one kind, and the first death of another kind—no "second" about it. The Scriptures specify two kinds of death; literal death, which kills the physical man, and spiritual death, by which men are made "dead in trespasses and sins"; and modern theologians have manufactured a third kind of death, which they style a "death that never dies," which they regard equivalent to eternal life in misery, or endless torment. As no other kinds of death are supposed to exist, it is evident that the "second death" must be a second infliction of one of these three kinds of death. Let us carefully look at each kind.

1. If the death due the sinner for his sins is a "death that never dies," then as that death is denominated the "second death," it must be the second "death that never dies," for a second presupposes a first of the same order. But where shall we find the first "death that never dies"? And as the second is subsequent to the first, the first must end before the second can begin; hence there never could be a second of this kind, as the first would be endless; and it is impossible for a man to die a second time till he escapes from the first death. There cannot be a second "death that never dies," till there has been a first "death that never dies"; and yet a first death of this order has never been found; and if it could be found, it would last so long that the second could never begin. Hence this cannot be the kind of death with which the sinner shall be punished.

2. If the death due the sinner as a penalty for his sins is spiritual death, a death "in trespasses and sins," it follows, inasmuch as the sinner must be punished with the "second death," that there must be a release from the first death of this order before there can be a second infliction of it; and the moment a man is released from a death "in trespasses and sins," he ceases to be a sinner, and is no longer subject to punishment. God never inflicted a death "in trespasses and sins" on man, and never will, for that would be equivalent to compelling him to be a sinner; but man, by transgression, has involved himself in this dilemma contrary to the will of God. This death "in trespasses and sins" is not the penalty for sin, but the state of sin, which renders man deserving of punishment, the punishment itself being different from that for which man is to be punished. The sinner is to be punished for a state of sin, and not with a state of sin.

3. If the death to be inflicted on the sinner as a punishment for his sins is literal death, then, as it is styled "the second death," it must be the second infliction of literal death, and subsequent to the judgment, for there will be no release from the Adamic death till the judgment day. At the judgment, the sentence of the "second death" will be executed upon the sinner, not in the grave, but in the lake of fire; but "the second death hath no power" over the saints, for they "shall not be hurt of the second death." As the first death involves the cessation of life, so must the second; and from that epoch they "shall never see life," but abide under this stroke of Divine wrath.

It is generally believed that Christ suffered to save us from the infliction of the penalty due the transgressor, by becoming the sinner's substitute, with the proviso that the sinner should live out the gospel contract, or not reap the benefit proffered; that he "suffered for sins [not for his own, but for ours] the just for the unjust; that he might bring us to God" (1 Pet. 3:18); that he "bare our sins in his own body on the tree" (1 Pet. 3:18); that "Christ died for our sins" (1 Cor. 15:3); in other words, that Christ volunteered to receive the stroke that the sinner's sins had called for, and allow the sinner to escape, provided he lives out the gospel contract. If this is so, we can easily learn the nature of the death penalty due the sinner hereafter, by learning the nature of Christ's death, as he must have died the very death due the sinner, whether it be a theological or a literal death. We inquire—

1. Did Christ die to save us from the infliction of a theological death, a "death that never dies"? If so, as Christ died the death due the sinner, he must be suffering now, and destined to suffer eternally. But this is not true, for Christ has been "raised" from the death that he experienced, and is now in heaven.

2. Did Christ die to save us from the infliction of the Adamic death? If so, none who believe in Christ could die the first death, which is not true.

3. He died the penalty-death—the death due the sinner for his sins—which in the sinner's case will be the second installment of death; but Christ drank the bitter cup of death for sin without previously dying the Adamic death, but experiences both in one, so he both bears away the keys of death, and drinks the cup of damnation for all who will live out the gospel contract; thus becoming the "first fruits" of immortal life from Adamic death, and also bringing to the sinner a receipt showing that he has also paid the bill of death that his sins had called for. Christ, being holy, and not dying for his own sins, was released from death by the Father, the claims of justice having been met, and there being no moral objection to his living again; but though the sinner dies a death of the same nature at the judgment, he dies in possession of a character that God abhors; and as that character cannot be changed, it remains to all eternity a moral objection to his being released from the penalty-death, as thereby evil would be revived after having been once put out of existence, and that too beyond the judgment, and beings offensive to God be called into existence to annoy the good; and this Divine aversion to sin is the reason why their doom is pronounced endless. God will not release them from the penalty-death inflicted upon them for their own sins, with their sinful characters, as he did his holy Son, who died for the sins of others. The statement of the penalty is, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; and death for sin fills the contract without reference to the length of its continuation. But from the fact that God does not intend to revive a race of unholy characters after exterminating them at the judgment, their doom is pronounced eternal—an everlasting death.

We now proceed to assign several reasons why the sinner cannot live eternally:

1. The offers of eternal life to the sinner are conditional. If this statement can be demonstrated, the fact will appear that inasmuch as sinners repudiate these conditions, they cannot live eternally. Christ says; "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life."—John 3:14–15. Here belief in Christ is made a prerequisite to the attainment of eternal life; but the sinner omits to comply with the condition, and therefore must fail to obtain eternal life, for God will never disregard his own conditions. At the sixteenth verse Jesus adds: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Here again the obtaining of everlasting life is made to depend on faith in Christ, without which the sinner cannot live forever.

Christ said to his disciples, "He that eateth of this bread shall live forever."—John 6:58. But sinners refuse to eat of that bread in the sense of Christ's explanation, and hence cannot live forever.

Again Jesus testifies: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life."—John 10:27–28. Here the great Shepherd promises eternal life to his sheep, but he nowhere promises it to the goats. Said Jesus, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly."—John 10:10. Were we in possession of innate immortality, we should have possessed endless life even if Christ had never come. Christ affirms, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."—John 3:36. Thus we see again that everlasting life is only for the believer, and not for the unbeliever.

Should it be said that the term "hath" assigns this life to the saint in the present tense, and that it must therefore refer to an immortal life of the soul, we reply that it as strongly denies it to the sinner in the present tense, thus negating their possession of innate immortality. The saint "hath" it deposited in Christ, having a draft on him; agreeing with 1 John 5:11, "God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." To those who claim that the life here mentioned is simply spiritual life, or religion in the heart, we would say it is called "everlasting" and "eternal"; whereas religion often comes to an end by backsliding, which fact refutes that assumption. Life means life, and "eternal" gives its length. John tells us, "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life."—John 2:25. The saint possesses eternal life only by "promise," or faith, but religion is actually possessed by him; hence religion, or spiritual life, is not what is meant by eternal life.

Paul gives us this exhortation: "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life" (1 Tim. 6:12); which would be a superfluous admonition, provided we were already in possession of it, either in the sense of an immortal life already possessed by the soul, as claimed by some, or in the sense of spiritual life, as claimed by others. Paul discourses concerning laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.—1 Tim. 6:19. Here we learn that as a prerequisite to the securing of eternal life, we must "lay up a good foundation." Sinners fail to do this, and therefore have no title to eternal life. God would not offer man what he already possesses, and append conditions to that offer. A wicked worldling might thus impose on his fellows, but God never acts on such a dishonest principle.

Eternal life is offered to us because we do not possess it, and God kindly tells us how we can come in possession of it, and also when. Said the angel Gabriel to Daniel,—"Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life." Dan. 12:2. Here we learn that everlasting life is to be received at the resurrection; agreeing with the statement of Christ: "In the world to come eternal life."—Mark 10:30. As the sinner does not comply with the conditions on which eternal life is offered, he cannot live forever, but must die the "second death" at the judgment.

(To be continued.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE STILL HOUR.

Hail! precious, silent hour of prayer,
Gift of the source of light and love;
I'll spend thee free from earthly care,
And raise my heart to things above.

Oh, for one beam of light which shone
Around the seer of Patmos' land,
That I may view the eternal throne
Where Jesus sits at God's right hand.

E'en now he's there, the Son of God,
With hands once wounded for my soul;
With side from whence the precious blood
In healing streams did freely roll.

Father, thy grace the ransom found,
By faith I hear the pleading voice;
I may draw near the holy ground,
Though trembling, yet I will rejoice.

No price have I to offer thee,
No plea I bring but utter need;
But Jesus' price and plea for me
Shall make the suppliant free indeed.

Spirit of truth, eternal flame,
Thou dost my earnest prayer inspire,
And seal'st my peace in Jesus' name
With heavenly, sanctifying fire.

O may it ever, ever burn,
Fed from the altar of the skies,
Till Zion's King to earth return,
And bid his waiting ones arise.

Newark, N. J. JOHN LYLE.

For the World's Crisis.

SOME ERRORS CORRECTED.

Some late writers, in their attempts to prove that the 1335 days of Daniel's prophecy should be reckoned from A. D. 538, have, as I shall endeavor to show, fallen into some errors.

It is affirmed that "the Pope could not establish his seat in Rome because the Ostrogoth and Heruli kingdom, in Italy, remained hostile." Here we notice that these two nations, or kingdoms, are spoken of as only one kingdom; yet the same writer calls them the two last kingdoms, or horns, that were plucked up by the roots. How those nations could be only one kingdom and still two kingdoms at the same time, is to me at least as mysterious as the claimed mysteries of the Trinity.

But, after all, it is no difficult task to prove not only that they were two distinct nations, but that they were conquered, or plucked up, at dates quite distant from each other.

The Heruli entered Italy, and overthrew the Western Roman empire, A. D. 476, when Odoacer, their leader, established himself there as king of Italy. Here the kingdom of the Heruli was set up, and the date is so generally known, it is not necessary to quote history to prove it. Odoacer reigned about fourteen years, when Theodoric, general of the Ostrogoths, either with the connivance or consent of the emperor of the east, invaded Italy. Odoacer was vanquished in battle, and fled to Ravenna, where he sustained a siege of three years, when the city being taken by the Goths, Odoacer (the first and last of the Heruli kings who reigned in Italy) was slain, and their kingdom plucked up forever. Thus terminated the short reign of the Heruli in Italy, A. D. 493.—Universal History of the World, pp. 370–5. Guizot's Gibbon's Rome, vol. 1, p. 534.

Upon the overthrow of the Heruli, Theodoric established the Gothic kingdom in Italy upon its ruins, and bringing in the whole Ostrogothic nation to settle in the conquered kingdom, he reigned supreme from the Alps to Sicily. So it would seem to be clear that if the Heruli kingdom was one of the three horns plucked up by the roots, this work was so effectually accomplished at this date (493), that not a root even was left for other hands to pluck up afterwards.

2. In reference to the hostility shown to the Pope, and the opposition on the part of the Goths to their seating themselves at Rome, we observe that the Popes were not so cramped up by the Gothic kings, after all, as some seem to think. For Theodoric, the first Gothic king of Italy, and who reigned from 493 to 526, is called by Gibbon, Bower, and Von Muller, one of the most tolerant of princes, who praise him for making no distinction between his Catholic and Arian subjects, treating all alike; and though in faith an Arian himself, he always showed a regard for the bishops of Rome, seven of whom occupied the Papal chair during his reign. See Bower's History of the Popes, vol. 1, p. 300.

Athalaric, Theodoric's successor, and also an Arian, was so liberal toward the Pope and his Catholic subjects, that Bower says: "Thus did the Arian Goths, though represented by some fanatical writers of those times as enemies to God and his church, prove better friends to the clergy than any of the Catholic emperors who had gone before them."—Ibid, p. 330.

And from the testimony of Machiavel, an Italian historian, it seems as though he thought that the Popes did not suffer much from the Gothic kings, but rather increased their power during their presence in Italy. He says:—"Theodoric, king of the Goths, fixing his seat at Ravenna, was that which advanced their interest, and made them more considerable in Italy; for there being no other prince left in Rome, the Romans were forced for protection to pay greater allegiance to the Pope."—Newton on the Prophecies, vol. 2, p. 125.

3. It is often claimed, or stated in such terms that the impression is given, that the city of Rome was taken from the Goths by Belisarius, Justinian's general, in 538, and the Pope at that time enthroned in the ancient capital. But in this there is evidently a mistake, for Belisarius captured Rome Dec. 10th, 536. (Gui. Gibbon, p. 36, and Note E. See Note, p. 69.) Bower, referring to this event, says: "Thus was the city of Rome re-united to the empire, on the tenth of December of the present year, 536, after it had been separated from it threescore years."—History of the Popes, vol. 1, p. 344.

4. It is further said that "in 538" the Goths (claimed by some as the third horn of Daniel 7) were plucked up by the roots. Now I am strongly inclined to the opinion that this date, claimed for the plucking up of the Goths, is destitute of any good foundation. Against this assumption I present the following facts:

Witig, or Vitiges, king of the Goths, having lost the city of Rome, and perceiving that the emperor, Justinian, was determined to uproot the whole Gothic nation, assembled the whole military force of his kingdom, and obliged the imperial general, Belisarius, to shut himself up in the city of Rome. Here he was closely besieged by Vitiges, at the head of an army of one hundred and fifty thousand men. According to Gibbon's dates, the siege began in March, 537 (Gui. Gibbon, vol. 2, p. 36), and continued for one year and nine days, when the Gothic king having lost one third of his whole army, and learning that one of the imperial generals had landed with another army in Italy, and had taken Rimini, within one day's march of his capital, he raised the siege of Rome, March, 538 (Ibid, p. 40), and hastened to the defense of his metropolis.

The war continued through this year, 538, showing that the Goths were not yet plucked up. But in the following year, 539, they came near losing their existence as a nation; for Ravenna, the Gothic capital, was taken by Belisarius, and Vitiges, made a captive, was carried to Constantinople. The Gothic nation being now left without a head, most of their cities and fortresses submitted to the general of Justinian.—Universal History of the World, p. 378. Gui. Gibbon, vol. 2, p. 3.

But the Goths were saved from utter ruin at this time, for Justinian recalled Belisarius from Italy, to deliver the eastern provinces of his empire from the Persians. Gibbon says: "His abrupt departure revived the courage of the Goths." He also observes: "The jealousy of the Byzantine court had not permitted Belisarius to achieve the conquest of Italy."

The Goths now made choice of Totila for their king, and he soon reconquered about all that had been lost in Italy, and in 546 had the good fortune to recover the city of Rome. This goes certainly to prove their existence as a nation, and demonstrates most effectually that the Goths were not yet plucked up; and though our writer says that the "last remains" of this "Gothic horn" were "plucked up in 538," (Sealed Book of Daniel Opened, p. 207); yet we think that they kicked altogether too hard in 546 for any one to think that there were no "remains" left. For when Totila had taken Rome, Von Muller says that "the people were driven out; those senators who had not obtained safety in flight, were carried away captives, and the immeasurable circuit of the Roman walls almost leveled with the ground."—History of the World, p. 379, and Gibbon, vol. 2, p. 65.

Next year, Belisarius, who had been sent again into Italy, recovered Rome (Gibbon, vol. 2, p. 69). However, in 548 he was again recalled into the east, and the Goths in his absence retook Rome and recovered all that they had lost. The Pope, being now at Constantinople, appeared before Justinian and implored him to "deliver Italy from the Gothic barbarians." The emperor gathered his forces for the Italian war, and calling in the Lombards, Huns, and other barbarians to his aid, sent them under Narses into Italy.

In July, 552, Totila, the Gothic king, was defeated and slain, and the city of Rome again recovered. Gibbon says: "Justinian once more received the keys of Rome, which under his reign had been five times taken and recovered" (Ib., p. 69). But, says Gibbon, "The Gothic war was yet alive."—p. 69. Hardly plucked up yet, but near the end of their race.

The Gothic nobles raised Teja or Teias to the throne. He endeavored to make head against Narses, but was defeated, and perished in battle, with the bravest of the Goths, March, 553. His head was cut off, and "exalted on a spear, proclaimed to the nations that the Gothic kingdom was no more."—Gibbon, vol. 2, p. 69. Universal History, p. 379.

Here the kingdom of the Goths having come to an end, being "no more," it certainly was plucked up by the roots. But how it could have been plucked up, even to the "last remains," in 538, and after that date be able to defy the whole power of Justinian, and wage against it an uninterrupted war for fifteen years, we have not yet been able to discover. Others, having "more light upon the prophecies," may think they see how it was accomplished; but the light does not shine clear enough for us to perceive it.

Here we leave the subject for abler pens to discuss; but are firmly persuaded that the above objections, which we have submitted in defense of truth, will stand the test of criticism. J. M. TOZIER.

For the World's Crisis.

"JESUS WEPT."—JNO. 11:35.

Jesus wept! how expressive of his divine mission; how characteristic of his love for a dying world; how beautifully it shows God manifest in the flesh; how touchingly it shows us our duty toward the afflicted.

Jesus wept not for himself, but for fallen, suffering humanity. Jesus' weeping was so deep and affecting it caused the Jews to cry out, "Behold how He loved him"—Lazarus. How sad the picture when Martha meets her Lord; but the picture grows sadder when Mary and the weeping Jews also go out to meet Jesus. "Jesus groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, and said, "Where have ye laid him?" It is now the picture grows the saddest, when the solemn cortege moves slowly toward the rock-chamber where lay a much loved brother held by the iron chain of death.

Now comes the work of might—the power of God manifest in his Son. "Lazarus, come forth! And he that was dead [Lazarus] came forth." Now the picture suddenly grows brighter unto the perfect day, the resurrection morn, when all who sleep in Jesus shall come forth to immortality. The voice of God brought Lazarus from death unto life, and turned their weeping into joy and thanksgiving. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "The voice of the Lord is powerful; the voice of the Lord is full of majesty." Ps. 29:4.

Weep on, pray on, for the voice of the Lord will be heard once more in the land, calling the sleepers to life immortal, and the living christians to immortality. Watch and pray.

Shinston, W. Virginia. A. L. ADAMS.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PLATFORM;
OR,
His Standing before God is by Faith.

"Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy; for by faith ye stand."—2 COR. 1:24.

I. The apostles Paul and Peter taught that they did not lord it "over God's heritage," but were "ensamples to the flock." 1 Pet. 5:1–4. God was held as supreme. His word was the ground of faith; the sole platform for the church's standing. Rom. 4th and 10th; Gal. 3:5–9; Heb. 11. "The word of faith" embraces—

II. The passing gospel age, as the time of suffering, of bearing the cross, even unto death (vers. 7–10), "always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, . . . knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also, by Jesus." Sin reigns unto death. Hence there is deliverance for the christian only by Jesus, at the resurrection.

III. The promises are not "yea and nay"; vers. 17–19. THE PROMISE points to one way of deliverance. Hence it cannot come by death, the end of SIN (Rom. 6:21–23); but must be reached by trust in Him who "raiseth the dead" at the opening of "the day of the Lord."—vers. 9 to 14. Were we all up on the plane of apostolic endowment and advancement in the divine life, we should need this final and only deliverance at the resurrection of the just. 1 Cor. 15; 1 Thess. 4:13, 18; Heb. 11:13.

IV. The sealing work of the Spirit, to establish us in Christ, confirms all this "unto the day of redemption."—vers. 20, 23; Eph. 1:4–14; Rom. 8:14–23. This range of truth comes out in the christian's calling (1 Thess. 1:9–10), and the "blessed hope." Titus 2:13.

Thus we have the one mortal state of the christian, the one foundation for faith in God, who "raiseth the dead"; the one way of being sealed by the Holy Spirit. Then this one all comprehending range of truth, through this world, and into that which is to come, forms the christian's platform of principles—his rock, on which, by faith, by believing, he stands securely unto "the day of the Lord, the resurrection," into "the likeness of the heavenly." Let any one find the counter creed, from this context, and find the kingdom in this mortal, martyr state—"the gate to glory" by death—the promise "yea and nay" (that is by dying; while yet it remains to be reached by the resurrection, at Christ's coming); and by so dividing the gospel, make sure that no one can consistently believe in it, or stand upon it. Let them do thus, I mean who claim dominion over our faith, and who can afford to destroy the foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, and substitute their schismatic creed. But the God-given ministry ministering the God-given gospel (Gal. 4:11), teaches us all to stand on the one platform, in obedient subjection to "the faith of God's elect." Amen.

Montreal, Jan. 18th, 1870. J. B. COOK.

Bro. Grant:—We had a good hearing and good time on Lord's day. The brethren and friends turned out well, and good was done. Some seem to have been offended and turned out of the way; others seem fainting; and all need reviving by drawing nigh to God. I feel encouraged by seeing a little strength. The Roman Council may divide "into three parts," and show their ultimate doom. Rev. 16:19. J. B. C.

EXEGETICAL ITEMS.

The printers of our version have smothered an old Saxon word in 1 Tim. 2:9. For "Shame facedness" read "Shame-fastness," a word purely Saxon, and formed like "steadfastness." The Saxon form is scam-fæstnes, from sceamu—shame, and faest—firm or fast.

Another obsolete Saxon word in our Bible is "earing," which occurs three times in the Pentateuch with a reference to agriculture; viz: Gen. 45:6; Exod. 34:21; Deut. 21:4. What is "earing-time?" Most readers think of the time when the grain begins to ripen in the ear, and in Saxon ear means the head of wheat, while an animal's ear is eare. But this is not the meaning of "earing-time." It comes from the Saxon word erian—to plow, or ered—plowed. "Earing-time" is plowing-time, and "a valley neither eared nor sown" is one that has been neither plowed nor sown.

The preacher says: "The words of the wise [are] as goads, and as nails fastened [by] the master of assemblies, [which] are given from one shepherd." The second clause of the verse is often quoted, but what does it mean? Did the moderator or chairman of Hebrew assemblies keep order by "punching heads" in that style? Sharpe, in his revision of the authorized version, translates it thus: "The words of the wise are as goads, and as stakes fastened by the owners of the flocks, when they are given up by a shepherd." This makes better sense, and does not bring in chairmen of meetings between the ox driver's goad and the shepherd.

"Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine."—1 Tim. 5:17. This is a stock text in defense of Presbyterian order. It divides the presbyters of the church into three classes, (1) elders who neither ruled nor preached; (2) elders who ruled and did not teach or preach; (3) elders who both ruled, preached and taught. Everything in controversy turns upon the duties of the second class. The word "ruling" is in Greek procstos and means "standing forth." It occurs elsewhere, as in Rom. 12:8, "He that ruleth, [let him do it] with diligence." Our translators seem to take it as implying the management of church business and the administration of church discipline. In classic Greek it certainly sometimes has such a meaning, but no passage in the New Testament fixes that sense upon it.

Justin Martyr (who died A. D. 165) in his "First Apology," describes the weekly worship of the primitive christians. He says (cap. 57): "When the reader has ceased, the president verbally instructs and exhorts." Again: "The president offers prayers and thanksgivings, according to his ability, and the people assent, saying Amen." Again: "What is collected is deposited with the president, who succors the orphans and widows." Again (cap. 65): "There is then brought to the president of the brethren bread and a cup of wine mixed with water, and, he taking them, gives praise and glory to the Father of the universe, and offers thanks at considerable length," etc. These extracts show the true sense of procstos. He was the presiding officer of a christian assembly, while the worship of God was celebrated, and took part in the instruction of the christian people. "Let the elders that preside well," etc., is Paul's meaning.—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN UNION.—No. 2.

The great mission of Jesus Christ and his gospel is, to make the children of men one with him, and also with each other. And wherever the gospel is permitted by the Spirit of God to have its legitimate effects, their God-like work is accomplished. This is always seen in the true convert to the old fashioned pure religion.

This was emphatically so on and after the day of Pentecost. The apostolic religion of that day made them of one heart, and in one place, and they had all things common. And subsequent to this, when the Jewish test of fellowship was brought in to be subscribed to in order to be saved, making circumcision after the manner of Moses the way of salvation, Paul and the rest of the apostles were stirred, much contention ensued, the apostles loyal to Jesus stood stiffly for the unity of Christ's people, gathering in conference up to Jerusalem, and, after discussing the question freely, settled it forever that no wall of partition should be put between Jew and Gentile, or between those saved, because they were all saved the same way, that is, by faith, or by grace through faith. And this is in harmony with the great Teacher, when he prayed that his believing children down to the end of time might be one; that the world might see and know the utility and blessedness of Christ's religion, that seeing this sacred oneness, they might confess that Jesus Christ was the sent of God.

No sight can be more lovely than an exhibition of this christian union and fellowship among those who differ theologically. Christians can and ought to exhibit this real oneness, which, in the very nature of things, is the result of the Spirit of God. Love, joy, peace, with the "new song in my mouth," as you have received the Lord Jesus so walk in him, this would so cement and bind together, that there could be no separation. Then this saying would be drawn from the unbelieving: "See how these disciples love one another." Whatever system of religion does not produce this genuine love and fellowship, may be looked upon with suspicion as not being the christianity of the gospel.

Dear brethren, I heartily pray for a revival and reformation in this direction. Our cause, that of Christ's coming, the resurrection of the dead, and the restitution of the earth to its Eden beauty, is unpopular, but let us who preach and teach the heaven-bought truth, show in all our efforts to promulgate it among those who have not heard the sweet sound of redemption, and Christ's coming, also in all our mingling with our fellow men, this love fellowship, with a kind and teachable spirit, and a great work under God can be accomplished.

Let it first be seen among ourselves in all our intercourse with each other. If we widely differ, do not let us be dogmatical, censorious, or morose; but let us be kind, each esteeming the other better than himself. And when we associate with other denominations, or other believers, as may be our privilege, put yourselves in the best possible condition to do them good by love, fellowship, and good will; then teach them the way of God more perfectly if possible; bring in no tests of christianity not brought in by the great Head of the church, and all will go well; our strength would increase mightily, and truth would prosper gloriously.

And this is to be our future course; the lovers of the Lord's coming are to increase rapidly in the future, if I see aright. They are to be one in spite of the enemy, and while he will, as he has done, try to divide and split us into fragments, our motto must be Union! for in union there is strength. Let the loud sounding echo be heard from east to west, from north to south, We will be one! Christ enjoined it upon us; we will obey. Let it begin with individuals, and go into all our small gatherings; yea, let it reach our large congregations. Bless the Lord!!! all Christ's disciples, rise in the majesty of the word of God, and declare—

"We are one in Christ Jesus wherever we be,
The Jew and the Gentile, the bond and the free."

Followers of God as dear children, bearing family resemblance by our relationship to each other. So mote it be. L. BOUTELL.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Feb. 16, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given. Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too. Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ S. A. CARPENTER—We cannot send back Nos.

☞ MRS. D. D. LUCE—The $2.50 was credited to J. N. Westfall.

☞ SOME ONE sends us $1.25 from Farmington, N. H., and only wrote this:—"Payable to Geo. T. Adams." Who sent it, and what is it for?

WINSTED DISCUSSION.

Saturday, Feb. 5th, at 8.30 A. M., we left Boston for Winsted, Ct. From Boston to Worcester, we enjoyed the company of Bro. H. L. Hastings, who is a faithful laborer in the Lord, engaged in preaching, and in the publication of books and tracts. His health is good, and his heart strong in faith. Sr. Hastings is now in Tennessee, doing a noble work in spreading light and truth among all classes.

At Hartford depot we met Brn. Sidney Hall, E. McCullock, and S. Woodruff, who are true men in Christ.

At Winsted we received a hearty greeting from many warm friends. It was in this place that we started in the service of the Lord, in Dec. 1842. A sermon in the Methodist meeting-house, from H. A. Chittendon, of Hartford, was the means of our conviction. After hearing him go through with the exposition of the great image, and the four beasts of Daniel, we felt satisfied that the Bible was true. Bro. Ebenezer Washburn was the pastor of the church at that time, and cheerfully let Bro. Chittenden occupy his desk that Sabbath. Previous to that time, our companions were infidels; and our most intimate friend was an atheist.

The sermons of that day accompanied by the Spirit of God, caused us to get on our knees in prayer, and the next Thursday evening we consented to follow the dear Savior, and received the first genuine peace and joy we ever experienced. From that time to the present, we have found Jesus a precious portion, and his service continually growing more and more delightful. O that every one would love and serve him and be happy in this life and for ever.

Our meeting at Camp's Hall, Feb. 6th, was one of special interest and profit. It was heart-cheering to meet and greet so many, with whom we had sung and prayed in other days. They came in from the various surrounding towns, and spoke cheeringly of their prospects for a home in the coming kingdom.

Monday evening, Feb. 7th, we began a discussion with Moses Hull, which was to continue four sessions of two and a half hours each, excepting the first evening, which was two hours; and the last which was three. A great crowd came, and it was said some two hundred could not get into the hall. We discussed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from demons, and not from departed human spirits." Last December, Mr. Hull gave some fifteen lectures in Winsted in support of Spiritualism, and made quite a stir among the people. On this account, they were quite anxious to hear the other side presented. Mr. Hull was very bold in saying we dare not meet him, and published to that effect in the Banner of Light.

We published the following in reply:—

To the Editors of the Banner of Light:

DEAR SIRS—In the last Banner, Dec. 25th, I find "Jottings from Moses Hull," in which he says: "I despair of getting another discussion with Elder Grant. He has learned that he cannot meet the issue." In relation to this matter, I wish to say, I have had five discussions with Mr. Hull, and, so far from being afraid to meet him in debate, my courage increases with every conflict. When he says I "dare not meet him," it makes me feel some as I would to have a boy come out in the street and challenge me for a fight. I would look upon him with pity, if not contempt, and let him go and boast that I "dare not meet him," while he enjoyed his bravo alone.

I would say to Mr. Hull, that "Elder Grant" has yet to learn "that he cannot meet the issue." Trusting in the Lord, he has no fears, nor the least thought of "backing down." If Mr. Hull really believes what he has said, he has made a mistake in the man.

Boston, Dec. 21, '69. MILES GRANT.

Thus far (Feb. 10th) the results of the discussion have been highly gratifying to the friends of truth. Mr. Hull has taken much pains to impeach the Bible and its Author. Some of his talk was really blasphemous, and should not be tolerated in society. The following are samples of the

SAYINGS OF MOSES HULL

during the discussion at Camp's Hall, West Winsted, Ct., Feb. 7th to the 11th. "Spiritualism is an improvement upon Christianity, as Christianity was upon Judaism." "Mene, mene, tekel is written upon Christianity." "Christianity has done its work." "Spiritualism is the new dispensation." "Man has all the attributes of God, and is therefore immortal, omniscient, omnipotent, and infinite." He admitted that all animals, as gnats, mosquitoes, bed-bugs, etc., are a part of God, and "immortal." "Sin is one [illegible] in the road to progress." "There is no [illegible] in the world." "All [illegible] the Christian religion came from the Egyptians." "The gospel of Matthew is a novel, and Jesus is its hero." "The Bible does not teach the resurrection of the dead." "The flesh of Jesus was not raised from the dead." "Spiritualism and the Bible stand together." "Spiritualism is an improvement on Christianity." "Not a good thing in Christianity but that Spiritualists practice." "I love the devil better than the God of the Bible." "The prophet Samuel was a blood-thirsty wretch." "Jehovah is not the infinite God."

Mr. Hull did not say one word in favor of the Bible nor its Author, but made strong efforts to destroy all confidence in either. Such are the fruits of Spiritualism. It is the worst enemy which Christianity has now to encounter.

Friday morning, Feb. 11th. Our discussion closed last evening. The friends of Jesus and the Bible are rejoicing over the results.

Intense interest has been manifested in the debate; and we trust that much good has been accomplished. Mr. Hull has great skill in throwing dust to blind the eyes of the people, and cover up the truth, making error look plausible to those who are not thoroughly posted in the Scriptures. He has good reasoning powers, large language, and is fond of discussion. This is the sixth debate we have had with him, and we feel more than ever satisfied with the results.

BRO. EDWIN BURNHAM.—We learn with sadness that Bro. Edwin Burnham is at home sick. He writes: "Your letter finds me sick. I have been sick several long, weary months. My recovery is doubtful. I am able to make no mental effort. God's will be done." Let the friends of Jesus offer earnest prayer that Bro. Burnham may be restored to health, and double usefulness, in the vineyard of the Lord. Bro. Burnham's residence is in Newburyport, Mass.

THE NEW BOOK.—The editors of the new book, to which reference has been made in the Crisis, request the prayers of the saints, that they may be able to prepare a book that shall glorify God, and be instrumental in leading many to embrace the Christ and the blessed hope. Pray that we may have special wisdom to say just what ought to be said, and no more.

CHRISTIAN UNION.—Our readers will find another valuable article in this paper from Bro. Boutell on the subject of "Christian Union." We feel sure that every true christian will say Amen to what Bro. Boutell has written. It is high time that all who intend to be ready to welcome Jesus were awake to this subject.

GOOD ADVICE.

In the February number of The Christian, we find some "Words to Preachers," that should have a careful reading by all who preach the gospel. The article contains some excellent points that should be remembered; especially, what is said concerning the "shirt collar," "long breaths," full lungs, managing the gate, and packing sermons.

Here is the article. Please read.

WORDS TO PREACHERS.

Make no apologies. If you have the Lord's message, declare it; if not, hold your peace. Have short prefaces and introductions. Say your best things first, and stop before you get prosy. Do not spoil the appetite for dinner by too much thin soup. Leave self out of the pulpit, and take Jesus in. Defend the gospel, and let the Lord defend you and your character. If you are lied about, thank the devil for putting you on your guard, and take care that the story shall never come true. Do not grumble about your pay. If you want more money, go to work and earn it. Let your beard grow. Throw away your cravat. If you do not want to 'break down,' make your shirt collar an inch larger, and give your blood a chance to flow back to the heart. Do not get excited too soon. Do not run away from your hearers. Engine drive-wheels whirl fast on an icy track, but when they draw anything they go slower. It takes a cold hammer to bend a hot iron. Heat up the people, but keep the hammer wet and cool. Do not bawl and scream. Too much water stops mill wheels, and too much noise drowns sense. Empty vessels ring the loudest. Powder isn't shot. Thunder is harmless. Lightning kills. If you have lightning you can afford to thunder. Do not scold the people. Do not abuse the faithful souls who come to meeting rainy days, because others are too lazy to attend. Preach the best to the smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and she got all Samaria out to hear him next time.

Ventilate your meeting room. Sleeping in church is due to bad air oftener than to bad manners. Do not repeat sentences, saying, "As I said before." If you said it before, say something else after. Do not end sentences, passages of Scripture, or quotations with "and so forth;" say what you mean, and stop. Leave out all words that you cannot define. Stop preaching and talk to folks. Come down from your stilted ways and sacred tones, and become "as a little child." Tell stories; Jesus did, and the common people heard him gladly. Relate your experience; Paul did, and you can hardly do better than he. One fact that you have seen or felt is worth a bushel of mouldy ideas dug out of mouldier books. Change the subject if it goes hard. Do not tire yourself and every one else out. Do not preach till the middle of your sermon buries the beginning, and is buried by the end. Beware of long prayers, except in your closet. Where weariness begins, devotion ends. Look people in the face, and live so you are not afraid of them. Take long breaths. Fill your lungs, and keep them full. Stop to breathe before the air is exhausted. Then you will not finish off each sentence*ah* with a terrible gasp*ah*, as if you were dying for want of air*ah*, as some good people do*ah*, and so strain their lungs*ah*, and never find it out*ah*, because their friends dare not tell them*ah*, and so leave them to make sport for the Philistines*ah*. Inflate your lungs. It is easier to run a saw-mill with a full pond than with an empty one. Be moderate at first. Hoist the gate a little way. When you are half through, raise it more. When you are nearly done, put on the full head of water. Aim at a mark; hit it! Stop and look where the shot struck; then fire another broadside.

Pack your sermons. Make your words like bullets. A board hurts a man most when it strikes him edgewise. A pound of feathers is as heavy as a pound of lead, but it will not kill a man as quickly. An ounce bullet will kill quicker than a sack of wool. Do not condense too many words into a few thoughts. Make your discourse proportionate. If your talk is narrow and shallow, do make it short. If it is deep, and strong, the stream may run longer. Do not think every brook is deep, because you cannot see the bottom of it, nor call a man a deep diver because he always brings up mud. Have a clear head, and your words will be clear. Know what you are talking about; then you can make others understand you. Stand for God, if you stand alone. Keep out of the clutches of party hacks, and religious politicians. Preach a straight gospel, and live up to it. Keep your distance from sin. Do not play with edge tools, nor fool with temptations. Look to stars instead of weather-cocks for guidance. Be earnest, but not wild. Keep open ears, and a close mouth. Do not be a clown. Let the devil make his own fun, carry his own mail, settle his own quarrels, and foot his own bills.

Make few promises. Learn to say no very sweetly. Keep out of debt. Do not let any one owe you more than you are able to lose. Speak to the people like your Master, as they are able to hear. Do not feed bones to babies. Do not abuse people for believing what you once believed yourself. Respect honest convictions. Judge no man. Be patient toward all. Make friends with the children. Be cheerful with the young. Keep clear of gluttony, dyspepsia, and pious grumbling. Remember, each sermon may be the last you shall preach, or your hearers shall listen to. Keep the judgment in view. Please God, and you will please christians. Let others praise you. Live for Christ. Preach the word.

THE INCREASE OF CRIME.

Almost every daily paper brings additional evidence that wicked men and women are rapidly progressing in crime. The state of things is truly alarming. Infidelity too, of the rankest kind, is rapidly spreading through the diabolical influence of Spiritualism. The time has come when men love error better than truth; darkness better than light; vice better than virtue; Satan better than Christ. Says the Chicago Tribune:

"Never was Chicago so crime-ridden as just now. A black cloud of terror seems to hang over the city, and our law-abiding citizens with one accord, as if their feelings were connected by some subtile sympathy, apprehend the danger, and cast about them for a remedy. Crime is fearfully on the increase, and assumes a bolder aspect with every succeeding deed. Criminals are literally in possession of the city, and move and act according to their own sweet will. A score of burglaries is a poor night's work; a half-dozen cases of garroting in thecourse of an evening is scarcely worthy of comment."

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

LOOK OUT FOR TARES.

"But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way."—MATT. 13:25.

Many important truths are taught by our Lord in his parables, recorded in Matt. 13. He points out the danger of those who hear the word of the kingdom, and understand it not; and of the wicked one who catches it away out of the heart. These are way-side hearers. The stony and thorny-ground hearers are likewise fruitless; but the fourth class hear the word and understand it. They are denominated the "good-ground." These bear fruit, from thirty-fold to an hundred. It appears from the second parable in this chapter, that those who sow good seed in the field should not go to sleep, so as to give the enemy the opportunity to come along and sow tares. The apostle exhorts us in 1 Pet. 5:8,—"Be sober, be vigilant; BECAUSE your adversary the devil, like a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." Paul's charge to the elders of the church at Ephesus was, to "take heed, therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers; to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."—Acts 20:28–31. Also in Gal. 1:6–10, the apostle says: "I marvel, that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel. Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

The church of God was especially troubled in its early history with Judaizing teachers; and has not been exempt from them even to the present time. Even the Roman Catholic church is a mixture of Judaism, Paganism, and Christianity. The great doctrine of justification by faith, without the works of the law, is hard for mankind to believe. The pride of man leads him to seek to do something himself of merit, as a means of his salvation; but all such thoughts are dishonoring to God. Christ's blood and righteousness is our only hope.

"'Mid flaming worlds in these arrayed,
With joy shall I lift up my head."

I am surprised that so many who profess to be looking for the coming of Christ are being entangled in this yoke of bondage; thinking it necessary to observe the Jewish Sabbath in order to be saved. The apostle Paul understood the ground-work of salvation far better than modern Judaizers, we think. In no instance, in all his epistles, has he said one word that it is the duty of the followers of Christ to keep the Sabbath day. But he did say to the Galatians, "Ye observe days, and months, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain."—Gal. 4:10, 11. In 1 Cor. 15, Paul gives us the gospel, as he says, "By which also ye are SAVED, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you." Not one word is said in this chapter about keeping the seventh-day Sabbath. As Paul declared he kept back nothing that was profitable (Acts 20:20), it follows that teaching the observance of the seventh day is no part of the gospel. God preached the gospel to Abraham four hundred and thirty years before the law was given to Moses (Gal. 3); and Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness. If Abraham could be saved without the law of Moses, I think those living in the gospel dispensation can also. It was twenty-five hundred years from creation before the law was given to [illegible], contained in the decalogue. See Ex. 16. The covenant of the law, in the which the ten commandments are especially enjoined, was given four hundred and thirty years after the covenant of promise, that God made with Abraham; and Paul says (Gal. 3:19) that this law-covenant "was added because of transgressions, TILL the seed should come to whom the promise was made"; that it "was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by FAITH. But after that faith is come, we are no LONGER under a schoolmaster." Can any thing be more plain than this language of the apostle, that we are not now under this law-covenant? Moreover, this covenant of the Sabbath was only to be observed by the children of Israel throughout their generations; as also the pot of manna was laid up before the Lord, to be kept for their generations. Ex. 16:32, 33. That the covenant of the law was especially the ten commandments, may be learned from Ex. 34:23; Deut. 4:9; 13:9–11. They were written with the finger of God, on two tables of stone. Ex. 31:18. They were deposited in the ark, in the tabernacle, in the most holy place. It (the ark) continued with the Jewish nation till the seventy years' captivity in Babylon commenced; from that point we have no record of it. It is probable that it was destroyed with the temple, by the Chaldeans, or carried by them to Babylon.

About the time of the seventy years' captivity, Jeremiah prophesied of its entire abrogation, and of the new covenant that was to take its place. See Jer. 3:16, and 31:31–35. The new covenant, which is the gospel of Christ, has taken the place of the old covenant; and Christ is the mediator of the new, as Moses was of the old. Paul says the new "was established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, because they continued not in my covenant. . . . In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old, is ready to vanish away."—Heb. 8:6–9, 13. The new testament and new covenant are synonymous terms. The first covenant was not ratified without blood. "And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basins; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar. And he took the book of the covenant and read in the audience of the people; and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words."—Ex. 24:6–8. Paul says, "And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission."—Heb. 9:22. Christ's blood is called the blood of the new testament, or covenant. See Matt. 26:28; 1 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 10:29. In the epistle to the Hebrews, Paul points out the superiority of the new covenant over the old in a masterly manner; also its entire sufficiency to perfect the people of God, and enable them to stand in the day of judgment without fault.

As there is nothing said in the new covenant about observing the seventh day, we think no one perils his salvation by refusing to keep it. On the contrary, we think the danger lies in seeking to be justified by the law of Moses, rather than by the gospel of Christ. The consequence is, many have already fallen from grace. If salvation is by the law, then Christ has died in vain. But if salvation is through Christ, then we are no longer under the law.

The view entertained by some, that Christ since A. D. 1844 has gone from the outer to the inner heavenly sanctuary, to cleanse it, is in the highest degree absurd. This idea is based upon the assumption that the 2300 days of Dan. 8:14 cover a period of time from B. C. 457 (the date where Bro. Miller commenced it), and must necessarily end A. D. 1844; and as it is declared by the angel to Daniel that then the sanctuary shall be cleansed, therefore the work of cleansing it must commence at that point. Now if B. C. 457 is the correct point from which to reckon the 2300 days of Dan. 8:14, then they must end about A. D. 1844, and the above assumption would be a legitimate conclusion. But as the premises are unsound, such conclusions must necessarily be. Now we are prepared to prove that the 2300 days did not commence B. C. 457, but did commence B. C. 426, and will end in A. D. 1875.

It is very important that the true light should shine out on this important point at the present time, when people are in so much darkness as to the reason of the passing of the time in A. D. 1844. It is an established point in my mind, that the seventy weeks of Dan. 9:24 are connected with the 2300 days of Dan. 8:14; that they are both symbolic periods of time, a day standing for a year; and that the seventy weeks were cut off from the 2300 days upon Daniel' people and holy city, through which period of time the transgression was restrained from desolating the Jews, or their city Jerusalem. This restraining commenced in the twelfth of Ahasuerus, B. C. 426, when an effort was made to destroy the whole Jewish nation (see Esther, 3d chap.), and ended in A. D. 65, when the work of their destruction commenced by the Roman army, under Vespasian and Titus. 1810 years more carry us to the cleansing of the sanctuary, which must end, according to this calculation, in A. D. 1875. We are fully satisfied that the sanctuary of Dan. 8:14 cannot be cleansed before that time arrives; and we think any attempt to make the 2300 days end before A. D. 1875 will prove a failure. Under the Jewish economy, the sanctuary, or place of worship was at Jerusalem, in the holy land; but under the Christian dispensation, the sanctuary is throughout the earth, wherever spiritual worshipers are found; and we know from the Scriptures that this earth is to be cleansed from the defilement of sin and the curse, and be filled with the visible brightness of the glory of God. Therefore, it is folly to talk of cleansing the heavenly sanctuary since A. D. 1844, because we think if it needed cleansing, it would have been done before that time. But the earth we know is still defiled, and we believe it will soon be cleansed and restored; then all error and false doctrine will be obliterated. Amen.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

☞ Philosophers hold it as a sacred truth, that he who would be happy must place a full value on his time.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRICK, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$434.12
Mary C. Wardwell	1.00
F. A. Sheldon	.25
J. F. Reed	1.00
Mrs. H. Bronson	2.00

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$642.15
Mary C. Wardwell	1.00

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$14.06
E. G. Higgins	2.50
"Right Hand"	2.50

CASH RECEIVED FOR THE BOOK

TO BE PUBLISHED BY

the Adv. Chris. Conf. of N. A.

C. S. Sherman	$20.00
Benj. Irish	5.00
H. Bailey	10.00
Geo. Tilley (five copies)	10.00
	$45.00

This amount, with the names and places of residence of the donors, has been remitted to the Treasurer of said Conference—Bro. D. MATHEWSON, Sandy Hill, N. Y. G. T. A.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

Previous acknowledgments	$24.50
S. Bidwell	1.00
Charles F. Soule	.50

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass......$12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

OUR MISSION AT MEMPHIS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—We write you at this time, to call your attention to Bro. L. F. Cole's letter from Memphis, dated Jan. 22nd, 1870, and which appeared in the Crisis of Feb. 2nd.

Bro. C. says concerning the schools, "that the Board of Education have withdrawn their support from several of the colored schools, and among others the one of which he has charge; and are very bitter in their feelings to the Mission, as a whole." We know now where we are, so far as finances are concerned. We can no longer look for aid from the Government, or Board of Education, as we have previously.

Now it lies with us to say whether the Mission shall be supported or not. Have you read the appeals of our dear Bro. Cole? If not, read them at once. Can you read those appeals, and your heart remain unmoved? Does the cause of missions, the cause of God, have a place in your heart?

Shall we remain indifferent to the pressing calls of God's servant, while in the mission field? Shall we turn a deaf ear to the calls of the divinely commissioned embassador, when in a state of destitution and want? Shall our dear Bro. and Sr. C., and other faithful missionaries of the dear Redeemer, starve for want of bread? Shall we let the mission at Memphis die for the want of financial breath?

O God! thou who always hast been with the faithful missionary of the Cross, do thou move on the hearts of thy faithful stewards to forward to the Treasurer of the A. A. M. Society the requisite means to replenish the treasury, that the pressing wants of our dear Bro. Cole may be immediately supplied.

Who will send $100, $50, $25, $10, or $5, and smaller sums, at once?

Send it NOW. Do not DEFER.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. A. A. M. Soc'y.
L. BOUTELL, Chairman of the Board.

LETTER FROM SR. E. S. MELLEN.

BRO. GRANT:—We notice in your paper to-day how glad you feel that friends are sending in funds, whereby you can supply reading matter to those who are not able to pay for it. We want to add to your happiness a little, as well as to those who furnish the means, by giving one more proof that the Lord blesses this kind of donation.

We are glad to acknowledge the reception of a free copy of the Crisis, Times, and Advent Herald, at "Clinton Arch Mission," and to know how very valuable they are to the missionaries, your readers must fancy themselves in our position a little while.

Away in New York, comparative strangers, surrounded by crime, and just now by small pox and fever; while scarce a voice is heard in this city to say to us, "Is it well with you?" Are you fed, or warmed, or protected from the merciless landlords, who are ever and anon seen turning poor tenants out on the sidewalk, for non-payment of enormous advance rent?

Such gentle inquiries seldom greet our ears; but when some one does come in, we are reminded again how hard the times are, how the money has all gone out of the market, how sick and destitute some family is, and we are appealed to for help. Ah! we believe it all, we pity and sympathize, but what shall we do? We, too, are realizing the truth of what we hear; our treasury is drained, and the most rigid economy is demanded of us. Still, however small our share is, we are yet willing to divide it, and intend to do so while we have anything left.

Only last evening, as we sat down to tea, a genteel mechanic's wife entered our room, with these words, "Husband cannot possibly get money," and he and all the chilren were hungry for supper, and had none. One of the missionaries took ours from the table, and sent them, finding something else for us, which, if not so good, was made pleasant to us in the thought, that it had been our privilege to "feed the hungry."

In the midst of this kind of life, then, think how we welcome the postman, when he brings us these papers. Now we hear words of cheer, from east and west, and can almost see the familiar faces brought to our remembrance by the names on the pages before us.

Then we carry them to others, hoping what has done us good may be also profitably divided with them. Now there are some, you know, who never feel sure that money spent in the way that you suggest (for papers and tracts) does much good. What do they call much? One soul? Ah, yes! If they could only save just one soul."

To such we would say, that two weeks since, we carried these papers to our sailor meeting, read them what was said about the coming of our Lord Jesus; followed the reading with a few earnest remarks on the subject, and now can count three humble, penitent men, who are in sorrow, seeking their risen Lord. These men soon sail to different ports, but they carry with them glad tidings, which they never did before, and they do it at the expense of somebody. Who is it?

Who finds the reading matter, and supplies the missionaries? Matthew tells us in the 25th chapter, that we shall know at the Lord's coming. And who else feels called to go out with this reading matter, and "teach all nations"? They need go no further to find them than the city of New York, where they land more than a thousand per day, of all names and people.

Those who can bear the cross, endure the privations of home and social life, can find here an abundant field. Many are sick and dying now with the prevailing epidemics, who can only be reached by personal effort. Sinners must be visited at their homes. Truth must be read and spoken to them; prayer-meetings must be held from house to house, or the command, 'Go ye out,' etc., is not complied with.

We are doing what we can on the east side of the city, but work increases on our hands; urgent requests come to us from the west side, and we know not which to attend to first. May the Master direct us all in the disposal of our time, labor, means, tracts, papers, and all, and crown these united efforts with the best of success in saving souls, is the prayer of your sister in the work,

E. S. MELLEN.

Rear 169 Allen St., New York, Feb. 1st.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT
Of the Quarterly Meeting of the U. F. M. Association.

The Union Female Missionary Association held its first quarterly meeting at Meredith Village, N. H., commencing Jan. 5th, 1870, and closing Jan. 9th, 1870. Had several meetings for business. Preaching during the meeting by Sisters E. S. Jennings, M. L. Durand, A. E. Smith, L. M. Stoddard, M. McKinstry, and L. E. Saulpaugh.

The social meetings were very interesting, and though it was a new place, the meetings increased in interest from the beginning. Several outsiders became interested in the truths of the Bible, and we trust good will be the result. (For a full report, see "Woman and her Work.") M. MCKINSTRY, Sec.

NOTE.—There are a few brethren and sisters in Meredith Village, whose hearts were encouraged, and who feel a deep interest for the cause in that place; and we trust the way has been opened for more preaching there in the future than there has been in the past, if some of God's humble ones are willing to go there and labor as he directs.

The meeting there has been a benefit to the Association. It was the best meeting it has ever held, and we trust as we continue to meet together at different times as an Association, the meetings will increase in interest and power with God and the people, and do good. M. M.

"THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL."

FATHER HYACINTHE URGING THE KINGS OF ITALY TO THEIR BLOODY WORK.

He says: "I have wished to avoid the subject of universal empire; but it comes up to-day at the heart of my subject, and I am compelled now to consider it. Universal empire involves pagan war. Its instrument is the sword—the sword of conquest, which never says, Enough; because it is wielded by the fiercest and the most cold-blooded of human passions, the passion for domination. Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, having defeated in battle his powerful neighbor the king of the Medes, felt his heart lifted up in himself, and swore by his throne that he would extend his dominion far and wide. He summoned his counsellors and his captains, and held with them in his palace what the Scriptures have so well called 'the mystery of his counsel.' A policy like his has full need of mystery. It shuns the light of day, and no wonder; for the secret of Nebuchadnezzar is no longer a secret. It has passed from empire to empire, from cabinet to cabinet, and it is to-day the object of the scorn and indignation of the whole world. He declared that the thought of his heart was this: 'To subject the whole earth to his sway.'

The secret's out! Mark it; that proud, but foolish thought—to rule the universe. He summons Holofernes, the captain of his host. 'March,' said he, 'against the nations of the west, especially against those who have ventured to disobey my commandments. Seize their strong cities, subdue their kingdoms.' Holofernes obeyed, and his innumerable hosts spread like locusts over the face of the earth. Every where they carried devastation and death, and the terror of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians. But lo! in the midst of these nations of slaves, one of those petty states on which men had looked down with scorn, and in this petty state a little hamlet, hidden among the hills of Palestine, that had never heard of the splendors of the great principalities of Asia; in the home of her fathers, in sackcloth and ashes, a young widow was mourning her husband and praying to her God. Judith riseth in the name of her imperiled country; armed with her chaste beauty, and her God-given courage, she goes alone into the barbarian camp, and returns not till she brings in her woman's hands—I had almost said virgin hands—the tyrant's head dripping with blood.

All honor to little Judea! What pity if it had become a province of that Assyrian empire with which it was related by so many ties of origin and speech! Without Judea we should be neither Frenchmen nor christians, but only a fraction of the immense agglomeration of nations that made up the Roman empire.

All honor to the little states! They were constituted by the hand of God, and I hope in him that he will not suffer them to be destroyed. His providence presides in history, and has placed them between the great states as the negation of universal empire, the pacific obstacles to the shock of their power, the plots of their ambition. The little states! They are the representatives of right in its most affecting form—right unarmed and defenseless. The little states! They are the radiating centres of the most splendid civilization from the cities of ancient Greece, that gave us an Æschylus and a Sophocles, an Aristides and a Plato, down to those republics of modern Italy, to which we owe the revival of learning."

Here, then, these little states—the Italian states—are encouraged by this Rev. Father to rise like Judith and do their work, for which "they were constituted by the hand of God." Speaking of the fusing together of nations into "vast zones," he says:

"And while they are trying to fuse together kingdoms and nations in the crucibles of this novel alchemy, our pseudo-philosophers stand by and cry out, 'Progress'! I say it is going backward toward the ages of barbarism. I come back to my book, my inspired Bible. Daniel saw them—these giant empires—both in prophecy and in history, and like Saint Peter in trance, he beheld them in the form of beasts. 'In the first year of Belshazzar, king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed, and he wrote the dream and told the sum of the matter. He saw mankind under its most natural image, a vast and surging sea, and darkness was on the face of it, and behold the four winds of heaven were in strife upon 'the great sea.' The prophet watched the storm, and presently there emerged from the billows four monstrous beasts. The first was like a lion, and had wings whereby its wrath might rage from end to end of the earth, with the swiftness of an eagle. Another, like a leopard. It had four heads, and the four quarters of the world bowed down before it. Then came the northern bear, its jaws armed with a triple row of teeth, and Daniel heard a voice saying, 'Arise, devour much flesh'; and while the bear rose to its hideous banquet, there appeared behind it another monster, more hideous and strange than all the rest.' Its teeth and claws were of iron. It did not eat, but mangled with its bloody jaws; it stamped the residue with its feet. Upon its brow it wore an ever-growing horn, the type of brute force; and this horn, the seat likewise of its spiritual pride, had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a blaspheming mouth, speaking great things against righteousness and against God. Cease! cease, ye gloomy visions! I too have beheld you with mine own eyes, not in prophecy, but in history."

This language becomes more emphatic when connected with the letter written to the General of the barefooted Carmelites at Rome. When required to be silent on religious freedom, Father Hyacinthe says:

"I do not hesitate an instant to use a language perverted by dictation, or mutilated by reticency. At the same time, I quit the convent I inhabit, and which, under the new circumstances made for me, becomes to me a prison of the soul. . . . . Therefore, I do protest, as a christian and as a priest, against those doctrines and practices which are called Roman, but which are not christian. . . . I protest, above all, against the sacrilegious perversions of the gospel of the Son of God himself, whereof the spirit and letter are equally trampled under foot by the Pharisaism of the new law. . . . And finally, I appeal to your tribunal, O Lord Jesus! . . . I have the confidence that if men condemn them upon earth, you will approve of them in heaven."

What meaneth this modern seer? Is he not saying to the Garibaldian "red shirts"—to the liberals of those "little states," Arise! Do the work that "God hath put into their hearts, to fulfill his will," like Judith of old? And shall it be done? "They shall burn her with fire"; "for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." "Mystery of council"!—Judith 2:2. How perfect the antitype. Seeking, or thinking "to subjugate the whole world." "Mystery, Babylon." "Take counsel together, and it shall come to naught; speak the word, and it shall not stand; for God is with us."—Isa. 8:10.

Thus the desire of the church, with the prayers of Fr. Hyacinthe, are crying to "the little states" to arise and do that which "God hath put into their hearts, to fulfill his will." "Then sheathe, thou sword of the Lord, rest, and be still." H. PRATT.

NEWS FROM ALL THE WORLD.

SICK MEN, OVER SEA.

For many years Turkey has been the sole political invalid on the continent. Now we have four European sick men. First, the gentleman at the East in wide trowsers, having numerous wives, but long ill with a chronic complaint. Second, Greece without money, strength or credit, and overrun with brigands, who rob and plunder; close up to the gates of Athens and within sight of the Parthenon and the Acropolis. Third, poor old Spain, whose lustreless crown is now in the second year of its itinerary begging, finding none willing to wear it, since Isabella ran away to Paris with all the jewels it once contained, and which are estimated, in a report thereon, by a committee of the Cortes at ten millions of dollars. (By the way, some think she made a better thing of it leaving Spain than she would to have remained.) Marshal Serrano, as our readers are aware, now runs all that is left of Spain, and Prim, though now out of office, has his little game to play. He is said to be persistent in respect to the boy-king—the Duke of Genoa, or nobody. The nephew of Victor Emanuel, a titular King sixteen years old, would leave Prim the Regent, or real king for five years, and after that he will trust to the chapter of accidents. His wife, a Mexican woman, proud as she is rich, and ambitious as she is beautiful, has firmly resolved, that she and her husband will run the Spanish machine, making herself "every inch a queen" all but in name. That is what makes Spain "a sick man."

Our fourth sick child is Italy. It cannot be denied that this beautiful country, that nominally acknowledges the rule of King Victor, has so far pitifully failed to come up to the expectations of her friends. Since Garibaldi whipped the Austrians and gave Italy to the Italians, she has taken little or no step upwards and onwards. Like her smaller neighbor, Greece, she is ravaged by hordes of brigands, the laws are violated, or openly defied; taxes are increased; while of internal improvements there are none. Bribery and corruption stalk in high places, and it is publicly stated that all manner of crimes are officially winked at, even to assassination, when an adequate object is to be gained.—N. Y. Express.

The following, from the N. Y. Sun, is very significant. It is entitled IMPENDING EASTERN CONFLICT.

"It is singular that the growing Eastern question, which now seems to be approaching a serious crisis, should just now excite so much interest in military circles in the United States. But such is the fact. It appears certain that a struggle is impending between the Sultan of Turkey and his vassal, the Khedive of Egypt, to decide whether the latter shall become independent, or whether he shall be deposed and the absolute control of affairs of that rich province again rest with the Sultan.

The Khedive evidently realizes that the struggle is to be one of life or death, for he has for years been earnestly engaged in preparing for the contest. He has not entered upon the war path without taking every possible means to secure success. From England and France he has purchased a large number of the heaviest and most formidable iron-clads now afloat, armed with magnificent artillery, and manned by good sailors and commanded by intelligent and experienced officers, gathered from every service in Europe.

His army has been greatly augmented and thoroughly drilled by competent officers, and armed with the very best breech-loading rifles. These he has ordered from America, and at this moment two large firms are at work day and night in filling his vast orders for repeating guns and cartridges. A large number of small arms have already been sent forward and placed in the hands of the Egyptian infantry and cavalry. But the latest call he has made upon American assistance to enable him to make a successful fight with his powerful master, has been for veteran officers who have served through our long and severe war. It is understood that several confidential agents of the Viceroy have been for some weeks in our country securing the assistance of a large number of American officers who served on either side during the rebellion, and whose reputations are made. Already a number of ex-general officers have accepted high commands in the Khedive's service, and have sailed for Egypt.

Among the ex-Confederate Generals who have sailed for Cairo to enter upon their important commands are the well-known "old regulars" Sibley, the inventor of the tent of that name, and Loring, one of the Mounted Rifles. Negotiations are going on with many others, and it is likely that fifty or sixty more gentlemen, famed as engineers, artillery, cavalry, and infantry officers, will be en route to Egypt, there to reap honors, fame, and fortune in the great Eastern conflict soon to arouse the attention of the world."

"FLAUNTING VICE."

Revolting as is such a revelation of augmenting demoralization in the metropolis of America, as the following presents, it may be best to know the truth, and understand the lesson it teaches.

"One of the, as it would appear, ineffaceable stains that opera bouffe has left in its train is the sanction given to public expositions of indecency. Five years ago, scenes such as were last night transacted in a respectable theatre were confined to the dens and slums of vice. Hid themselves away in cellars, and dark, reeking sailors dance houses. Now vice flaunts its brazen features in the face of society, and society accepts the flaunting in good nature; smiles at vice, in fact; takes her by the hand and strong arm of the law to give her aid and protection in plying her wickedness, and but few dissenting voices are heard. The press either passes the affair over altogether, or treats it in a light, jesting mood, that turns what is really a sad and degrading spectacle into a good joke.

Last year these 'French Balls,' as they are called, were introduced into New York. The public was somewhat startled at first, at the brazen effrontery of the thing, but then they were new and dazzling, and so they were repeated. Repeated, too, under the sanction of the law; for here are big, stalwart policemen, ready at an emergency to quell, as the circular which was circulated last night naively says, 'any attempt at disturbance or lewdness.' For a brief time, all goes well. The throngs of painted courtezans display their charms with a lavishness that becomes disgusting; and clustering around them may be seen the young men about town, loungers, artists, lawyers, gamblers, all mixed together in a heterogeneous mass. Later the champagne begins to have its effect. There is the shriek of a woman—she is wildly drunk, that is all, carry her out. A scuffle now, and a man is led off from the floor, his face a mass of blood. Yells and cat calls are heard from every quarter of the house—some poor intoxicated fool is exhibiting herself to gloating eyes in the mazes of the can-can. And so it goes on, until the revellers, sickened to satiety with their debauchery, slink out into the darkness of the night, the lights are put out, and New York has had another stain placed upon its fair escutcheon.

We would not croak, nor be Puritanical, but exhibitions, such as that of last night, tend more to undermine the moral character, the health, the honesty of our young men than will be imagined upon the first blush. To the unfortunate wretches who whirl by in their gilded finery they are but marts of trade, licensed by law. To the young men they are pitfalls, into which once fallen, return to the sunlight of purity is as impossible as for the painted anonymous who so boldly thrust their indecency into public notice. Three more of these balls are announced to take place, and there are probably lesser ones in contemplation throughout the city. It is the duty of the police, as conservators of public peace and decency, to prevent their occurrence, and save the city from the stinging shame attendant upon them."

C. COLEGROVE.

For the World's Crisis.

NEW TRACT, by Bro. S. S. Brewer.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—I propose to print within two weeks from date, if sufficient encouragement is given, TWENTY THOUSAND copies of a new Tract, to be issued under the following title:—

AN EXPOSITION OF PREDICTIONS uttered by our divine Lord and his holy apostles and prophets, showing their fulfillment, demonstrating by evidences of a conclusive nature, that we may expect the speedy dissolution of all earthly kingdoms will soon transpire, in harmony with the dealings of Jehovah in all past ages of the church. By S. S. Brewer.

This work will be one of Bro. Brewer's best works, and will serve as a good campaign tract at conference, tent, and campmeetings, as well as all protracted meetings, and meetings in new places. Every pioneer should be supplied with them. Every church should have a supply at their place of worship for distribution. Let every church subscribe at least for ONE HUNDRED copies. Some ought to have ONE THOUSAND copies. There ought to be FORTY THOUSAND copies of this work circulated at once. Terms given next week.

Who will order? As funds are now limited, I shall issue only what can be paid for. If twenty thousand should be ordered, they can be furnished at less than $3.00 per hundred. It will probably contain twenty-four or thirty-two pages, 12mo., and will be printed at one of the best establishments in New England. Address C. W. SARGENT, Box 426, Concord, N. H.

ANOTHER NEW WORK, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, will be issued from the press this week, and will be for sale at the Crisis office, and at the Times office, Buchanan, Mich. It is entitled AN EXPOSITION, showing the harmony of the SEVEN MESSAGES of the Apocalypse. 48 pages, 12mo. Price by mail, single copy, 15 cents.

This is a work which ought to be in the hands of every Bible student, and especially all who are troubled in regard to the third angel's message, and fear the mark of the beast, and who keep the seventh day instead of the first. Published by C. W. SARGENT, Box 426, Concord, N. H.

From Bro. G. W. Ashdown.

BRO. GRANT:—Having become somewhat acquainted with you through the Crisis, and wishing to form a more thorough acquaintanceship, I wish you to send me a copy of your most excellent paper for six months. You may think it strange for me to call you brother, but I can endorse the glorious doctrines that are set forth in your paper, and, trusting in God, I hope to know more of this despised people.

Four years ago, I was told I had no immortality; that I was a mortal being. I laughed at the idea. I had always believed till then that everybody had an immortal soul. I was also told the Scriptures did not teach it. I also laughed at that, and went to my Bible to confirm my mind of my immortality; but I searched in vain. I found I had none. I also paid strict attendance to the Baptist church, for I was and am now a member of that church. I have studied the Scriptures more diligently since than I ever did before. I saw very plainly that "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

Now, brethren, if we have this life which is to come, or, in other words, if we are immortal, how useless were those words used by the apostle Paul to Timothy. If Paul, and Timothy, and the saints of God in those days, were immortal, and could not avoid the life after death, the apostle Paul would not have used the language he did. But Paul knew that no one hath immortality but the King of kings, and Lord of lords, who dwelleth in light that no man can approach.

Port Byron, N. Y. G. W. ASHDOWN.

BRO. A. B. SHOREY writes:—"The Lord has been blessing us since the protracted meeting held by Brn. Couch and Sutherland. Quite a number have started for the kingdom. Yesterday (6th) was a day of refreshing to our little church. Truly the Lord magnified his word, and got to his name glory. Bro. D. M. Leavitt preached to us. Some new ones started. He will remain with us through this week and over next Sunday."

BRO. A. P. HYDE writes from Biddeford, Me.:—"We are having a refreshing time here. Quite a number have started within two weeks. Eleven went forward for prayers last evening. Praise the Lord."

Married.

RIPLEY—ELTON. In Burlington, Conn., Feb. 10th, by Eld. Wm. J. Ripley, EDWIN M. RIPLEY, son of the officiating clergyman, and Miss HELEN E., only daughter of Romeo Elton.

PHILLIPS—DELLING. At the house of the bride's father, Wolcott, N. Y., Jan. 5th, 1870, by W. J. Hobbs, HORACE A. PHILLIPS, and LINA DELLING, both of Wolcott.

Obituaries.

HIGGINS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Worcester, Mass., Emma L., wife of F. W. Higgins, aged twenty-two years, seven months, twenty-seven days.

Our dear sister was the subject of God's saving grace over four years since. Her faith was strong that her sleep would be but for a very short season, ere she would greet the loved of her fond heart in the land of the living.

Our sister's death was caused by hemorrhage of the lungs. She was a kind, faithful, and affectionate wife and mother. Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by Bro. M. Batchelor, from John 14: 19,—"Because I live ye shall live also"; words chosen by herself. S. S. BREWER.

HADLEY. Died, in Bradford, N. H., Jan. 7th, 1870, Bro. Thomas Hadley, aged seventy-five years.

Bro. H. experienced religion forty-five years ago, and connected himself with the Christian order. He served as deacon with that people for thirty-nine years. Some eight years since he became convinced that Jesus was soon coming. He was a respected citizen, a faithful christian, a beloved friend and christian brother. He sleeps in Jesus. Services by the writer. C. H. FLETCHER.

BASSFORD. Died, Jan. 24th, 1870, at Thomaston, Conn., of cancer, Sister Alice, wife of Bro. William Bassford, aged forty-seven years.

She was a Christian, faithful in all things. An excellent wife and mother; a kind and sympathizing neighbor, ever ready unto good works to all. Her loss will be deeply felt and mourned by every one. Her sufferings were borne with patient resignation. Her end was peace. Words of Bible hope were spoken by the writer. W. S. CAMPBELL.

EMERY. Died, in Allenstown, Feb. 5th, 1870, of typhoid fever, Bro. Mark Emery, aged fifty-six years.

The sweet remembrance of that godly example, the moral uprightness of his life, and the goodness of his heart toward all with whom he associated, imparted to the bereft ones, in the hour of separation, the consoling reflection that their loss is his eternal gain. An impressive discourse was preached at the funeral by Rev. J. Harvey, of Pittsfield, from Job 19: 25, 26.—Com.

SHOREY. Died, in East Rochester, N. H., Jan. 13th, 1870, of typhoid fever, Julina C. Shorey, aged twenty-two years and seven months.

This is the first of our little church that has fallen in death. We miss her prayers, exhortations and songs in our prayer meetings, yet we sorrow not without hope, for she died in hope of a glorious immortality when Jesus comes. The church was comforted by a discourse from D. M. Leavitt. Text, Gen. 3: 19. A. B. SHOREY.

LEAR. Died, in Concord, Dec. 5th, 1869, George A. Lear, aged thirty years.

Bro. George was a great sufferer the last six months of his life; but he bore all with patience, and died with the armor on. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his loss. Funeral services attended by Bro. J. Couch.

F. L. KNOWLES.

McINTIRE. Died, in Bath, Feb. 1st, 1870, of consumption, Sister Augusta McIntire, aged thirty-three years and seven months.

Although Sister M. was a great sufferer, she had the blessed hope of the resurrection to comfort her. May the Lord bless the aged mother in this time of affliction. H. D. REED.

FERRIN. Died, in Orange, N. H., Feb. 8th, Otis F., son of Jacob and Ann J. Ferrin, aged two years, four months and twenty-four days.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep."

J. B. EASTMAN.

DIXON. Died, in South Elliot, Me., Feb. 6th, 1870, Nellie M., daughter of Richard F. and Sarah A. Dixon, aged seven years and nine months.

Words of comfort were spoken to the afflicted by the writer, from Luke 18: 16.

GEO. W. BROWN.

STROUD. Died, at Strawberry Point, Feb. 3d, 1870, Wilton A. Stroud, only child of D. and F. E. Stroud, aged five days.

Services at the house, by the writer.

P. S. W. DEYO.

LARNED. Died, in Webster, Mass., Feb. 7th, Abigail Larned, aged sixty-six years.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

PARIS, Feb. 8. M. Rochefort was arrested as he was on the point of entering a political meeting in Rue de Flandre, running from Belleville to La Volette. Although there were great crowds of people present, and mainly of his own partisans, he made no resistance and no appeals to the crowd.

In the Corps Legislatif to-day, M. Keratry, one of the Deputies, demanded to know why Rochefort was not arrested before going to the political meeting, where five thousand people were assembled. It was not necessary that this meeting should have been thus disturbed, and the people who were participating in it aroused to violence. This act of the Government was a provocation to the disturbances which took place.

A member of the Ministry explained that the authorities had refrained from arresting Rochefort at the Chambers to avoid the scandal to which his arrest at such a place would have given rise. He asserted that the friends of Rochefort were prepared to make the demonstration which they had made, and upon this fact the Ministry would rest the responsibility of what had taken place, and the country would judge between the Ministry and the rioters. He said there need be no uneasiness for the people; the Government was animated by the best sentiments toward them.

The Minister of the Interior followed with the assertion that the friends of Rochefort had determined upon a demonstration had Rochefort been arrested at the Chambers.

M. Ollivier praised the conduct of the police in dealing with the disorder. He said they had acted with prudence and humanity.

LONDON, Feb. 8. Another cable, to connect Wales and Rhode Island, is shortly to be laid. The contract for the cable, to cost £800,000 sterling, has just been signed.

PARIS, Feb. 10. The city is tranquil. There is a strong feeling of excitement under the surface, but the ample precautions of Government prevent any manifestation of disorders. It is said that at the beginning of the present trouble the Emperor and his staff, in full uniform, were prepared, if the riot became an insurrection, to join the troops.

Feb. 11. The police authorities profess that they have discovered an extensive conspiracy against the Government, and are actively engaged in searching for the parties implicated. A great number of arrests were made last night and to-day.

It is stated that the editors of the Marseillaise and two editors of the Reveille were arrested on charges connected with the alleged conspiracy.

A policeman in plain clothes was shot and killed yesterday by a mechanic whom he was endeavoring to arrest in his own house. The man has been taken into custody.

The La Marseillaise reappeared to-day and was eagerly bought on the streets. Several citizens were killed during the recent riots and their bodies have been placed in the Morgue, but the police refuse to give any details concerning them.

LONDON, Feb. 10. The Viceroy of Egypt has concluded to send his iron-clads to Constantinople, but will withhold the rifles manufactured for him in Europe.

Feb. 11. The shore end of the India Telegraph Cable, taken out by the Great Eastern, has been landed at Bombay.

MADRID, Feb. 10. The Government has telegraphed to the Spanish Minister at Washington to make treaties of peace with the Republics of South America.

DOMESTIC.

Wiscasset, Me., Feb. 11. The shock of earthquake reported at Richmond on the morning of the 8th, was distinctly felt and heard here. It occurred at four minutes past seven and lasted three seconds.

NAPOLEON, in our judgment, never was more completely master of France than he is at this moment. He is not willing to shed blood. He does not need when the Chambers are with him almost to a man. But if he is provoked, if his lenient and patient policy is persistently misunderstood or misrepresented, he will have no choice but to again reveal himself. He can and he will, if need be, sweep the streets of Paris with grapeshot. He can and he will, if need be, accomplish another coup d' etat. The Emperor is trying the people, testing constitutional government. If it is not yet time, or if it is not proving convenient, the Emperor will be encouraged by all the respectable and order-loving citizens of France to resume the reins he has temporarily and tentatively let go. To be compelled to go back to personal government will be a triumph to the Emperor, but a damaging blow to France.—N. Y. Herald.

DULL TIMES IN NEW YORK.—A gentleman, who was in New York the present week, states that trade is very dull there this winter in nearly all branches of mercantile business. While at the Custom House on Tuesday last he was told that no vessel had arrived from a foreign port for the forty-eight hours preceding, a circumstance that had not occurred before for the past twenty years. There were at the time nearly one hundred Government inspectors waiting employment in consequence of the small number of vessels arriving.

CARDINAL ANTONELLI'S INSTRUCTIONS.—The following letter from Cardinal Antonelli, the Prime Minister of the Pope of Rome, is taken from the Nicaragua Gazette of January 1, 1870. The Cardinal thus writes to the Bishop of Nicaragua:—

We have lately been informed here that an attempt has been made to change the order of things hitherto existing in that republic, by publishing a programme in which are enunciated "freedom of education" and of worship. Both these principles are not only contrary to the laws of God and of the Church, but are in contradiction with the Concordat established between the Holy See and that republic. Although we doubt not that your most illustrious and reverend lordship will do all in your power against maxims so destructive to the Church and to society, still we deem it by no means superfluous to stimulate your well known zeal to see that the clergy, and above all the curates, do their duty. G. CARDINAL ANTONELLI.

Passing Events.

☞ The government has excluded the Papal currency from general circulation in France.

☞ George Peabody died on the fourth of November, and was finally buried three months and four days after his death.

☞ Numerous shocks of earthquake have lately been felt in Calabria, Italy, and the volcano Stromboli is in active eruption.

☞ In accordance with the order of the President prohibiting the exportation of spirits into the District of Alaska and firearms into the islands of St. Paul and St. George, the Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular of instructions to Collectors of Customs to refuse clearance to all vessels having on board distilled spirits for ports within the territory and collection district of Alaska.

☞ The Ultramontanes are exceedingly bitter against Dr. Dollinger for his letter against the proclamation of the dogma of infallibility. They everywhere denounce him, and in some quarters he is described as anti-christ.

☞ The Prussian Government has military maps of every foot of its territory, so complete that every hill, ravine, brooklet, field and forest is delineated with perfect accuracy. It is a common boast of Prussian military men, that within eight days 848,000 men can be concentrated to the defence of any single point within the kingdom.

☞ The fears that a real riot would ensue on the death of Raspail, and the consequent interment of the radical old legislator in his family tomb at Pere la Chaise, in Paris, created unusual police precautions in Paris for a week.

☞ The question of the abdication of Queen Victoria is again canvassed actively in the highest circles of English society and almost demanded by the masses.

☞ There are now upwards of 10,000 common women in Paris, making about one to every 200 of the population. Of these the city of Paris furnishes not over one third.

☞ The yearly issue of daily papers in London is 80,000,000; of weekly papers, 120,000,000; making a total of 200,000,000.

☞ The Emperor Napoleon owns one-tenth of the landed property in the provinces of Estramadura and Cuenca, in Spain. The Empress also owns the palace of Arteago and other properties. Some curiosity has been excited recently from the fact that the latter palace has been thoroughly refurnished and fitted in great haste.

☞ Numerous Russian agents are reported to be actively at work in the Danubian principalities, and fresh troubles are expected to break out in the spring.

☞ Some curious wit has discovered these little habits of the different nationalities of Bishops at the Ecumenical: The English are always taking out something to eat; the American bishops are retiring to smoke; the French bishops are passing out and talking; the Spanish bishops are in little groups talking their own politics; the Germans are silent and doing nothing.

☞ Baltimore enjoys a sensation which is likely to create a panic among pork eaters, in that city at least. A butcher was arrested a day or two since who had just killed a couple of hogs which were dying with pneumonia, and was about to distribute the infected meat among his customers when he was placed in the lock-up. Investigation proved that he had been in the habit of manufacturing the flesh of diseased hogs and cows into Bologna sausage.

☞ A cable despatch has it that the Ecumenical Council will soon deliberate on the opportuneness of the discussion of the dogma of infallibility. Opportuneness is a nice word. It reveals what is wanted and it unveils the danger.

☞ In the southern part of the province of Naples earthquakes have been so frequent lately that the inhabitants of the rural districts are flying northward.

☞ The King of Prussia declares that so long as he is on the throne of Prussia the death penalty will not be abolished.

☞ Copies of the Gazette D' Augsbourg containing a draft of the canon of Papal infallibility were seized and confiscated at the Post Office in Rome.

☞ Trailing arbutus was found in bloom in a pasture in East Princeton on the 7th inst.

☞ A hotel keeper at Munich acknowledged that he had had less trouble with one hundred Americans than with ten Frenchmen.

☞ The Papal authorities have permitted the restoration of horse-racing in Rome.

☞ Garibaldi was at Paris on the day of the great anti-Bonaparte demonstration, but left the same evening for London.

☞ It is asserted on the authority of a Venetian paper, devoted to ecclesiastical reform in the Catholic church, that Pope Pius IX. once belonged to the order of free Masons, having joined it in Philadelphia when he was a Papal Nuncio to this country, and that he continued to be a Mason two years after he became Pope.

☞ It is said there is living in Harrodsburg an old negro woman who is nearly or quite white. She is over one hundred years of age, and during the lapse of a century the black pigment which gave color to her skin has disappeared. Her face, hands, neck and arms are of pearly whiteness, and her hair is snow white, besides having lost much of the kinky appearance which is characteristic of the negro's wool.

☞ The Prince Imperial is to make a long trip through Germany and Prussia, under the guidance of his military instructor, early this year. Napoleon will accompany him a short distance.

☞ The freedmen of Louisiana are fast acquiring land, and cultivating it on their own account.

Notices.

Bro. Hook's Tent.

Bro. Wilfong, of Philadelphia, was brought to Christ through the instrumentality of Bro. J. G. Hook, about two years ago. Before his conversion, he was "a servant of sin" indeed; but for two years has been "a servant of Christ" indeed. He wishes to procure for Bro. H. a tent, as a thank-offering for what the Lord has done for him, and is doing what he can himself for that object; but he needs assistance, and I am authorized to receive contributions from any one I meet in my travels, who may wish to lend a helping hand in the matter. The tent is to be owned by Bro. H., and used as a traveling Bethel, in which perishing sinners may be won to Christ.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

Read This!

To those who intend to build wood tents at Alton Bay, N. H., next season (of which there are some fifty or more who have spoken for lots), I would say that now is the time to send their schedule of the lumber they will want, to Bro. Jeremiah Woodman, Alton, N. H. Be particular to give the size of the tent and kind of lumber. And those who have not arranged for building their tents, and those who do not intend to build their tents themselves, should write to Bro. Joseph Langley, Pittsfield, N. H., or to me at New Durham, N. H., so that arrangements can be made in season. J. G. SMITH.

To the Conn. Brethren.

I am again obliged to postpone my visit to Conn. on account of sickness in my family. This time it must be postponed indefinitely. My wife is now so very low, we have but faint hopes of her recovery. I desire your sympathies and prayers while passing through these dark hours of affliction. C. H. SWEET.

Millville, Mass., Feb. 9th, 1870.

[Feb. 12th.—We learn to-day that Sr. Sweet has fallen asleep.—ED.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Quarterly Conf. will meet at the Christian Chapel, at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., Friday evening, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited. Come praying for the blessing of God upon this meeting.

Trains leave Genesee Valley Depot, Rochester, N. Y., for Honeoye Falls, 7-45 A. M. and 4 P. M. Change cars at Rush Junction.

WARREN J. HOBBS.

Notice.

If any church or congregation are desirous to have the Mass. Annual Conference with them in April, please let us know as soon as possible by letter, addressed to S. W. THURBER, Chelsea, Mass.

Dedication.

The new Chapel at Chicopee Falls, Mass., will be dedicated Saturday, Feb. 26th, at 2 P. M.

Protracted Meeting.

The Lord will, there will be a protracted meeting at East Ackworth, to commence March 6th, and hold as long as duty requires. Let there be a rally of the children. Come to work. Preaching by Brn. E. Cotton, T. L. Hall, and others.

T. L. HALL.

Notice.

Bro. Benjamin Saulpaugh, of Goffstown Village, N. H., has been chosen as a steward of the church, to whom friends can send what they feel the Lord would have them, and he will see that it is judiciously used for Bro. Manning's support and comfort. J. G. SMITH.

Conference.

The "Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference" will be held at Frankfort, Me., commencing Thursday, March 10th, 1870, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and worship with us. The church here love to "entertain strangers." Inquire for Josiah Woodman. F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

There will be a conference at the Cummings' school-house, in Greene, six miles above Lewiston, on the east side of the Androscoggin river, to commence Thursday evening, Feb. 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. A. Libby and others are expected to preach the word. May the blessing of God attend the effort.

For the brethren, E. M. HAGGETT.

Protracted Meeting.

We shall commence a protracted meeting at Northville, in the town of Newport, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 20th, and probably hold it every evening through the week, and as much longer as duty calls. We heartily and cordially invite all who love God, of every name or order, to come and labor with us for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the comforting and perfecting of the saints. E. COTTON.

Notice.

The second quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord willing, at Loudon Ridge, to commence Thursday, Feb. 24th, at ten o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to attend. May the Lord greatly bless. T. W. PIPER.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. LANG.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. WHITEHEAD, West Meriden, Conn., Box. 4.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. GEORGE E. LEE, Brimfield, Mass.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. ALBERT LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.
Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.
Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 81 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.
A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $1.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.
BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.
A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.
A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. [illegible]

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Minot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
A. Simpson........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. Munger........Friday evening, Feb. 25th and over Sunday, Feb. 27th.

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
Geo. A. Streeter........Sunday, Feb. 20th
J. S. White........Sunday, March 6th
J. G. Smith........Sunday, March 13th

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
A. Simpson........Thursday evening, Feb. 17th
Enoch Morrill........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Zina Ford........Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
H. Munger........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
S. S. Brewer........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Couch........Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell........Sunday, March 13th
J. S. White........Sunday, March 20th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.
S. W. Thurber......Sundays, Feb. 13th, 20th and 27th

Hartford, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
MILES GRANT.

Fayville, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Wakefield, Mass........Sunday, March 6th
Fairhaven, Mass........Sunday, March 13th
C. GOODRICH.

Athol, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Vernon, Vt........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Manchester, N. H........Sunday, March 6th
L. BOUTELL.

Vernon, Vt........Sunday, Feb. 13th
Hartford, Ct........Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th
H. PRATT.

Lowell, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Loudon Ridge, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN COUCH.

Webster, Mass........Thursday evening, Feb. 17th
Worcester, Mass........Friday evening, Feb. 18th
Chelsea........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Boston, (Lowell Street)........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Between the two Sabbaths at liberty.
H. MUNGER.

Brimfield, Mass........Sabbath, March 6th
RUFUS BAKER.

New Bedford, Mass........Feb. 13th to 26th
Providence, R. I........March 6th to 10th
Anthony, R. I........March 11th to 14th
New Britain, Conn........March 15th to 25th
F. H. BURBANK.

Fairhaven, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Raccoonborough, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Rochester Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN & JANE DAVIS.

West Abington, Mass........Sunday, March 6th
C. E. BARNES.

Charlton, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Z. FORD.

Wales, Mass., (as Bro. Ainsworth may arrange), evenings, Feb. 18th and 19th, and over Sunday.
E. OWEN.

East Landaff, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Lake Village, N. H......Tuesday evening, March 1st
E. S. MOULTON.

West Deerfield, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
G. W. RANDALL.

Rochester, N. H., (Village)........Sunday, Feb. 20th
J. PINKHAM.

Nashua, N. H........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
JOHN H. DADMUN.

Warren Summit, N. H., Saturday evening, Feb. 19th, Sundays, 20th and 27th, and on as the Lord directs.
DANIEL D. PAGE.

Manchester, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
D. F. LEAVITT.

Haverhill Centre, N. H........evening, Feb. 17th
North Haverhill, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
East Lyman, (Cowen school-house), evenings, Feb. 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th.
Swift Water, N. H........evenings, March 3d and 4th
Haverhill Center, N. H........Sunday, March 6th
Warren Summit, N. H........evening, March 10th
Meredith Village, N. H........evening, March 11th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)..Sunday, March 13th
Concord, N. H., (Bethel)........evening, March 15th
Manchester, N. H........evening, March 16th
Brentwood, N. H........evening, March 17th
Seabrook, N. H., (with Bro. Wm. C. Stewart), evenings, March 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th.
A. A. HOYT.

Clinton, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
New Britain, Conn.....Sundays, March 13th and 20th
S. S. BREWER.

Sabbattusville, Me........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Bowdoin, Me., (Adams' school-house), Sun., Feb. 27th
Will Bro. Levi Totman go with me?
Bath, Me........Sunday, March 6th
H. S. MITCHELL.

Kennebunk Landing, Me........Sunday, Feb. 20th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Carthage, Me., (Newman school-house).....Feb. 20th and onward as the Lord directs.
Weld, Me., (Town House)........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Brethren, come filled with the Spirit.
A. A. ABBOTT.

South Elliot, Me........Sunday, March 20th
WM. H. MITCHELL.

Kennebunkport, Me....Sundays, March 13th and 20th
N. F. NASON.

Corinna, Me., (at the Chapel)......Sunday, Feb. 20th
Holden, Me., (Clewley Chapel)........Sunday, March 6th
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

Sebec, Me., (where Bro. Wm. Harriman may appoint), Friday evening, March 11th, Saturday evening, March 12th, and Sunday, March 13th.
JOSHUA LIVERMORE.
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

Lafayette, R. I........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
J. T. DIXON.

Cabot, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Groton, Vt........evening, March 3d through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
North Haverhill, N. H., (as the Brn. arrange), evening, March 9th.
Piermont, N. H., (Town House), evening, March 12th and over the Sabbath, March 13th.
Porter Village, Me....Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
T. E. LANG, JR.

Cheshire Street, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

Woodstock Valley, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
P. S. BUTLER.

Great Falls, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Manchester, N. H........evenings, Feb. 25th and 26th and Sunday, the 27th.
East Rochester, N. H........Sunday, March 6th
WM. C. STEWART.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House), evening, Feb. 24th and over the Sabbath.
D. M. LEAVITT.
JOHN H. EVANS.

Limerick, (Tuft's neighborhood)...Sunday, Feb. 20th
B. S. EMERY.

Lake Village, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Hopkinton, N. H., (Town Hall Building)...March 6th
C. W. SARGENT.

Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house).....Feb. 20th
Z. T. WOOD.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Feb. 20th
SIMEON ROBY.

Machiasport......Feb. 20th, and onward indefinitely.
I. K. LOMBARD.

As I cannot sell my team, I have given up the idea of going west. I. K. L.

West Ossipee, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Lynn, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. SMITH.

South Holden (days)........Feb. 26th and 27th
Emerson's Mill, Levant........evening, Feb. 24th
Levantville........evening, Feb. 25th
ISRAEL DAMAN.

Meredith Centre, Dolliff school-house......Feb. 19th and Sunday.
J. L. CHUTE.

Alton Corner........Sunday, Feb. 20th
H. M. BRYANT.

Porter Village, Me........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Malvin Village........Feb. 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Plainville........Friday evening, Feb. 18th
Southington, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
New Britain........Tuesday evening, Feb. 22d
Westfield, Mass........Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d
Danielsonville........Friday evening, Feb. 25th and the following Sunday, the 27th.
Bridgeport........Tuesday evening, March 1st
ANNA E. SMITH.

Bridgewater, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Plymouth, (Union Hall)....evenings, Feb. 22d and 23d
North Springfield, Vt....Sundays, March 6th and 13th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Vernon, Vt........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Scitico, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 27th
A. M. [illegible]

Dover, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th and through the week following.
Chicopee Falls, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 27th and onward as the Lord may direct.
Should be happy to supply the many churches who have sent such pressing invitations of late, but cannot.
JOHN G. HOOK.

Bristol, Vt........Sabbath, Feb. 20th and onward until Friday evening.
Addison, Vt., Sabbath, Feb. 27th, and continue through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
T. M. PREBLE.

Waterbury, Ct........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Tylerville........evening, Feb. 25th
Chester........evening, Feb. 26th
East Haddam........Sabbath, Feb. 27th
G. L. WHITE.

Exeter, N. H........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
ALLEN DAMON.

Lewiston........Sunday, Feb. 20th
JARED WHITMAN.

Middlebury, Pa........Feb. 20th
Lyon's District, Steuben Co., N. Y., Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d.
Merchantville, N. Y., Feb. 24th, and over the following Sabbath.
J. W. TAYLOR.

Hartford, (Talcott and Post's Hall), Sunday, Feb. 20th
W. N. PILE.

Cohocton........Feb. 19th and 20th
C. F. SWEET.

Brimfield, Mass........evening, Feb. 14th
Holden, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 27th
River Point, R. I........Sunday, March 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Lynn, Mass........Sunday, March 6th
Preach and break bread. M. BATCHELOR.

Collinsville, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th to commence a series of protracted meetings.
H. K. FLAGG.

Warehousepoint, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
S. W. BISHOP.

Scitico, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Warehousepoint........Sunday, Feb. 27th
H. H. DICKINSON.

Prospect, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 20th
S. WOODRUFF.

North Hyde Park, Vt., (where Bro. Lathrop may appoint), Friday evening, Feb. 18th, and over the following Sabbath.
Whitefield, N. H., Feb. 26th, and during the week following, and will preach, if the brethren wish to have me, evenings and on Sabbath, if they are not supplied.
J. A. CLEAVELAND.

South Vernon, Vt........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th
Will Bro. Merrill meet me at the depot, Feb. 18th?
GEO. W. BROWN.

Westfield, Mass........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Woodstock Valley, Ct........Sunday, Feb. 27th
I. B. POTTER.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff school-house).....Feb. 20th
N. GLIDDEN.

Blue Point Scarborough, Me........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
Hollis Centre, Me........Sunday, Feb 27th
T. P. S. HAMPSON.

East Rochester, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 20th
WM. BODGE.

North Somers, Feb. 20th, through the week, and over Lord's day, the 27th.
If any of the churches between Somers and Boston wish my labors in a protracted effort, write me immediately.
A. D. FLAGG.

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
M. E. Otis........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
P. S. Butler........Sabbath, Feb. 27th

SALEM, MASS.
C. E. Barnes........Sunday, Feb. 20th

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
W. N. Pile........Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

LAWRENCE, MASS.
J. S. White........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.
A. Simpson........Sunday, Feb. 27th
S. S. Brewer........Sunday, March 6th

EXETER, N. H.
Allen Damon........Sunday, Feb. 20th
J. Pinkham........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Harvey........Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell........Sunday, March 13th
T. W. Piper........Sunday, March 20th
A. Ross........Sunday, March 27th

DOVER, N. H.
E. S. Moulton........Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell........Sunday. March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
A. Ross........Sabbath, Feb. 20th
C. H. Fletcher....Sabbaths, Feb. 27th and March 6th
J. Couch........Sabbath, March 13th
A. Simpson........Sunday, March 20th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
F. H. Burbank........Sunday, Feb. 27th
Allen Damon........Sabbath, March 6th

HAMPTON, N. H.
Geo. A. Brown........Sabbath, Feb. 13th
Geo. W. Brown, of So. Elliot, Me..Sunday, Feb. 20th
N. M. Davis........Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. Smith........Sabbath, March 6th

SEABROOK, N. H.
J. R. Boynton........Sunday, Feb. 20th
A. P. Moore........Sunday, Feb. 27th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
D. M. Leavett........Sunday, Feb. 20th
C. Goodrich........Sunday, Feb. 27th
E. S. Moulton........Sundays, March 6th and 13th

BONNY EAGLE, ME.
Jeremiah Hill........Sunday, Feb. 20th

PORTLAND, ME.
Henry Pratt........Sunday, Feb. 20th

BIDDEFORD, ME.
W. H. Mitchell........Sundays, Feb. 20th and 27th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)
G. L. Teeple........Sunday, Feb. 20th
B. Hitchcock........Sunday, Feb. 27th

BRISTOL, CT.
B. Hitchhock........Sabbath, Feb. 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
Rufus Wendell........Sunday, Feb. 20th
Wm. Stewart........Sunday, March 6th
W. N. Pile........Sunday, March 13th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.
G. L. Teeple........Sunday, Feb. 27th

MINNESOTA.
Winona........Sabbath, March 6th
Utica........March 10th and over the 13th
St. Charles........March 14th and 15th
Castle Rock........March 17th and 20th
Rockford........March 27th
Forest City........April 1st and over the 3d
Prescott, Wis........April 10th
O. R. FASSETT.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Brethren wishing to correspond with the church at Wakefield, Mass., will please address G. R. TYZZER, Cor. Sec.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for Loudon Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with N. McCULLOCH, 4 Eagle Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in South Berwick (Great Works), Me., will please correspond with Bro. Harrison Dow, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Vernon, Vt., will please correspond with J. C. Allen.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 [illegible]kham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany. Preaching the first Sabbath in each month by resident Elder H. H. Dickinson.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. PEWNEE, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford, Ct., to preach, will first correspond with Richard Hoosak.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with JOSEPH CURTISS.

Business.

Letters Received.

F H Chamberlain, D Clow, F Tripp, H M Rose, G Carlos, W J Hobbs, B Spalding, J B Cook, J G Smith, C C Ramsey, H C Smith, A Bellows, M E Chute, A E McAllister, A K Frick, E W Wilson, E J S Rice, S Ayres, B Knapper, A P Hyde, J B Eastman, J E Ainsworth, Geo Trask, P S W Deyo, C H Sweet, H D Reed, D Cogswell, H McLeod, G W Smith, E M Baker, C M Bixby, S L Manley, C Murphy, W Deverell, S E Brown, S D Remick, L C McKinstry.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE
Advent Christian Publication Society,
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version, as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, postpaid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.25; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 35c; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 15c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc. etc. Leather, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Extra gilt, $4.50; by mail, $4.66. Morocco, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.26; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERYBODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 13c. by mail, 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 234. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

"THE PENALTY OF SIN." By O. R. Fassett. By mail, single copy, 5c; 40 dozen.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75.00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 16 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.00; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $3.50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.25; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth........75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers........60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers........50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home........16 pp.
2. Life Insurance........16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!........8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?........8 pp.
5. About God (for children)........4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing........4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ........4 pp.
8. Now........4 pp.

The above printed tracts, envelope size, will be sent, postpaid:

One set (84 pp.)........[illegible]
[illegible] pp.........$1.00
[illegible] pp. (by express, not prepaid)........$[illegible]

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

WATCHWORDS OF LIFE.

Hope, while there's a hand to strike!
Dare, while there's a young heart brave!
Toil, while there's a task unwrought!
Trust, while there's a God to save!
Learn, that there's a work for each!
Feel, that there's a strength in God!
Know, that there's a crown reserved!
Wait, though 'neath the cloud and rod!
Love, when there's a foe that wrongs!
Help, when there's a brother's need!
Watch, when there's a tempter near!
Pray, both in thy word and deed!

Evening Hours.

BY

E. P. Woodward.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

FORGIVENESS.

Great is the mystery of forgiveness to those who have not felt its power. The holy calm that rests upon the troubled soul, when Christ has spoken peace, they cannot understand. The peace and joy which comes when pardon is received is far beyond their comprehension. The cleansing power of Christ's atoning blood seems but a mockery. How can a heart, dark with the sins of years, become "whiter than snow"? How can the memory of sin give place to the hope of glory? What shall be done to wipe out the records of the past? How shall we right the wrongs which crushed our victims to the earth, and hid them in the grave? Oh, who shall roll back the terrible tide of evil first started by that one temptation, which destroyed our brother's soul? Can the peace of God abide with him whose hands are stained with blood?

He only who knows the mighty power of pardoning love, can see how this is so. The mystery cannot be solved by human wisdom. Men may scoff at the idea of sins forgiven, and mock the God who remembers sin in mercy, but it is no less true.

If God should take men at their word, and give them justice instead of mercy, their boasted power to atone for their own sins, by suffering the penalty which Nature has ordained, would be of no avail. What natural punishment is there for him who "putteth the cup to his neighbor's lips"? What penalty will Nature inflict on him whose pathway in life has been marked by ruined hopes, blasted virtue, and the blood of souls? Remorse? But that will not bring back the peace which guilt destroyed. No remorse, or tears, or anguish, can ever restore the purity of the heart defiled by sin. The childlike trust in earthly friends, the undoubting faith in Heaven, have passed away; and while the years of God endure, no sorrow or repentance can bring them back. Much more is man powerless to atone for wrongs done to his fellows. If he cannot lift himself out of the terrible depths, how shall he help those who fell through his treachery and vileness? Who shall right these wrongs?

Christ alone can do this. He has atoned for the whole. The broken law of God is what demands justice. Against Him was man's rebellion planned; and upon his Son was poured the gathered rage and treasured wrath of earth's centuries. Man's first sin was rebellion; his last, and greatest, rejection of Heaven's great forgiveness. All else is as a drop in ocean's depths. The bitter fruits of sin have followed,—hollow and unsatisfying,—but THE SIN AGAINST GOD, who can tell it? And when that is forgiven, and His smile is ours again, what wonder that the world is full of glory, and the heart, of joy. He will right the wrongs. He will wipe out the stains. And in the unfoldings of the great Future, we shall see that, despite our madness and hate, all things have worked together for good to those that love Him who "doeth all things well."

THE THREE HEAVENLY WITNESSES.

"For there are three that bear record (in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth), the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one."—1 JNO. 5: 7, 8.

This passage is generally admitted to be the only positive testimony on the question of the Trinity, but it is considered to be sufficient, even if no other scripture teaches the same doctrine. And though, even it be the dictate of inspiration, it might still be doubted whether it proved as much as it is usually supposed to, yet such would probably be the inference. But who ever heard a Trinitarian minister admit that all that part of these verses which is ever claimed to prove the triune nature of God, is plainly and undoubtedly spurious? With the views generally held by Christians in reference to the Bible, such a statement may seem to strike at the very root of our confidence in its divine origin. But an intelligent belief in the truth of the Bible, will not be shaken by such a fact. The additions or subtractions of friends or foes, will never go so far as to touch the foundation stones on which the structure rests. It may mar the beauty, and thus perhaps serve to destroy the idolatry of a book, but that is all.

That part of this passage enclosed in a parenthesis, is not found in the most ancient Greek manuscripts, and in but very few of the modern ones. It is not found in any of the following translations,—mostly translated very early:—the Arabic, the Ethiopic, the Coptic, the Persian, the Syriac, and the Russian. And it was not quoted by Christian writers for five hundred years after Christ. This would seem sufficient to settle the question; but the testimony of Cardinal Mais, a Roman Catholic, will not be amiss. In his Vatican Bible, translated by Robt. Ornsby, he says of this passage, "It does not occur in the Vatican manuscript; and only two or three Greek manuscripts of a late date have been ascertained to contain it, though others have been inferred, or reported to exist." And the only authority he offers for believing it to be inspired, and which he thinks should be sufficient—to a Catholic—is the authority of the Fathers.

The true reading of the passage then is, "For there are three that bear record, the Spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." So there is nothing here which conflicts with what Paul says in 1 Cor. 8: 6. "But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, AND one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him."

"ABOUT ONE IN TWENTY-FIVE."

A somewhat practical, business-like, self-made, and withal, successful physician, has just given a little incident which may possibly throw some light on the question of success or failure on the part of those whose business it is to "win souls," and suggests the remedy whereby the labors of a life-time may be blessed by abundant and ever-increasing fruits, whereas now there may be promise only of fruitless endeavor, and unrequited toil.

"My old Professor, with whom I studied, though a scientific, thoughtful man, was, so far as concerned pecuniary benefit from the practice of his profession, unsuccessful. He was very skillful, but unable to build up a large business.

One day, while conversing with me in my office, he suddenly remarked, 'I don't see how it is. You have only spent five years in this business; I have spent thirty. Yet, where I get one dollar, you get twenty-five. What is the reason.'

I turned the conversation, and presently called his attention to the passers-by. How many of those who pass here, do you suppose, may properly be termed literary? 'About one in twenty-five,' was the response. 'Well, that one is your customer, the other twenty-four are mine.' He saw the point."

The plainest words are the most effective. The homely greeting of friendship, and the rough welcome of love, have a mightier power to win the heart, than the careful words and studied phrases of culture and refinement. He who would move the masses, and mould them to his will, must use plain words,—words that will sink into the heart,—words that are packed with thought and solid with meeting, and which will pierce through all the soft and pliable defences built up by Satan, and when once securely lodged in the soul, will expand and fill the whole being with the truths they contain. Deal not with sin in a roundabout way. Take the shortest path to find eternal truth. Waste no ammunition firing around a corner. "Thou art the man" will prove a more terrible weapon than a volume on human duties. The solemn warnings of a coming judgment will have a mightier power to shake the foundations of earthly hopes and sinful joys, than all the lore of Greece and Rome. It matters not how wise and great; man must be saved by the blood of Christ. And when the wise man once begins to ask, "What shall I do to be saved?" he finds himself as feeble and ignorant as a child. The learning of the schools is of little avail when the ship goes down amid the breakers' roar. It is the life-boat, then, and not philosophy, or literature. Salvation; settle that first, and let the rest be as it may.

The culture and polish which learning gives, is proper and important in its place; but, to have the greatest success, even with the learned, a man must speak plain, simple words. In preaching Christ, the wisdom of this world becomes foolishness, and the wealth of this world, poverty.

The enemies of Christ understand this matter. Amid all the mysticism they throw around their words, they make plain and unmistakable one thing at least, their opposition to Christ as a Savior. And learned disquisitions, subtle theories, and worldly philosophy, are of little avail to overcome this enmity of the human heart, when compared with the resistless force of the sword of the Spirit, when wielded by an earnest, practical, common-sense Christian. E. P. W.

For the World's Crisis.

LITTLE MINNIE, ETC.

Many questions are asked me about Minnie, and I will in a few words give all the information I can concerning her. Her birth-place was Allentown, N. J. She was not a slave. Her mother was a quadroon; that is, but one quarter colored. Doubtless Minnie's father is a white man. We know not his whereabouts. He has never done anything for her support. Minnie had a brother, but both brother and mother are dead.

Before we took her into the Mission Home she lived with her grandmother, a middle-aged mulatto, in the worst section of the city of Philadelphia. When we closed the Home, she returned to her grandmother. In a few months from that, her grandmother placed her in a colored family in a country village about thirty miles off. There she staid about one year, and in many respects was sadly neglected. During that time she was not sufficiently clad, and did not enter a church, school-house, or prayer meeting.

Learning her circumstances, I wrote to her grandmother and soon obtained the child, who is now nine years old. I hope eventually to obtain the grandmother's consent to get her a home, but until then must board her with some one where she can have school and religious privileges. She is nearly white, an octoroon, with blue eyes, and dark brown curling hair. Her disposition is quite good in many respects, but white as she is she retains some of the characteristic qualities of the negro race. She is easily flattered, a little vain, and quite lively. She learns readily, and has a retentive memory. Is very affectionate, and generally obeys the commands given her at once, and that without pouting, crying, or stamping her feet.

All things considered, we think her an interesting little girl, and worth the efforts that we are exerting in her behalf to save her from the Sodom-like iniquity of the places where she has lived when not with ourselves. She is taking a trip with me to see some of her little and big friends, and returns to Philadelphia next month.

Our mission work in Philadelphia will still go on, but not nearly as extensively as heretofore. It is my purpose to do pastoral work amongst our own people (Adventists) in Philadelphia, and to take more time for study than I have in the past, yet I shall spend a portion of each week in the mission district, and hold meetings, visit, etc., etc. We have no schools or mission house, yet we can by the blessing of God still do much good. My Post Office address from now until February 25th., will be New Bedford, Mass. Yours in Christ,

Lawrence, Mass. F. H. BURBANK.

THREE STEPS TO HEAVEN.—The Rev. Rowland Hill once visited a poor man, of weak intellect, and in conversing with him, said: "Well, Richard, do you love the Lord Jesus Christ?"

"To be sure I do; don't you?"

"Heaven is a long way off," said the minister "and the journey is very difficult."

"Do you think so? I think heaven is very near."

"Most people think it is a very difficult matter to get to heaven."

"I think heaven is very near," said Richard again, "and the way to it is very short; there are only three steps there."

Mr. Hill replied: "Only three steps!"

Richard repeated: "Yes, only three steps."

"And pray," said the pastor, "what do you consider those three steps to be?"

"Those three steps are: out of self, into Christ, into glory."

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 3.

BY S. A. BREWER.

"Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down; for the press is full; the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great."—JOEL 3: 13.

Such will be the command of the Almighty to his "mighty ones," when the last sand of probation sinks from the nearly exhausted glass of time, and the last lingering knell of mercy dies away upon the ears of the most consummately degenerate race of mortals that ever trampled the mercy and laws of God under their feet. Certainly it is being done with an impunity unparalleled in either of its immoral or corrupt predecessors, Sodom, or idolatrous, backslidden Israel. Read the testimony of an inspired witness against them: "And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand; and thy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations: but as if that were a very little thing, thou wast corrupted more than they, in all thy ways. As I live, saith the Lord God, Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters. Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of dread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy." Ezk. 16: 46–49.

Pride, fulness of bread, abundance of idleness, non-strengthening of the hand of the poor and the needy, for comparison with the giant iniquities of this boasted age of science and improvements, are truly very trivial matters, to this easy-conscience generation. Said Prof. Finney in 1846, in speaking of the condition of the church, "Every flash of light that breaks on our mind, revealing more and more the depth of this degeneracy, is painfully agonizing. All tells of the guilt and shame of Zion we love. We need not expand this painful subject. Suffice it that the evidence thickens and rolls heavily upon us to show that the churches generally are becoming sadly degenerate. They have gone so far from the Lord, and he has withdrawn himself from them."

Said an English writer, a minister, "Repentance is out of the question. It would be folly to speak of it. When the evangelical world encourages our enormities, when the gospel of Christ is made the cloak of our avarice and pride, the cause is past all remedy."

Let us in a brief manner glance at a few of the iniquities of this fast and last age. Saith our Lord, "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for the crime of fornication, and marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery." Both of which is done without a blush, and both adulterer and adulteress glory in their shame.

Among the multitude of legal easy-conscience Counselors-at-Law, who advertise for the patronage of the increasing numbers who desire to be instructed how they may be separated, one offers to give advice for filthy pelf, and inform them how they may do it with impunity according to law, and a New York paper advertises—

"Divorces legally obtained in another State without publicity or crimination. Incompatability of temper, desertion, etc., sufficient cause. All cases guarantied and confidential. Advice free. Apply to ——, Counselor-at-Law."

In the language of an eminent writer, such laws are made "to under-prop iniquity"; and such public appeals for patronage are nothing less than a bid to teach those who are so disposed how they can sin against God with an easy conscience.

The above evil is not altogether outside of the professedly religious community, as some of us have had sad recollections of, and also from the following doings of a learned and very numerous and influential body of christian ministers, who are alarmed at the above sin, and with it the crime of "infanticide." I present the reader with their action on the above sins against God and each other.

"INFANTICIDE AGAIN.

The committee on bills and overtures reported a series of resolutions in relation to the matter of infanticide, etc., which had been referred to them:

The committee on bills and overtures, to whom was referred the paper relating to divorce and infanticide, beg leave to report that they recommend the adoption of the following:

That it is with great pain we are constrained to admit the increasing prevalence in many parts of our country of unscriptural views of the marriage relation, in consequence of which the obligations of that relation are disregarded by many, and separations of husbands and wives and divorces for slight and unwarrantable reasons are becoming more frequent every year. Nor can we shut our eyes to the fact that the horrible crime of infanticide, especially in the form of the destruction by parents of their own offspring before birth, also prevails to an alarming extent.

The evils which these errors and crimes have already brought upon the country, and the worse evils which they threaten in the near future, make it imperative, as we believe, that the whole power of the ministry and church of Jesus Christ, should be put forth in maintenance of truth and of virtue in regard to these things. Many causes have operated to produce a corruption of the public morals so deplorable, prominent among which may be mentioned the facility with which divorces may be obtained in some of the States, constant promulgation of false ideas of marriage and its duties by means of books, lectures, etc., and the distribution through the mails of impure publications; but an influence no less powerful than any of these is the growing devotion to fashion and luxury of this age, and the idea which practically obtains to so great an extent, that pleasure instead of the glory of God and the enjoyment of his favor is the great object of life.

It is, therefore, the duty of the church of Christ to oppose in every practical way these and all other corrupting agencies and tendencies, and we especially urge upon all ministers of the gospel the duty of giving instruction to the people of their respective charges as to the scriptural doctrine concerning the marriage relation. We warn them against joining in wedlock any who may have been divorced upon other than scriptural grounds. We also enjoin upon church sessions the exercise of due discipline in the cases of those members who may be guilty of violating the law of Christ in this particular. This assembly regards the destruction by parents of their offspring before birth with abhorrence, as a crime against God and against nature, and as the frequency of such murders can no longer be concealed, we hereby warn those that are guilty of this crime that except they repent they cannot inherit eternal life. We also exhort those who have been called to preach the gospel, and all who love purity and the truth and who would avert the just judgment of the Almighty God from the nation, that they be no longer silent or tolerant of these things, but that they endeavor by all proper means to stay the flood of impurity and cruelty.

We call upon all to remember that marriage is honorable, not only in itself, but in its ends. And those who seek to avoid the responsibility and cares connected with the bringing up of children, not only deprive themselves of one of the greatest blessings of life and fly in the face of God's decrees, but do violence to their own natures, and will be found out in their sins even in this world."

Truly, the world inside and outside of the church presents a dismal, dark, and truly heart-rending aspect.

A writer a few years since in Kentucky, to the New York Journal of Commerce, said among other items of discouragement:

"Discord, strife and enmity pervade all ranks of society. They have entered the counting-room, the social circle, the school-house, and the church; and where friendship and concord once existed, they have arrayed husband against wife, father against son, brother against brother, friend against friend. So universally is this the case throughout this state at present, that the circle where disaffection does not exist forms an exception to the general rule. What will be the result of all this? Where or when it will end, God only knows. Truly we have fallen upon evil times."

The answer is plain where and when it will end; in the harvest, at the end of this age, or "the end of the world." It will be as thus described by the poet:—

"Meanwhile the earth increased in wickedness,
And hasted daily to fill up her cup.
Satan raged loose, Sin had her will, and Death
Enough. Blood trod upon the heels of blood;
Revenge, in desperate mood, at midnight met
Revenge; war brayed to war; deceit deceived
Deceit; lie cheated lie, and treachery
Mined under treachery, and perjury
Swore back on perjury, and blasphemy
Arose with hideous blasphemy, and curse
Loud answered curse; and drunkard, stumbling, fell
O'er drunkard fallen; and husband husband met
Returning each from others' bed defiled;
Thief stole from thief, and robber on the way
Knocked robber down; and lewdness, violence
And hate, met lewdness, violence and hate.
Oh, earth! thy hour was come; the last elect
Was born; complete the number of the good;
And the last sand fell from the glass of Time.
The cup of guilt was full up to the brim;
And Mercy, weary with beseeching, had
Retired behind the sword of justice, red
With ultimate and unrepenting wrath."—Pollock.

Such, alas! is earth in turpitude at this precise hour, and "the great day of God hasteth greatly."

Said a writer a few years since, hailing from Rhode Island, in the Christian Advocate and Journal, "I was born within ten miles of Boston, and have resided in it, and have intimately known it for fifty years, and have some acquaintance with its history, and I think that I may safely say that there never has been a time, since it was founded by the old Puritans, when its inhabitants were relatively so poorly supplied with the means of grace, and its public morals at so low an ebb."

It certainly hath not improved in its morals since that time, and yet amid all the startling evidences to the contrary, some are predicting a good time, and a triumph of the gospel this side of the harvest; to such I now say, in conclusion,—

Watchman! wake thee from thy dreaming
Of a golden era nigh;
When such floods of glory streaming
Shall gladden hearts and greet each eye.
Pilgrim, no, Time's sands are wasting,
Earth is doomed to fire and flame;
See, the day of God is hast'ning;
Day of wrath, of woe, and pain.

Watchman, all must be converted,
Earth is in its infancy;
Pilgrim, you've God's word perverted,
Will you yet deluded be?
Pilgrim, no, till Christ's returning
Tares and wheat together grow,
Till that awful day of burning,
Will be mingled sin and woe.

Watchman, earth must yet be filled
With God's glory, as the sea.
Angry natures must be stilled,
Can you fail this fact to see?
Pilgrim, no, God's day of burning
Will this earth then purify,
On the new earth Christ returning,
Fill with glory earth and sky.

Watchman, wake! for thou art nearing
Swiftly to that awful day,
When, the Son of God appearing,
Yonder heaven shall flee away.
Watchman, will ye hug your slumber,
Heedless of Creation's groans?
Hear ye not the muttering thunder,
Mingling with her dying moans?

Watchman, watchman, haste! awaken!
'Tis Creation's dying hour;
Monarchs tremble, thrones are shaken,
Satan's rampant now with power.
Darkness broods; oh, watchman, wake thee!
Gloomy portents gleam on high,
Christ to judgment soon will call thee,—
Guilty watchmen then shall die.

Gems.

— A dinner of fragments is often said to be the best dinner. So are there few minds but might furnish some instruction and entertainment out of their scraps, their odds and ends of thought. They who cannot weave a uniform web, may at least produce a piece of patch-work.—Hare.

— The warm sunshine and the gentle zephyr may melt the glacier which has bid defiance to the howling tempest, so the voice of kindness will touch the heart which no severity could subdue.

— As a ship held by an anchor looks as though it were going out with the tide, yet never goes, so some souls that seem constantly to be getting nearer to Christ, never come, because they are anchored and held by some secret sin.

— When men are determined upon being blessed, but will not obey God, the devil will give them an elation of soul that readily passes with many for a manifestation of the presence of the Holy Spirit. The counterfeit so closely resembles the genuine that experienced believers are often deceived.

— The worldling is like the hinder wheel of a carriage, ever following after the front wheel of happiness, but never overtaking it.

— What a folly it is to dread the thought of throwing away life at once, and yet have no regard to throwing it away piecemeal.

— A real christian loves close, pointed, searching preaching, and seeks not the ministry of those who speak with enticing words of man's wisdom.

— Our conversation need not always be of grace, but it should always be with grace.

— Those born only once, die twice; they die a temporal, and they die an eternal death. But those who are born twice, die only once; for over them the second death hath no power.

— He who has struck his colors to the power of an evil habit, has surrendered himself to an enemy, bound by no articles of faith, and from whom he can expect only the vilest treatment.

— Those who in the day of sorrow have owned God's presence in the cloud, will find him also to be in the pillar of fire, brightening and cheering the abode as night comes on.

— It is the greatest of all blessedness to know the blessedness that is to be had in the Lord Jesus Christ.

— When people cry out against themselves because they are so far off from God, that is the time in which the Lord draws near to them.

— We cannot tell who are the righteous, but as they remain steadfast to the end.

— Let us take care not to enter any path where we cannot, while walking therein, look up to God for direction.

— Every step taken in sin and folly, makes the journey longer, and the time to repent shorter.

— The worst robbery of God is to get into the pulpit and rob him there.

— A small bug can make a great hum.

AN ALLEGORY.

For a long time my mind had been severely exercised with a view of my own situation as a professed disciple of Christ, and also that of the christian church. I had been casting about me to see if I could discover the cause of this sad declension in religious interest. With my mind agitated and distressed, I fell into a disturbed slumber. I dreamed that I was in great distress of mind on account of my exceeding sinfulness. It seemed as no man had ever done so many bad things as I had, and that it was not possible that I could be forgiven. In this situation I thought I passed some days and nights without once supposing these feelings arose from a conviction of sin. At length, in all the bitterness of spirit, I voluntarily exclaimed, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" I felt as if my sins verily clung to me a loathsome, dead weight. At this moment of despondency, and almost of despair, a being appeared of infinite beauty and surpassing loveliness, and with tones which reached my inmost soul, said: "Take my yoke upon you, which is easy, and my burden, which is light." Yes, I exclaimed, any thing for a change, and immediately my burden was gone, and I seemed to be clothed in a beautiful white robe, which hung loosely and gracefully over my shoulders, reaching to the ground. "Keep this garment unspotted from the world," said he, "and you will find all you need." What, thought I, do you call this a yoke? this a burden? Why it seems as if I could fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, or soar to heaven. My vision seemed also to have undergone a change. How lovely every thing appeared. Nature wore a smile I had never seen before, and all upon which my eye rested was clothed with loveliness. Thus things remained for some days, my mind being occupied wholly with what had transpired, and in viewing the changed appearance of all around.

At length, I observed there were recesses in this garment, and thrusting my hand into one of them, I found it contained scrolls, or parchments. I drew one forth; it read thus: "Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself." I do, I do, was the quick response of my heart. It really seemed that I loved every body and every thing. I drew forth another, upon which was written: "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you." Upon another, "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; and the cattle upon a thousand hills. The silver and the gold are mine, saith the Lord." Another read, "Do whatsoever your hands find to do with your might." Another, "Be not conformed to this world; but ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Another, as I took it from my pocket seemed to illuminate the place where I stood, and I could observe the smallest obstruction in the way of my advancing. I cast my eye upon it, and read these words: "A lamp to your feet and a light to your path." A useful thing, indeed, thought I. I had by this time become much interested, as you may well suppose, and I looked with increasing interest for more scrolls. I found them in great abundance. "Visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction, the sick and imprisoned of whatever character. Relieve the poor and destitute, whom you always have with you. Break the chain of the bondman, and let the captive go free. Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." These are strange documents, said I within myself, but I have been so much relieved by losing my burden, I will try what I can do. At this juncture, I discovered an another parchment: "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth liberally and upbraideth not," which strengthened my resolution to go forward. I thought every thing went on well for some time. It appeared that my work was easier. I had an abundance of time and opportunity to do good, and means to do it with; and it seemed to me that I should never know any feelings or desires but these. O how I could plead with sinners to flee from the wrath to come, to embrace Christ, and try his yoke and burden. How fervently could I pray that the poor slave, who had been so long, and so unjustly trodden down, might rise with his mind illumined by the truths of God's word, and be permitted and enabled to cast off the double yoke of slavery to man and the devil. How eagerly did I engage in scattering far and wide those (olive) leaves which are for the healing of the nations, and how agonizingly did I beseech the God of peace to hasten the time when nations should learn war no more.

In mingling again with the world, I observed that as different persons passed me, they cast a glance at my dress and smiled; but I supposed it to be the smile of complacency at its perfect plainness, its adaptation to my wants, and the ease with which it was worn. I felt to pity those who seemed to be cramped in their motions by dresses of a different kind, and upon which I looked with perfect disgust. After a while, some kind friends, as I thought them, ventured to suggest that there might be some improvement made in my exterior, which would make me appear to better advantage, and even increase my influence, and means of doing good, as by so doing I should be able to come at an entirely different class of individuals. The more they said, and the more I thought of it, the more I felt inclined to believe that what they said might be true. And in looking to see how my appearance differed from others, the first thing I noticed was the extreme straightness of my dress. It was made, as I thought, with ample folds, but still seemed almost to cling to my person. Here, thought I, is a chance for improvement. If I can get this robe to stand out a little from me, I shall certainly be situated to advance at a more rapid rate. I was not long in finding means to accomplish this object. This being done, I sat down, as was my custom daily, to look at my scrolls, and the first I put my hands upon was the one containing the words, "Be not conformed to this world," etc. I was somewhat startled at seeing this, for I felt guilty, but this soon wore off, and on the whole, I was pleased with the improvement. The next thing proposed, and which I fell in with more readily than the first, was a something around the lower part of my dress. I think it was called a flounce. At first, a rather modest affair, but ere long increased to two or three of very moderate width and fulness, and strange as it may seem, I selected them as I dreamed of the very color of my former sins, namely, scarlet. Much pleased with my improved appearance, I wandered forth to see and be seen, new business to be sure for me.

I came to a place where I had spent many happy hours in perusing my scrolls, and seeking wisdom of God, and was reminded by what I saw that I had not of late studied my papers much, and to quiet my conscience, I thought I would then spend a little time in these duties. I took from my pocket the scroll, which had formerly cast so much light on my path, but O how changed! Its radiance seemed to be dimmed with the lustre of my flounces, and the light it did cast was indistinct. I recollected now, for the first time, that my feet for a time had occasionally tripped, and in endeavoring to get sight of them, I found my robe so full and flowing, that it was impossible to see them; but one thing I did discover, which was, that my robe was entirely gone up to my flounces. I thought this somwhat singular, but the dazzling appearance of my trimmings soon divested me of my anxiety, and as for the scroll, I made up my mind it would be of no further use to me, and I cast it away. Soon I perceived the remainder of my robe had become spotted and soiled, and besides did not become me so well, I thought, as would one of a greater variety and more fanciful colors. Not willing as yet to lose sight of the whole of it, I obtained a covering for a part, and left the upper part as it originally was made. To my astonishment, I perceived that so fast as I added anything by way of improvement, just so fast the original vanished. Determined to save what little remained, I purchased the most beautiful and costly gold pin I could obtain, thinking to secure what remained of my robe by pinning it closely with this article; and more, my eyes had been somewhat dazzled with seeing these same things worn to advantage in the bosom of others. But no sooner did I attempt to insert it, than to my surprise the little which remained of my robe vanished entirely; and there I was, my scrolls gone, and my dress completely metamorphosed.

I immediately sat about finding some article to make up the loss; and on looking out for a place where I might purchase something appropriate, I observed a flaming hand bill, on which was printed in large letters, "Clothing for the million." I soon succeeded in supplying myself with what I thought I needed, and among other things I was shown some splendid gold rings, with which I thought I filled my fingers. After surveying myself at full length in a large mirror, suspended for that purpose, not a little pleased with my improved appearance, I started for my shop. Every person I met seemed to admire my uniform. Among them I noticed the nobility, and those of all ranks and stations. Here I met a lawyer, there a doctor, there a merchant, there a minister, and found my appearance corresponded with theirs most perfectly, except that my cravat was tied with a double knot, and I noticed that that of my beloved pastor was tied with a single one, so much had he been in advance of me in getting the latest fashion.

Delighted, I engaged afresh in the business of life. I was prospered in basket and in store. It seemed now as if meetings for the worship of God multiplied while I had less time to attend them.

The calls upon my benevolence were more frequent, and although I had abundant means, I felt disposed to hold on upon them. The prison seemed never so full of occupants. The lists of sick seemed swollen almost to embrace a good part of the population. Wars and rumors of wars were rife; but what cared I how many were made widows and orphans by this most inhuman butchery, if it but increased my gains? As this state of things progressed, I found myself more and more anxious to obtain riches and pleasures, and in proportion as I succeeded, did my anxiety increase lest in some way I should lose. My situation at length became more insupportable than when in bitterness of spirit, I formerly cried for relief. In awful agitation, while fumbling in my pockets for I know not what, something I encountered seemed familiar to my touch. I drew it forth, and judge of my surprise when I beheld a scroll, like unto those I had formerly perused with so much delight. How it came there I never knew. It was like the countenance of an old and tried friend. I opened it, and in it were these words; "Return to the Lord, who will have mercy, and to our God who will abundantly pardon." Return! I exclaimed, without waiting to finish the sentence. Yes, that is the word; and thus I continued to shout until I aroused myself from my slumbers, and behold—was it all a dream?—Selected by J. G. Burnham.

KNOWLEDGE IS PEACE.

Let the believer live near to God; let him, through the aids of the Holy Spirit, maintain a conscience void of offence toward both God and man; and, unlike the tides that ebb and flow—now full, and anon leaving a waste of sand behind—this peace would be as persistent as it is precious. For what says the Lord? "Thy peace shall be like a river." No pool—shallow pool ruffled by every breath—that winter turns to ice and summer drought to mud; but a river, sparkling, flowing, ever full and ever flowing, growing deeper, broader, calmer the further it goes, the nearer to its rest in the ocean. Justified by faith, not by frames or feelings—that shift like a weather-vane, with every shift of wind, but by the firm, and finished, and accepted, and approved righteousness of Jesus, we have peace with God. And therefore able, as he looks forward to an hour of death and the day of judgment, to say, "It is God that justifieth. "Who is he that condemneth?"—the believer's heart is the home of peace—a peace that, passing understanding has God for its author, faith for its source, and God for its dwelling.—Sunday Magazine.

LOOK AT THE PREACHER.

Yes, look at him while he is preaching.

1. Because he is speaking to you. He speaks to all that are present. You do not drop your head or avert your face when a friend or any man speaks to you in the house or the street. Acknowledge by looking that you feel that you are spoken to.

2. Because looking at him is a proper return, so far as it goes, for his pains to interest you. He puts himself into communication with you, and your attentive gaze at him is obedience to his virtual solicitation that you be in communication with him. It is simple justice.

3. It is politeness too. You would call one rude and ill-mannered who should avert his face when you attempted to speak to him. Politeness in the social circle should go with you into the sanctuary.

4. It is kindness too. You can do the preacher service—perhaps a very great service. He is anxious to instruct, or profit you in some way. It will gratify him to notice your fixed gaze. It will cheer him.—New York Observer.

MINISTERS are stars in the right hand of God. Alas! how much we lack steadiness and firmness. We are thus exalted that we may manifest God's grace. But how few of us give even the light of a glow-worm, much less of a star. It is of very little consequence how high we shine, the grand question is how bright we shine, and if we shed a light upon the sphere in which God has placed us.—Rowland Hill.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

CONFESSIONS OF A SMOKER.

"WHAT I WAS, AND WHAT I AM."

[We reprint the following from the American Phrenological Journal for January, S. R. Wells, publisher, to whom we are also under obligation for the illustrations. The facts presented are of great interest, and furnish a powerful argument against a vice which is not only fearfully prevalent, but fearfully on the increase, in our country.—Ed.]

We have frequently discoursed on the evil consequences of those common habits, the use of tobacco and the drinking of spirituous liquors, and we have always sought to make our reasoning strong by adducing illustrations of a striking character. Rarely, however, has it occurred to us to find so apt an illustration, so practical a sermon, with reference to the baneful effect of tobacco on the human body, as the following account furnished us by the subject himself. . . . . Mr. K——, of Augusta, Georgia, contracted the habit of smoking when about fourteen years of age. An excellent physical organization, with a sanguineous temperament and some predisposition to corpulence, served to strengthen this habit until its practice became almost incessant during his waking hours. It was his boast at thirty-five that he could smoke a meerschaum pipe all the while, so invulnerable did he think himself to any ill effects from the use of tobacco. But during all the years he continued to smoke, the poisonous element of that article was insidiously planting the seeds of disease; and at forty years of age he had begun to realize that fact, though he was wont at times to allege some other cause for his occasional attacks of painful sickness. He continued to smoke until 1865, when his health became so prostrated by various disorders, arising chiefly from a stomach in a state of extreme derangement, that he was regarded by his friends as a candidate for an early grave.

In 1865, he was suffering from acute dispepsia accompanied with derangement of the circulation, short breath, spinal weakness, and general debility. The tone of his constitution had fallen so low, and the function of the secretory organs were so sluggishly performed, that his hair, which had previously been abundant, came out, leaving him almost bald.

Instead of a youthful, vigorous man, he looked worn, feeble, and old. He suffered so much abdominal pain that it was thought expedient by his physician to apply blisters; and the liquid drawn from the skin by these blisters was so strongly impregnated with tobacco as to be odorous. This fact effectually disposed of every doubt he entertained concerning the cause of his illness, and convinced him that his excessive smoking lay at the foundation of his infirmities.

A man of very positive opinion and energetic action, he determined to give up the habit, come what might. "To know the cause of one's disease, is half the cure." Therefore Mr. K—— set about making an earnest effort to relinquish his darling habit. He succeeded in working off from it in 1866, and by a careful regard to the delicate state of his health in his diet and daily habits, soon afterward began to improve in strength and spirits. Abstemious habits with reference to other modes of dissipation than tobacco doubtless proved his salvation. Had he been a drinker of alcoholic stimulants, as well as a smoker of tobacco, there is little doubt but that he would have succumbed to the pernicious effects of those habits, and thus found indeed an early death; but he did not drink, and nature was not entirely exhausted of her recuperative resources.

In one year after the time he gave up smoking, he was quite another man from the unhappy, suffering invalid he found himself in his final smoking experience. He had gained twenty-five pounds in weight, and little of the weakness induced by his long-practiced habit remained besides some nervous irritation which yet clings to him, and may never be entirely overcome. His health continued to improve, and with the improvement came a restoration of much of his youthful vigor and freshness. So great indeed was the change in his appearance that persons who had business relations with him, and had not seen him during the interval of his recuperation, could not recognize in him the same man with whom they had been accustomed to trade. Speaking of this he says himself: "Parties now and then come into my store and inquire for my brother, thinking me to be a younger man, they not having seen me since my reformation. Some insist on my not being the person with whom they transacted business in 1865 or 1866." . . . . We saw him early in the autumn of 1869, and must confess our surprise at seeing one who had been brought so low by a destructive practice, enjoying so much exuberant health and possessing a complexion of such ruddy freshness. His triumph over a vice which is preying upon the vitals of hundreds of thousands of fellow-Americans is well attested by his new-created manhood, and a firm resolution to live henceforward in a manner becoming an intelligent human being and a christian.

In him, too, is seen a most cogent example of the result of determined and intelligent effort, which should greatly encourage all those who being in the toils of a perverted appetite seek to emancipate themselves, and live as becometh self-denying, manly men.—Health Reformer.

PORK UNCLEAN.—With but few exceptions, the medical profession, of nearly every school, pronounce against pork-eating, and declare it to be a fruitful source of disease and death. And those who have made the matter a special study, have never failed to observe that contagious and epidemic diseases make greater havoc among pork-eaters than among those who never touch it. We might add to this the experience of hundreds and even thousands who have discontinued its use, with marked improvement in health.—Health Reformer.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
TERMS:
If paid in advance....................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address.......$5.50.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.
POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.
RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.
Over all matters not intended for publication, write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to
MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.
PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,
THE YOUNG PILGRIM.
An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.
TERMS.
PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.
Single copy, 30 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.
Ten copies, and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 25 cts. a year for each copy.
Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 20 cts. a year for each copy.
To Canada subscribers at the same rates. No extra charge for American postage.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 749. — BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 23.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS,
M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN,
H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

REST.

What is death but rest from toil—
A perfect rest from earth's turmoil?
A gentle sleep for earth-weary eyes—
Resting a little before the prize.

Is it sad to lie 'neath flowery bloom?
To rest from labor at hour of noon?
To peacefully sleep and quietly lie
So still and breathless, with face toward the sky?

Why call the grave a gloomy tomb,
Since it brings rest, though to some, too soon?
Angels will watch my sleep from above,
They'll not forget me, for God is love.

Rest for the feet from the dust of the road,
Rest for the hands in that lowly abode,
Rest for the head pillowed so low,
Rest for the weary—no sorrow to know.

North Woodstock, N. H. SOPHIA JACKMAN.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—MATT. 25: 46.

(Continued.)

2. Neither the term immortal or immortality, nor their Greek representatives, are ever applied to the wicked, either in this world or the world to come. We read: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal."—2 Tim. 1: 17. The Greek term aphthartos, here rendered immortal, and applied to God, is used in several other texts, though differently translated, and applied to various things, but never to the wicked. In Rom. 1: 23, we read of the "glory of the incorruptible God." In 1 Cor. 9: 25, we read of the "incorruptible crown." In 1 Pet. 1: 4, we read of "an inheritance incorruptible." In 1 Pet. 3: 4, we read of the adorning "which is not corruptible." In 1 Pet. 1: 23, we read of being born "of incorruptible" seed—"the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." In 1 Cor. 15: 52, we read that the saints shall "be raised incorruptible." Thus we learn that God is immortal; our future crowns are to be immortal; our inheritance to be immortal; that the word of God is immortal, and that the saints are to be immortal at the resurrection; but not a word about the immortality of the wicked, without which they cannot live forever. They are never said to be immortal in the Bible.

The term "immortality" is used but five times in the Bible, being twice applied to Christ (1 Tim. 6: 16; 2 Tim. 1: 10); once held up as a promise to all who will "seek" for it "by patient continuance in well doing" (Rom. 2: 7); and twice applied to the resurrected saints—"this mortal shall put on immortality" (1 Cor. 15: 53, 54); but never applied to the wicked in time or eternity. How can the wicked live eternally without immortality? They cannot, but must die the "second death."

3. The phrases "eternal life" and "everlasting life" are never applied to the wicked. Without eternal life they cannot live eternally; and although these phrases are found in the Bible forty-four times, they are never applied to the wicked, but often to the saints. As eternal life is not connected either with the present or future history of the wicked in the word of God, how can they live eternally? To live eternally would be eternal life, whether in woe or in happiness; without eternal life the sinner must experience the second death.

4. Eternal life is denied to the wicked. If this statement is true, sinners cannot live eternally, but must certainly die in a literal sense when the stroke of Divine wrath falls upon them. John tells us, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him."—1 John 3: 15. This testimony is direct. No language could more pointedly negate eternal life to the wicked. It is claimed that all men have eternal life in the sense of an endless life for the soul, murderers and saints alike; but this text is a positive denial of endless life to the man that hates his brother. Nor can the force of the statement be evaded by an attempt to make the language affirm an absence of spiritual life, or religion, for that is not "eternal," else there could be no backsliding.

We read again: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life [this eternal life] is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life [eternal life]; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" [eternal life].—1 John 5: 11, 12. The same life assigned to the saint is denied to the sinner; and the only life here referred to is "eternal life"; and the statement cannot refer to the spiritual life of the believer, called religion, of which the sinner is destitute, as the life here specified is called "eternal," which cannot be affirmed of spiritual life as before shown.

We also read: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."—John 3: 36. What life is here allotted to the believer and denied to the sinner? "Everlasting life"; the sinner "shall not see" it. Temporal life is not denied to the sinner here or hereafter, for sinners do see that life, and possess it now; but there is a certain life of which it is said, "He that hath not the Son of God hath not life," and "shall not see life"; a life that the sinner is now destitute of, and never can possess—"eternal life." As spiritual life is not eternal, that is not the kind of life referred to, but literal life made eternal. This is certainly denied to the sinner. That reference is made to a future life, not now possessed by the sinner, is further evident from the statement of the apostle Paul: "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6: 8.

The life here referred to is not one now possessed by the saints, but one which they "shall reap" at the final harvest—and "the harvest is the end of the world"; and it is "life everlasting," making two reasons why reference cannot be made to spiritual life. This "life everlasting" which the saint shall hereafter "reap" as a reward for well doing, is denied to the sinner. In the case of the saint, we are told, "This corruptible [body] must put on incorruption" (1 Cor. 15: 53), but sinners shall "reap corruption," or come up with corruptible bodies, and "shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—2 Pet. 2: 12. Sinners do not sow to the spirit, and therefore cannot reap life everlasting, and therefore cannot live forever, but must submit to the power of the "second death."

5. Sinners are threatened with a penalty-death. The apostle James says (1: 15), "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." This cannot mean spiritual death, or being "dead in trespasses and sins," for that results from the commencement of sin, instead of being the penalty for it when finished. Death is due the sinner as a punishment. Paul enumerates a list of crimes, and then tells us "the end of these things is death." Rom. 6: 21. What is meant by the "end"? Just what is meant in the next verse, in referring to the righteous,—"The end, everlasting life"; that is, the reward is everlasting life in the one case, and the reward is death in the other case.

Again. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6: 23. The death here spoken of is the "wages" of sin, or punishment for sin; not a death in "trespasses and sins," for that is only a state of sin for which punishment is due, instead of being the "wages." Not temporal death, for the holy saint and the sinless infant as really die that death, and certainly they are not subjects of punishment. The death here alluded to is put in contrast with everlasting life, in the same text; and as "eternal life" is the reward of the righteous, so is this death the sinner's recompense, the penalty-death, or "second death."

In the Bible, as in all other books, death implies the extinction of life, the opposite of life. Literal death is the extinction of spiritual life; so we only need to learn what death is meant, always remembering that spiritual death is never the penalty for sin, but that state of sin that makes the man deserving of punishment. To inflict death is to extinguish life. To inflict literal death is to extinguish literal life. To inflict spiritual death is to extinguish spiritual life, whether we speak of a spiritual life in holiness, or a spiritual life in sin. To die to sin is to have a life of sin extinguished. There is no other meaning to death in the Bible, nor out of it. Death is the extinction of life, whether literal or spiritual death is referred to. We are often told that there is more than one kind of death, thinking thus to escape the force of our argument. So there is more than one kind of death, but only one kind that can possibly be the punishment for sin, because (1) spiritual death, or being "dead in trespasses and sins," is that for which the sinner is to be punished, instead of being the punishment itself; and a "second death" of this kind cannot be inflicted till there is a release from this kind of death, and when released from this death "in trespasses and sins," the man is no longer a sinner, and is not punishable; besides, in many cases, this kind of death is the third or fourth death of the kind, by being reclaimed and backsliding again; whereas the penalty-death is the "second death." (2) Temporal death cannot be the sinner's punishment, as that is a calamity that overtakes the saint as really as the sinner, besides being only the first death of this order, instead of the "second death." So we cannot fail to see that only one kind of death is due the sinner as a punishment.

The Bible teems with denunciations of death against the sinner. Where eternal fate is involved, would God point out coming doom by words ordinarily signifying the very reverse of what God uses them to express, and never intimate to us that he had used them in a different sense? We cannot reproach Jehovah with such a serious charge. When God has talked to men on other topics, he has used language that men could understand, and used it, too, in its ordinary sense; why not while treating on future retribution? Why continually talk of death, death, death to the sinner, if he really means endless life in unmitigated agony?

6. The destiny of the wicked is prefigured by the use of the most combustible, perishable materials, as "chaff," "stubble," and "tares."

John the Baptist testifies concerning the work of Christ: "He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Matt. 3: 12. Chaff is never put into the fire to preserve it, but to consume it. Had the object been to teach the endless existence of the sinner, a figure more expressive of duration could have been selected. Not only is the chaff to be put into the fire, but it "shall burn up the chaff"—not be eternally burning it, and never get it burned up.

But modern theologians have insisted that the term "unquenchable," here used, must signify an eternal process of burning, thus clashing with the statement, "He will burn up the chaff." If we speak of an incurable sickness, no one would deduce the conclusion that the sickness must be eternal, but rather that it would kill its victim. If we behold a neighbor's house enveloped in flames, and half consumed, and pronounce the fire unquenchable, no one would understand us to assert the eternity of the fire, but rather that it could not be extinguished, and therefore must consume the house. And this is the Bible sense and usage of the term. Jeremiah predicted the kindling of a fire in the gates of Jerusalem, and adds (17: 27), "It shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched." That fire was kindled according to the prediction, but the fire is not now burning. What was the prophet's meaning? Simply that the fire should not be extinguished or prevented from completing the work of destruction. So with the fire that should burn up the sinner as chaff. It is also said of the fire on the Jewish altars: "The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out."—Lev. 6: 13. That fire was not permitted to go out till it had accomplished its work of consumption. But that age of sacrifices has passed, and the fire is not now burning. So the fire that shall "burn up the chaff" will do its work without involving the immortality either of the chaff or the fire.

In Matt. 13: 40, Christ compares the wicked to tares "burned in the fire." Tares are never put into the fire to preserve them, but always to destroy them, and prevent another crop from springing from them. So the wicked will be burned to make a final riddance of them. The casting of tares into the fire would be a poor symbol of the endless preservation of sinners.

Again. "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Mal. 4: 1-2. How much is left of a tree when burned up root and branch? This language positively indicates destruction, and not preservation. "It shall burn them up."

David says "the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."—Ps. 37: 20. How much was left of the fat of lambs which the Jews burned in their sacrifices? Does that comparison express protracted duration? Does it indicate endless preservation? No, but just the reverse—destruction.

The prophet Daniel describes an image, which he explained to mean different sections of earthly governments reaching down to the close of time, and a stone that at last broke the image to pieces, and its component parts were so completely demolished with the besom of destruction, that "no place was found for them." Dan. 2: 35. Yet theologians think they have found a place for them to all eternity, where they will wail in hopeless agony, and shriek in anguish and despair.

The Revelator had a vision of a time to come when "every creature" in the vast universe of God should be engaged in celebrating his praise. "And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

Before that time arrives, all sinners must either be destroyed, or restored. Inspiration affirms that "all the wicked will God destroy."

(To be continued.)

For the World's Crisis.

"WORK IN MY VINEYARD."

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—ACTS 9: 6. "And he said unto me, Write."—REV. 21: 5.

One fact which none who truly love the Lord will wish to deny, is, that every one of us bears a divine commission, and has his own appointed share of labor to perform in the loving Master's service. "Occupy till I come," is our commission. Not less than one talent is the endowment of any. And whatever may have seemed to be our peculiar "gift" by nature, it by no means follows that "grace" will use the talent to which nature was confined. Indeed, "miracles" of grace are by no means so infrequent as many are ready to suppose. Often, when the child of God in very poverty of resource casts himself at the foot of the cross, exclaiming, "I'm just a poor sinner, and nothing at all," grace immediately prompts the glad tribute of praise, "Jesus Christ is my all in all. And we learn that, through Christ which strengtheneth, we can do all things required of us.

Few in numbers, comparatively, and scattered abroad as are those who wait for the Lord from heaven—often but one or two in a whole township—to many a one, pondering upon the dire necessity of the times we live in, and the importance of every one doing what he can to awaken sinners and comfort the saints, there comes the question, "What can I do?" And while we can all pray and wait, let us hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord regarding the labor he would have us perform. Every day consecrated to the Master's service, will open a door for us in some direction. And when, for the time, every other avenue of usefulness seems to be closed, there is still left to us this "word" of Him who is "the first and the last"—"Write."

The great Exposition of the final day can alone reveal the amount of good achievable through the medium of a consecrated pen. The voice may be powerful, the utterance clear and distinct, the argument never so lucid and concise; yet these may sometimes fail to accomplish the desired effect, and sinners remain but sinners still, while the shadows continue to hover above the head of the almost despairing child of God, borne down by sore temptation and the hiding of the Father's face.

When words spoken have failed, it may be that the silent utterances of the pen of one whom God has made sweet with loving, clear with hoping, and serene with faith, may penetrate the thick cloud of mental obscurity, dispel the mists of doubt, and lead forth into God's clear sunlight of love those who all their days have wandered among the dark mountains of unbelief.

Blessed are we if words of ours, penned in weakness and seclusion, may be so owned of Christ. Blessed indeed when the Lord cometh, and reckoneth with his servants, if it be said unto us, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." CARRIE W. BIXBY.

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 4.

BY S. S. BREWER.

"In the world ye shall have tribulation."—JOHN 16: 33.
"I will see you again, and your hearts shall rejoice."—JOHN 16: 22.

Since the bequeathment of the above legacy by our Lord to his followers, they have partaken of the tribulation through ages of the past in full assurance of being partakers of the joy when they see him "again."

The cruel hand of persecution was laid heavily upon them by the Pagan Roman Emperors. They caused to be inflicted upon the church what is designated by historians, "The ten persecutions." The first was under Nero. That monster having set fire to Rome, cast the crime upon the inoffensive disciples of "the Man of sorrows." Multitudes of these helpless victims through perfidy were massacred. "Some were wrapped up in the skins of wild beasts, to be devoured and torn by dogs; others were crucified, and numbers burnt alive." The last was under Diocletian. The pagan priesthood, like the papal priesthood, their bloody successors, employed the arm of imperial power to save their threatened cause from impending ruin.

"The dreadful scene commenced in Nicomedia, the residence of Diocletian and Galerius, on the 23d of February, 303, in presence of the emperor and his censor. The officers of the city entered the Christian churches, brought forth the sacred books and utensils, and threw them in the fire. The next day, an edict was published, excluding the Christians from the protection of the laws; commanding their churches to be demolished, and subjecting their persons to death. Every species of torture which malice could invent was put in operation; but religion, as usual, acquired additional splendor from the fury of its adversaries, and evinced its divine nature amidst the sufferings of its illustrious confessors."

In this dreadful persecution, which lasted ten years, houses filled with christians were set on fire, and whole droves were tied together with ropes and thrown into the sea. It is related that seventeen thousand were slain in one month's time. Marsh, in his History (p. 180), speaking of the sufferings of the church, testifies as follows:

"In the beginning of the fourth century she passed through a furnace seven times heated. For eight years a persecution raged which spared neither age nor sex, in any part of the Roman world; and which, to all human appearance, would root Christianity from the earth * * * A fire broke out in the royal palace. The christians were accused as the incendiaries, and numbers were put to torture. Some tumults also arose in Armenia and Syria, which were by heathen priests charged upon them. The clergy were cast into prison, and given up to the most insupportable punishments, the rulers hoping that if the pastors renounced Christianity, the people would. Vast numbers of learned and excellent men fell a prey to this stratagem.

In the year 304 a new edict was published, in which the magistrates, throughout the Roman Empire, were directed to compel all christians, without distinction of rank or sex, to renounce Christianity and sacrifice to the gods, and were authorized to employ the most cruel torments in their work. The church was now reduced to the last extremity, for the magistrates were like so many hungry tigers let loose upon defenceless lambs. . . .

Some were thrown to wild beasts, enclosed in vast amphitheatres, for the entertainment of the people on great festal days, and instantly torn to pieces and devoured. Others, with their wives and children, were burned to death in their own houses. Some were beaten with clubs, rods, thongs of leather, and ropes. Nails were driven into their sides, bellies, legs and cheeks. Some were suspended by one hand from a portico, suffering the most severe distension of all their joints. Others were bound to pillars, face to face, their feet being raised above ground. They were hung about wooden engines, having every limb of their bodies distended by certain machines. Plates of heated brass were applied to their bodies. They were seated in red hot iron chains. They were slain by the axe and the sword. They were suspended by their feet, with their head downward, over a slow fire. Sharp reeds were thrust under their nails into their fingers. Melted lead was poured down their backs, and into their bowels. Tongues were cut out. Multitudes were deprived of one eye, and cauterized and debilitated in one leg by an iron and sent to the mines. Seventeen thousand were slain during one month.

In Egypt alone, one hundred and fifty thousand suffered martyrdom by the hands of their persecutors, besides seven hundred thousand who came to their end in banishment or the public works.

This cruel government, supposing they had accomplished their object, coined a medal for the monster Diocletian with this inscription, 'Nomine christian orum deleto!'—Marsh's Ecc. His. p. 181.

Truly those were days of tribulation. To profess to believe in Jesus was certain death, yea, worse.

This "mystery of iniquity" in its complicated form brought down the vengeance of a just God upon Pagan Rome, its citadel of iniquity, together with its imperial and priestly powers. The Almighty uttered his judgments upon them by the seer of Patmos, under the symbol of "trumpets"; the first four were in the days of their sounding deeply surcharged with war, pestilence, and famine, and they were made to drink to the very dregs, "wormwood" and gall. These judgments were inflicted upon the devotees of dragonic Rome, by Alaric, Attila, Genseric and Totila. These barbarians sacked, pillaged, burned, humbled and destroyed the "last vestige of authority that had given laws to the world"; the last relic of effete Paganism gladly transferred his imbecile power to the Emperor of the East, residing at what was once called Byzantium.

Thus the mystery of iniquity that wrought in the apostle's day was taken out of the way, and the way prepared for the "man of sin," the papal Roman Pontiff. For a synopsis of judgments upon Rome under the first four trumpets, see my tract upon "The harmony of the Seven Apocalyptic Messages."

After the conquest of the Lombards by Pepin, King of the Franks, in 754, he put the Pope and his successors in possession of Rome, previously the stronghold of Paganism. See Mosheim, vol. 1, p. 195. Hallam's Middle Ages, p. 20, or Dowling, p. 172.

Papacy had from the days of Pope Sylvester aimed to supplant the pagan kingdom and priestcraft at Rome. This unhallowed ambition was at last attained by Pope Boniface under the Emperor Phocas. The man of sin soon revealed himself in plenitude of power; as the following testimony clearly indicates:

"'The gods of the Pantheon turned into popish saints.' The noblest heathen temple now remaining in the world is the Pantheon or Rotunda, which, as the inscription over the portico informs us, having been impiously dedicated of old by Agrippa to Jove and all the gods, was impiously re-consecrated by Pope Boniface IV., about A. D. 610, to the blessed virgin and all the saints.'

'PANTHEON
AB ARIPPA AUGUSTI GENEVO,
IMPIE JOVI, CÆTRISQ; MENDACIBUS DIIS,
A BONIFACIO III. PONTIFICE,
DEIPARÆ & S. S. CHRISTI MARTYRIBUS PIO,
DECATUM, etc.

With this single alteration it serves as exactly for all the purposes of the Popish as it did for the Pagan worship for which it was built. And as it is in the Pantheon it is just the same in all the other heathen temples that still remain in Rome; they have only pulled down one idol to set up another, and changed rather the name than the object of their worship. Thus the little temple of Vesta, near the Tiber, is now possessed by Madonna of the Sun; that of Fortuna Virilis, by Mary, the Egyptian; that of Saturn, where the public treasure was anciently kept, by St. Adrian; that of Romulus and Remus, in the Via Sacra, by two other brothers, Cosmas and Damianus; that of Antonius Pius, by Lawrence, the Saint. 'But for my part,' adds Dr. Middleton, 'I should sooner be tempted to prostrate myself before the statue of a Romulus or an Antonine, than that of a Lawrence or a Damian; and give divine honors rather with Pagan Rome to the founders of empires, than with Popish Rome to the founders of monasteries.'"

Papal Rome in its complicated forms of king and priestcraft, became the inveterate hater and persecutor of the helpless lovers of Jesus, and labored with the aid of its stupendous power to exterminate all that would not "embrace and profess the Roman Catholic faith." War to the bitter end, with every conceivable form of diabolically invented inquisitorial machines of torture, was brought to bear against the lovers of God's word, and through the dark ages of the balmy days of papal triumph and glory, it was the dismal night of lamentation, tribulation, mourning and woe of Christ's weeping church.

But the hour of retribution arrived, the time of the end came, and God's appointed judgment, red with indignation, overtook the blood-begrimed harlot and her guilty paramour.

The church of Rome is symbolized (Rev. 17: 1-7) as a "woman" drunk with the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus, and with "whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication." The emperor of the Austrians (which power had been devoted to Rome) divorced the harlot by an imperial act in an edict of toleration, on the 13th of Oct., 1781. See Coxe's House of Austria, pp. 491, 492.

Louis XVI., king of France, then became the favorite of the "golden cup" harlot illustrious in her infamy. This was her last embrace, and for which he forfeited his own and the lives of his queen and the innocent little Dauphin. Says Bower (Lives of the Popes, vol. 3, p. 392): "The weak Louis XVI., ruled by Marie Antoinette, obeyed the impulses of the priesthood and the nobility, and hoped to arrest the progress of civilization. For a short period it might have been supposed that their sacrilegious wishes would be realized. Two honest ministers, Malesherbes and Turgot, were forced to withdraw from the government. Lettres de cachet were issued against many literary characters. All presaged a religious reaction. The Papal Nuncio was sure of a triumph of the ecclesiastics, and of the return to the traditions of Italian ultramontanism. That he wrote to the Pope that France was still worthy of the name of eldest son of the church, which the popes had given it, and that speedily all the philosophers would be crushed, burned, or in the Bastile."

There is no doubt that the savage Nuncio would have been in ecstasies, as was Pope Gregory XIII., on receiving the information from the bloody King Charles, when seventy thousand Hugenots (French Protestants) were massacred at the festival of St. Bartholomew in the kingdom of France, Aug. 24th, 1572. The hour of righteous retribution came unparalleled in the annals of history. During the imprisonment of Louis XVI., when the assembly had decided his fate he replied, "I die in the faith of the church, and obedience to its decisions." When at the foot of the guillotine, the king stripped himself of his coat and vest. The executioner approached to bind him. "Do as you will; I must drink the cup to the dregs." At some minutes after ten, on the morning of the 21st of Jan., 1793, the fatal stroke fell that cut short the life of Louis the Sixteenth; his remains were thrown into a grave, and lime flung therein, in order that the consumed bones of the victim of the revolution might not some day become the relics of royalty.

His queen, Marie Antoinette, followed him to execution, Oct. 16th, the next year. When about to be led to the horrid instrument of death she exclaimed, "I die in the Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman religion; in that of my fathers; in that which I have been bred, and which I have always professed, having no spiritual consolation to expect, not knowing if priests of this religion still exist here."

What a change! France, once teeming with papal hordes of dignities, of every grade and character, now, at this fatal hour, the fountain head of royal and papal dignity, ignorant of the existence of one of her favorites in the hour and article of death. Truly the power "that had led into captivity" and "killed with the sword," now had the cup measured in return to the lips of royal victims. One historian in speaking of the breaking up of the great political and religious deep, says:

"In violation of every principle, murder, theft, plunder, massacre, and devastation, were legalized; and that, under the name of revolutionary government: all the public functions were united in the Committee of Public Safety, where Robespierre had for a long time dominated. Then it was that this committee became dictatorial, and hurried into the departments that horde of ferocious proconsuls, whom we have seen betraying and slaughtering the people, whose servants they were, and to whom they owed their political existence; sometimes carrying with them, in their murderous circuits, the guillotine; at others, declaring it permanent; which was saying, in other words, that the executioner was not to have a moment's rest. These monsters in mission, these colussuses in crime, these phenomena in cruelty, hunted men, as a German baron hunts wild boars."

"Myriads of a great and enlightened nation, mutilated, decimated, shot, drowned, and guillotined by their own representatives. Rome had a series of tyrants in succession, or, at least, at short intervals; but France had, at one and the same time, a host of Caligulas. Tacitus (he adds) would have broken his pencil, from regret at not being able to paint all the crimes which sprang from the monstrous junction of the ferocious Robespierre with the sanguinary Cuthon; the barbarous Billard with the gloomy Amar; the tiger Collet, with the tiger Carriere; the cut-throat Dumas with the cut-throat Cuffinhal, and a thousand subalterns, submissive to their orders; and Mirabeau undoubtedly saw a part only of these horrors, when he said, Liberty slept only on mattresses of dead carcasses."—Dr. Coke, pp. 179, 180.

Rome now trembles in her boasted security. There is but one more act in the divine arrangement, and that is thus written: "And great Babylon came into remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath, and every island fled away, and the mountains were not found."

The moment of Rome's final catastrophe steadily approaches. The decisive instant will soon overtake her, and then will be realized in all its blissful realties what the revelator describes in vision:

"I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia: Salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God: For true and righteous are his judgments: for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand. And again they said, Alleluia And her smoke rose up for ever and ever. And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshiped God that sat upon the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia. And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great. And I heard as it were the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready."

"When the foe's distress comes, then the church's rest comes." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," and fulfill the promise—"I will see you again, and your hearts shall rejoice." Amen.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTFUL SKETCHES.—No. 3.

"I tell you nay; but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13: 5.

This testimony of Jesus is in all probability distorted more than almost any other which fell from his sacred lips; and probably no one has been more grossly and frequently misapplied. It is supposed to give strength to many who, Samson-like, attempt to demolish the temple of emancipation from sin, death, and the grave. A misconstruction of the text has descended from the pulpit to the parent, and from parents to children. They have been told that "except they repent, they must all likewise perish," meaning they must be endlessly miserable. Although the writer wishes to pay due respect to the pious and worthy of all persuasions, yet he claims the privilege of dissenting from them when he cannot in conscience coincide with them, and of frankly offering his own sentiments.

The only word in the sentence which heads this article, that would be likely to give rise to a wide difference of opinion, is the word "perish." But even this word appears to be synonymous with death in this text, as it is frequently in conversation, and in the Scriptures. It is admitted there are two kinds of death—temporal and moral. As temporal death is the deprivation of natural life, so is moral death the deprivation of spiritual life. Hence the word perish is used in both these senses—literally and morally.

When Peter said, "Save us, or we perish," he simply meant that he should die (be drowned) if Jesus did not preserve them. Here it is used in a literal sense. But when we read John 3: 16, "that whosoever believeth him might not perish, but have everlasting life," the meaning is evidently moral; as believing in Christ gives spiritual life, so on the contrary a want of faith in the Lord Jesus would occasion the moral death or perishing mentioned in the text.

There are three ways in which the term perish is explained by different expositors of the Scriptures. The first is, that endless misery is meant. The second is, that the soul, or living principle which proceeds from God, must be given to the devil, and by him tortured through the endless ages of eternity. But the third explanation (and that which I shall adopt) is, that Jesus meant just as his words seem to import; that if the Scribes and Pharisees, whom he addressed, did not reform, they should perish just as did the Galileans and the eighteen on whom the tower of Siloam fell. Those unfortunate people perished literally, and so likewise shall ye perish unless ye repent. We are informed in the preceding context, that "there were present at that season some who told him [Jesus] of those whose blood Pilate had mingled with his sacrifices"; and lest it should be supposed that they were more sinful than many others, the great Teacher exclaimed, "Suppose ye that those Galileans were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you nay; but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."

Now who would think of inferring from the above premises that to be endlessly miserable, or to be annihilated, would be perishing, as did the above named people? Did the Savior mean to be understood that such would be their doom because they were instantly killed and had no chance to repent? If it had been the design of Jesus to teach the ceaseless torment of those sufferers, he certainly could have found language, clear and forcible, to have expressed his meaning. The natural inference, therefore, is, that such is not the proper import of his words.

The doctrine of repentance is important; and as such was frequently urged by the Savior, repentance would have averted the woful calamities which were coming on the Jewish nation. The Jews were inflexibly determined that Jesus should not reign over them; still he was mercifully foretelling the calamities to which their malignant impenitence would expose them, and even specified certain omens, by duly observing which repentant millions of that distinguished people might make a seasonable escape. This divine prophet said, "When ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is near." "Let those that be in Judea flee into the mountains"; and we are informed by profane history that no Christian perished during the calamitous overthrow of Jerusalem; for they believed their Lord and were ready. But those who were impenitent and unbelieving perished, as did the Galileans, or the eighteen on whom the tower fell.

The destruction of that fine city commenced at the time of the Passover, when vast multitudes of Jews from all quarters were assembled at Jerusalem to celebrate that feast. At that time Titus besieged and surrounded the city, and sometime after, when every avenue of the capital was crowded by people, who were endeavoring to screen themselves from the fury of enemies without and murderers within, set fire to the same, when multitudes were crushed to death, perished by the sword, or were wrapped in the angry flames. More than a million of obstinate Jews realized the truth of this prophetic denunciation—"Ye shall all likewise perish."

The mistakes concerning the text occur in consequence of applying these peculiar expressions to the present generation, which our Lord addressed to a nation very differently circumstanced. To illustrate my meaning, suppose a minister now should tell his congregation that they would all perish by the sword, or the falling of a tower, unless they repented. Would they be likely to believe him? I tell you nay. Even so, when the passage which we have been considering is applied to an audience of people.

In these days the word likewise should not be used without suitable explanation; for though men will die morally, unless they repent, yet they may not suffer as did the impenitent and stubborn Jews. And when those mighty hosts of Rome were seen drawing nearer and nearer that proud yet doomed city, how the words of Him who "spake as never man spake" must have reverted to their minds. But to acknowledge him as their Savior and flee from Jerusalem, they would not. They supposed that God would never destroy a city made by Solomon and dedicated for his worship, and the predictions of Jeremiah, Isaiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, could never be fulfilled on such a grand metropolis. But, alas! it was done, and his predictions about the final overthrow of the nations will as assuredly take place. The advance of science and knowledge indicates the last days are upon us, when the cup of his fury shall be drunk by all nations. J. L. HERSEY.

Tuftonborough, N. H.

REVIVAL.—Dr. Lyman Beecher used to say, It is never worth while to chase a revival after it is gone by. The laws of mind and of divine sovereignty are in unison, and after the greater stimulus has been applied and failed, it will do no good to apply the less. After one battle and victory, it remains to clear the decks and prepare for another.

We often see an opposite policy followed. A pastor deplores that many in whom he is deeply interested are not converted; christians mourn that the large results which seemed within reach are not attained, and they combine in the use of convulsive efforts to protract the interest, and to awaken and convert the unsaved. The consequences are [illegible] the same; the renewed efforts fail, [illegible] and people, instead of rejoicing over the [illegible] gathered, are filled with [illegible] and discouragement.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1870.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

J. WILBUR—Your Crisis is marked free.

T. L. WAUGH—We have none of the book in paper. Send cloth.

M. W. CORLISS—Money order received.

ELDER JACOB BLAIN'S P. O. address is changed from 19 to 79 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

A General Conference will be held at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, commencing about the 5th of April. As it will doubtless be the last Conference in Lowell Street Chapel, we hope it will be the best one in its history. Particulars hereafter.

SPECULATION.

There are some who might properly be called theological inventors. They are those who invent new theories in theological matters, as others do in mechanics. They are not satisfied with the simple, plain truths of the Bible. This class of preachers and writers are known by the name of "hobby-riders." As a general rule, they do not sufficiently mature their ideas before presenting them to the public; and as a common result, some new party rises up to advocate the new theory, and thus divide the church of Christ. Many such cases may be found in the records of the past. We would say to all, beware of a system built on speculative ideas. Be sure that the foundation stones are most firmly laid in a plain Thus saith the Lord, taken in a literal sense. What is not thus expressed, so far as any doctrine is concerned, should be received with suspicion. Satan is industriously busy in getting up new theories in relation to the meaning of the Bible, for the purpose of leading people into some wild notions that cannot be adopted by the candid, devoted, intelligent christian, while the more speculative will seize upon them, advocate them with zeal, till the more prudent feel unwilling to give their sanction to such vague notions, thus causing an alienation of feeling, and a destruction of the best interests of the cause of Christ.

These are times of great peril, when we need to go very carefully, and use much long-suffering towards each other; otherwise we shall find the enemy getting the advantage of us, and surrounding us with his chains of bondage.

LONG CONFERENCE REPORTS.

There is much complaint against long conference reports. For this reason, we wish the secretaries of conferences would omit that which is not interesting to any but those who were at the conference. As every conference keeps a record of its doings, it is not necessary to report who prayed at the opening of the conference, what hymn was sung, what hour the meetings began or ended, or to give a complete diary of each day's proceedings. Neither is it of special interest to know what its members resolved to do; but far more interesting to learn what was done for the salvation of sinners, and the upbuilding of the cause of Christ. If no special good was accomplished, then, of course, there is little or nothing worth reporting. Usually detailed conference reports are dry reading.

Conferences have now become so common, if all are reported in full, "our paper" will be overburdened with them. It is better to state in a general way the results of the conference, omitting those things that are common to all such meetings, which have only a local interest. Give us the marrow and fatness of the meeting, if it has any; if not, say nothing about it.

We are anxious to receive reports of all meetings where any positive good is accomplished; because the reading of such accounts has a good effect. It is calculated to arouse others to work more earnestly in the vineyard of the Lord. Let no false delicacy keep faithful men from reporting the good fruits of their labors.

There are two extremes to be avoided: One is a long tedious diary of every little particular circumstance, of a personal character, that took place during the journey, or in the families where the preacher stopped; and the other is entire silence in relation to meetings where there are good things to report. The more modest are not pleased with the former, and then go to the other extreme, and say nothing. When asked why they do not report the revivals in which they are engaged, they reply, We do not wish to be puffing ourselves. There is but little danger that this class of men will do it; because they dislike to see it in others. If one does it for the sake of blowing his own trumpet, we should say by all means remain silent; but when he reports the results of good meetings, because the Lord has been at work, and brought about good, then the effect is good upon the church at large, and glorifies our Redeemer.

CHLOE LANKTON.

Most of our readers have some knowledge of Sr. Chloe Lankton, of New Hartford, Ct., who is a great sufferer, and is as noted for her patience as her suffering. It was our high privilege to visit her Monday, Feb. 14th, and partake with her of the emblems of our Savior's broken body and spilt blood. She is now fifty-eight years of age, and has been sick since she was eighteen. For thirty-six years she has lain upon her bed, enduring excruciating pain without a murmur. The lower parts of her body are but a skeleton. Physicians say she would have died of pain long ago, had it not been for her calm, patient state of mind. The Lord is sustaining her in a miraculous manner. One would not know but that she was in a very easy condition, excepting occasionally, when some very acute pain darts through her system, and a sudden twitching of the muscles may be noticed, while a saddened look for a moment covers her face; but the smiles return at once, so that a careles observer would not notice the change.

Her sufferings are increasing with her age, with no prospect that she will ever be any better. She has the use of her hands and head; otherwise she is helpless. She is an ardent lover of Jesus, and feels ready to meet him at any time. It is a feast to a christian to visit her. She is dependent upon the charities of the people. The Lord has provided for her many warm friends.

Some five years since it became necessary to move her from the poor, old house of her childhood, to her present situation, which is near the centre of New Hartford village. This was a most painful journey for Chloe, and she did not get over it for six months. A kind of covered bed was prepared, and sixteen men took turns in carrying her in the bed upon their shoulders, a distance of three miles. She said they were two hours and five minutes on the journey. They stepped as carefully and as tenderly as possible, but even that gentle motion caused her great suffering. She has now a pleasant room, and her necessary wants are supplied.

NOT BIGOTED.

The Secretary of a Christian Association, in a large city, writes: "Dear Bro.,—Through your generosity, we have been receiving the 'Crisis' free, at the reading room of the Y. M. C. Association of this city, for several months past, for which please accept our thanks. Some of our members have been unwilling to keep it on file, but since I have been connected with the Association, it has been on file. Although I am a Congregationalist, I am not quite so bigoted as many, but am not afraid to discover the truth, wherever I can find it. I think quite favorably of some of the doctrines advanced in the 'Crisis,' and intend, usually, to peruse as much of it every week as I can find time to do."

"THE NEW DISPENSATION."

The Spiritualists speak of Spiritualism as "the new dispensation." Spiritualism is said to be "shaping the moral, social and political elements" of "the most intelligent, enlightened, candid, religious minds of this country and Europe;" and that on this system is based "the future greatness of civilization on a higher basis than Christianity has or can offer."

The following is from the Hon. Warren Chase, in the Banner of Light, Jan. 22nd, 1870:—

"Spiritualism started in this country mainly in the phenomena, and has fed on curiosity and the excitement arising therefrom principally for twenty years, and now comes an important change. The phenomena are rapidly losing their importance, because the fact is established of their occurrence, and mainly accepted, of their spiritual origin, in part if not wholly, and hence, as curiosity ceases, the test mediums are so poorly paid as to be compelled, with few exceptions, to seek other business for support. The press, if not the pulpit, now generally admit the fact, and mostly treat it with respect, and, as the fact of a spiritual origin becomes generally accepted, many persons seeing the excitement subsiding and mediums and often lecturers retiring to other fields of business, and the meetings, that were fed and supported only by the curious and curiosity seekers, chiefly dying out, think the cause itself is dying. But this is a great mistake; the cause was never as strong as to-day, and never more prosperous. The fact established, the next great question is, What of it? What good will it do? To this the answer has not come yet. The fact of spirit intercourse established must surely become the basis of a new philosophy of life and death. A new and long step must be taken in religion, and we are now on the eve of inaugurating that movement—or rather, the spirit-world are."

WRITING FOR THE PRESS.

The following instruction to young writers is worthy of consideration; and it is hoped it may be of special benefit to many who may be favored with the reading:—

1. Do not say, "I write in a hurry, please correct all mistakes." You have ten times the opportunity to do this that the editor has. His time is worth from fifty cents to ten dollars an hour, and he will be likely to correct your errors by fire, and then they will never trouble any one any more. You must do your own work if you want it done. It is said that Newton wrote his chronology over fifteen times before he was satisfied with it, and Gibbon wrote out his memoir nine times before sending it to the press. No beginners ought to expect better success or less labor than such learned men.

2. Do not write poetry. Most who try do not know what poetry is, and they cannot be told till they have learned a great deal more than they know now. Ninety-nine one-hundredths of the rhyme written is good for three things. 1. To give to friends who prize it for the giver's sake. 2. It makes passable kindlings; 3. It will bring about three cents a pound at the paper mill, to work up with old rags. Write prose;—poetic prose is far better than prosaic poetry.

3. Do not write long articles, or long sentences. Write as you would a telegram, where each word costs a dime, or an advertisement, which costs a dollar a line.

4. Do not ask an editor to return your manuscript. Keep a copy. With a hundred letters a day to read, he has something to do besides hunting up last year's manuscripts, received, rejected, and buried, or burned up long ago.

5. Do not get angry because your first article is rejected. Quite likely if it is printed, you will live to wish it had been burned up, or sent to the paper mill. The first pair of shoes a cobbler makes are not likely to sell very readily; and it takes more skill, and longer practice to write good articles than to make good shoes.

6. Keep trying and sending on; the practice will do you good; and if writing is in you, it will come out. But if you cannot stand criticism, and rejection, and fault-finding, you will make a poor author, and may as well know it at once. The writer's first article was rejected; he kept it a while, and sent it to the same paper again, and it was printed.

7. Remember an editor may have a peck of better articles than yours is, which he wrote himself, and yet does not think are worth publishing. He will do the best he can, consistently, by you. He is more anxious to encourage good writers than you are to write.

8. Do not expect a poor editor to set up a reading school, spelling school, grammar school and writing school for the benefit of those who have not improved their opportunities at home. You can study these matters anywhere; do not impose your ignorance on an editor, and then wonder that he has not time to fool over such nonsense. Some poor printer has to set up the type for your article. Every cent you save by using pale ink, poor paper, and writing carelessly because you are in a hurry, or writing finely, or crosswise, to save three cents' postage, will cost the printer in toil, delay, and eye-sight, at least fifty times as much money as you will save, besides causing him to commit blunders for you to scold about. Do you wonder such articles are rejected? I can write an article for the press in half the time I could correct such an one; and I have often copied over entire pages, rather than torment a compositor with illegible manuscript.

9. Do not get angry. Do not write slang, or personalities, or abuse, or slander. A lie told is bad enough; printed, it is multiplied a thousand fold. Remember the judgment day. Writers and editor may shirk responsibilities here, but they must meet them then and there. Write for Christ, and for eternity; proclaim peace on earth, and good will to men, and all will be well.—The Christian.

AIRY PHANTOMS.

According to the teaching and admission of the spirits, the objects and persons seen by their mediums are only mental pictures—not real objects; hence it follows that the friends and other objects seen by mediums are only phantoms, and no more real objects than shadows and things seen in dreams.

In the Banner of Light for Feb. 5th, 1870, we find the following question put to the spirit speaking through the medium at the Banner office; and also the answer as follows:—

"Q. Do spirits only see things as correspondences of their thoughts, or are they fixed and permanent as things on the earth?

A. Thoughts take form in the spirit-world as they take form in this life, which is, in fact, the spirit-world. It is the world of mind as it is the world of matter. The world where spirits dwell is where bodies dwell. Allow me to illustrate. Your room is hung with works of art, every one of which lived in thought before it had an objective form, so that the eye could behold it. This is the way that thoughts take form in the spirit-world, and in no other way that I am aware of."

Hence the gardens, trees, flowers, rivers, friends, etc., in "the spirit-land" exist only in thought, as an inventor sees mentally his machine before he has made a single part of it. This confirms the position that the spirits of demons operate just like mesmerizers; causing these mediums to see only mental pictures formed in the minds of the "evil angels." The whole matter of spirit-seeing is a deception practiced by the demons.

CASH RECEIPTS.—Those having sent us money for the Crisis, and who do not see it credited this week, will please be patient, as it will be attended to soon. Sickness is the cause of the delay.

MUSIC.—We have a fresh supply of "All to Christ I Owe," and "Beautiful Vale of Rest." Send in your orders. Price reduced. 3 cts. single; by mail, 5 cts.

We will be thankful to any who will send us the Crisis for Feb. 2nd.

From the Winsted (Ct.) Herald.

LETTER FROM MILES GRANT.

BOSTON, Jan. 12, 1870.

Editor Winsted Herald—Dear Sir:—In a late Herald I find the following:—

"As many reports are in circulation concerning a discussion to take place between Eld. Miles Grant and the Rev. Moses Hull, let me say to the public, through your paper, that Elder Grant having declined to accept the challenge for a discussion, there will be none until further notice. Yours truly,

LEWIS ANDREWS."

Will Mr. Andrews please publish in the Herald, at my expense, my letter to him, dated the 21st of last Dec., in order that "the public may see whether I "declined to accept the challenge for a discussion"?

In case the letter is not published, please allow me to say to your readeas that I have had five discussions with Mr. Hull, and so far from being afraid to meet him in debate, my courage increases with every conflict.

I now purpose to preach in Camp's Hall, Sabbath, Feb. 6th, and onward. Should Mr. Hull appear during the week, I should be pleased to discuss with him the following:

Resolved, That the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from demons, and not from departed human spirits."

I would propose a free discussion for six evenings, two-hour sessions and twenty-minute speeches. We would begin on Monday evening, Feb. 7th.

In case Mr. Hull does not appear, to engage in the discussion, I purpose to preach every evening from Feb. 7th to Feb. 12th, and Sabbath 13th: during which time the subject of Spiritualism will receive due attention. Yours truly, MILES GRANT.

"WEST WINSTED, Jan. 17, 1870.

Editor Winsted Herald:—Dear Sir:—I would not again trouble you on the score of Spiritualism, were it not for the letter of Miles Grant in your last issue. He says, 'I have written to Bro. Andrews accepting the proposal of a discussion with Mr. Hull.' I forwarded Mr. Hull's challenge to Elder Grant by mail, to meet him in Winsted within the months of January or February, and received the following reply: 'My engagements are such I do not see how I can be in Winsted before the last of January or sometime in February. I hope to get around before winter is over.' Now I ask any candid man if that was accepting the challenge to meet Mr. Hull during the two months named? Mr. Hull could not well be reached after that time, as his home is in the far west, without great expense. I had a right to infer, and honestly did so, that Elder Grant rather not accept the discussion. But I was surprised that after the lapse of two or three weeks, Elder Grant should accept through another individual, and not notify me; it looks to me like double entendre (dooble oong tongdr.) But he had learned that a fund had been raised for his especial benefit. Mr. Hull has challenged the Elder through the Banner of Light. We shall see if he will back down. The statements of W. S. Campbell and Walter Stickney are too contemptible to notice. Truly yours,

LEWIS ANDREWS."

From the communications of Elder Miles Grant and Mr. Lewis Andrews, in this issue of the Herald, it will be seen that further discussion of the subject of Spiritualism may be expected at Camp's Hall, next month. We really cannot find any thing in either of these communications that would seem to justify Mr. Andrews in giving the public to understand (as he did in the Herald of Jan. 7th), that Mr. Grant had declined the challenge of Moses Hull. We have no doubt that Mr. Andrews honestly thought it was a declination, as he says. But new converts into the kingdom of darkness do not always see straight. That Elder Grant does not decline, and has not declined, is a very plain case.

A serious typographical error occurred in the letter of Miles Grant, published in the Herald of last week. As printed, it read thus:

"Should Moses Hull appear in the name of the Lord, he will find me ready to meet him."

It ought to have read:

"Should Moses Hull appear, in the name of the Lord he will find me ready to meet him."

NEW BOOK.

THE SEVEN MESSAGES OF THE APOCALYPSE, showing their harmony. By S. S. Brewer. 48 pp., 12mo. Price per dozen, $1.20; single, 13 cents.; postage, 2 cents. For sale at this office. AG'T.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW TO BREAK DOWN A CHURCH.

BRO. GRANT:—While reading in the Christian at Work, I saw the following: "How to break down a Church." I thought it would do no harm to have all persons read it. I send a copy for "our paper."

"To do this effectually, you must first discourage the pastor. Second, discourage your fellow members. Third, destroy the confidence of the community. To do the first: 1st. Absent yourself from one service every Sabbath, or miss at least one in three; if he is not very strong, one in four may answer. 2nd. Neglect your prayer and conference meetings. 3d. Criticize your minister freely, praise him sparingly, find fault plentifully, pray for him little or none. 4th. If he proposes to hold extra meetings, withhold your co-operation. 5th. Give yourself no concern whether his salary is paid or not. 6th. Never call on him socially, or allow him to think that his comfort, or that of his family, is a matter of any importance in your eyes.

To discourage your fellow members: 1st. Observe the directions given above. 2nd. Complain about everything they do, and don't do. 3d. Contrive to make yourself the head of a clique, and by their assistance, and your industry, keep the church in hot water generally. 4th. While doing this, lose no opportunity to complain of the bad treatment you are receiving. 5th. Be as much like Diotrephes and as little like Paul as you can. 6th. Discard charity and candor, take distrust to your bosom, and make scheming your speciality.

To destroy the confidence of the community: 1st. Observe all the foregoing directions. 2nd. Tell the people that you are in the church by force of circumstances, but have no respect for the way in which business is conducted. 3d. Publish the faults of your brethren, taking care to magnify them. 4th. Make no effort to induce people to attend the church. 5th. Take no part in the labors of the Sunday School. 6th. Publish on all sides that you have no confidence in the concern. Predict that it must fall, and never can succeed.

By observing these directions, if the church is not unusually vigorous, you will be certain of witnessing the fulfillment of your predictions." A. D. F.

From Appleton's Journal of Literature, Science and Art, Vol. 2, No. 24.

MORALS OF 1900.

"What will be the probable moral condition of the American people in the year 1900? I am afraid that the social philosopher cannot look at the future without a great deal of apprehension. Our wealth will be secured under conditions that certainly will not favor a great moral development. I but echo a truism, when I say that the prevailing sentiment is not accompanied by a religion calculated to save society. Our churches are losing their hold upon the public mind, and I consequently look for a most gigantic increase of corruption in every department of government and of industry. The development of fraud and swindling, in most of our railroad and industrial enterprises, has reached our legislative bodies. Purely selfish considerations control our parties, elect our legislators, and administer our government. Honesty is becoming the exception; fraud and knavery the rule. We want some new condition or phase of religion to correct this growing cancer of the body politic; but I can see no new evolution of Christian life that is of a nature to grapple with this gigantic evil of the age. It must run its course, and is destined to be the occasion of great intestine commotion and social disturbance."

The writer goes on to say:—"Manners and domestic morals will also probably decay. The looseness of the marriage relation, evidenced by legislative enactments, making divorce laws more lax every year, and the astounding number of divorces, point to a state of society, with regard to the relation of the sexes, which is not pleasant to contemplate."
—Selected by F. Reynolds, Chicago.

From the moment we rise, till the moment we go to rest, we must never once put off the "breastplate of righteousness."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$428.47
F. H. Burbank	2.00
Wm. C. Thorp	1.00
Thomas Pope	5.00
Rosetta Lanning	2.00
M. M. Post	1.00
Wm. C. Jones	.50
Zilpha Hibbard	1.00
A. Evans (by H. L. L.)	2.00
A. Corey	1.00

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$49.06
J. L. Tatro (by M. G.)	3.00

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$643.15
M. S. Smith	2.00
Advent Society of Unity and Acworth, N. H., by Joseph Kimball	15.00

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

Previous acknowledgments	$26.00
M. S. Smith	2.00

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass. $12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

WAITING FOR THE LORD.

The people of God have always been a waiting people. If we go back to the good old patriarch Jacob, as he lay upon his dying bed, we hear him break out in language like this: "I have waited for thy salvation, O Lord." Jacob had no idea of going to heaven when he died, for he says, "I am to be gathered unto my people; bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron, the Hittite." He expected to lie down in the grave, and wait until God's plan of salvation should be completed, and then to share in that salvation with all the faithful. Patient Job says, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Job is waiting to-day.

The Psalmist seems to have had a large measure of the waiting spirit. He says, "My soul doth wait for the Lord, and in his word do I hope." And again, "My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning; I say, more than they that watch for the morning." And again, "Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." Hear the prophet Isaiah: "They shall not be ashamed that wait for me, saith the Lord." And again, "He [Christ] shall not fail, nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth, and the isles shall wait for his law." Again, "Men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, oh God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him." Again, "Blessed are all they that wait for him." Again, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint." This, surely, must be in the immortal state.

Jeremiah, while he laments the sins of his people, and the evil times in which he lived, says, "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." Micah says, "I will wait for the God of my salvation." Habakkuk says, If the vision "tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry." The glorious angel of the Lord told Daniel, "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

My brethren, are you waiting yet for the ending of the 1335 days? Continue to wait a little longer, and the angel's promised blessing shall be yours.

When we come down to the gospel dispensation, we hear our Savior comparing his faithful servants to those "that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding." And brother Paul says that we that "have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body"; and that "if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."

Brethren and sisters, do we know anything about this groaning within ourselves, while we wait for redemption? Ah! yes; some of us, encompassed with trials and temptations on every side, burdened with a multitude of cares, or suffering the pains and infirmities of these mortal bodies, know by a daily experience what the apostle meant; and sometimes like him we cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from this body of death?" [Margin]. But with him we can thank God that "through Jesus Christ our Lord" deliverance will come at last.

Again, Paul exhorts the Corinthian brethren that they "come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." And again, he thanks God in behalf of the Thessalonian brethren, that they had "turned . . . from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." And he prays that they may be directed "into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." And in the eleventh of Hebrews, where he recounts a long list of the faithful, he says: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect"; so that they also are waiting for the things promised.

When John, in vision, on Patmos, heard the souls under the altar praying to be avenged, they were told that they should "rest," or wait until the number of martyrs for Jesus and his truth should be complete. And when the waiting days are over, and the King of glory comes at last, Isaiah represents the triumphant saints as exclaiming, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

Brethren and sisters, looking for the Lord, we are in good company. Patriarchs and prophets, apostles and martyrs for Jesus for these six thousand years, have waited as we are waiting for the day of redemption, the hour of deliverance, the time when the Seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. O, I do thank the Lord that he ever showed me so much of his blessed truth concerning the plan of salvation, and led me to love it with all my heart, and to turn away from the idols of this ungodly world to his service, and to wait for his dear Son. With you I have suffered reproach and scorn for believing the "present truth"; but oh, my soul! did men but realize the position we occupy, waiting for the glorious revelation of the Son of God to the utter destruction of his enemies, and the complete and eternal salvation of his people, they would not wonder that we "count reproach but gain, and glory in the cross."

The "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" will so overbalance the reproach and the sufferings of the waiting time, that the "former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." Yea, the present joy outweighs it all, for even here "we more than taste the heavenly powers, and antedate the day."

Our waiting days are almost ended; the midnight shadows are fast fleeing away; the day begins to break, and soon will burst upon us in all its resplendent glory. Let us see to it that "we come behind in no gift," but are wholly the Lord's, and with all our hearts loving the appearing of Jesus. So shall we wait with patience, yet joyful in hope, and strong in faith.

"Then waiting, brethren, let us sing,
He will not tarry long,
And fill with love the hours that bring
The glory of our song.

Yes, we will wait, nor deem too long
The closing hours of grace;
But trim our lamps with cheerful song,
Till we shall see His face."

Worcester, Mass. H. D. LAW.

For the World's Crisis.

COME TO HIM!

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

O what comforting words! Reader, do you not sometimes feel weary and heavy laden, as though your burdens were almost too heavy for you to bear? If so, come to Jesus; he will help you bear them. Come, cast all your care on him, for he careth for you; and it does not say that certain ones may come, but all, whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely.

Yes, Christ stands with outstretched arms of mercy, ready to receive all who come. O sinner! will you not come to this dear Savior? How can you resist his heavenly love, or trifle with his blood? He shed his blood for you; for your sins he suffered, for your sins he died; and not for yours only, but for all the world beside.

O come to him and find pardon for your sins, for the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin; and you will find him a very present help in every time of need; earthly friends may fail us in that hour, but Christ never will. We sometimes have earthly friends whom we think we can trust; they stand by us in the hour of prosperity; they profess to be our true friends; but in the hour of adversity where do we find them? All fled. Not one will be left to comfort us in this trying hour; our money all gone, and our friends go with it. We are poor now; we cannot dress as they do; we cannot mingle in the same society; so now they want nothing more to do with us; they leave us all alone in our trial, to struggle on and get through it the best way we can.

Who then looks down on us as with pitying eyes, and says unto us, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"? It is Jesus, our own blessed Savior; he will stand by us in all these trying hours. And though all the world should forsake us, yet Christ never will.

"A mother may forgetful be,
For human love is frail;
But thy dear Savior's love to thee
Can never, never fail."

Will you not accept this love in your heart, that is offered so freely, without price?

Portland, Me. M. E. CHUTE.

For the World's Crisis.

ANNIVERSARIES.

Every day is an anniversary to somebody, a day to be especially remembered and noticed on account of some event of importance to the individual. But what anniversary is more worthy of regard than that of the day or night when we first set out in earnest on the christian pilgrimage?

I saw the statement of Bro. Hook, that Feb. 13th was his birthday, and also that he began to preach twenty-seven years ago. The coincidence of my conversion on Feb. 13th, twenty-seven years ago, gave this notice of Bro. Hook a peculiar interest to me. This day always seems like the beginning of days to me, or the beginning of a new year; as much so as the anniversary of the day of my birth, or the first of January.

But the best thought that occurs to me in this connection is this; it is not best to wait for an anniversary before we begin a good work. Do we intend to sometime begin to live better? Do we intend sometime to seek the Lord with all our heart? Begin now. Do it now. Now is the accepted time. Make this day an anniversary never to be forgotten.

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

GAMBLING ON WHEELS.

A few weeks ago, aiming homewards early in the morning, I chanced to reach the station just as the train began to move. As its speed was every instant increasing, there was no time for choice, and I entered the car which came first. This was a baggage car, one end of which was partitioned off and provided with seats in a sort of rough way. In fact, it was one of the old style tobacco dens which preceded the full-length smoking cars of the present day. As I entered, I saw the conductor smile, as I thought benignantly, and I fancied that he was silently congratulating me on my success, when the "margin" of time was so small. I found the place full of passengers, perhaps thirty, or more, almost all young men; and as nearly as I could judge, they were clerks and book-keepers, who are employed in the city, but have their homes in the country. Of this company of young men, sixteen were playing cards! There were four different sets of four players each. By reversing a seat, each quartette was brought into a convenient position for play. A broad, thin board lay upon their knees, forming the table. And they were playing earnestly, eagerly, making their motions with a nervous agitation which struck me as being in itself a bad omen. Perhaps a small pile of money which I saw on one of the boards accounted for the eagerness and animation. They certainly were not playing to relieve the tedium of the journey, because the journey was very short, and at eight o'clock on a winter morning they certainly were not weary. The boards, too, which formed their gambling tables, had evidently been provided for the purpose for which they were used.

In short, everything indicated not only purpose, but settled habit. I had stumbled upon a gambling den. No wonder the conductor smiled significantly, when he saw me, in my haste, getting on the train in the wrong place.

On further inquiry, I find that the smoking cars on our various railroads are beginning to be regarded with suspicion, and that on some routes they are recognized as places of evil reputation, where cards, brandy flasks, and indecent publications are only too common, and the whole moral atmosphere is sunk to the level of an ordinary drinking saloon.

I will not name the road where I witnessed the disgraceful scene. Let the good men connected with every road inquire into their own. Let any parent, whose son spends two or three hours in the cars every day, ask him what he knows about these things. Let employers look into the matter, before fraud and theft discovered shall give them a warning which they will not be likely to disregard.—Rev. J. T. Crane, D.D., in the S. S. Times.

For the World's Crisis.

A NEW MOVE.

BRO. GRANT:—I find the following singular and important item in this morning's Express, a political paper, and send it as being worthy of an insertion in our beloved Crisis. Even "straws show which way the wind blows." May we not yet hope to see the horrible heathen dogma of endless torment blotted from all christian creeds?

Buffalo, Feb 15th, 1870. J. BLAIN.

"MR. BEECHER'S church inclines still more to latitudinarianism, the last step being to modify the orthodox Calvinistic idea of eternal punishment. This rigid orthodoxy has heretofore found place in one of the 'Articles of Faith' of Plymouth church, but for some time past many members have thought it objectionable, and now Mr. Beecher concurs in a resolution directing the appointment of a committee to revise or blot out the offending article."

A TRIBE OF JEWS IN ABYSINNIA.

One of the "Lost tribes," said to have been found in Abyssinia, is described by M. Halevy, in a paper laid before a learned society in France. The people are known as the Falashas, and they number two hundred and fifty thousand souls. M. Halevy says they speak an Agua dialect called Falashina, or Kailina, and into this language they have translated a Gheez version of the Old Testament. They do not practise polygamy. They circumcise their male children on the seventh day. The institution of purification is practised. the children are taught the Bible, the Psalms, prayers and sacred history. In the synagogues the sexes sit apart. Incense is burned during the services. Their religious hopes are turned to Jerusalem, but their ideas of Messiah are very indistinct. They are wholly unacquainted with Hebrew, and know nothing of the ceremonies instituted after the time of Ezra. They have a religious literature; keep the Sabbath rigidly; fast on Mondays and Thursdays: keep the ninth of Ab to commemorate the destruction of Jerusalem; wash before and say grace after eating; have a traditional mode of slaughtering animals for food; practice commemorative sacrifices on the holy days, and also for the repose of the souls of the dead; their women enjoy equality with men; they hold slaves, but liberate them after a servitude of six years.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE ŒCUMENICAL COUNCIL.

It is the drollest thing on earth to see the stir in the Romish world in regard to the Pope's infallibility. How is it to be known that he is infallible?. By the vote of a congregation of men, not one of whom could get his own word taken without bondsmen, for the sum of five thousand dollars? By the vote of a congregation of men who have themselves to be first convinced by evidence outside the Pope, and of course outside themselves, if it be not the mere reverberation of their own affirmations, as of echoes among the mountains.

Let us form an insurance company; call it the Ecumenical Insurance Company, if you please, or any other name that suits you. You swear that I am worth five hundred thousand dollars, and I will do the same for you, and we will do the same for the others, and then we will all made affidavit that our concern is worth five hundred thousand million, and the president is infallible. We do not any of us know him to be infallible, and he does not know himself, else he would not ask anybody; and some do not believe him any more infallible than the rest of us. But the moment we all say that he is infallible, then he is. Our saying in council is the same as the saying of the mass; it creates infallibility, as that creates a God. It is a mass-meeting, whereby two negatives make an affirmative; two uncertainties, one absolute truth. It is the mass, the wafer, the priest's word, and behold your god!

But the infinite drollery of the thing is the gravity with which it is announced that the proposition will not be brought before the Council, unless it be known beforehand that the Council will certainly decide in favor of the Pope's infallibility.

Now if the Pope be infallible, he ought to be able to say whether the Council will so decide, and he ought to make this known, and so put an end to their perplexity and his own. His Infallibility is perplexed whether to bring the question of his infallibility before the Council, because His Infallibility is uncertain which way the Council may decide, and the attribute of his infallibility will be greatly injured, cut down, and mortified, if they should decide against it, or even decide doubtfully, or even say that they don't know. The question, therefore, will not be hazarded if His Infallibility remains in doubt as to the decision of the Council.

But if his Infallibility is infallible and sure, then let His Infallibility inform the Council and the world of the fact of his being infallible, and the Council will infallibly decide accordingly. All they want is evidence; but the evidence of infallibility can in the nature of things be furnished only by that which is infallible, or by him who is so. For that which is in itself fallible cannot give credible testimony as to the infallibility of another person or thing,—cannot give revelation of such infallibility. One hundred liars cannot prove concerning the one hundred and first that he is infallible, and expect on that announcement to have his word in turn taken by all the world that the one hundred are infallible in whatsoever they may affirm as the result of their deliberations under him.

If the Pope ask the Council to say that he is infallible, and the Council say that he is, what then? If they refuse to say that he is, what then? If they doubt whether to deliberate, what then? If the Pope be not infallible, what of the Church?—Christian Union.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to pen a few lines to the Crisis, to let the dear friends know that the good Master is with us in the west. There seems to be a general desire to hear concerning the precious truths we hold; and I find that wherever those truths are introduced in the proper spirit, they are more or less effective. The cause has suffered much in consequence of the manifestation of a censorious and dogmatic spirit on the part of its advocates. If we have not the spirit of Christ, we are none of his.

Bro. Sheldon and others have been holding meetings in this part of the State during the fall and winter, with considerable success. I held a meeting in a new place, in the town of Oregon, and though the weather was most of the time unfavorable, the results were good for a new place; prejudice was broken down, some became enlightened on the nature of man, a number rose for prayers, and we trust a permanent interest was established.

But the work of God at Paoli has been of the most remarkable character. The meeting had been in contemplation for months, and the brethren had been in a special manner praying and believing for a revival. The result has proven the power and efficacy of prayer offered in faith.

As stated in a former communication, the work commenced with our quarterly meeting, and continued with unabated interest for three weeks, during which time between fifty and sixty manifested their desire to flee the wrath to come. It was a pleasing sight to see the aged and middle-aged and the young accepting the invitations of the gospel. Whole families were converted to God, and it was good to visit those households and hear the voice of prayer and songs of praise, where before was profanity and exhibitions of anger. "It is the Lord's doings, and it is marvelous in our eyes."

May the Lord stir up all his servants to greater earnestness in warning the people of the impending judgment. We cannot be consistent with our profession of faith, without being terribly in earnest. O, my dear brethren, sound the alarm. The great day of the Lord is at hand; and while we faithfully warn, let us remember that the next duty is to win.

Yours in the work, GEO. THOMSON.

Attica, Wis., Feb. 11th, 1870.

Obituaries.

SWEET. Died, at Chestnut Hill, Blackstone, Mass., Feb. 11th, 1870, of inflammation of the bowels, Hattie A., wife of Eld. C. H. Sweet, and daughter of Wm. D. Engley, aged twenty-four years.

The dreadful blow has fallen. The grim monster has snatched from my embrace the dear companion of my youth, and I am unable to rescue her from his power. She was sick but six days, and her sufferings were great. Our sorrow is great, but we are not destitute of hope, for we have every reason to believe that she sweetly sleeps in Jesus. She first sought Christ some eleven years ago, and remained steadfast in the faith until the time of her death, but she has been unusually devoted for the last few months. Her sleep will be short. She will soon have part in the first resurrection.

A consoling discourse was delivered upon the occasion of the funeral by Eld. E. Bellows, from 1 Thess. 4: 14. C. H. SWEET.

EGGLETON. Fell asleep in Jesus, at his residence in Philadelphia, Feb. 5th, 1870, after a long and painful illness, Bro. John Eggleton, in the twenty-third year of his age.

He was converted to God two years ago, and since that time has lived an earnest, faithful christian. He loved the Savior and his glorious appearing with all his heart. His desire was to live to work for the Lord, and spread his glorious truths, which he held so dear. He did not expect to go to heaven or get his reward at death, but at the resurrection of the just. He leaves a wife and one child, also a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. But they sorrow not as others which have no hope." H. T. TAYLOR.

WHIPPLE. Fell asleep in Jesus, Feb. 9th, 1870, Bro. Whipple, aged sixty-eight years, eight months and twenty-four days.

He left a companion and five children to mourn the loss of a good husband and father. B. P. MANNING.

BARNARD. Died in Canaan, Feb. 16th, 1870, of consumption, Mary Ann Barnard, wife of Jonathan Barnard, aged forty-three years.

Sermon by Rev. C. H. Chase. Text, John 5: 28. Sr. B. was an excellent mother, a kind and affectionate sister, ever ready to help the needy. D. EASTMAN.

MAYO. Sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, in Hollis, Jan. 15th, Mary J. Mayo, widow of Bro. Lorenzo Mayo, formerly of Biddeford, Me., aged about twenty-nine years.

Words of comfort spoken by Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell, from 1 Peter 1: 24. May God hasten the time when death will be destroyed. T. J. CARLE.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

VIENNA, Feb. 15. The Free Press confirms the report of the protest of Austria and other Catholic powers against the Papal Syllabus which has been transmitted to Rome.

ROME, Feb. 15. Advices from Constantinople represent that the Armenians, by a large majority, have decided not to recognize the authority of their Patriarch, for the reason that he is too feeble to resist the encroachments of the Pope of Rome on the rights of Eastern Catholics. The Turkish government is disposed to support the Armenians, and fears are entertained of a schism between them and Rome.

16th. There was another session of the Ecumenical Council yesterday. Six fathers took part in the discussion. It was announced that the Bishops of Antwerp, Mechlin and Solerno had received the title of Primate. Eight bishops received permission to return to their dioceses.

PARIS, 16th. All the great powers of Europe sustain the Russian Government in the demand upon Switzerland for the surrender of the felon Bebchojeff.

Seven journals of this city have been officially warned this week.

Last evening great crowds assembled at the reunion in Rue St. Martin, Belleville. It was suppressed by the police without disorder.

Still another prosecution has been commenced against the Marseillaise for violation of the press law.

Father Hyacinthe has remained silent since his return to France. It is asserted on reliable authority that he will be relieved by the Pope from the obligation of his vows as a Carmelite monk and be permitted to continue in holy orders as an ordinary priest.

17th. The Journal Official publishes the imperial decree, which, by the request of the Minister of Justice, annuls the decree of 1851, giving the government the power of transporting to the penal settlements parties who belong to secret political societies. The Minister says this power is abolished because it is incompatible with a liberal government.

Feb. 18th. The Government has proof of a plot to assassinate the Emperor and the Prince Imperial, and has seized a plan found on one of the prisoners to throw bombs through the Emperor's window at the Tulieries.

La France objects to the proposed dogma of the infallibility of the Pope, because, if admitted, the French Bishops would no longer be answerable to the common law.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 17. The Diet has passed a law admitting Dissenters and Jews to political rights. The King signed the law immediately.

MADRID, Feb. 17. Carlist disturbances are reported at Marcia, Calatayud, and other places, but they were promptly suppressed. The indications are that the Carlists are plotting for a general outbreak in the spring. The Government is prepared to meet them.

DOMESTIC.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 15. The Superior Court today decided on the question of the Bible in the public schools in favor of the Bible, and issued a perpetual injunction restraining the execution of the vote of the School Board not to allow the Bible or sacred singing in the schools.

San Francisco, Feb. 17. Another earthquake visited this city to-day, causing hotels and public buildings to be vacated instanter. The streets were filled with people before the shock had hardly ceased. Fortunately it occurred about the time of the recess in the public schools, and many of the children were out playing. In the schools which were in session the teachers managed to keep the children under control, though in one of the schools the misses created quite a panic. The Custom House was uninjured, but was soon emptied of its occupants. The cracks made by the October shocks in some of the old buildings were widened a little, but no material damage was sustained. Funeral services were being held in the Washington street Baptist Church and there was a large attendance. At the first tremble the pastor and congregation rushed. Several ladies fainted, but no one was seriously injured. The old frame buildings on the wharves swayed and creaked, but the waters in the bay showed no unusual commotion.

The shock was quite heavy at Petaluma, causing the people to vacate brick buildings.

The weather was clear and warm at the time of the shock. It is raining this evening.

SECOND DISPATCH.

The sharp shock of earthquake occurred at 12 o'clock 13 minutes. Its duration was seven seconds. Its direction was from southeast and northwest. There was a general panic, but no damage was caused to buildings so far as ascertained. The shock was felt at Sacramento, Santa Cruz, San Jose, Oakland and other places.

Lewiston, Me., Feb. 19. The severest gale experienced for many years occurred yesterday. The wind blew furiously until late in the night and it has rained continually for twenty-four hours, and has not ceased yet. In addition to the rain two feet of snow were melted, causing a great accumulation of water, which has unfloored culverts and submerged highways.

THE BURNING WELL.—Citizens and strangers visited the burning well in flocks on Sunday. From before noon until sundown a constant stream of people, on foot, in carriages, and on horseback, were going or coming from that remarkable curiosity. It seethed and burned and babbled for them as long as their curiosity and inquisitiveness prompted them to watch it; and we presume it is burning yet, as it has been for two months past. It seems almost a pity that so much gas, of nature's own superior manufacture, should thus "waste its sweetness on the desert air." (That quotation may not be just the thing, but it is the only poetry we have at hand.) It is not wasted, however. It proves that below is a laboratory where for ages nature has been busy with gigantic chemical experiments; and that materials, rich and inexhaustible, are there stored, awaiting but the utilitarian expedients of man's ingenuity and necessities to shape themselves into the appliances of civilization and wealth.—Fort Scott Monitor, 8th.

"A MAN AND A BROTHER" IN THE VIRGINIA SENATE.—In the Virginia Senate, a few days ago, quite a sensation was created by Mr. Mosely, a negro Senator from Goochland. He arose to explain a vote he had given, when the President told him his explanation was out of order, and upon Mosely insisting on speaking, ordered him to sit down. The order was obeyed. Subsequently, by general consent, Mosely was allowed to make his explanation, in the course of which he uttered this home-thrust:

"Moreover, gentlemen, I have some of the best white blood of Virginia coursing in my veins. On one side I can claim as high and as honorable descent as any Senator in this chamber. Gentlemen, I am your brother! I am also the colored man's brother. I represent both races. I am Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-African, and I desire to do justice to my kin of both sides."

Mosely is described as a dark mulatto, of good form, fine and intelligent face, about forty-five years of age, and a fluent and tolerably correct speaker.

Passing Events.

☞ Castelar, the leader of the Spanish Republicans, has written a remarkable letter to a Vienna liberal paper, in which he predicts not only a Spanish Republic but a confederation of European republics, on the plan of the American federal system, and ultimately an United States of the world. He pays a glowing tribute to America, "that Paradise of the future."

☞ An inscription commonly used by Germans, "Here rests in God," was recently placed on the tombstone of a German who died at Rome. This came to the ears of the authorities, and great was their indignation that any one should have had the audacity to suppose that a vile Protestant could be said to "rest in God." In spite of the protests of the German community, therefore, the offending stone was actually removed from the grave.

☞ Mrs. Bradford Foote of Sheffield died from the effects of chloroform in the office of Dr. W. W. Rice in Great Barrington, on Saturday, after having had twelve teeth extracted.

☞ A tremendous conflagration is raging in the mountains near Santa Anita canon, in the Southern part of California. The fire extends for a distance of thirty miles.

☞ The Honolulu Gazette of Jan. 12 says that the volcanic Mauna Loa showed considerable activity. A dense smoke was constantly issuing from it, and several times flames had been seen in the night. The crater of Kilauea was comparatively inactive, although it was observable that the smoke issuing from the crevices in and about the crater was much more dense than it has hitherto been known to be.

☞ In Southern gardens flowers are already in bloom.

☞ There have been twenty-eight executions for murder in Philadelphia since 1789.

☞ One hundred and seventy-five Mormons have taken possession of ranches belonging to Gentiles in the neighborhood of Ely, Nevada, avowing their purpose to hold the land at all hazards, and serious trouble is apprehended.

☞ Immense flocks of robins are perched upon the cane and bushes on the cliffs of Cumberland river, Ky., for three miles.

☞ There are more signs than one that the Pope and the Council are in hot water. A German Romanist Professor puts the difficulty thus neatly: If the Pope is really infallible he cannot be fallible in declaring himself infallible, and Pius IX., in this nineteenth century of ours, must not then hesitate to announce what Innocent III. in the thirteenth century regarded as heresy."

☞ Judicious charity is the most difficult to achieve of all ways of spending money.

☞ The culture of the pineapple is profitable in Florida. A local paper reports that one man in Key West has sold his crop of pine apples this year for nearly seven thousand dollars. The crop was gathered from less than an acre and a half of ground. This same man has one hundred and fifteen thousand plants, which will be in bearing next year. These cover less than seven acres of ground, and if sold at the same rate as this year's crop, will net him sixty thousand dollars. The pine-apple crop of next year, it is supposed, will exceed two hundred thousand dollars.

☞ An old negro preaching in a Maine town, recently condemned the general tendency of men to wish they had others' opportunities to do good, and asked: "What would the hummin' bird do wid the eagle's wings? And what could de eagle do wid de hummin' bird's wings? Bredren, use de wings of faith God has gibben you, and God will care for both de eagles' and de hummins' birds' flight."

☞ An individual in Berne calls himself Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, and says he is a grandson of Napoleon I. He has published a pamphlet, dedicated to France, entitled Society and My Rights. He bears some resemblance to the Bonaparte family.

☞ It is announced that a spot on the Sun, so large as to be seen by the unassisted eye, is now visible. A piece of smoked glass is necessary to shield the eye of the observer.

☞ White clover is imparting a vernal beauty to St. Mary's Parish, La., being in some places nearly a foot high.

☞ Prince Pierre Bonaparte will be tried before the High Court of Justice on the charge of homicide through imprudence.

☞ Wild geese are wending their way northward over Vermont.

☞ Asiatic cholera is raging at Moscow in its worst form. People are suddenly attacked by the epidemic while walking in the streets, and there have been several cases in which death was instantaneous.

☞ A Young Women's Christian Association has been organized in Baltimore.

☞ In Rome the Maronite Bishops assembled at the Council, and also some French prelates, signed a protest, demanding the suppression of permanent armies, as being contrary to the spirit of the gospel. At the same time some others, and among them the Patriarchs of the East, declared against the law penalty of death.

SHOEING HORSES.—Two gentlemen connected with the British army—Mr. George Fleming, veterinary surgeon, and Col. Fitzwygram—have recently published works on the treatment of the horse, and both energetically protest against the paring and cutting away of the sole and frog which often accompanies the operation of shoeing a horse. Nothing can be more barbarous than the carving and cutting of a horse's foot before shoeing, though on his skill in this many a farrier prides himself. The idea that the frog must not be allowed to bear on the ground—that the sole must be thinned till it "springs to the thumb," is a most pernicious one. On this subject Mr. Fleming's precept is: "The sole, frog and bars must, on no account, or under any conditions, except those of a pathological nature, be interfered with in any way by knife or rasp." At each shoeing the hoof must be shortened to its natural proportions, beyond which it his grown behind the protecting shoe, and it is this which forms the chief difficulty of the work, and is the criterion of the good work man.

Notices.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we shall commence a series of meetings at Fish Creek Landing, Oneida Co., N. Y., on Friday evening, March 4th, 1870, to continue as long as it may be duty. All who love our Lord Jesus Christ and the salvation of men, are invited to this meeting. Come one, come all. Come praying the Lord to bless to the saving of some. The friends at Camden, Glenmore, New London, and Higginsville, as many as can, are requested to come and help in the meeting.

B. P. STEVENS.
M. R. MILES.

P. S. Bro. Grant: The Lord is blessing in adding to our number such as shall be saved. Five joined with us yesterday. We expect others soon. Pray for us. B. P. S.

A Discussion.

A discussion between Elders McCullum, of Lake City, Fla., and P. A. Smith, of Jacksonville, Fla., will commence at seven o'clock P. M., March 8th, and continue four nights. The subject to be discussed is as follows: "Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man is unconscious from death until the resurrection, and then the righteous only receive immortality." P. A. SMITH, affirms; Elder MCCULLUM denies.

P. S. Peaches are in full bloom, and oranges are just opening their blossoms. It is beautiful weather. P. A. SMITH.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Quarterly Conf. will meet at the Christian Chapel, at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., Friday evening, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited. Come praying for the blessing of God upon this meeting.

Trains leave Genesee Valley Depot, Rochester, N. Y., for Honeoye Falls, 7-45 A. M. and 4 P. M. Change cars at Rush Junction. WARREN J. HOBBS.

Notice.

The dedication of the new meeting-house at Week's Mills, Me., will take place Friday, March 4th, at 10½ A. M. Meetings to continue over Sunday. For the brethren, JOHN R. HALL.

If possible I will be with Bro. Hall at the dedication. R. R. YORK.

Notice.

If any church or congregation are desirous to have the Mass. Annual Conference with them in April, please let us know as soon as possible by letter, addressed to S. W. THURBER, Chelsea, Mass.

Protracted Meeting.

The Lord will, there will be a protracted meeting at East Ackworth, to commence March 6th, and hold as long as duty requires. Let there be a rally of the children. Come to work. Preaching by Brn. E. Cotton, T. L. Hall, and others. T. L. HALL.

Notice.

There will be a conference at South Livermore, Me., commencing Thursday evening, March 3d, and continue over the following Sabbath. Eld. Jesse Gay is expected to be present to preach the word. For the brethren, E. M. HAGGETT.

Conference.

The "Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference" will be held at Frankfort, Me., commencing Thursday, March 10th, 1870, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and worship with us. The church here love to "entertain strangers." Inquire for Josiah Woodman. F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

There will be a conference at the Cummings' school-house, in Greene, six miles above Lewiston, on the east side of the Androscoggin river, to commence Thursday evening, Feb. 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. A. Libby and others are expected to preach the word. May the blessing of God attend the effort.

For the brethren, E. M. HAGGETT.

Protracted Meeting.

We shall commence a protracted meeting at Northville, in the town of Newport, N. H., Sunday, Feb. 20th, and probably hold it every evening through the week, and as much longer as duty calls. We heartily and cordially invite all who love God, of every name or order, to come and labor with us for the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the comforting and perfecting of the saints. E. COTTON.

Notice.

The second quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord willing, at Loudon Ridge, to commence Thursday, Feb. 24th, at ten o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Bro. J. Couch and other faithful laborers are expected to attend. May the Lord greatly bless. T. W. PIPER.

Dedication.

The new Chapel at Chicopee Falls, Mass., will be dedicated Saturday, Feb. 26th, at 2 P. M.

Notice.

Bro. Benjamin Saulpaugh, of Goffstown Village, N. H., has been chosen as a steward of the church, to whom friends can send what they feel the Lord would have them, and he will see that it is judiciously used for Bro. Manning's support and comfort. J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

Bro. Grant: Please say, through the Crisis, that I have moved to Norway, Me., where I am to labor with the brethren one fourth of the time, and purpose to go into the regions beyond, the Lord willing, as the way opens. Friends wishing my labors with them, can write me at that place. JESSE GAY.

Notice.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict. L. A. LANG.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., will be held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street, instead of Central Hall, as heretofore. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. WHITEHEAD, West Meriden, Conn., Box. 4.

Notice.

As the piece of music entitled "Sweet by-and by" cannot be obtained in sheet form, I will send the book, containing words and music, post-paid, for 35 cents. "The Pilgrim's Harp," 60 cts., post-paid. GEORGE E. LEE, Brimfield, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Minot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. Munger, Friday evening, Feb. 25th, and Sunday, Feb. 27th. Also evenings, March 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th, and Sunday, March 6th.
Henry Pratt... Sunday, March 20th
A. F. Baker... Sunday, March 27th

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
J. S. White... Sunday, March 6th
J. G. Smith... Sunday, March 13th
Geo. A. Streeter... Sunday, March 20th

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
Zina Ford... Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
S. S. Brewer... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Couch... Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell... Sunday, March 13th
J. S. White... Sunday, March 20th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.
S. W. Thurber... Sundays, Feb. 13th, 20th and 27th

Rutland, Vt., Tuesday evening, Feb. 22d, and every evening during the week, and over the following Sabbath.
E. Poultney, in the Baptist meeting-house, Tuesday evening, March 1st. MILES GRANT.

Wakefield, Mass... Sunday, March 6th
Fairhaven, Mass... Sunday, March 13th
C. GOODRICH.

Vernon, Vt... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Manchester, N. H... Sunday, March 6th
L. BOUTELL.

Hartford, Ct... Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th
Vernon, Vt... Sunday, March 13th
H. PRATT.

Loudon Ridge, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN COUCH.

Warehouse Point, Ct... Sunday, March 13th
The rest of March not engaged. H. MUNGER.

Webster, Mass... evening, Feb. 26th, and over the following Sabbath.
Square Pond, Ct... Sabbath, March 13th
P. S. BUTLER.

North Somers... Lord's day, Feb. 27th
Springfield, Mass... evenings, Feb. 28th and March 1st
New York City, (Star of Hope Mission), evening, March 4th, and onward as Elder T. J. Cox may arrange. A. D. FLAGG.

Holden, Mass... March 13th and April 10th
Plymouth, Mass... Sunday, March 27th
South Reading, Mass... Sunday, April 17th
J. S. WHITE.

Stowe, Mass... Sunday, March 6th
Manchester, N. H... Sunday, March 13th
A. SIMPSON.

Stowe, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th
MOSES YOUNG.

Salem, Mass... Sunday, March 13th
C. E. BARNES.

South Ashburnham, Mass... evening, March 2nd
Keene, N. H... evening, March 3d
West Fairlee, Vt... Sundays, March 6th and 13th
Pomfret, Vt... evenings, March 16th and 17th
Bridgewater, Vt... Sundays, March 20th and 27th
Plymouth, Vt... evenings, March 29th, 30th and 31st
North Springfield, Vt... Sundays, April 3d and 10th
J. W. THOMAS.

North Adams... Sunday, Feb. 27th
East Savoy (New Chapel) evenings, Feb. 28th and 29th
Will some one of the brethren please meet me at South Adams Depot, Monday, 28th?
Sandy Hill... Sunday, March 6th
Z. DUBOIS BAIRD.

East Otis, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th and onward if the Lord will. DAVID BATES.
WM. J. RIPLEY.

Westfield, Mass... Sabbath, Feb. 27th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

New Bedford, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Pleasant Valley, Ct... Sunday, March 6th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Brimfield, Mass... Sabbath, March 6th
RUFUS BAKER.

Abington, Ct... Sabbath, March 13th
Rocky Brook, R. I... Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
C. H. SWEET.

Southington, Ct... Sabbath, March 6th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Yalesville, Ct... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. L. WOOD.

Newfield, Ct... Sunday, March 6th
S. WOODRUFF.

Waterbury, Ct... Sunday, March 13th
Newfield, Ct... Sunday, March 20th
East Otis, Mass... Sunday, March 27th
Lovely Street, Ct... Sunday, April 3d
WM. J. RIPLEY.

Philadelphia, Pa., (9th and Spring Garden Streets), at 10½ A. M., Feb. 27th.
Camden, N. J., (4th and Market Streets), at 3 and 7½ P. M. S. P. BABCOCK.

Providence, R. I... March 6th to 10th
Anthony, R. I... March 11th to 14th
New Britain, Conn... March 15th to 25th
F. H. BURBANK.

East Lyman, (Cowen school-house), evenings, Feb. 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th.
Swift Water, N. H... evenings, March 3d and 4th
Haverhill Center, N. H... Sunday, March 6th
Warren Summit, N. H... evening, March 10th
Meredith Village, N. H... evening, March 11th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)... Sunday, March 13th
Concord, N. H., (Bethel)... evening, March 15th
Manchester, N. H... evening, March 16th
Brentwood, N. H... evening, March 17th
Seabrook, N. H., (with Bro. Wm. C. Stewart), evenings, March 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th.
A. A. HOYT.

New Britain, Conn... Sundays, March 13th and 20th
S. S. BREWER.

Bowdoin, Me., (Adams' school-house), Sun., Feb. 27th
Bath, Me... Sunday, March 6th
H. S. MITCHELL.

Weld, Me., (Town House)... Sunday, Feb. 27th
A. A. ABBOTT.

Kennebunkport, Me... Sundays, March 13th and 20th
N. P. NASON.

Rochester Village, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN & JANE DAVIS.

West Abington, Mass... Sunday, March 6th
C. E. BARNES.

East Landaff, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Lake Village, N. H... Tuesday evening, March 1st
E. S. MOULTON.

Nashua, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
JOHN H. DADMUN.

Holden, Me., (Clewley Chapel)... Sunday, March 6th
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

Sebec, Me., (where Bro. Wm. Harriman may appoint), Friday evening, March 11th, Saturday evening, March 12th, and Sunday, March 13th.
JOSHUA LIVERMORE.
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

Cabot, Vt... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Groton, Vt... evening, March 3d
through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
North Haverhill, N. H., (as the Brn. arrange), evening, March 9th.
Piermont, N. H., (Town House), evening, March 12th and over the Sabbath, March 13th.
Porter Village, Me... Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
T. E. LANG, JR.

Manchester, N. H... evenings, Feb. 25th and 26th and Sunday, the 27th.
East Rochester, N. H... Sunday, March 6th
WM. C. STEWART.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House), evening, Feb. 24th and over the Sabbath. D. M. LEAVITT.
JOHN H. EVANS.

Lake Village, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Hopkinton, N. H., (Town Hall Building)... March 6th
C. W. SARGENT.

Lynn, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. SMITH.

South Holden (days)... Feb. 26th and 27th
Emerson's Mill, Levant... evening, Feb. 24th
Levantville... evening, Feb. 25th
ISRAEL DAMAN.

Melvin Village... Feb. 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Westfield, Mass... Wednesday evening, Feb. 23d
Danielsonville... Friday evening, Feb. 25th and the following Sunday, the 27th.
Bridgeport... Tuesday evening, March 1st
ANNA M. SMITH.

Bridgewater, Vt... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Plymouth, (Union Hall)... evenings, Feb. 22d and 23d
North Springfield, Vt... Sundays, March 6th and 13th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Seltico, Ct... Sunday, Feb. 27th
A. M. [illegible]

Holden, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th
River Point, R. I... Sunday, March 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Lynn, Mass... Sunday, March 6th
Preach and break bread. M. BATCHELOR.

Chicopee Falls, Mass... Sunday, Feb. 27th and onward as the Lord may direct.
JOHN G. HOOK.

Addison, Vt., Sabbath, Feb. 27th, and continue through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
T. M. PREBLE.

Tylerville... evening, Feb. 25th
Chester... evening, Feb. 26th
East Haddam... Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Morris, Ct... Sabbath, March 6th
G. L. WHITE.

Merchantville, N. Y., Feb. 24th, and over the following Sabbath. J. W. TAYLOR.

Warehousepoint... Sunday, Feb. 27th
H. H. DICKINSON.

Whitefield, N. H., Feb. 26th, and during the week following, and will preach, if the brethren wish to have me, evenings and on Sabbath, if they are not supplied. J. A. CLEAVELAND.

South Vernon, Vt... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Will Bro. Merrill meet me at the depot, Feb. 18th?
GEO. W. BROWN.

Woodstock Valley, Ct... Sunday, Feb. 27th
I. B. POTTER.

Hollis Centre, Me... Sunday, Feb 27th
T. P. S. HAMPSON.

Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sab., Feb. 27th
Webster, N. H., (Methodist meeting-house), Sabbath, March 6th. SIMEON ROBY.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)... Sunday, Feb. 27th
JULIA BUSWELL.

Keene, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
B. WOODSIDE.

West Rumney, N. H., (school-house), Wednesday evening, March 2nd.
Compton, (Bump school-house), evening, March 3d, and every evening through the week, and over the Sabbath, and longer if the Lord directs.
D. EASTMAN.

South Sutton, N. H... Sabbath, Feb. 27th
F. NELSON.

Barnstead, N. H., (Lock's Corner), Sunday, Feb. 27th
Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house)... Sunday, March 6th.
Alton Corner, N. H... Sunday, March 13th
Melvin Village, N. H... Sunday, March 20th
Farmington Village, N. H... Sunday, March 27th
☞ NO NAME.

Great Works... evening, March 23d
E. S. MOULTON.

Albany, N. H... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Factory Village, N. H., (as Bro. Kidder may arrange), Tuesday evening, March 1st, through the week, and over the Sunday following.
Lake Village, N. H... evening, March 9th
West Ossipee, N. H., Sunday, March 13th. Subject in the afternoon (by request),—Baptism the great symbol of the resurrection. Any who wish can be baptized.
Madison, N. H., (North Division) evening, March 15th
Albany... evening, March 17th
Upper Bartlett... Sunday, March 20th
L. C. & M. MCKINSTRY.

South Berwick, Me. (Great Works), Sunday, March 6th
Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliot, Me.

South Windsor, Ct... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Prospect, Ct... Sunday, March 6th
S. C. HANCOCK.

New York, (Cooper Institute)... March 27th
and from thence to Philadelphia. F. H. BURBANK.

South Elliot, Me... Sunday, March 6th
Rochester (Village)... Sunday, March 13th
Alton, (Stockbridge Corner)... Sunday, March 20th
J. PINKHAM.

WORCESTER, MASS.
A. Ross... Sunday, March 6th
M. Batchelor... Sunday, March 13th
H. F. Carpenter... Sunday, March 20th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
P. S. Butler... Sabbath, Feb. 27th
Also Sabbaths, March 6th, 20th, and 27th.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
W. N. Pile... Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

LAWRENCE, MASS.
J. S. White... Sunday, Feb. 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.
A. Simpson... Sunday, Feb. 27th
S. S. Brewer... Sunday, March 6th

EXETER, N. H.
J. Pinkham... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. Harvey... Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell... Sunday, March 13th
T. W. Piper... Sunday, March 20th
A. Ross... Sunday, March 27th

DOVER, N. H.
E. S. Moulton... Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell... Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
C. H. Fletcher... Sabbaths, Feb. 27th and March 6th
J. Couch... Sabbath, March 13th
A. Simpson... Sunday, March 20th
Enoch Morrill... Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
F. H. Burbank... Sunday, Feb. 27th
E. S. Moulton... Friday evening, March 4th
Allen Damon... Sabbath, March 6th

SEABROOK, N. H.
A. P. Moore... Sunday, Feb. 27th
Joseph Pinkham... Sunday, March 6th
E. S. Moulton... Sunday, March 20th

HAMPTON, N. H.
N. M. Davis... Sunday, Feb. 27th
J. G. Smith... Sabbath, March 6th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
C. Goodrich... Sunday, Feb. 27th
E. S. Moulton... Sundays, March 6th and 13th

ELLIOT, ME.
Joseph W. White... Sunday, Feb. 27th
L. E. Saulpaugh... Sunday, March 6th
Wm. C. Stewart... Sunday, March 13th
Wm. H. Mitchell... Sunday, March 20th

PORTLAND, ME.
A. H. Walker... Sunday, Feb. 27th

LEWISTON, ME.
R. R. York... Sunday, Feb. 27th

BIDDEFORD, ME.
W. H. Mitchell... Sundays, Feb. 27th and March 6th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)
B. Hitchcock... Sunday, Feb. 27th

BRISTOL, CT.
B. Hitchcock... Sabbath, Feb. 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
Wm. Stewart... Sunday, March 6th
W. N. Pile... Sunday, March 13th

WOLCOTTVILLE, CT.
G. L. Teeple... Sunday, Feb. 27th

MINNESOTA.
Winona... Sabbath, March 6th
Utica... March 10th and 13th
St. Charles... March 14th and 15th
West St. Paul... March 20th
Rockford... March 23d and 27th
Forest City... April 1st and 3d
Castle Rock... April 8th and 10th
Prescott, Wis... April 17th
O. R. FASSETT.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION, 14 LAURENS STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M.
Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M.
Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M.
Friday, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M.
Come one, come all. A. E. SMITH, Principal.

PORTLAND, ME.
Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block. 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

NEW YORK CITY.
The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 405 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Wyoming, R. I... 1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I... 2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I... 3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I... 4th Sabbath in each month
A. DURFEE.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home... 16 pp.
2. Life Insurance... 16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!... 8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?... 8 pp.
5. About God (for children)... 4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing... 4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ... 4 pp.
8. New... 4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent, postpaid:
One set (54 pp.)... 6c.
1300 pp... $1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid)... $1.00
Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cents per dozen, of the author, J. ALBERT LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

Business.

Letters Received.

Wm. H Fay, L C McKinstry, M M Morton, E M Simonds, A N Seymour, A Warren, A D Flagg, A Flavelle, C Petree, B Clement, O E Lester, S A Ingham, H T Taylor, T L Waugh, W H Givrin, Wm. Sheldon, O N Wood, D H Smith, J W Wolwell, J Marvel, C H Sweet, S Jackman, T H Aldrich, M Batchelor, J C Houtz, B P Manning, N B Babcock, F H Carpenter, G Thomson, J A Cleaveland, S Hall, H M Ross, C H Shepherd, M L Durand, T J Carle.

Cash received for Books and Tracts.

C Patterson 50c, W N Pile 50c, P C Child 45c, G W Ashdown 35c, R S Johnson 35c, J W Elliot $1.00, R Lovell 50c, A. Stelling $7.40, A Tucker $13.00, S. L. Manley $9.25, T. J. Howland $1.00, H B Sanford 35c, E M Simonds 60c, Geo Tilley 35c, J Couch for N H S Conf $25.00, P. Bathrick $1.00, W Ringoes 45c, J D Sheridan $5.00, L Reimer $4.00, A Googins $1.00, F V Bliss 50c, C Wardy $1.00, W. Brown & Son 60c, L Laskey $1.15, O Stannard $3.00, J Porter $1.00, J Hedrick 75c, C W Baker $4.70, Mrs O Hill 35c. T W Piper $1.00, P. S. Butler $2.60, F. A. Sheldon 40c. G. Gray $2.40, D D Reed $3.00, O Bendixon $2.25, I N Mendenhall $1.20, J H Wooster $2.50, W E Brown $4.75, J. Curtiss 1.15, S Bodin 50c, A. H. Robbins 65c, W J Davis $2.00, A Pease 50c, M Conrad $2.50, R A West $1.50, J. W. Beatty 35c, S Stearns $1.10, S B Colton 75c, Mrs A D Hardy 50c, E Phelps $6.15, J Cunningham 75c, E K Pollansbee $9.00, A S Beard 50c, H Rude $9.60, H L H $11.86, J M Bohrer $1.00, J Dick 60c, G Phillips 60c, B Knepper 50c, E. T. Himes 45c, C E Corwing 35c, D D Reed $2.00, S. W. Chase 35c, D H Brownson $1.00, C W Sargent 50c, Ira Holden $1.35, J L Tatro $2.00, T Greenstreet $1.00, N M Maples 87c, W W Cate $2.00, D Comstock $3.00, A Heribut $2.00, J Taylor 37c, C C Ramsey 50c, M Foster $3.00, M M Post $1.00, A Veeder $6.00, W E Hopkins 50c.

Books and Tracts Sent.

By Mail.—Geo Tilley, P Bathrick, E M Simonds, R Porter, H B Sanford, J Calder, D S Talbut, H T Taylor, M E Steele, Z. Hibbard, P Meadows, J Lord, Wm Wagoner, L. Reimer, B Atwood, C H Sweet, H Bailey, E L Falton, L Laskey, W Brown & Son, Mrs H Armstrong, C Wardy, E D White, P C Childs, F V Bliss, A Googins, J Hedrick, T R Allen, J Porter, M C Hopkins, T W Piper, P S Butler, Mrs O Hill, J N Marshall, O Bendixon, J H Wooster, J M Baker, C P Dow, J H Waggoner, J L Fisk, D Brown, S Bodin, J Curtiss, A H Robbins, W Conrad, A Pease, R Ives, R H Nye, W N Pile, D D Reed, B H Albee, J Olive, D D Lathrop, A D Colton, S Stearns, J W Bentley, R Tenney, J. Cunningham, E Follansbee, J. Dick, J M Bohrer, R W Wilson, D Cogswell, C T Cowley, C R Corning, B T Himes, S W Chase, J Burgess, J Beal, G Philips, D D Reed, J G Baker, R Lovell.

By Express.—L C McKinstry, O Stannard, H Rude, T L Hall, Wm E Brown, E K Follansbee, S Roby, S L Manley.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9 per dozen; $75 00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

376 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with Eld. E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Brethren wishing to correspond with the church at Wakefield, Mass., will please address G. R. TYZZER, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Savoy, which is represented in the Mass. State Conf., will please correspond with Daniel Miller or A. E. Bliss. Those sending appointments, are requested to state which church.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Goshen, N. H., will please correspond with O. F. CAIN, before sending appointments.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. R. Cooper, No. 4 Hickory Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in South Berwick (Great Works), Me., will please correspond with Bro. Harrison Dow, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Vernon, Vt., will please correspond with J. C. Allen.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 Markham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK. Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany.

☞ Brethren wishing to communicate with the church in Pleasant Valley, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Reuel O. White, New Hartford, Conn.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All brethren wishing to preach in Newfield, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Wm. Ripley, Pleasant Valley, Ct.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with J. COGGSWELL.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with JOSEPH CURTISS.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 81 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work received great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium,

A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. [illegible]

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, post-paid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $3.25; Extra Cloth, $3.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.25; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible. With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc., etc. Cloth, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Leather back, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God. By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 60c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $3.00; by mail, $3.36; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 15c. postage 2 cts., or by mail 17 cts.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 224. 30c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Bally. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

"THE PENALTY OF SIN." By O. R. Fassett. By mail, single copy, 5c; dozen.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL and the Scriptural Millennium," by I. C. Wellcome and Clarkson Goud. Price 25c; postage 2c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By I. C. Wellcome. pp. 82. Price by mail, 25c.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

THE MILLENNIUM. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 60 pp. Single copy 15c.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c., postpaid.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

OUR LOSS IN ADAM OUR GAIN IN CHRIST. A valuable tract on the Atonement. By H. F. Carpenter. 5c. single copy, by mail; 40c. per dozen.

THE BIBLE, OR TRADITION—Which shall we Believe?" An excellent tract. By S. L. Manley. 3c. single copy by mail; 20c. per dozen.

"ONE MORE INVITATION." A tract of four pages. By mail, 35c. per 100 copies.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

VOICE OF THE THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsay. Cloth, $1.00.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man, with various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church; By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times to Daniel and John. On Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THAT MAN OF SIN. By Eld. O. R. Fassett. To which is added "The Only Hope." Price, 5c. single; postage 2c. 50c. per dozen; postage 6c.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 5c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 460 pp. $1.25.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, Retribution, and Will all Men be Saved? By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1.00; paper 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. Paper, 20c.; by mail, 22c. Cloth, 40c; by mail, 50c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof texts.) 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 2c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.00; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $3 50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.25; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $3.25; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth... 75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers... 60 cts., postage [illegible]
Paper covers... [illegible] cts., postage [illegible]
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

ADVENT CHORAL.

Hark! ye faithful, rouse from sleeping!
Strike the Advent bell again:
With the church your watch be keeping,
Louder grows her old refrain!
Alleluia,
Jesus, come to judge and reign!

Fast flows on the tide of ages;
Of its fullness signs appear;
Tokens, by the prophet pages,
Seem to tell the coming near,
Alleluia,
Welcome, Lord and Savior dear!

List, the seventh trumpet pealing,
While the world keeps on its ways,
Sudden shows the last revealing,
Sudden breaks the day of days:
Alleluia,
Lord, come when thou wilt, we'll praise!

EVENING HOURS.

BY

E. P. WOODWARD.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

THE PERFECT MAN.

Perfection is the goal of human endeavor, but a goal which none in this life may ever reach. The elements of man's original nature, and acquired character, are so many and varied, that the will is too weak, the heart too faltering, and the time too short, to develope their full strength, and unite their opposing forces in the beautiful symmetry and harmony of a perfect man.

But the greatest obstacle is inborn. For wise reasons the Creator was pleased to so make man, that one individual alone could not manifest that completeness of character, which is the aspiration of the heart. Adam, though created upright, was still lacking; so that it it was seen not to be good for him to be alone. And so the woman came, completing the circle, and making with Adam a complete man.

Nor does this detract from the dignity of woman. If she was given to supply what Adam lacked, so did his nature complement her own; and she could dispense with his presence as a helper and co-worker, just as well as he could fulfill his mission without her. As Paul says, "Nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord." 1 Cor. 11: 11. There is a mutual inter-dependence, at once beautiful to witness, disarming all thoughts of rivalry, and wondrously augmenting the productive power of the race.

The reason of this mutual deficiency is, undoubtedly, first, the principle of a division of labor, and second, to develope and act upon the unselfish feelings of human nature,—and as a result of this, accomplishing more than by any other method.

The full round of human toil and care would be an insupportable burden, were each obliged to share in everything; but another hand to help, and another heart to throb in sympathy, lightens life's labors greatly. And these toils become even causes of joy instead of sorrow; pleasure instead of pain. Far easier is it to labor for one we love, than for ourselves. The hand is willing, and the arm is strong, when affection leads the way. That which would otherwise discourage, now gives new energy.

The qualities which distinguish man, fit him specially for the labors which shall supply the wants, and meet the needs of woman's gentle, dependent, trusting nature. And the crowning virtues and winning graces of woman exactly meet the wants of stern, unyielding, independent man. And so the range of human effort is widened, and the results of human endeavor largely increased. And here, sooner or later, will be found the key to the only solution of the "Woman Question," which will stand the test of experiment.

Men and women are usually strongly marked in their characteristic differences. In man we usually find energy, force, power, enterprise, utility, unyielding determination, bluntness, boldness, fearlessness, love of self, public spirit, deliberation, justice, reason, WISDOM. In woman we usually find almost the opposite of these qualities,—gentleness, tenderness, flexibility, suavity, timidity, self-forgetfulness, dependence, domestic virtue, intuition, mercy, faith, LOVE. As man stands forth the representative of God's creative wisdom, so woman is the type of his inspiring love. And just as his mighty love moved him from eternity to exercise his wisdom in works of infinite kindness, so does woman become man's inspirer to deeds good and great. And as that all-pervading, unquenchable love is ever guided by his unerring wisdom, so is the deathless love of woman guided and made effective by man's superior will and wisdom.

Not that all men and all women have just these traits, for in actual life we find all shades of difference, from those who combine a single characteristic of the opposite sex with all of their own, to those who seem to have combined the form of one sex with the mental and moral characteristics of the other. And here and there we find one who combines to a large extent the qualities of both sexes, without neutralizing or destroying the power and beauty of either. But where this harmonious combination does not exist, the more clearly defined the characteristics of sex, the more perfect the man or the woman, according to the standard of this life, and the greater the power of action and usefulness. And by this rule, we may find the ideal man and woman.

But few realize that the harmonious action of all these opposing forces is not only possible, but will constitute the means whereby God will perfect the race, and solve one of those problems which even now seem no nearer solution than ever,—the existence of sex in the future state. Yet, however strange or improbable this may seem, it will certainly happen.

It is sometimes very difficult for us, so long accustomed to our surroundings and associations, to discriminate correctly between the essentials of life, and its incidents. Form and size are essentials, yet, any particular form or size is only an incident. Perception is an essential, but the particular mode or medium of perception is only an incident. We obtain perceptions by hearing; but we might be placed in a state of existence where the same perceptions would be received in entirely a different manner [illegible] life which comes after the exercise of these powers ceases to be possible, bringing the highest development of character, and exhibiting the truest manhood and womanhood,—and not necessarily occupying any of it. If the individual chooses, life can be passed happily and usefully, and the question of sex be practically ignored. If poverty hinders, or sickness forbids, the joy and use of this life are by no means necessarily destroyed. And the noblest souls which have blessed earth by their labors of love, patterning after their divine Leader, have led lives such as this, blameless and without reproach.

It is not necessary to consider sex inseparable from existence. In a race that is to subdue and fill a new world, and be subject to the vicissitudes of change and death, it would seem necessary. But even here it might be shown that the elements of both sexes might be united in one person,—practically abolishing the distinctions of sex altogether, while securing all of its special objects.

Others cannot see how men and women can cease to be men and women in the resurrection state, even if the form of sex be done away; thus recognizing a sexuality of soul, as well as of body. Jesus has settled this question. The infidels and sceptics of his day saw this difficulty, and thought to puzzle him with their queries, or perhaps get him to broach theories which they might assail by argument, or befog with sophistry. But he, with that matchless wisdom which ever shone from his presence, cut through the apparent difficulty which they presented, and in one sentence of divine authority settled forever, and, one would think, beyond all possibility of future cavil, this whole matter. "The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage, but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, NEITHER MARRY, NOR ARE GIVEN IN MARRIAGE." The temporary necessities and uses for marriage having passed away, it also passes out of sight,—one of those incidents of earthly life which will not outlive the conditions which demanded them. Then he says, "Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels." And from the fact that angels are spoken of only as men, thus implying no distinction of sex among them, though it would not prove them to be entirely like men, we may obtain additional evidence of Christ's intention to teach that, in the perfect state, sex is unknown. For, as God acts wisely and prudently, the "children of the resurrection" will not be born into their new life, with marked characteristics for which that life shall find no use, and furnish no purpose.

But how, if there is such a difference in nature and taste here, can such a state of things be? Simply by developing the dormant powers, and thus supplying the lack which makes this difference. If to the strength and dignity of man were added the grace and gentleness of woman's nature, should we not see a nobler, higher type of manhood? And would the queenly graces of woman be less beautiful and lovely, if they could be strengthened and dignified by a union with the kingly majesty of manhood's prime?

Whatever the means, this is what God will surely do. And we have proof of it in the nature of the PERFECT MAN set as an example for us, and to be like whom is the highest promise of future development, and of whom it has been said, "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." In him, the perfect man,—in whom, though he had the form of a man, yet, as to its uses, the question of sex is utterly ignored,—we see all the opposing elements of human nature harmonized in a character of wondrous beauty;—wielding the power of a God, and stooping to bless the little ones; pouring out the bitter curses of outraged and indignant justice, and to the trembling penitent whispering, "Go, and sin no more"; treading the desecrated porches of his Father's house with the majesty of a king, and meekly bearing the mocking scorn of wicked men; hushing the wild tempest into silence with a single word, and still yielding obedience to the Roman power; boldly proclaiming his divine mission, discreetly avoiding the fury which that message aroused, because "his hour had not yet come"; sternly foretelling the doom of his chosen race, painting their coming sorrows in characters of fire, and then weeping because they would not permit him to shield them from the coming storm; girding himself resolutely for that mighty struggle which shook the earth, and veiled the sun, and opened wide the gates of death, and crying in his soul's great agony, as the lightnings of a swift, unyielding justice were showered upon his defenceless head—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!"; proudly telling Pilate of the immeasurable resources of power which lay within his reach, fearlessly pointing the high priest to the majesty of his second coming, and amid the agonies of death breathing the prayer, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"; walking forth from the sepulchre the conqueror of Death and Hades, and with gentle words bringing light and joy to the trembling Mary's heart; ascending to the unspeakable glories of his Father's abode, and speaking words of peace and hope to his weeping followers.

O, the grandeur and glory of that Holy One! Almighty in power, infinite in tenderness! Just, beyond all power of bribery, and merciful beyond the power of language to portray! Blasting the sinner's hopes, and breathing new life into the penitent's heart! The "express image" of Him whose nature is LOVE, and his ways, WISDOM!

Does not this give us a nobler, better, grander, more godlike ideal, than the sensuous pleasures which Mohammedans, Mormons, Spiritualists, and some Christians, cling to, and would drag through the purifying fires of the Last Day, into the unapproachable light of the eternal glory of that uncreated One, before whom none are found holy, and in whose presence the redeemed shall stand forevermore?

Yes, thou crucified and risen One, thy character shall be our ideal, thy life our model, thy will our law. In thee we see the beauty of a perfect life, uncorrupted and untarnished by those incidents of existence which tell us we are born of earth. And through faith in thy promise, we look forward to the endless cycles of an undying life, expecting there to know the depth and ever-widening fullness of that love [illegible] and more of the unsearchable riches of the love of Him who "so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life"; and in the contemplation and comprehension of this love, we expect that fullness of joy, in the presence of which the transitory pleasures of this sinful life shall be eternally forgotten.

"THE TREASURES OF THE SNOW."

During the storm of Feb. 9, 1870, in Somerset Co., Maine.

"Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?"—JOB 38: 22.

"He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels: who can stand before his cold?"—Ps. 147: 16, 17.

Life's greatest perils are unseen, or never known. Every day and every hour, we stand within the range of imprisoned forces, which wait but a thoughtless touch to bury us beneath their power. And often, when we look back and behold the averted doom, our hearts grow faint, and we feel like those who have stood face to face with the grim realities of the shadow land. But there are dangers and possibilities which cast their shadows across every path of life, beside which the ordinary sources of peril are refuges of safety. Whether men deny the existence of an over-ruling God, or not, they cannot put aside the unwelcome fact, that some power, some hand, which, for aught they can do to turn it from its course, is almighty, has filled the earth from pole to pole, with forces which need but an imperceptible change in the working of Nature's laws, to make this world a charnel-house, and hush the sounds of life forever.

The silent, irresistible operations of one of those mighty agents may be seen, if we step back from the tropics, and take a look at "the treasures of the snow." And here, on the bleak hills of the north, with that terrible wind sweeping down from the peaks of those far-off mountains, which stand like threatening giants, cold and unapproachable; and the bitter, frosty air steadily pressing in through every crack and crevice, drinking up the life, swallowing the heat of a burning city like a drop in the ocean, leaving the wanderer cold and stiff on his couch of snow, and still onward, relentless and insatiable;—viewing this, and remembering the mighty wastes of earth which lie beneath the icy touch of this storm-king, we can exclaim with David, "Who can stand before his cold?"

We have little conception of the mighty power necessary to hold in check the steady, ceaseless pressure of those forces which, despite the burning heat of a tropical sun, bury so large a portion of the earth beneath the ice and snow of perpetual winter. The blasts of winter are succeeded by the summer's heat, and in the unwavering order of nature, we forget the hidden power that moves the whole. We forget that if the sun were veiled in darkness for a few short days, this ever present foe, this counterpart of death, would chill the tide of human life, and wrap the world in a winding-sheet of eternal snow.

Men may laugh at such a thought, but science tells us that this has been done already; that once in the days gone by, animals which now are found only where perpetual summer reigns, were, in one awful hour, locked in the icy chains of death, which to this day have not been broken.*

Christians have no fear of such an event in the future, but not from any such weak, defenceless reason as that given by men of science,—that the operation of nature's laws will preserve the present harmony of things, and prevent such a result. In these laws of nature we recognize only the visible manifestation of an Almighty One, who "worketh all things according to the counsel of his own will." And while reason strives in its blindness to grasp the mysteries that lie ahead, the Christian, through faith in the word of Him who is both the Author and the Governor of these forces, knows that "while the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease." And so we walk the earth without fear, relying not on the laws of nature, nor on "the eternal fitness of things," but on our Father, who, though the earth may tremble, and the heavens pass away, "doeth all things well;" and who, in the day that pleaseth him, will lift us above the weakness of this life, and crown us with that life eternal, which shall make us the masters, as we are now the subjects, of those invisible forces which mould atoms into worlds, and swing those worlds through the measureless depths of infinity.

* Among the ice fields of Siberia, there have been found of late years, the bodies of tropical animals, such as the elephant and rhinoceros, with the flesh in such a state of perfect preservation, that when thawed, dogs ate it with avidity. There can be but one explanation of this:—at some time in the past, that country must have been favored with a tropical climate, which in some great convulsion of nature, was changed by such a sudden influx of cold, that animals were frozen before the flesh had time to decay.

Gems.

— Humility is the most excellent natural cure for anger in the world; for he that, by daily considering his own infirmities and failings, makes the error of his neighbor or servant to be his own case, and remembers that he daily needs God's pardon and his brother's charity, will not be apt to rage at the levities or misfortunes or indiscretions of another; greater than which he considers that he is very frequently and more inexcusably guilty of.

— If there were no trials to endure, the grace of God would be quiescent, and like a standing army in time of peace.

— In the matter of criticism, I not merely respect severity in the examination of serious questions—I like it; I do not want the cup sweetened. Only, truth upon one point necessitates the same upon all others, and blame expressed implies commendation wherever it is possible.

— To seek to be alone with the friend we love, is a proof of our love to him. He who desires to know the depth of his affection for Jesus, does well to look at the pleasure he derives from, and the time he devotes to, the enjoyment of intercourse with this friend alone.

The moments fly,—a minute's gone!
The minutes fly,—an hour is run!
The day is fled,—the night is here!
Thus flies a week, a month, a year!

— "Judge not," said the Lord: the justice of which is obvious, in a world where there are no innocent to judge the guilty.

— "Cultivate not only the corn-fields of the mind, but the pleasure-grounds also," was a motto of Dr. Whately's.

— Situations are like skeins of thread or silk. To make the most of them, we need only to take them by the right end.

— A word of kindness is seldom spoken in vain. It is a seed which, even when dropped by chance, springs up a flower.

— What gracious promises sustain the christian! "Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

— He who is not allowed to blame has a right to withhold his praise.

— A faithful friend is the medicine of life.

— [illegible]

WESTERN GENERAL MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

Agreeably to appointment, this Conference convened at Brodhead, Wis., Jan. 25th. The meeting very appropriately consisted of three departments, viz: Business matters, essays and discussions, besides preaching and devotional exercises; and though these were interchangeable, we will speak of them under their appropriate headings, separately.

I.—BUSINESS MATTERS.

An opening address was delivered by the President, Eld. J. V. Himes, in which a retrospective and prospective view of the great Advent movement was taken, which produced a thrilling effect on the hearts of ministers and people; and all were impressed with the conviction that we have not followed "cunningly devised fables" in announcing the immediate return of Christ to reign in triumph and glory on earth renewed; and if so, we ought to raise the cry still louder, and sound it more extensively and more earnestly, that the millions might be aroused, and many more be led to "wait for God's Son from heaven" to give them redemption.

The following brethren were chosen as a committee to receive the names of ministerial delegates, viz: N. A. Hitchcock, of Wisconsin; F. H. Kenny, of Iowa; and F. Burr, of Illinois. Owing to financial stringency there were only about twenty ministers present, including those who were not appointed as delegates, some of whom were received by vote of the Conference as substitutes, to fill vacancies.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: J. V. Himes, President; F. Burr, Vice-President; Wm. Sheldon, Secretary; and Wm. L. Himes, Corresponding Secretary. The following committee was chosen to arrange business to come before the Conference for deliberation: Wm. Sheldon, of Wisconsin; F. Burr, of Illinois; and Job Gildersleve, of Iowa.

Voted. To invite all our visiting brethren present, though not sent as delegates by conferences, to take part with us in our social deliberations, preparatory to final action.

The following committee was chosen to arrange for preaching, viz: Wm. Sheldon, of Wisconsin; F. H. Kenny, of Iowa; and N. W. Spencer, of Illinois.

Voted, to select a committee of three to prepare an address to the various Conferences and churches in the Great West, subject to the sanction of this General Conference. Wm. Sheldon, of Wisconsin; F. Burr, of Illinois; and J. Bower, of Michigan, were chosen for this purpose. After due consultation, the following address was presented to the Conference for their consideration:

To the Various Conferences and Churches in the Great West—Greeting:

As a people we are proclaiming unpopular truths—truths long lost sight of, long hid beneath popular fables—neglected truths, hated truths, but truths, nevertheless, as old as the Bible, and due this generation; truths of revelation, which should not be compromised, but be allowed to shine out in their original splendor. We are the people to bear these God-given truths to this generation, for those who do not believe them will not do it, nor will those who hate them. We are the God-honored people to do this great work, and we must be true to our trust.

Ours is an important mission, though not a popular one, and we must not belittle it by our unfaithfulness, or lack of zeal. The banner of neglected truth must be unfurled to the world, and be defended, too, with untiring energy, in the loving spirit of truth; but not in a spirit of sour contention, and pugilistic warfare. We must defend God's truth in the spirit of God, and not in the spirit of the devil. It is not our duty to let truth be trodden in the dust, without an effort to elevate it; nor is it our duty to wait till truth becomes popular, before we befriend it. Truth is of Divine origin: its friends should never slight it to secure the approbation of its enemies.

There are truths that we hold in common with others; but the truths of which we speak are those which have constituted us a distinct people— the literal and immediate coming of Christ, the state of man in death, the literal resurrection of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, and the kingdom of God on earth after the resurrection of the dead.

To successfully accomplish the noble mission assigned us by the God of truth, we must be a united people, being of one spirit and of one mind, having the heart inspired with the assurance that we are doing the work of God, and not supporting a dogma of human origin. God's work has always been carried on by human agencies. Christ might have chosen twelve angels to aid him in the proclamation of the gospel, but he simply called men, and ignorant fishermen, too, to proclaim salvation to perishing men. But these agencies must be pure. They must have hearts that beat in holy sympathy with the mind of Jehovah. They must be men that love God with ardent affection, men that trust in God for help, men that rely upon God for aid in carrying forward his work.

Circumstances have absolutely compelled us to become a separate people religiously, endeavoring to retain all the good sentiments found in other organizations, minus their errors, with a special message committed to our trust, which we could not otherwise make prominent—the coming and kingdom of Messiah, with its kindred truths—and now we are organized for the great work before us, having our churches, our conferences, and our general conference. We must unite our wisdom, and consolidate our strength, to do the greatest amount of good. Our ministers must do their part, our churches must do their part, and our conferences do their part; and if we thus work unitedly and vigorously, we shall be a power in the land, and the truth will spread gloriously, and the cause of Christ flourish in our hands; skeptics and bigots will be reached, and sinners be converted more extensively.

OUR CHURCHES.

We are in our infancy in the west, and our churches are comparatively few, and generally small, with but few church edifices. In some localities our membership is somewhat scattered. But despite these seeming discouragements, it should be made a principle in every church to have stated prayer-meetings, "not forsaking" this means of grace, even if it requires a sacrifice.

The order of the New Testament should be carried out by every church. Preaching should be secured as often as circumstances will admit, for the benefit of the church. And God calls upon every church, and every member of the church, with few exceptions of extreme poverty, to do something to help spread the gospel, either at home or abroad. If they have not [illegible] them help some preacher to go out into new fields, to sow the seed of truth there.

Our brethren are almost everywhere doing financially less than they should to support the gospel. They measure themselves by the generosity of other religionists, and conclude that as they are doing more in proportion to their means than others, that they are doing all God requires; but this is a mistake. How few give one tenth, as required under the law—and shall we be less generous under Christ than under the law?

Where it is possible, our churches should erect plain chapels for worship. Their property cannot be burned in any better shape if the Lord comes; and they will be needed if time continues. Many individuals are able to build alone, rather than to see the church without a proper place of worship. Shall we "honor God with our substance"? "The Lord hath need of it."

OUR MINISTERS.

Our ministers should everywhere be "ensamples to the flock" in devotion and purity of life. They must not only be men of theology, knowing what they believe and why they believe it, and ready to refute error in any form, but they should be men of the deepest piety; men of sanctified hearts; men that love the prayer meeting; men that not only seek to enlighten the intellect, but to reach the heart. Such men will see the cause of God flourish in their hands.

Our ministers should do more than ever to spread the truth by introducing reading matter of a right stamp into every accessible locality. The publication interest is one of the most powerful facilities for the spread and maintainance of the truth among us. It does not produce the spasmodic result that preaching often does, but it often produces, in a silent way, deeper and more lasting effects, though that result may often be deferred before silent conviction is ripened into open confession.

The minister may aid the cause on this principle in several ways: 1. Let him procure and sell publications that will enlighten the people, both books and tracts. 2. Obtain subscribers for our periodicals, which when once introduced will accomplish much good. 3. Collect funds from believers to purchase suitable works from our offices of publication to deal out free of charge wherever they judge they will be candidly read, which will prove a more economical way than promiscuous scattering of works in a congregation, and productive of more good in proportion to the amount of money thus expended.

Every preacher ought to carry approved works with him, especially into new fields, to sell if possible, and to give away where there is a prospect of planting the truth thereby, where they cannot be sold.

OUR CONFERENCES.

Conference organizations have proved great helps in the advancement of the cause we love, in various ways. The wisdom, experience, and strength of ministers and churches being thereby combined, confidence is inspired, courage augmented, and friendship increased in the body, for "in a multitude of counselors there is safety." The wants of the cause are thereby learned, and to some extent provided for; but we lack ministers to supply the wants of churches, and to sow the seed in new fields.

There is one thing our conferences can do in this matter, viz: encourage young men who feel impressed of duty to enter the ministry as licensed ministers under the care of the conferences. There has been a disposition to wait till these young men become able ministers before giving them encouragement. Not one out of twenty will succeed if held back by their friends, while opposed by their enemies. We must help them in their weakness, and in due time they will gain strength, and help the cause. Many churches among us feel like holding off a young preacher till he becomes as apollos in eloquence, and a Paul in argument, and thus dispirit them, and deter others from venturing out into the field. Young ministers are the very class who need encouragement; and old ministers ought to know it when they look back to their early history, and therefore ought to put their heel on this spirit of holding off young ministers. What if they are not regarded the smartest specimens of manhood? Some of the ablest ministers in the world have grown from such beginnings. Let our conferences encourage such. If they prove a detriment, the Conference can dismiss them. Better make ten mistakes in this direction, than one in the other. But conferences should be on their guard against too early ordinations. "Lay hands suddenly on no man."

YOUNG PREACHERS.

Young ministers are entitled to some advice from those of more mature experience, by which they may profit in their sacred calling.

1. It will be better for them to confine themselves largely to practical preaching during the early part of their ministry, and not be too hasty in making themselves theological combatants before they are able to do justice to the cause. This point should claim the special attention of young ministers. The gospel is not made up entirely of controversy. There is much to preach of a practical nature, and such themes ought to have a place in every young minister's heart; and "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

Many young ministers make themselves ridiculous, and foolishly injure the cause of truth, by getting hold of some theological question too great for them to handle. Like the child in the hay-field, they want to mow a big swath before they can fairly spread hay. Let none fancy themselves graduates before they have fairly learned the ministerial alphabet.

2. Young ministers should never seek too early ordination. The "ordination fever," as old ministers often term it, is a suspicious principle. The conferences will attend to this matter early enough, and often at too early a date. The apprehension that somebody may want to be baptized, should not be regarded an argument for repudiating the apostolic admonition. "Lay hands suddenly on no man." Young ministers, for their own good, ought to be near, and laboring in concert with older preachers; then their converts can receive a father's attention.

3. Let ministers ever remember that to be a minister of Jesus Christ is no trivial matter, and that levity, jesting, and pride should not be countenanced; but humility and prayer should ever be distinguishing characteristics in their lives.

This address was indorsed by a vote of the Conference as the voice of this "advisory body." After much deliberation, the following preamble and resolution was passed as the sentiment of the Conference:

WHEREAS, In many localities our ecclesiastical opponents circulate the report boldly and persistently that we do not believe in experimental religion, nor in a change of heart; and

WHEREAS, Many honest people are thereby deceived, and led to believe that we repudiate true conversion and vital godliness; therefore

Resolved, That this General Conference of Advent-Christian ministers, in behalf of our scattered churches and ministers through these Western States, affirm our belief in repentance, conversion, "the renewing of the Holy Ghost," and a holy life, as pre-requisites to salvation, and pronounce these charges against us totally untrue.

Other similar resolutions, embodying other false charges against us, and their refutation, were considered, and called forth many remarks, but were not voted upon.

The following expression was unanimous:

Resolved, that we have read with pleasure the proceedings and action of the first session of the Advent-Christian Conference of North America, recently held at Rochester, N. Y, and hereby declare our cordial assent to its action, and that we heartily and unanimously indorse the same.

A private session was held to promote oneness of feeling and action in the ministry. We are one.

II.—ESSAYS AND CRITICISMS.

On Wednesday, Jan. 26, at 2 P. M. we listened to an essay from Eld. J. V. Himes on the symbols of prophecy, refreshing our minds with many important items of interest. This was followed by numerous queries and close criticisms by various members of the Conference, as also by visiting brethren. This method awakened an interest in the community, not only to hear carefully prepared essays, but to hear the numerous queries and criticisms. Truth only shines brighter when closely examined.

Thursday at 10 A. M. we listened to an essay from Eld. F. Burr on Paradise. In the main, the document was highly appreciated by all, but some items were criticised in a spirited but friendly manner by several delegates and visiting brethren, thus opening a scene of interest to the listening congregation. All appeared to enjoy the occasion exceedingly well.

At 2 P. M. Eld. Wm. L. Himes presented an essay on the Saints' Inheritance, which received its share of friendly criticism like the others.

Friday at 11 A. M. Eld. Wm. Sheldon read an essay on Immortality, which escaped its share of criticism by terminating so near dinner time. But as it is to appear in the next Quarterly, all can see its defects. At 2 P. M. Eld. A. A. Phelps, of Rochester, N. Y., read an essay on the Adamic fall, and the future restitution. It was a stripping document, but some points were criticized by several ministers, and various explanations called for by others. It was a time of earnest thought.

Saturday, 10 A. M., Eld. J. V. Himes read an essay on the Prophetic Periods, which was not criticised for want of time. There were several other essays ready, but there was not time to present them to the public, as other services prevented. These essays elicited much good feeling and some new light.

III.—PREACHING AND DEVOTIONAL SERVICES.

We were cheered with stirring, practical, and sound doctrinal preaching during the meeting, gladdening the hearts of the saints, and leading sinners to Christ. Each evening sermon was preceded by a social meeting of an hour, in which all could take a part. These were truly precious seasons. Some sought the Lord, and found peace in Christ.

Bro. J. Bower, of Michigan, preached on Tuesday evening, and greatly animated the saints of God, being followed by Bro. Himes, Sheldon, Burr, Kenny, Burington, Spencer, Davis, and several others. It was a season of rejoicing.

Bro. F. Burr preached on Wednesday evening, holding a crowded hall in almost breathless silence till the close, and was followed by several preaching brethren and others. It was a time of thrilling interest, and deep conviction.

Bro. A. A. Phelps preached on Thursday evening, in the Congregationalist meeting-house, as our hall was too small to hold the crowd. His sermon was very impressive, and reached many hearts. Then followed a shower of testimonies from the saints. We did not fancy ourselves in Paradise, but we did think we had got into its atmosphere—joy and happiness.

Friday evening, Bro. Wm. L. Himes preached. He gave us the truth which always cheers the hearts of Advent believers. Several followed with warm exhortations. Two arose for prayers, and found peace before morning, in calling upon the Lord.

Saturday at 2 P. M. we were cheered by a sermon from Bro. N. W. Spencer. He had a free time in speaking, and we had a free time in hearing. Then came several short testimonies from hearts all on fire with holy zeal. It was truly good to be there. In the evening, Bro. F. H. Kenny gave us a sermon to a crowded congregation, who listened to him with candor till the close. Then came the usual testimonies from ministers and others, with telling effect on the congregation.

Sunday morning, at 9 o'clock, we met for love-feast, and it was a feast indeed. Scores of brief and earnest testimonies told of a feast of love in the hearts of many. Some spoke for the first time. It was a refreshing season to all. At 10 o'clock Eld. J. V. Himes preached, with the vigor of younger days, to our astonishment. It was a telling sermon on this community. Seed was sown, we trust, that will hereafter spring up. At 2 P. M. Bro. F. Burr preached one of his strongest sermons, and it took a strong hold on the ears of the people, and we trust that it will sink down into their hearts. At 6 o'clock we enjoyed a social meeting, and at 7 Eld. A. A. Phelps held a crowded house to the close of his sermon, producing a good impression on many minds. Then we met around the Lord's table.

These scenes will soon be succeeded and superseded by the marriage supper of the Lamb. Who is ready? Then came the sorrowful partings; but the meeting of the greatest Conference ever held is at hand, and then there will be no more farewell tears shed. God speed the happy hour. WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

THE SPIRIT'S POWER.—Among the anecdotes and incidents collected about a century ago by the Rev. Augustus Toplady, we find this one—"A spark of red hot iron flew into a gentleman's eye, several eminent surgeons tried in vain to extract it; at last a lady of the patient's acquaintance thought of holding his eyelid quite open, and of extracting the grievance by the application of a loadstone. The experiment succeeded. How similar is the Holy Spirit's virtue, in extracting the love of sin from the heart of a saint."

JOHN KNOX, who prayed "Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" has been dead almost two hundred years; yet all Scotland feels his power still. Such earnestness is not soon forgotten.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

"TIME ENOUGH."

"Fred, you must clean your boots before you go to school," said Mrs. Lawrence to her son.

"I know it, mother; but it's time enough," replied Fred, who sat reading a story-book.

Presently the lady spoke again. "Fred, have you looked over your grammar-lesson this morning? It is too difficult to learn in a hurry."

"Well, I almost learned it last night; it's time enough; I want to finish this chapter," answered Fred.

"O, my son!" said Mrs. Lawrence, "I wish you would overcome that habit of putting off necessary duties."

Fred closed the story-book reluctantly, and took his grammar, wishing that his mother would not "bother him so; he knew he had time enough."

Presently Mrs. Lawrence left the room, feeling very much troubled about Fred's bad habit, and wishing that he could be induced to break it off before he became a man. Knowing that God only could give him the strength and disposition to do so, she went to her own room, and kneeling down, prayed to this effect.

That day a gentleman visited the school; and after listening with apparent pleasure to various exercises by the scholars, the principal requested him to talk to the boys a little while.

He did so, and interested them very much by relating some anecdotes of his own school-life. One of these incidents was the means, by God's blessing, of curing Fred's habit. It seemed to Fred that the gentleman must have known what his bad habit was, or he could not have said anything so suited to his case. The gentleman said that one day he was stopped in the street by a very shabby-looking man, who, after calling him by name, and asking if he did not remember Henry Brown, begged him to lend him some money.

"I remember Henry Brown very well," replied the gentleman. "Can it be possible you are he, wishing to borrow five dollars?"

"Yes, I am," answered the man in a despairing, sorrowful tone.

What has brought you to this condition? Your prospects on leaving school were as bright as mine."

"Time enough has brought me here," replied he. "I was always putting off necessary business by saying that. Now I am old the habit is fixed, and I cannot break myself of it. If you do not lend me five dollars, I shall have to go to the poor-house or starve."

"Boys," continued the gentleman, "time enough ruined that man's life. Take care that it does not ruin yours."—Child at Home.

WHAT MARY GAVE.

When the contribution-box comes round in church, boys and girls throw in money which their parents have given them for that purpose. The money is not their gift, but that of their father and mother. They have just as much to spend for their pleasure as they had before. And so I once heard a kind-hearted girl complain that she had nothing of her own that she could give. I will tell you what she gave in one day, and you will see that she was mistaken.

She gave an hour of patient care to her little baby sister who was cutting teeth. She gave a string and a crooked pin and a great deal of good advice to the three-year-old-brother who wanted to play at fishing. She gave Ellen, the maid, a precious hour to go and visit her sick baby at home; for Ellen was a widow, and left her child with its grandmother while she worked to get bread for both. She could not have seen them very often if our generous Mary had not offered to attend the door and look after the kitchen fire while she was away.

But this was not all that Mary gave. She dressed herself so neatly and looked so bright and kind and obliging that she gave her mother a thrill of pleasure whenever she caught sight of the young pleasant face. She wrote a letter to her father who was absent on business, in which she gave him all the news he wanted in such a frank, artless way, that he thanked his daughter in his heart. She gave patient attention to a long, tiresome story of her grandmother's, though she had heard it many time before. She laughed just at the right times, and when it was ended made the old lady happy by a good night kiss. Thus she had given valuable presents to six people in one day, and yet she had not a cent in the world. She was as good as gold, and she gave something of herself to all those who were so happy as to meet her.

HOW NATURAL.—A little boy was once in a complaining mood. His dinner did not suit him, so his father made that right; then his cup did not suit him, so one was brought that did; then his chair was not right, and father took him in his lap, saying; "Are you all right now?" He looked around the room, and seeing the cat crossing the floor with tail erect, he said, in a vexed voice, "There! the old cat's tail sticks up!" and bursts out crying, the old cat's tail was, in his case, the straw that broke the camel's back, but many of the complaints of older persons are just about as reasonable.

PRAYING AND DOING.—You every day ask God to make you good, kind, true, and obedient children. At least so I hope. But are you also trying to do these things? God cannot make you good unless you are willing to be good. So you also have something to do in this matter. Not only pray, but also try to do God's will.

A LITTLE BOY twelve years old once stopped at a tavern and paid his expenses by sawing wood. Five years later the same boy passed the same little inn as George Peabody.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance.......................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address........$5.60.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address.......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write—BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's NAME, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of NEW subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE, Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper, FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Single copy, 40 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten. [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 750. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 24.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL,
A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS,
M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN,
H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

REDEMPTION.

Brightly blooms the blessed promise
In the garden of the heart,
And a glorious strength and gladness
Its sweet fragrance doth impart.

Soft and tender is the blending
Of its golden tinted leaves,
And a web of cheering sunbeams
Its exquisite brightness weaves.

Yes, when with a strength supernal
It stands firm, life's tempest hour,
Then amid earth's storm and blackness,
Grandly glows its heavenly power.

Cherish then this blessed promise,
Strength it gives in life's dark hour;
Ever gloriously 'tis shining,
Speaking of his love and power.

Portland, Me. C. O. Chamberlain.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46.

(Continued.)

7. The wicked are to become extinct.

The following statement is explicit: "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen; as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee; thy reward shall return upon thy own head. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually; yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been."—Obad. 1: 15, 16. This doom is pronounced their "reward," and is due when the "day of the Lord" arrives. It awaits "all the heathen." Heathen, in the Old Testament, is a term used in contradistinction to God's people, including all outside of the divine covenant. We also read: "Behold all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded; they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even them that contended with thee; they that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought."—Isa. 41: 11, 12. Certainly to "be as nothing," to "perish," to be "as a thing of naught," looks like being extinct, and very much unlike endless existence in a theological hell.

Says David, "Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies; thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee. Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger; the Lord shall swallow them up in his wrath, and the fire shall devour them."—Ps. 21: 8, 9. When the day of "wrath" comes, God's enemies will be devoured by "fire"; and "devour" never signifies preserve. The time and manner of their end is here specified. The Revelator in vision foresaw this scene, and thus describes it: "And fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them." Rev. 20: 9. This fire will as literally destroy them as the fire that fell from heaven upon the Sodomites, especially as inspiration makes that scene "an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly."—2 Pet. 2: 6.

The Bible abounds with testimony affirming that the wicked shall be "destroyed," and shall "perish," which we need not pause to quote. But our opponents tell us that the meaning is, they shall be destroyed spiritually, and perish spiritually. That this cannot be the import is evident from the following reasons: (1) Sinners are already spiritually destroyed, but this is their state of guilt, and not the punishment for it: "Thou hast destroyed thyself"; but a destruction that God shall inflict as a penalty is due the sinner; (2) the destruction of the Sodomites being literal, is presented as a sample of the destruction due the unholy at the judgment day. It cannot mean, to destroy their happiness, as some affirm, because the same destruction awaits Satan, and he has no happiness to destroy. It cannot mean, to destroy their sins, as others claim, for that would not only prove the salvation of the entire race of man, but of all the demons too, as they too are to be destroyed; besides, it would convert a penalty into a blessing.

That theory which would rob every term of its literal signification when applied to the wicked, must be wrong. Are the words "destroy," "perish," "consume," "death," and similar words, when applied to the sinner, to mean the very reverse of their ordinary sense—preservation and life? Has God ever said that the wicked have eternal life, or that they ever are to have it? No, but just the reverse. Has God ever said that the wicked are immortal, either in soul or body, or are ever to be immortal? Never. How, then, can they live eternally?

8. The wicked shall be consumed in gehenna at the judgment.

The Greek term gehenna is the only term rendered hell,* when the hell of punishment is meant. Other terms are translated hell when the state of the dead is intended, as sheol and hades; but gehenna brings to view a hell of fire; not a hell now in existence for immaterial men, but a hell to exist after the resurrection and judgment, for material sinners. We believe in wrath for the sinner, but it is "the wrath to come." We believe in a judgment for the sinner, but it is a "judgment to come." So we believe in a hell for the sinner, but a hell after the judgment day—a hell of fire, a consuming hell.

Jesus tells us that certain ones "shall be in danger of hell [gehenna] fire." Thus gehenna brings to view a hell of fire, but whether that fire will preserve the wicked, or consume them, we shall soon learn; and also whether it is a hell for the disembodied soul, or for the man entire. Says Christ: "If thy right eye offend thee [margin—"cause thee to offend"], pluck it out and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into [gehenna] hell."—Matt. 5: 29. Here we learn that when the sinner is cast into hell fire (gehenna), the "whole body" goes there; and as the body does not go to a hell of fire at death, but simply to the grave where it must remain till the resurrection, it follows that this casting into "gehenna fire" cannot take place till the resurrection and judgment, when "they that have done evil" shall come forth "unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5: 29. Here the sinner's damnation is made to depend upon his resurrection, and must consequently be subsequent to it; and it is the "damnation" of the man entire, after his release from the Adamic death. Again Christ remarks: "If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee; for it is profitable that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into [gehenna] hell."—Matt. 5: 30. Here again the "whole body" is spoken of as destined to be cast into this hell of fire (gehenna); and as it does not go there at death, it cannot go before the "resurrection of damnation."

Having learned that the corporeal man is to enter this hell of fire, after the resurrection, we are prepared to inquire whether this is a hell of preservation, or a hell of destruction? Christ himself gives a definite answer to this question: "Fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in [gehenna] hell."—Matt. 10: 28.

Here the fact is stated that "both soul and body" go to this hell of fire, and also are destined to be destroyed. To "destroy" cannot mean to preserve. And indeed it is the nature of fire to consume; and to talk of casting any thing else into the fire, would be deemed equivalent to a threat of destruction, even without saying that it was for that purpose; then add to this the fact that it is expressly stated they shall be destroyed, how can we come to an opposite conclusion?

Let us hear the Savior again: "And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into [gehenna] hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into [gehenna] hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into [gehenna] hell-fire; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt."—Mark 9: 43–50. Gehenna, here translated "hell," is the strongest term in the whole Greek vocabulary of words to express total consumption, instead of conveying the idea of preservation.

"Gehenna, from the valley of Hinnom, south of Jerusalem, once celebrated for the horrid worship of Moloch, and afterwards polluted with every species of filth, as well as the carcasses of animals, and dead bodies of malefactors; to consume which, in order to avert the pestilence which such a mass of corruption would occasion, constant fires were kept burning."—Greenfield's Greek Lexicon.

"Our Lord seems to allude to the worms which continually preyed on the dead carcasses which were cast into the valley of Hinnom, gehenna, and to the perpetual fire there kept to consume them."—Parkhurst's Greek Lexicon.

Parkhurst also remarks: "A gehenna of fire does, I apprehend, in its outward and primary sense, relate to that dreadful doom of being burnt alive in the valley of Hinnom."

Here is the origin and meaning of the word gehenna, employed by the Savior to portray the coming doom of the impenitent. Old gehenna is made a type of Divine selection, to prefigure the destiny of the wicked. Then let us look at typical gehenna in contrast with the antitypical gehenna, and thus learn the lesson the Savior designed to teach. Nothing was cast into typical gehenna to be preserved, but to be consumed; neither will the wicked be cast into antitypical gehenna (hell) to be preserved, but to be consumed. As in the typical gehenna the fire devoured all that was cast inside of the arches, and worms devoured all on the outside; so in the antitypical gehenna (hell), the agent of destruction, symbolized by the worm and fire, will devour the wicked.

We are sometimes told that the worm signifies the sinner's immortal soul, or his guilty conscience. But the fallacy of this assumption is apparent when we pause to notice that the worm was no part of that which was cast into typical gehenna, but merely an agent to consume that which was cast therein; therefore the worm that dieth not is nothing that is to be cast into antitypical gehenna (hell), but merely symbolizes an agent to consume the wicked when cast in. If the agent here symbolized should die, sinners might continue to live. If the fire could be quenched, sinners might escape death; but as it is, sinners must be consumed. That the worm that dieth not is not the soul, or conscience of the sinner, is made still more certain by reading the prophet's statement, from which Jesus quotes: "And they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched."—Isa. 66: 24. A carcass is a "dead body," "a corpse." Do "carcasses" have a deathless soul in them, or a guilty conscience tormenting them? "Their worm" cannot here mean soul or conscience, but a consuming agent. So also in the Savior's discourse, as he quotes from the prophet. As before seen, in the typical gehenna, the worm and fire devoured that which was cast therein. Therefore in the antitype, the worm is no part of the sinner that is cast into gehenna, but simply an agent to consume that which is cast therein. If this agent of destruction is not hindered, if the worm does not die, the sinner must be consumed.

To illustrate: we walk out into the farmer's corn-field, and discover that a worm has commenced devouring a spear of corn, and readily conclude that if the worm does not die, it will kill the corn. So with the sinner; if that worm, or agent of destruction, is undying, it will surely consume him.

Again, "the fire is not quenched." Is it perpetual? A fire that cannot be quenched, is one that cannot be extinguished, and is therefore sure to consume that on which it preys. We witness a house on fire; the flames are streaming from every part; there is no hope of saving the house, and we say the fire cannot be quenched; and just as surely as this is the case, the house must be consumed. So in the case of the sinner; if the fire cannot be quenched, the sinner must be consumed. It was said of the fire that consumed the gates and palaces of Jerusalem, "It shall not be quenched" (Jer. 17: 27); and of the fire that consumed the Jewish sacrifices, "it shall never go out" (Lev. 6: 13); but those fires were not perpetual; and the language used is just as strong as that applied to the sinner. If a disease cannot be cured, it will kill its victim. If a fire cannot be quenched, it will consume that to which it is applied. And this is the scriptural sense.

(To be continued.)

* Sheol is thirty-one times translated hell, and thirty-one times rendered grave. Christ went to sheol (Ps. 16: 10, Acts 2: 27), and saints shall be ransomed therefrom. Hosea 13: 14. "The wicked shall be turned into hell [sheol]"; but the term shoob, here rendered turned, signifies returned, turned back, or turned again, and is so translated about four hundred times. Hades, ten times rendered hell, signifies the same as sheol—the state of the dead, where Christ went at death (Acts 2: 27, 31), and where all the dead will come from at the resurrection.—Rev. 20: 13, 14.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ALARM BELL.

NAPOLEON AND ROME—THE HARLOT GOING TO JUDGMENT—COMING WONDERS.

We approach a great subject, and we hope not hastily or rashly. We humbly attempt an interpretation of one of the wonders of the apocalyptic panorama. There is no place here for lightness, or dogmatism, or conceit. None for vanity, audacity, or silly speculation. We come now to survey one of the marvels in prophetic zoology. Let us approach the spectacle with humility and most devout regard for the indispensable aid of the enlightening Holy Spirit.

John, whose eye rested on the extraordinary figures in this vision, declares that, in viewing the woman seated upon the septicephalic or seven-headed mammoth, "he wondered with great astonishment." And can we fail to be moved with emotions of unspeakable interest and thoughtful wonder? We, who are living in such a time of unparalleled portent, aye, on the very verge of astounding developments, living with the very cunning and energy of evil waxing to an acme, expanding to a colossus of menace and power. Talk of mysteries and marvels of man's enterprise, all the splendor and wonder of cavalry, menagerie, or hippodrome! What among all the museums or exhibitions of any age or nation, is to be mentioned beside the scenery in God's revelation? No! neither the lions of Babylon, nor the elephants of Hannibal, nor the unwieldly monsters of antediluvian bogs, nor the strange creations of mythological fancy or superstition, can compare for rare and terrible significance, with the symbolic zoology of prophecy. We are approaching one of the wonders of heaven's revelation. Let us be solemn, let us be careful, let us be prayerful, profoundly in earnest.

What is John called to contemplate? Observe now "the judgment of the great harlot." Let us keep strictly to the unity of the prophetic picture, the singleness and specific purpose of the disclosure. We are to survey the chief figures, and all the accessories and details with reference to one thing,—that is, the judgment of the harlot. Hence our glance does not extend backward over the ages of the past, except in a certain sense, and to a certain extent, to make out the proportion and outline of great historic or prophetic figures, as a mental preparation for the special thing proposed, "the judgment of the harlot." The woman is to be viewed expressly with reference to the hour and act of judgment. Hence, we wish it to be especially considered and remembered that the specific prophecy of this chapter is not past, but future as to its fulfillment; for as the judgment of the harlot is certainly future, so the pictorial representation in this chapter applies to a period in the existence and career of the characters symbolized, especially just antecedent to the judgment, or destruction of the woman.

Second. It should be with particular definiteness borne in mind, to the identity of the woman;—that it is not merely, or strictly, the Catholic church, nor the papacy, nor the Romish hierarchy, but Rome,—Rome the city, and particularly reigning Papal Rome, Papal Rome the enemy of the saints, and therefore historically conspicuous for both a spirit and history of persecution. Considering the importance of accuracy, we are thus particular to identify precisely what the prophecy means; for it is in this case its own interpreter, and declares plainly "the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." And the seven heads (in one aspect) "are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth." Hence we identify the seven-hilled capitol of the Cæsars; the city with its churches, palaces, Pope, ecclesiastics and people, or, in other words, Rome ecclesiastic, ecclesiastico-dynastic, and papal—Rome with her Vatican, and Quirinal, and St. Peter's; Rome with her Pope, or papal See, and her college of cardinals and priesthood. We have been sufficiently specific.

Third. We notice for a moment now the "beast that carrieth the harlot;" or the political power that defends and sustains papal Rome, or guaranties her immunity from harm by internal revolution or foreign invasion. The beast has "seven heads and ten horns." The seven headships span a long interval of time; an interval extending back to the very rise of the Roman empire, nay, even beyond the origin of papal Rome, if we understand correctly. The beast is thus comprehensively presented in its dynastic entirety, so to speak; although in the time of John five heads were fallen. The sixth, or imperial, was then in existence. The seventh was not yet come, but would continue only "a short space." This headship we understand to denote the dynasty of the first Napoleon, lasting only about eleven years. This headship, though marked by acts of hostility toward the Pope, antecedent to the emperorship, was, nevertheless, by no means indifferent to the restoration and maintenance of a good understanding with "his holiness," as evinced in the anxiety for his presence at the imperial coronation. The sixth, or imperial head, is still imperial in the seventh, and in the eighth, which is afterward mentioned as a supplemental head (the healed seventh head, doubtless, mentioned in the thirteenth chapter.) Imperial still, we say, but yet marked with such striking and peculiar characteristics, as to be thus separately and successively numbered. In viewing the beast that is carrying the harlot, just at the moment prior to the judgment, to which she is destined, we find five heads fallen, or, in other words, in a dependent attitude; one directly above another, and of course no longer living heads; but as one not inaptly represented, stuffed heads, lifeless, and yet with the form preserved, to complete and preserve the historic, or prophetic-historic integrity of the beast. The sixth is also almost fallen, but not like the rest, seeing that imperialism subsists and survives in the succeeding heads. Hence we may conceive John to be viewing the beast at a point of time just prior to the rise of the seventh head, judgment on the harlot Rome, commencing with the rise of Napoleon I., but judment arrested and delayed for a period, until a further developement of the beast, as we shall shortly see.

Now, as the revelator is gazing, the angel pointedly directs his attention to the changes imminent in the woman-bearing mammoth. The seventh headship succeeds the sixth, and is then itself succeeded by a blank. "The beast was and is not." The brief but intensely vital and intelligent seventh headship (Napoleonic) is extinct; but as it "shall ascend out of the bottomless pit," is revived in the eighth, also Napoleonic, and shall go into perdition. In the time of this headship, the mighty civil power that protects and preserves papal Rome is utterly overthrown, and the animating head destroyed. It will be noticed that the headship and beast are at last used somewhat interchangeably. And now "the beast that was and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." Here, then, behold the colossal proportions of the beast that carries the woman on her way to speedy judgment. Behold the eighth head, lifted up in pride and commanding aspect, over all the rest beneath it; the eighth, which is really the seventh healed and revived. This beast out of the abyss (abussou,) rising from the sea of popular tumults, and buoyed up as it were by the waters of democratic popular suffrage, and emerging from an atmosphere, or ocean, of demon inspiration (as Satan works powerfully through the great modern medium of the people, the uninstructed and ungodly masses), this beast comes up to view, a strange, a fearful creature, with the intelligent eighth head animating its huge frame. What a spectacle is this beast carrying the woman! But this is not all. The beast has ten horns also, and I beg with earnest confidence and kindness to point out the fact, which I think is incontrovertible, that the ten horns are located essentially and entirely upon the eighth head; that their bony bases are rooted in solid order there, and bristling with compact aspect and confederation from the summit of the upreared topmost head forward of the harlot. I need not here enter into a thorough examination of the question, but it seems to me sufficient to adduce the simple and explicit statement, that "the ten horns are ten kings, which had "received no kingdom" in the sixth headship. And "these shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them." This is perfectly conclusive, and decides the whole matter. These kings have not arisen yet. And it is an exceedingly interesting claim upon our most watchful observation,—the infallible prophecy of the rise of those kings, and their confederation of power with the eighth head (tersely designated the beast), while the harlot in her careless, or jubilant, or self-congratulating exaltation, sits upon the therion.

But the question may be asked, Is not Rome now guarded, and her security guarantied by Napoleon and his French bayonets? True, but papal Rome will yet for a moment be carried by the beast ten-horned, or, in other words, conserved and sustained by Napoleon, with his ten king coadjutors. And, accordingly, one of the very earliest developements in the astonishing transitions of the immediate future, will be such a coalition of kingdoms with France, sustaining Rome. Among these transitions, we anticipate the accession of Lucien Bonaparte to the papacy. At this point, the ten-horned beast carries the woman in her last hour. But do not confound Lucien as pope with papal Rome. The Bonaparte pope finds sufficient reason for engaging in a new series of operations, and occupying a position of singular deviation from the venerable policy of the popes and popedom. In his new position, he is situated so as, in conformity to the avuncular* strategy, to carry along the Catholic democracy (save perhaps a remnant) into support of the new system of apostasy, while Rome, hated and desolated, is left to be the prey of consuming fire. Yes, it is a fact, according to the prophecy, that "the ten horns shall hate the harlot (Rome), and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire."

The new confederacy with the beast will not scruple to despoil the metropolis of pride; and provoked thereto, perhaps by the woman's contumacy, devote her to a doom of helpless misery, to which is added the express judgment of heaven. That such a confederation of kings, with a ruling and superior head, will yet arise, and for one moment uphold the harlot, before they despise and spoliate her, need not discourage those who are looking for redemption speedily. It can scarce be more than a hand-breadth of time ere the mighty series of changes has commenced, and speed, headlong speed, a quick and tremendous revolutionary onward march to the consummation, will thrill every enlightened believer waiting upon God.

Fourth. We notice the two items pertaining to the beast, that it is "scarlet-colored" and "full of names of blasphemy." Relative to the first particular, the color, we believe the signification to be probably, first, a power imperial; second, sanguinary, and lastly, perhaps, a reflection of the gaudy drapery so copiously enfolding the woman. No one need be informed that France is imperial, or that the empire arose out of the bloody enormities and excesses of the French Revolution; or that French policy is attentive to the political convenience or possibilities to be subserved by a scrupulous oversight and guardianship of the seven-hilled city. This will continue only until Rome becomes an abomination, and a fresher and more powerful attraction is presented in Jerusalem. We understand "the names of blasphemy" to be certain high-sounding titles, applied to the new European Napoleonic colossus. Suppose in the currency of popular conversation, by the devotees of the beast, the chief of the confederation is styled "prince of kings," "captain of hosts," "head of nations," "restorer of Israel," "the world's messiah," "king of Jerusalem;" nay, even "lord of all the earth;" and we find at once the solution of this mystery. No civil power has ever yet arrogated, or carried such titles in profusion, as we are assured the beast shall bear, and this extraordinary tide of homage is quite possible to commence while yet Rome is this side of her downfall, the new glory of a Jerusalemic metropolis, with the grandeur of a confederation centralized in the sacred capital of Palestine, making the city of the Cæsars seem contemptible in the comparison.

What multitudes will wonder at the new aspect of things on earth! How powerfully will the foolish populace be attracted toward the great idol of the nations, just before the judgment upon antichrist, and just after the judgment upon Rome. Or, if not thus universally attracted, they will be powerless to resist the mandates of the supreme head, fortified with an unparalleled alliance of evil powers. And it is a somewhat singular, but perfectly positive feature of the compact, that "God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled." Here is the supreme purpose and will of the Most High, superior to all contingency, responsible to no tribunal of man. God is pleased, in his wisdom, to influence the kingdom to consummate the compact. Amid all the various energies of the last hour of human pride, and ambition, and blasphemy, the Almighty is seen impelling the final solidification of the earthly powers. They crystalize into a unit under the superintendence of the divine will.

The question may arise, How does this beast differ from the one in the preceding thirteenth chapter? We answer, they are, beyond question, one and the same, but differ in the aspects in which they are viewed. The beast in the later chapter is viewed in his relation to Rome, the harlot, the papal city, which he maintains. The scenic representation is special to the moment of the full development of this relation, prior to the harlot's judgment, with an added forecast of other wonders, embracing that judgment, and the ventured conflict with the Son of God. The chapter previous is, on the whole, a view of this beast at a later date than as the harlot-carrying power, or, in other words, after the harlot has been unseated and rejected. It is then the 'leopard beast,' so called, with tremendous swiftness of motion, strength and demon majesty, and the full liberty of irresponsible and determined action. The series of awful and impious extravagances, in the co-operation of the two-horned beast, with the septi-cephalic beast, we understand to be after the fall of Babylon, and we think the position cannot be overthrown. Mark, the angel cries—"Babylon is fallen;" and then "if any man worship the beast, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God," etc. The order of events is perfectly obvious, and though in the thirteenth chapter we are not carried quite to the closing scene, we have the career of the demonized powers, in what might be called a post-Babylonian liberty of action, when Rome has fallen, and the mad super-naturalisms of the new religion of man-worship are in their high tide of illustration. We reserve further comparison of the chapters until another writing.

Fifth. We now resume briefly an observation of the harlot supported by the beast, with some circumstances of her prophetic aspect and history. She is profusely and gorgeously decorated with costly ornaments, and appareled in purple and scarlet. This is Rome with her multitude of church edifices, enriched with beautiful gifts and expensive purchases. Her chief ecclesiastics glow with crimson habiliments and trappings. We are at no trouble in the identification. Papal Rome is the harlot equestrienne. An intensely interesting question arises here. Is not the scarlet and purple attire here mentioned a special holiday magnificence? And does it not denote such an unwonted wealth of various and imposing array, as would naturally mark the period of the present and last Ecumenical Council? Yes, even now is Rome exuberant with her riches of apparel, and pomp of scarlet and purple vestments. With this Rome "the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication." She has coaxed and commanded, flattered and threatened the civil powers of Europe, and continually formed engagements and compacts with them. She has sought her own aggrandizement by their subserviency. She has spread abroad her impious dogmas, and imposed them on the people, until ages long they have been in that state of moral imperception and perversion resembling a state of intoxication. False doctrines, lying promises of remission and indulgence, as well as terrific denunciations of wrath and wretchedness, as the penalty of disobedience,—all these powerfully imposed on the public mind, through the league of state and church, have stupefied the victims of Romish craft and authority. This people, awed and deceived, mis-instructed and misled, overwhelmed with influences difficult to escape or resist, captivated with ceremonials, have become drunk with the wine of the woman's fornication.

But we are called to contemplate another feature in this strange vision, for the woman carries "a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication." The cup is golden, because it is viewed as a receptacle of things of the utmost value in the harlot's esteem. The contents of the cup, we conceive to be the pet doctrines and established formulas of the church, some of them adopted with great flourish and formality, and enunciated as indubitable, to the ends of the earth. The cup in which these treasures of corruption are found is a golden cup, and the possessor, papal Rome, holds them up to view as her inalienable property, her glory and her joy. With them she is able infallibly to corrupt all whom she can induce to taste the seductive potion. But notice now particularly,—the cup at last is full. It has never before been quite full. Nay, even the dogma of the immediate conception of the Virgin Mary had not quite filled the cup—had not quite completed the catalogue of her grand promulged decrees of doctrine and faith. But what do we see now? Doubtless, we conclude that the last item is added to the contents of the cup, and accordingly we anticipate the adoption by the Ecumenical Council, of the dogma of papal infallibility. It seems quite reasonable to expect, in order to fill the measure of the cup. Then it is we behold the woman holding in her hand the goblet from which no ingredient is wanting in the mixture it contains. The cup is full, and now, O Rome, though thy joy may be full, thou art well nigh the hour of judgment. "The triumphing of the wicked is short and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment." Now, O Rome, sitting on thy ten-horned beast of burden, be sure, the beast will bear his burden. Hope for help and power no longer. There is hate toward thee in the eighth head; there is wrath in the ten horns. O, how exceedingly and intensely solemn is this moment! Brethren and sisters, the immediate future before us is earnest and momentous beyond expression. The filling of the cup by the decree of papal infallibility, and the unity of the ten horns with France, are events apparently right at hand. It has been intimated that Napoleon was opposed to the dogma now sought to be formally engrafted on the church of Rome. It is possibly true, though I greatly doubt it. For in this decree the "man of destiny" will find a convenient auxiliary, when the new religion of blasphemy is reared on the ruins of Romanism. It will be consistent with the career of the leader and idol-god of the apostate prophetic earth, to conclude that he will have in hand for his own advantage this very pronunciamento of infallibility. Still upon this point we would not express positiveness.

On the woman's forehead was an inscription, "Mystery, Babylon the Great," etc. This is God's hand-writing, and not the chirography of the woman or her devotees. It is given to mark and identify for the benefit of God's people, the harlot's personality and character. There seems to be no mistaking that identity in Papal Rome, who is the fruitful mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. She is the mother of churches innumerable of the same faith and order. She is the mother of Roman Catholic churches with their abominations of images and pictures, and worshiped wafer-gods. Rome is the foster-mother of idolatries, less gross than the heathen have practised, it may be, but not less seductive nor deadly. Rome is the mother of Jesuitism and of the bloody Inquisition. She is the mother of abbeys and monasteries, and every kind of edifice and device for the incarceration of men and women in living tombs, with all the vain paraphernalia of penances, upon a rotten system of justification by works, and works of endless supererogation. But this is not quite the whole of the picture yet. The absorbed beholder declares: "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." Upon the completion of the extraordinary strangeness of the spectacle, he exclaims, "And when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration" (astonishment.)

Such is the sorry setting out that God's revelation gives to ecclesiastic Rome—a poor old drunken harlot woman. She is drunk with a wonderful liquid, that is, human blood, and the blood of the martyrs of Jesus at that. The purple currents of life that she has quaffed for ages have blushed through her very integuments, and blend in reddening harmony with the purple and scarlet of her vesture. Sanguinary woman! A harlot, the mother of harlots, and drunk with blood, with human blood, and the blood of the martyrs of Jesus! The revelator was indeed amazed! And behold we now that woman, in full view, decorated, gorgeous and drunken. Aye, there she is! Rome, papal Rome, harlot Rome; suave, imposing and magnificent, even though intoxicated! Rome, flush and proud amid her throngs of lofty ecclesiastics, bishops and dignitaries, delegates from the four corners of the earth, hasting at the mother's mandate to the metropolis of Catholic Christendom. Aye, there is Rome with her Ecumenical Council, with visions of dominion dancing before her dizzied eyes, and no power of sight to see the gulf of perdition yawning underneath her.

We notice, in conclusion, one more feature of this apocalyptic vision. The angel said, "Come hither and I will show unto thee the judgment of the great harlot that sitteth upon [or over] many waters." Subsequently, the angel explains: "The waters which thou sawest, where the woman sitteth, are peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues." It might seem perplexing to some, at first, to reconcile, upon a basis of perfect symmetry and consistency in the imagery, the view of the woman sitting, at the same time, upon the beast, and also upon a vast expanse of waters, representing nations. The simple solution I conceive to be this. She is seated upon the beast in the wilderness, the latter standing on a hummock or hillock; while on all sides, and in every direction, are the lakes and marshy pools of a vast morass. Thus the imagery has its consistency preserved. If the suggestion is not strictly accurate, it may approximate probability at least. The beast is the woman's support, the expanse of waters her domain. The Franco-Roman empire is her imperial security, the whole world her jurisdiction. And here comes a question of vital import. Is her situation, as mistress over nations and multitudes, connected with the present session of the Council, the membership of which is officially representative of so many languages and people on the earth? Is not the idea of the council couched in this imagery? Nay, is not the immense throng of visitors, whether official or not, now congregated at Rome, and almost certain to continue (coming and going) during the council, and up to the very moment of Rome's last catastrophe, or nearly, comprehended in the prophecy? And, again, yet further. On the whole, after profoundly pondering this picture, is it not reasonably inferable that Rome's religious or ecclesiastical influence will be yet for a moment much enlarged? Are we in the United States secure from Catholic preponderance, when already the ruff-scuff and rubbish of Catholic Europe, through the open avenue of elective franchise (vain pride and trust of men in universal suffrage!) are actually in menacing aspect and numbers, manipulating our politics, and sacking our very Protestant republicanism? I am inclined to look for Romish arrogance reviving with conscious success in outnumbering, or out maneuvering us in America. We are in imminent danger—reposing on a mountain stored with thunder and fire. Yet there may not be bloody persecutions until the beast has shaken off Rome, and then there will be work for the guillotine!* Discredit this who will, it is enough for me to believe the simple certificate of God's word. I read with thoughtful solemnity and unhesitating confidence such language as this: "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image," etc. But that Rome will actually persecute the saints again is scarcely possible to expect, yet the same Romish, and I may say demon bitterness against christians, will actuate the body and soul, head and hand, of the last apostasy.

We are now at the close of this survey. We see Rome, deceived, and self-complacent, just before her downfall exclaiming, or saying in her heart, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." It seems that her perplexity and unrest are soothed by the triumph of her last dogma, and the supposed fidelity and invincible strength of the European league that, with its leader, carry the city ecclesiastic. Vain imagination! The horns are pledged and leagued with the head by an influence from God, for the very purpose of judgment on the harlot. God is pleased to select and use this instrumentality, while heaven and earth, earthquake and lightning, conspire to finish and perfect her destiny of irretrievable disaster. True, the very same horns that hate the harlot, or ravage Rome, make war with the Lamb, and so he who is Lord of lords and King of kings indeed, visits judgment on the beast full of names of blasphemy, and falsely arrogating these very titles of our Lord.

I must again put in an admonition and protest against a fear that these stupendous events being yet future, will therefore take more time than the necessities of chronology will permit. And the heart of any believer earnestly longing for the kingdom and appearing of the just One, may also feel a pang of [illegible]

* Pertaining to an uncle.—Ed. [illegible]

* I have just read the leading editorial in the last Examiner (Baptist), under the caption of "The Coming God." The article is suggested by the alarming tendency [illegible] "Whoso readeth, let him understand."

(Concluded on page 8.)

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, March 2, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given. Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too. Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ RUFUS SNOW—It was a mistake. It should have been Dec. 69.

☞ F. B. JONES—Money received. Book 25 cts.

☞ H. F. DeWOLF—Money not received. We gave you credit as though it had been.

☞ E. COTTON'S P. O. address is Newport, N. H.

☞ ELDER JACOB BLAIN'S P. O. address it changed from 19 to 79 North Division Street, Buffalo N. Y.

VISIT TO CONNECTICUT.

Our visit to Ct. was one of special interest. At Riverton (formerly Hitchcocksville), we were invited to preach in the Congregationalist meeting-house, and a large audience listened very attentively. We received a hearty welcome to come again. Jesus has some warm friends at Riverton. We found some good souls in Wrightville and Wolcottville. In the latter place the church has prospered under the watch-care of Bro. St. John. We found the people very anxious to hear the gospel of the kingdom. It was pleasant to meet our old friends. We preached one evening in the Methodist meeting in Winsted and had a good meeting. It was in the place where we first confessed Jesus. Sabbath, Feb. 20th, we spent with the church in Hartford, and had very good meetings. It was a refreshing season in the Lord.

We are now (Feb. 24th) at Rutland, Vt., where the Spirit of the Lord is moving the hearts of the people. We commenced meetings on the 22nd inst. Last evening six requested prayer. The prospect is good.

BRO. INGHAM.

We have just heard from Bro. Ingham, of Clementsport, N.S. We are saddened to learn that he is no better. Bro. and Sr. Ingham deserve and need the sympathy of all good people. Those who knew him when well, need no other commendation but a knowledge of his faithful devotedness to the cause of Christ. Now he is unable to do any thing to provide for his family. Would it not be well for his friends to send some material aid to him in his deep affliction? Direct to S. A. Ingham, Clementsport, Nova Scotia.

"THE COMING QUESTION."

Under the above heading, an editorial article appeared in the Philadelphia Methodist Home Journal, of Jan. 8th, 1870, which contains some important statements, that will be read with interest by those who now see clearly that the Bible does not teach the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and eternal torment. The omens are brightening in favor of the eternal truth contained in the Bible. We find the best members of the evangelical churches are ready to hear the reasons of our hope, and read books and tracts on the subject. After doing so, they are astonished at the plain teachings of the Bible on these subjects, and wonder why they have not seen before that the Scriptures give no countenance to the doctrine that men are conscious between death and the resurrection; or that the wicked will live eternally in sin and misery. Those who think they can sustain such doctrines, provided they become more familiar with the Bible, will find themselves most remarkably mistaken. A careful investigation of the Scriptures is just what is needed to convince them that popular theology cannot be sustained by the harmonious teaching of the word of the Lord.

It affords us pleasure to know that good men and women are looking candidly at these things; laying aside their former prejudice, feeling ready to embrace the whole truth as fast as they see it. We are rejoiced because we know that when they see the simplicity of the Bible on these subjects, and receive the truth as it is in Jesus, they will love God and the Bible better than ever before; and will be armed against the overwhelming tide of infidelity that is coming upon the world and church through Spiritualism; which is but the ripe fruit of a belief in the immortality of the soul.

Here is the article to which we have referred:—

"Whoso has watched the christian pulpit for the last quarter of a century, must have marked a certain mobility in its teachings, the general current of which has been away from the frequent and emphatic denunciation of eternal and terrible torments as the doom of men who live and die impenitent.

This change may be due, in small part, to the teachings of Universalism; but must be ascribed largely to the growing desire of the pulpit to please the pews; we might say, perhaps, to the growing allegiance of the former to the latter. Nor should it be denied that a grave doubt has sprung up in many minds touching a doctrine once much insisted on, and with such wholesome effect. But however the change has come about, one rarely hears, now-a-days, a good, hearty, old-fashioned, right up and down 'hell and damnation sermon,' as many a poor sinner, trembling under a sense of his guilt and danger, has characterized the terrible pulpit charge that made him writhe and quake in his seat.

Among the heresies of modern times it is doubted whether any one has made surer, steadier, stealthier progress than the doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked. Rev. Geo. Storrs, of the M. E. church, was among the first to advocate the annihilation theory, and he left her pale, we have forgotten whether by expulsion for heresy, or by withdrawal, about the year 1840.

The notions of the several advocates of 'Annihilationism,' appear to be quite crude and inharmonious; and often, even antagonistic with each other; yet the doubt touching the truth of the orthodox theory is taking root and spreading among thinking men, both in and out of the ministry,—with a growth that is obvious and threatening, . . .

We opine that the sooner the issue is publicly and squarely joined between orthodoxy and this new heresy, the better it will be for the ultimate peace and speedy triumph of the church.

Some months ago, a prominent minister of the church, and one familiar with the class of disquisitions which constitute the staple of the Quarterlies, presented to one of them a manuscript mooting and defending the theory of penal extinction as against that of unending torture. The reply of the editor of the said Quarterly was that the article could go in, if the author should so decide; but that, for himself, he judged the time was not yet; adding, however, 'the question you have discussed must soon have a thorough rehearing by the church.'

In one of our principal cities, the preacher's meeting lately discussed the question, 'Do the Scriptures promise perpetuated existence to any but the good?' The topic was up for some six consecutive weeks, and excited large interest; but the speakers on neither side, were, in any tolerable degree, prepared to do the subject justice; and it was discontinued, leaving the impression apparently on all minds, that the real merits of the issue had been scarce, or at best but feebly touched. An essay by a member, regarded as one of the best thinkers of the meeting, was read at the close of the discussion, presenting the orthodox side of the argument. By unanimous vote of the meeting the author was requested to present its arguments to the Book Room, in New York, for publication in tract form. It was duly revised and sent forward; but not published; nor as far as we are informed, was any reason assigned for the declinature.

The opponents of orthodoxy on this question are arming and drilling, and we may add, steadily gathering recruits. Is it wise in the churches to respond by merely saying, 'Hush,' as the Quakers did, as the Congregationalists did, and as the nation did? The church ought to know that not every tyro in her ministry can wield the arms that are to settle the opponents of her faith."

THE ADVANCE OF CRIME.

The advance of crime at the present time is truly alarming; and yet, careless, sleepy watchmen are crying "Peace and safety"; while many suppose all is going well, and that the conversion of the world will soon begin. O what a delusion! How can professed ministers of the gospel be so blind? We are near a reign of terror, instead of better times. "Worse and worse," is a proper expression for the progress men are making in these days. While the syren song is sung by many who have "Rev." or "D. D." attached to their names, the secular press, conducted by unconverted men, sounds an alarm bell, that is arousing some from their careless slumbers. The following is from the Chicago Daily Post of Feb. 9th, 1870:—

"Murder, arson and theft are holding high carnival in our city at the present time. What is to be done, and where are we to look for safety? It requires more than common bravery to walk our streets after ten o'clock at night. Old men, belated on their journey home, are knocked down and their throats cut; young ladies, within a few steps of their own doors, are felled to the pavement and robbed; houses entered, plundered and fired. In fact, every conceivable crime and wickedness is now perpetrated on our most public business and residence streets. Our street cars are no longer safe to ride in—robbery, insult, and every species of indignity, are practised upon those who are so unfortunate as to be compelled to ride in them. No respectable man will allow his wife and children to go or return from down town, especially after nightfall, alone.

I repeat, what are we coming to? Is there no power in our land to restore peace and safety again? Must we go armed to the teeth and clad in heavy armor continually, to keep us from being shot down in front of our very doors? Where is the vigilance committee? The voice of the people cries aloud for protection. Better have every lamp-post in our city made hideous with the unsightly spectacle of a dangling thief, than to surrender our lives and homes to the lawless scoundrels that now infest our streets. There seems to be but one way to rid ourselves of their presence, that is for the people to take the law in their own hand, go fully armed, and upon every occasion mark his man. We cannot live so much longer; it is too much for a law-abiding community to bear. It must come to an end in one way or another. Either the people or human devils must go under. Which shall it be?"

A similar state of things is prevailing in all great cities. Men are becoming reckless to an alarming extent. The fear of man and of God is departing, and respect for human life and rights is rapidly dying out. How like the Bible pictures of "the last days" are the present signs of the times. We must be near the end of this dispensation. Things cannot continue as they are much longer. Let us be ready to welcome the King of kings at his coming.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

It has been very difficult to get any reliable information of the doings of the Roman Council. There is no doubt but that affairs are in a very confused, unsettled condition. One great object of the council appears to be to declare the Pope's infallibility. On this point the members of the council are not agreed. Our conviction is that the decree will be adopted We may expect that the closing acts of the "little horn" will be some of its most daring and blasphemous. Among the last things noticed by Daniel, as connected with the "little horn," were "the great words which the horn spake." Dan. 7: 11. The next event was the burning of the beast. The following article from the N. Y. Tribune, Feb. 14th, 1870, gives some interesting facts in relation to the Council:—

ROME, Jan. 21.—The order of procedure in the Œcumenical Vatican Council is so generally misunderstood or so little understood, that I must enter on my correspondence with you by explaining it. Even Episcopal Secretaries I have found at times to be embarrassed; how much more so then the profanum vulgus who stands on the outside waiting for some wandering ray of light. The commissions appointed last year to prepare matter for the Council have all died a natural death, but they left their "schemata decretorium et canonum," projets de loi the French would say, which have been under discussion up to the present time, and which will occupy the attention of the Council to its close. It may, however, so happen that some Holy Father may desire to propose a novelty which in his opinion would contribute greatly to the public good. To receive such propositions the Pope has appointed a private "deputation" consisting of twelve Cardinals and fourteen Bishops. Its sole duty is to deliberate on such propositions, accept or reject them, finally submitting its counsels to the Pope. Every novelty, therefore, will be so well sifted that there is little chance of anything escaping which might be supposed to militate against Mother Church. The real working body is the General Congregation, which has now held twelve meetings. The schemata decretorum et canonum are submitted to it in order, those regarding Faith taking the precedence. Any Father wishing to speak on a schema must present his demand to one of the five Cardinal Legates chosen by the Pope as his representatives, at least a day before the meeting of a General Congregation. Any other Father who during the debate may feel a desire to speak, can do so by asking permission of one of the Presidents.

Possible differences of opinion have been anticipated by the election of four deputations by the Fathers. Each deputation consists of twenty-four Bishops, presided over by a Cardinal appointed by the Pope, and to one of these deputations, which are called severally "of Faith," "of Discipline," "of Regular Orders," and "of Oriental Rites," the subject matter under discussion will be referred in case of opposition. Such a case occurred on Monday, 10th January, when the deliberations of the General Congregation, with the objections started, were laid before the deputation of Faith. It is the duty of these deputations then to examine the objections, and send their report back to the General Congregation, which proceeds to formulate a decree or canon of the Council, and to vote upon it. As a last step this formulated decree is to be laid before a public session, at which the Pope will preside. The decree is then read; the votes are taken again, pro forma; and on their being presented to His Holiness by his orders it is promulgated. Such in a few words is the mode of procedure adopted.

Before feeling that my way was clear before me, I was compelled to give you these dry details, and now I am in proper working condition. It will be evident to you, however, that unless any new material is suggested, the members of the Pope's private deputation may fold their arms and go to sleep; as may also the members of the four deputations chosen by the Bishops to consider matters of "Faith," "Discipline," "Regular Orders," and "Oriental Rites"—unless objections are started in the General Congregation. Should no difficulties occur, that body may at once proceed to formulate a decree, and vote upon it.

It may reasonably be doubted whether opposition to any great extent was anticipated—the Jesuits, who are the real Promoters of Council, arranged affairs so cleverly—apostolic letters were so tender and paternal, and so much was trusted to the influences of the genius loci, that victory along the whole line was expected. Such anticipations are now proved to have been false. Fourteen times has the General Congregation assembled; between sixty and seventy of the Fathers have spoken, many in opposition, and no public session has as yet been summoned to promulgate a decree. So far indeed from this, the discussions on articles of faith were sent, together with the objections made, to the deputation of Faith on Monday, the 10th, to be reformed. As yet I have not heard whether that deputation has terminated its deliberations; it has already met twice, and when it has concluded its efforts to smooth away difficulties, the result will be sent to the General Congregation and the votes will be taken. On Friday, the 14th inst., another General Congregation was held in the Council Hall, an Ecclesiastical Discipline was brought under discussion. Three new "schemata decretorum" were presented to the Fathers: 1. Regarding the life and conduct of Christ. 2. Regarding the little Catechism; and 3, on the rights and obligations of the bishops. As to the second decree, it is desired to establish as a rule that only one Catechism shall be used throughout the whole Roman Catholic world, whereas at present almost every diocese has its peculiar Catechism. The orators at this meeting were Cardinal Schwarzenburg, Archbishop of Prague; Cardinal Matthieu, Archbishop of Besancon; Mousignor Simor, Archbishop of Strigonia, and the Bishop of Grenada. The discussion was on the duties and rights of the Episcopal body, and on matters of discipline. Cardinal Schwartzenburg, strongly supported by Matthieu and Simor, maintained that the new propositions would tend to diminish their liberty, already sufficiently encroached upon by the Council of Trent. In fact, it was proposed to deprive them of the right of choosing their Vicars General—one of their most sacred and most cherished rights—and centralize everything in Rome.

As an instance of the consequences of such a restriction, let me observe that on the demise of a Bishop it is the custom, at present, for the Metropolitan Chapter to elect a Vicar General, where one does not exist, who of course assumes episcopal power until the vacancy is filled up. Should the chapter omit to do this during eight days, the choice devolves on the Titular of the Province, either the Primate or the Patriarch, and if he should not name him, the choice lapses to Rome. The project now is in all cases to give this cherished right to the Roman Curia, thus introducing a system of espionage into every diocese, and centralizing all power in the Vatican. The battle rages fiercely and strongly on this ground, hard words are used, and I know of one instance in which a shepherd of Christ's fold put his hands behind his back rather than shake that of his brother pastor.

On the 15th inst. another General Congregation was held, at which six Fathers spoke, and, among them, Losanna, Bishop of Biela, in opposition to the "Schemata" schemes or propositions. The subject matter of discussion was Ecclesiastical Discipline, but no remarkable incident occurred. The same may be said of the Congregation which met on the 17th inst. The Fathers met again on the 19th inst., when the Archbishops of Paris and Cologne addressed the meeting, recommending moderation to their brethren. But they might as well have preached moderation to the winds let loose from the caves of Œolius. A violent struggle is going on, not so much for the good of the church as for the triumph of a principle to which the majority have pledged themselves, and amid this roaring of the tempest Monsigneur Dupanloup has announced to the Cardinal President his intention to speak to-day. In all probability he will commence the attack, and as probable it is that Dr. Manning, Archbishop of Westminster, will reply on the defensive. The encounter would have taken place last Friday, the 14th instant, but for Dupanloup's temporary indisposition, and as he has announced himself for to-morrow, I take for granted that the original plan is to be carried into effect.

The great object of the Council, or for which it was summoned, is no doubt to raise the personal infallibility of the Pope to the dignity of a dogma. With infinite modesty, or something else, it is not and will not be included among the schemata decretorum—it is to be treated as a question per se—to be proposed by one of the Fathers in Council, and the hope was that it would be carried by acclamation. On the remonstrance, however, of the Archbishop of Paris, and others, an assurance was given that there should be no surprise. Other tactics were therefore adopted, and about a fortnight since a printed paper, which I have seen, was circulated for signatures among the Fathers, urging the Council to declare the authority of the Holy Father supreme and infallible in rebus fidei ac morum. You have doubtless received a copy of this document, and I have only to call your attention to the word "morum." An old proverb says, "Give them an inch and they will take an ell." At first Infallibility was claimed only in spiritual affairs; but here we have "morum" introduced. How indefinite the term! how all-comprehensive it may be made!

This movement was no sooner known to the opposition than Cardinals Rauscher, Hohenlohe and Schwartzenberg, addressed a petition to the Pope against what was regarded "as an infringement of the liberty of the Bishops. If the question of Infallibility was to be discussed, let it be brought forward in the Council." His Holiness received the supplica coldly, and no reply has been reported. Dupanloup, on the contrary, and others with him are moving heaven and earth to meet and conquer this movement. But will they succeed? If votes are to be weighed rather than numbered, they will. On this point there is much doubt, so much indeed that I hesitate to express a decided opinion. Each side is equally sure of victory. On that of the opposition the French Legation is making every effort, with the sanction and at the instigation of its Government, to defeat the Ultramontanists. Of that they may rest assured. Then the Germans, who were at first divided by national jealousies, have now united in the common cause—four English bishops have abandoned the Ultramontane flag, and, said a theologian to me yesterday, "the Americans are beginning to leave us, as Dr. Purcell, Bishop of Cincinnati, Dr. Kenrick, Bishop of St. Louis, and others; but all the Spaniards are with us," he added, "to a man; so are the Irish, the Orientals, and most of the Italians."

Thus these Christian Fathers are counting their forces as if preparing for the battle—hard words are dealt right and left—intrigues of every kind are practiced, and the inspiration of the Holy Ghost is anticipated by efforts such as those which precede a popular election in America or in England. Already the supporters of the Holy See assert that their supplica to the Council has obtained five hundred signatures, while the opposition admit that it has nearly three hundred, but not more. It is ominous of the future consequences of success that the Italians generally pray that the great dogmas may be promulgated. "Moderation will be our death," they say, whereas if our spiritual bondage is rendered more oppressive, the chances of our temporal liberty will be greater. I invite your attention to this, the Prayer as they themselves call it, of all Italians with whom I converse. At this moment I have just returned from St. Peter's, where Monsigneur d' Orleans, said a French priest to me, was speaking. Whoever it was, he spoke for an hour in most excited tones, but on this subject I must send fuller revelations in my next letter.

TILLIE HULL'S INQUIRY.

In the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," of Feb. 5th, 1870, we find the following:—

"AN INQUIRY BY TILLIE HULL.

'Will you please state, through the Journal, a brief outline of what Spiritualists believe concerning the Bible?'

REPLY.—We believe . . . . that the various books of the Old Testament, which are now compiled and called the Bible, were written by men as other books are written—for instance, as the book of Mormon was written—as a novel is written, founded in some instances upon supposed or traditional facts, but in most instances destitute of a shadow of truth."

Such is the teaching of Spiritualism. During our late discussion with Moses Hull, in Winsted, we read the foregoing, and he indorsed it. So, then, it comes to pass, that Spiritualists affirm that Jesus was but the hero of a novel, written by Matthew; and, of course, the other three gospels by Mark, Luke and John, are no better. According to the teaching of the spirits, the Bible is of no more value than the "Book of Mormon"; and is, "in most instances, destitute of a shadow of truth."

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAST ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

As the brethren of this church in Boston have kindly offered their chapel for the use of our Annual Conference in Massachusetts, in connection with a protracted meeting held by them at the same time, we hope it will be one of the best ever held there. They also invite the churches of East Boston, Chelsea, South End, Charlestown, and Cambridge, to unite with them in making this a profitable meeting to all. Those churches which are related to it, or were in former years, also other churches in other States, as formerly, are invited to come and help make it and yourselves better by your presence and duties. The other churches above named will help in lodging and boarding such as come to worship the God of our fathers. We expect it will be next to a good campmeeting; better for some. You may expect preaching that will be interesting and meat in due season, as there are so many prophetic developments now seen around us. Come, brethren, what if it does cost a few dollars for fare? Our money is to use for the cause we are engaged in.

The conference business will not interfere this year with the religious exercises. We hope that there will be a full delegation from all the churches in Mass., as there will be two conferences proposed, instead of one east and west, to save the expense of travel. There seems to be a double motive for holding a general gathering. Shall we have it? Yes, I think we shall, and God will bless the meeting. HIRAM MUNGER.

[See notice of the meeting in another column.

NEW BOOK.

THE SEVEN MESSAGES OF THE APOCALYPSE, showing their harmony. By S. S. Brewer. 48 pp., 12mo. Price per dozen, $1.20; single, 13 cents.; postage, 2 cents. For sale at this office. AG'T.

MUSIC.—We have a fresh supply of "All to Christ I Owe," and "Beautiful Vale of Rest." Send in your orders. Price reduced. 3 cts. single; by mail, 5 cts.

"EVANGELS OF THE COMING ONE: Prophetic Utterances and their Accomplishment."

This work will be ready for delivery in a few days. Its object is, to present the evidences of the speedy coming of our blessed Lord and Master, to consummate the hope of the good of all ages. All who desire to assist in the dissemination of this work, will please address their orders at once for the above, either to the Crisis Office, or to C. W. SARGENT, Concord, N. H., Box 426.

S. S. BREWER.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. H. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$443.97
J. Clothy	3.00

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 212, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$660.15
Geo. S. Harwood (for Memphis)	25.00
"Right Hand" "	5.00
Mary A. Hardy "	3.00
Nathan Collins and family "	10.00
"From a Sister" "	1.50
Mary J. Howland "	2.00
A. Devereux	1.00

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass.....$12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

OUR POSITION AND WORK.

1. We are standing on the last end of God's prophetic word; nearly all foretold as to the history of this world is fulfilled. The judgment next. Awful yet glorious thought! The acceptable year of the Lord, then the day of vengeance of God. Isa. 61: 2. The everlasting gospel to be preached, as named in Rev. 14: 6, 7; then the hour of his judgment is come. Christ comes in flaming fire; then the wicked are punished with everlasting destruction. 2 Thess. 1: 8. No peace is to be preached to the wicked after Gentile rule ends, as I read the word. The "stone" smites the image, then all nationality ends. Dan. 2: 34, 35, 44, 45. Other men may give a thousand years of probation to the nations, if they will, I dare not do it. As I read God's word, I know it is awful to add to or take from.

2. The signs given by our Savior, to me are nearly all history. The sea and waves are roaring. Luke 21: 25, 26. Rome is at this time as we may expect it just before the Lord comes. Read Dan. 5. It seems to me we have there Rome as it is now, and the instruments of destruction preparing under and around them. "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."—Rev. 18: 4. Awful moment for the church and world.

I. Our work is plainly laid out before us.

1. Bring out before all men the great truth that Christ brought to light the way to save men, and that all men can be saved through him, and only through him. John 14: 6.

2. That they must yield to his claims, or perish. Mark 26: 16.

3. Present the judgment now hanging over them.

4. Spend more time in pressing home those truths, that men must believe or be damned (Mark 16: 16), and not make a hobby of those things that a man may believe and be lost. If a man pursues the latter course, it is evident he has forgotten his calling, and had better go to other callings, for the church is better off without such than with them. The message a man carries and delivers tells what he is. By their fruits men are known.

5. As ministers, as we go among men professing to have these awful truths to tell, let us avoid all appearance of evil; carry a bold protest against the prevailing sins of our day. Free-loveism is ruining the church. As ministers of God, let us lift up our voice against it.

6. Church of God, awake! See where you are standing—on the very verge of time. Are you in a saved condition? You ought to be. You can be. You can be full of the Holy Spirit. There is no other safe position. Are you doing what you can to help in saving men from coming wrath? A dreadful responsibility is on you. My prayer is, Roll on the church, and especially on the ministry, the burden of souls. Then you will all have work to do. The minister will not have to beg a place to preach, nor the church to work. It comes upon them. All which I submit to you, Bro. Grant, and to the church of God.

I have been laid aside by sickness, and have thought over all these things when death stared me in the face; but I am raised up so as to preach once more, and now I am trying in my feeble way to do as I have been exhorting others to do. God bless you all; and if any have sinned and crippled their influence, let such repent and confess, and go to work in the name of the Lord. Amen.

M. BATCHELOR.

For the World's Crisis.

THE WORK FOR THESE TIMES.

We, as a people, have arrived at a point in our history where great efforts are not as effectual as could be desired, especially in large places, where the ground has been overstocked, and there are two workmen to one shock of corn, or double the laboring talent that can find effectual work to do. If our brethren would launch out into highways and hedges, in districts and neighborhoods where the truth has not been fairly brought before the people, they would be astonished to see the effect produced upon such minds as have been in darkness. This is the second time this winter I have been called to help on a work started by some one's going out into a wicked country neighborhood to hold meetings. I am writing now in one of those places.

About four weeks ago, Brn. Ayres and Wood, of Worcester, Mass., started out to Mill Ward, a secluded place, with no religious influence to keep them from fishing and working Sundays, and where wickedness reigned. They commenced meetings in a farmer's kitchen, sung and prayed. This is apostolic. They then read the Scriptures, and explained them. The interest increased, other kitchens were opened, the work of conviction manifested itself, and conversion followed of the right kind. The work ran into other districts, until the whole community was stirred. Sinners, old and young, were inquiring. The work was too much for Bro. Ayres, on account of being deprived of his rest, which many neglect at such times. He had to give up, and go home, when he sent for me. I felt the call, and went to the battle-field, and found Bro. Wood ready to take hold with me. Although rainy, the people came out some eight miles, and were ready to testify of what God had done for them. It was blessed to see religion shine out in their faces and testimonies, which were simple and powerful. They were ready to receive the dispensational truth, in relation to the speedy coming of the Lord. It was easy to preach to them. Some told me their experience.

One man said he wanted to take a rawhide, and use it on the "Millerites," as he called them, because his mother got interested, and wanted the horse to go to the meeting. The good old lady told me, she had such a desire to have her son go and carry her, she offered him a hen and nine half-grown chickens. Any one that could read character, would know that a good large hen, with nine good chickens, would be a stimulant to harness a horse and go three miles to an evening meeting. When the old lady told me this, I burst out laughing, and thanking God for that humble and simple fact, I asked the young man why he did not accept his mother's offer? He replied, He hated them so badly, he would not have gone if the chickens had been full-grown. But now he will go for nothing, and carry all of us to and from the depot, attends meetings, and spoke of the great change God had wrought in him of late. It was human nature in its raw state subdued by grace, and more power in it than a dozen dry, long sermons on doctrine alone. This is just the class that can be reached now; and every large church has the very men that ought to go out as Brn. Ayres and Wood have, and gather in the outcasts. It will do you good. Try it, instead of hanging around a full meeting, and doing next to nothing, and getting the same. God does bless such efforts now. Think of it, and start out two by two, and others will be blessed, and you strengthened.

H. MUNGER.

P. S.—Another auxiliary for doing good, and spreading light, is the scattering of tracts and papers. I found in this barren place a desire to read tracts; and as the ground has been broken up, the seed can be sown very effectually by scattering tracts. There are good brethren enough that will pay into the tract fund, if they are satisfied the tracts are doing good. I found that what has been done here created an appetite for more light, that tracts would give. Also, I found it an easy matter to introduce the Crisis, which all should do who labor in new places. The first subscriber was the young man that refused the hen and nine chickens, as not sufficient pay to carry his mother to meeting. He does it for nothing, and has paid in advance for the Crisis.

Our work is a peculiar one, as we are the peculiar people of these days. See Titus 2: 14. I believe, if the churches that are able (and many are) would select two competent and prudent brethren, and send them out into destitute places, and pay them a little something to work, as Brn. Ayres and Wood have, if they are not able to go at their own expense, there would be a great amount of good done. Then, when it is once started, it would soon bear in part, if not the whole of the expense. Try it. H. M.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

BRO. GRANT:—God only knows how ardently I love him, and his divine, sacrificial offering, his cause, all his dear, devoted children, and the precious Bible. My devotion to these objects of worship I can but imperfectly express, and I find my soul is being drawn more and more in that direction constantly, and of course this gives me unspeakable satisfaction.

I am sometimes almost lost in wonder and surprise, when I look at the sins of the Jewish and Gentile world, to see how God has manifested his unbounded goodness and mercy to so corrupt, vexing, and rebellious a race. He has prominently placed before them all his divine attributes of character, purposes, plans, promises, and blessings, which are invariably calculated to make them good, holy, and happy; and as a wise father would counsel his own children, so he has advised, counseled and demanded perfect obedience and loving submission to his sanctified will, for their special benefit; and has impressively portrayed the awful consequences of living a depraved life, corrupting themselves and all who come in contact with them. And yet, with all this superlatively excellent counsel set before them, the great mass of mankind are full of inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and abominable idolatries, ever hateful and to be despised by all pure and holy beings.

But what folly and madness it is in man to reject God's treasure-house of knowledge, and the exceeding great riches of Christ Jesus, for a few paltry dollars, honors, pleasures, sensual gratifications, and adornments of this world, which are perishable, and like a shadow soon pass away. How presumptuous, how unwise. Can it be that man, possessed of so much intelligence, has become so degraded in his moral sensibilities and intellectual faculties, that nothing can attract his attention but the sensitive pleasures of earth, cursed all over with sin? It seems almost literally true with a vast majority of mankind.

In this condition of things, Jesus, the author of life eternal, purchased this world, this field of human depravity, in which to display the infinite power, wisdom, glory and grace of God, in the revelation of the mystery which has been kept secret from the foundation of the world; well knowing that this divine magnet of heavenly origin would accomplish all that God's eternal purpose designed in the end. Jesus, who is "Lord over all," with his rich and imperishable implements of husbandry, has been stirring the rubbish of this world, and the elements have been so disturbed and agitated that many diamonds, pearls and jewels have appeared to cheer his pure and loving heart.

Once Jesus said: "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." And then went away and prayed three times: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me. Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." But now, with such a development of riches revealed and still being brought to light, how his compassionate heart, so full of earnest solicitation for the welfare of mortals, must well up with joys immortal as these precious treasures are sifted, washed, tried, polished, and stamped for the realms of endless day. How must the angels of God feel and rejoice, while as ministering spirits they go forth to those who shall be heirs of salvation. Surely their notes, so sweet and melodious, must cause the many mansions of the eternal city to echo and re-echo, even back to earth, the free, full, and glorious song of eternal redemption through our Lord Jesus Christ.

God's faithful watchmen have but a short time more to stand on the walls of Zion, to sound the last thrilling message to a fast perishing world. May their hearts and hands be stayed by the effectual prayers and sacrifices of all God's dear children longing for redemption. Your brother in hope,

A. N. SEYMOUR.

From Eld. J. Porter.

BRO. GRANT:—We have just been favored with a visit from Eld. J. B. Cook, of Brooklyn, N. Y. After spending some time and labor with the church in Montreal, he came here by request, and delivered a series of lectures, listened to with increasing interest by sober, well-behaved congregations. He dwelt upon the harmony of the word; the value of faith, leaning upon the promise of God; the coming of Christ; the grandeur and glory of the millennium; the events of the mighty future; sin and sinners; death and the devil shut out from our planet; the earth restored to its paradisiacal state, and filled with the glory of God. The promise to Abraham was not overlooked—"In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

In handling these crowning doctrines, the Elder seemed clothed in the far-sighted spirit of revelation, taking his stand beside the holy Seer of Patmos, giving us such a glowing picture of the events in the millennial reign of Christ upon the throne of his father David, as was well calculated to raise the mind of the enlightened saint victorious over the ills of life, and make the sinner forget himself, and for the moment wish his lot among the ransomed of the Lord. The season was truly edifying and refreshing.

For the last seventeen years the church in Danville has not been in a more healthy state. The spirit of the coming King and kingdom was never more prominent. The Lord has not forsaken us. J. PORTER.

Danville, P. Q., Feb. 22nd, 1870.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

BRO. GRANT:—We are still alive and trying to live for the kingdom, endeavoring in our weak way to preach the good news of a whole Savior, and his coming again to give eternal life, and a blessed home to all that believe in him and obey him. Our labors are in entirely new places, with the exception of once in four weeks, when we intend to meet with the friends at home to assist in the breaking of bread.

The labors of Bro. C. F. Sweet have been blest in this region, and I would here bespeak a word in favor of his tract just published,—"A Colloquy." It is good, and will pay to scatter. It can be had of him, postpaid, at 10 cts. single, 60 cts. per dozen, $4.00 per hundred. Address C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.

Father and mother Ongley are still alive, and love the blessed hope. Father's health is very poor. They are very thankful for the little help received from friends, hoping they will be rewarded in the coming kingdom. They have worn themselves out in the cause, and if the Lord does not come soon, must sleep a little while. Yours in hope,

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.

From Bro. R. W. Wilson.

BRO. GRANT:—About two weeks ago, a few of us commenced a prayer meeting in our school-house, and as a result I am thankful to God to be able to report that over twenty have found Christ, and are now rejoicing in his salvation. Glory to God for the power which sends home to the hearts of men his own eternal truth.

Our meetings continue to increase in interest every night, with marked evidences of divine power, in convicting and converting poor sinners. I have great liberty in talking of all the glorious truths of the word. Last night we had five ministers present. The house is crowded at every meeting. Two of these ministers have accepted the truth in the love of it, and the others dare not say anything against this doctrine of God, for they see and know some of its power.

Now I crave the fervent prayers of every child of God, who may see these words, for the full triumph of the truth in this effort.

R. W. WILSON.

Clinton, Iowa, Feb. 5th, 1870.

SR. BETSEY M. MURPHY writes:—"I would say to the Brn. and sisters scattered abroad, that I am still trying to be good and faithful. I am longing for that rest that belongs to the children of God. I am living in a place that requires me to pray without ceasing. O how much grace we need in these last days. Pray for me, for I want a home in the kingdom with all the dear children of God."

For the World's Crisis.

MAINE ADV. MISSION SOCIETY.

Those who have read the report of the Maine Advent Conference, lately held in Bangor, will remember that it was asked of all the brethren, sisters, children, and friends, to become members of the "Maine Advent Mission Society," by paying one dollar, more or less as they feel able, into its treasury. All the believers in Maine can, if they will, become members, and do a good work in gathering souls to Christ while time lasts. All who live in by-places, where they cannot have preaching, can help preach the word in other places. All who wish can send in their names and amounts to me, as I am treasurer, and I will record and report the same in due time.

We propose to raise $1000 this year, and you will all feel happier in helping to do it. Acting on this matter at conference, Bro. L. P. Fowles called on those in attendance, and collected and obtained names as follows:—I. C. W., $10; E. M. H., $1; J. D. French, $1; T. Smith, $1; D. W. Griffin, $1; A. J. Russell, $1; A. M. Russell, $1; S. Swett, $1; W. H. Worthing, $1; J. M. Jewett, $1; L. P. Fowles, $1; M. Sanders, $1; J. Tracy, $1; A. J. Field, $1; C. Woodman, 50c.; C. H. Stanley, 50c.; L. Roundy, 25c.; L. Patterson, 25c. Paid.

I. C. WELLCOME, Treasurer.

Yarmouth, Me.

☞ Cardinal Antonelli said recently, to a strange Bishop sojourning at Rome: "For us, for the Roman clergy, infallibility of the Pope has never been doubtful. We believe in it, and we always have."

(Continued from first page.)

hope deferred. But God's plan must be carried out, his prophecies cannot fail. And there is this special consolation, that a very short time will suffice for the whole series of grand transactions. I hope none will overlook this, and therefore feel either incredulous or discouraged. Remember, too, that Jesus said to the angel of the church in Thyatira, "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end," shall have power and honor. Let us therefore so do. Let us not be impatient. Events are coming like thunder clouds. They hasten as squadrons of cavalry. We live in a tremendous hour. Brethren will bear me witness, too, that I have contended for a translation of ready saints, before the fearful career of the leopard beast, the dark dynasty of antichrist. The "Lamb's wife hath made herself ready," even as Babylon is engulphed.

Rome! As a millstone thus shall she sink. Will her prelacy, congregated from all the earth, tragically perish with her? Shall Rome founder with her great Council, and the flame of her burning envelope the pomp of the papal Sanhedrim? Perhaps we may not know now. But one may read and think,—"Do ye indeed speak righteousness, O congregation? Do ye judge uprightly, O ye sons of men? Before your pots can feel the thorns, he shall take them away as with a whirlwind, both living and in his wrath." Again, "God standeth in the congregation of the mighty; he judgeth among the gods. They know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in darkness. I have said ye are gods, and all of you are children of the Most High. But ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes. Arise, O God, judge the earth: for thou shalt inherit all nations." Rome shall fall, though she hath written on her own medallion, "sedet super universum." "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her." Is it not then possible that among the spectators of that conflagration will be saints even then made immortal? The Lord knows.

C. COLEGROVE.

P. S. As related to "the beast that was, and is not, and yet is," we quote this very remarkable language of the English author Kinglake, who speaks of the empire of France as "an intermittent thing, which to-day is, and to-morrow is not." A writer at Rome insists that "there is actually a talk of a French Catholic church," as possibly auxiliary to the promoters of Cardinal Lucien to the papal succession, and adds that "France and Austria are said to have united in a strong representation to the Papal Government as to the necessity of reorganizing the Sacred College if it is still to be held a standing Council of the whole church and charged with the election of a Pope. They protest against the preponderance of Italians in it." C. C.

Married.

TOWNE—EMMONS. In Kennebunk, Feb. 22nd, 1870, by Eld. Wm. H. Mitchell, WILLIAM E. TOWNE, of Kennebunk, and ELIZA EMMONS, of Kennebunkport.

Obituaries.

TURNER. Fell asleep in Jesus, at West Randolph, Mass., Feb. 8th, 1870, Sister Ann L. E. Turner, wife of Bro. Samuel Turner, aged sixty-nine years and five months.

Sister T. experienced a hope in Christ about fifty-two years ago. In 1843 she received the blessed truth of the near coming of Christ, and has been "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing" ever since. By her life of deep piety and godly example, she won the confidence of all who knew her, and proved that she had been with Jesus. She died in the triumphs of faith. Funeral services were held in the Advent Christian Hall at West Abington, Mass., (where our sister was buried), and words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13.

ENOCH MORRILL.

[Adv. Chris Times, please copy.

MAYO. Died, in Hollis, Me., Jan. 16th, 1870, Sister Mary J. Mayo, aged twenty-eight years.

Sister M. was a christian, and esteemed by all who knew her, so that in her death her friends are comforted with the assurance that their separation will not be forever. She was brought to Biddeford, and her funeral attended by the writer on the 18th, at the Chapel, at which place we attended the funeral of her companion only a little more than two years ago. W. H. MITCHELL.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, Feb. 21. The Fleetwood lighthouse was literally carried away last night by a ship which was dashed against it during a gale.

Feb. 23. The new cable to connect the West India Islands will be laid in about two months.

Feb. 24. The Times also has an editorial on the subject of the recent decision by the Supreme Court of the United States in the matter of legal tenders, asserting that the decision has restored English confidence in American justice.

MADRID, Feb. 23. A peaceful demonstration was made to-day by work people out of employment. Thousands gathered in front of the office of the Ministry of Public Works and demanded work. A similar manifestation is announced for to-morrow.

LISBON, Feb. 23. A band of Miguelists at Magador were defeated and dispersed by the troops, who took twenty-seven prisoners.

ROME, Feb. 23. In the Ecumenical Council the discussion on the catechism has terminated. Seven of the fathers delivered speeches, and the motions of six others were printed and distributed.

The journals promulgate a Papal decree the purpose of which is to hasten the discussions of the Council. It provides that public sessions shall be held every ten days, and requires the fathers to present in writing their observations as to a competent commission.

PARIS, Feb. 24. There was a stormy scene in the Corps Legislatif to-day. M. Ollivier announced that the Government, in accordance with the liberal course it had marked out, proposed to abandon wholly the system of placing in the field and supporting the official candidates for the Chamber. This met with great opposition from the Deputies of the Right, who burst into loud cries of disapproval, and caused a scene of confusion which lasted many minutes. M. Ollivier, nevertheless, persisted in speaking, and declared that the Government would not separate itself from what had been well done during the past eighteen years, and it could not act contrary to its own antecedents—it at power disowning their principles and acts. M. Ollivier was constantly interrupted while making these explanations, and it was only when he ceased speaking that order was restored.

The Right immediately moved the order of the day, upholding the system of official candidatures, and a stormy discussion ensued.

The order of the day as moved by the Right was adopted—187 to 56.

Much agitation has been produced by the result, which is considered equivalent to a declaration of a want of confidence in the Ministry.

PARIS, Feb. 26. Three editors of the Marseillaise, who were arrested for the violation of the press law, have been liberated.

Letters from Spain state that a fierce struggle is going on between the revolutionary and church parties.

MADRID, Feb. 26. The struggle between the Church and revolutionary parties is becoming more intensified. The debate on the proposition to prosecute the Archbishop of Santiago for treason threatens to consume the entire session of the Convention.

☞ The English Bishops have initiated a movement for the revision of the Bible. At a recent convocation in London a resolution for the appointment of a committee on the subject was unanimously adopted.

DOMESTIC.

Providence, Feb. 24. The body of Miss Susie A. King, who died at Carolina Mills, Feb. 11, and retained so life-like an appearance that her burial has been deferred until this time, was this morning entombed in the family vault, all doubt of death having been removed.

Oxford, Miss., Feb. 26. A fearful accident occurred about four o'clock yesterday afternoon to the regular morning train on the Mississippi Central Railroad for New Orleans. The train, leaving Humboldt behind time, rapidly approached Buckner's Trestle (which is forty feet high and over a ravine). The engine crossed safely, but the remainder of the train ran off the track, crushing the trestle and completely wrecking the baggage and mail, express and three passenger cars.

LOSS OF THE MORNING STAR.—The Sabbath school children will be sorry to hear of the wreck of the missionary packet "Morning Star," in the South Pacific, intelligence of which is received to-day from the Sandwich Islands. This vessel was built by Mr. Paul Curtis, at East Boston, with funds contributed by the Sabbath school children connected with the congregations which sustain the American Board. She sailed from Boston Nov. 12, 1866, and arrived at Honolulu March 13, 1867, and since then she has been doing an excellent work among the islands of the Pacific. She was insured for $18,000.

The first captain of the Morning Star was Rev. H. Bingham, Jr., son of the Rev. Hiram Bingham, one of the earliest missionaries to the Sandwich Islands. But he resigned his position in order that he might devote himself more exclusively to the missionary work. The next captain was Mr. A. Tengstrom, and he is supposed to have been in charge of her at the time of the shipwreck. If the Board should deem it best to call on their youthful constituents for another vessel, the draft would, no doubt, be promptly honored.—Journal.

THE PERSECUTION OF CHRISTIANS IN JAPAN.—New York, Feb 26.—A Yokohama letter of January 23d states that the persecutions of Japanese, who have been converted to christianity at Nagasaki, having again commenced, the representatives of the foreign powers waited upon the Government of Yeddo and protested against the persecution. The united action of the Ministers brought together a corresponding body of officers of high rank for the Government, and the proceedings between them were of the most interesting character. The Japanese replied with spirit that the matter was one belonging to them alone, and that they were not responsible to foreign powers. They gave as reasons the fear that the proselyting of their people may lead to a spirit of discontent and finally undermine the time-honored institution of their Government, which is based upon the Mikadoship.

The Mikado is held by the Japanese to be a lineal descendant of the Goddess Tenshiodargin, the mother of their race. As such be is the head of the Shinto religion, and to acknowledge any other faith necessitates the recognition of another head spiritually higher than he. One of the foreign Ministers asked why Buddhists were allowed in Japan unmolested, and the Japanese replied that the Buddhists recognized the Mikado. The proselytes so far as known are Roman Catholic converts of the Jesuits, who still have great influence over the people. As the Pope is their head he necessarily comes in direct spiritual conflict with the Mikado, whose creatures complain that since the country has again been opened to foreign intercourse the Jesuits have commenced their labors among the people with renewed energy and alarming success, carrying their zeal so far as to hold secret meetings by night, and have taken possession of one of the ten sacred temples for their especial use. The Japanese deny that the persecution is one of any great severity, as they do not separate families, but furnish them with food and clothing, and merely distribute them among the various princes, who have control over them, and are charged with preventing them from forming any organization which might be dangerous to the welfare of the government.

YOUNG FRANCE AND THE EMPIRE.—From our cable news it will be seen that the young French conscripts have manifested some insubordination. This insubordination is suggestive. It seems to indicate a growing and, what is worse, a deep rooted opposition to the empire, and even to the house of Bonaparte. There are some people who will not hear of possible defeat to the empire. Napoleon is strong. Napoleon has the army at his back. Napoleon can do everything. Those people forget that the France of to-day is not the France of 1789, of 1830, or even of 1848. They forget that Paris is not France, in the ancient sense. Let us suppose that the army was really indifferent or callous, or worse. Let us suppose that the feeling of the country was cold. Let us further suppose that a conspiracy was organized which included the telegraph operators. With the late strike of the Union operators fresh in our memory, although it was less a success than probably it ought to have been, who can say that it is impossible for France to rise against Napoleon. Impossible is not the right word. If France is tired of Napoleon, France, depend upon it, can throw him off.—N. Y. Herald.

Passing Events.

☞ Another dreadful disaster has occurred in the Mississippi by which forty or fifty persons lost their lives.

☞ Lady librarians have charge of no less than fourteen public libraries of importance in this country.

☞ Several American ecclesiastics have been ordered to leave Rome.

☞ Jerome Bonaparte, a nephew of Napoleon I., is seriously ill at Baltimore.

☞ There were 328 bears killed in Maine last year.

☞ The first colored woman to enter upon the study of law in the United States is Miss Charlotte E. Ray, daughter of the Rev. Charles B. Ray. She has entered the Law Department of Howard University, Washington.

☞ Considerable damage has been done by the recent freshet in Maine. The water rose higher than has been known for a long time. The railroads in many places have suffered. The damage in the several towns is immense, and heavy losses are reported. The ice crop in some parts has been totally ruined by the sudden rising of the water, which, as it receded, carried the ice away.

☞ The Rev. H. W. Beecher is reported as having said he would rather have written the hymn beginning "Jesus, lover of my soul," than to have the fame of all the kings that ever sat upon a throne. The idea, however, is older than Beecher. The intrepid Gen. Wolfe, while sailing on the river St. Lawrence the night before the attack on Quebec, with a party of friends, remarked, after listening to a beautiful quotation from Gray's Elegy: "I would rather be the author of that poem than to take Quebec."

☞ Dr. Jones, of Tenn. Lunatic Asylum, and Miss Dix, who has devoted her life to the amelioration of the condition of the demented, assert that a large percentage of cases of insanity are produced by the extraordinary use of tobacco. The southern women often lay the foundation of insanity by their disgusting habit of snuff dipping.

☞ There have been several severe shocks of earthquake on the Island of Hawaii. The summit of the volcano Mauna Loa is shrouded in smoke, indicating that the fires in the crater are again active. The Board of Immigration have sent an agent to China to promote the immigration of the Chinese to the islands.

☞ A bright little girl of thirteen, at Germantown, Pa., while endeavoring to master a difficult lesson at her home a few evenings ago, was suddenly seized with brain fever and fell helpless upon the floor. On the following morning she died.

☞ Seven members of the Ecumenical Council have died since the gathering of that body in Rome.

☞ Miss Emma Janes, a graduate of the Wesleyan Female College, Delaware, Ohio, and late of Ogden School, Chicago, has taken the California State Educational Diploma, over fifty-one competitors, and has been elected Professor in the University of the Pacific.

☞ The suspicions of a revival of the attempts to re-found the Orleans dynasty in France are quite strong. One paper had the impudence to accuse Thiers and General Changarnier of conspiring together for Louis Phillippe's son. The Orleans party has been buying up newspapers right and left recently, and no one understands exactly what it means.

☞ Prince Bonaparte, who shot Noir, was to have met the young journalist at dinner two days after the unhappy event occurred which resulted in Noir's death. This fact has only recently come out.

☞ Subterranean galleries under all the crowded points of Paris streets are the latest improvement in the French capital.

☞ The Mikado of Japan has imported a piano, the first in the empire.

☞ The condition of Mr. Bright's health creates deep anxiety.

☞ The Abbe Friedrich, Theological Adviser to Cardinal Hohenlohe, who is suspected of furnishing correspondence concerning the Council to the Gazette of Augsburg, has received orders to quit the Papal Territory.

☞ Letters from Rome say an early adjournment of the Council is probable.

Notices.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow, and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the CORNER OF LOWELL AND CAUSEWAY STREETS, BOSTON, on Tuesday evening, April 5th, 1870, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week:

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready;" may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference.

In behalf of the church,

GEO. T. ADAMS, MILES GRANT, } Elders.

J. G. HAMBLIN, S. HOVEY, GEO. T. ADAMS, M. H. PIPER, GEO. E. FOSTER, GEO. W. WOOD, } Committee.

Mass. State Conference.

The annual State Conference will hold their meeting for the choice of officers at Boston, Lowell Street Chapel, Thursday, April 7th, at nine A. M. It is desirable that the churches be fully represented at this meeting. Let your delegates be chosen speedily; two for every twenty-five; one for a less number. If delegates cannot come, represent yourselves by letter. Do not fail this time. Come, brethren, to this meeting, alive to every good work, and decide whether the Conference shall live and be a blessing in exerting a holy influence in converting men and spreading the truth; or shall it cease to be?

S. W. THURBER, Pres.
P. S. BUTLER, Sect.

Notice.

I would say to the church at Chicopee Falls, that the interest in Dover, N. H., is such I dare not leave at present. There is an ear to hear, and the Spirit is moving many, calling home backsliders, and sinners to repentance. Will come as soon as it is duty. JOHN G. HOOK.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we shall commence a series of meetings at Fish Creek Landing, Oneida Co., N. Y., on Friday evening, March 4th, 1870, to continue as long as it may be duty. All who love our Lord Jesus Christ and the salvation of men, are invited to this meeting. Come one, come all. Come praying the Lord to bless to the saving of some. The friends at Camden, Glenmore, New London, and Higginsville, as many as can, are requested to come and help in the meeting.

B. P. STEVENS.
M. R. MILES.

P. S. Bro. Grant: The Lord is blessing in adding to our number such as shall be saved. Five joined with us yesterday. We expect others soon. Pray for us. B. P. S.

A Discussion.

A discussion between Elders McCullum, of Lake City, Fla., and P. A. Smith, of Jacksonville, Fla., will commence at seven o'clock P. M., March 8th, and continue four nights. The subject to be discussed is as follows: "Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man is unconscious from death until the resurrection, and then the righteous only receive immortality." P. A. SMITH, affirms; Elder MCCULLUM denies.

P. S. Peaches are in full bloom, and oranges are just opening their blossoms. It is beautiful weather. P. A. SMITH.

Minnesota Conference.

The next quarterly meeting of the Saint Paul District, will be held at High Prairie, Goodhue Co., Minn., commencing Saturday, March 26th, to continue over the Sabbath. A team will be in Northfield on Saturday morning, to meet any friends who may come on the cars.

EDWIN T. HIMES, Secretary.

Wanted,

A home for my little girl in some christian family, where she would receive good religious instruction, as well as have her temporal wants provided for. Am willing to pay liberally for a good place. Her age is two years and a half. Apply soon, stating price per week or month. C. H. SWEET.
Millville, Mass.

A New Book on Immortality.

Bro. Whitmore's new book on "Immortality" should be read by friends and foes. Judging from two hundred and forty pages sent me from the press, it will do its part in shedding light on this great theme, if widely circulated. Although some readers may not endorse every sentiment contained in the book, all will pronounce it a work of candor and deep research. It is well calculated to interest thinking men, and to set the thoughtless to thinking in the right direction. It is a good work to lend to those who will read. It will interest them if they are not already interested. $1.00 per copy. Published by J. V. Himes, Buchanan, Mich. WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

The dedication of the new meeting-house at Week's Mills, Me., will take place Friday, March 4th, at 10½ A. M. Meetings to continue over Sunday. For the brethren, JOHN R. HALL.

If possible I will be with Bro. Hall at the dedication. R. R. YORK.

Protracted Meeting.

The Lord will, there will be a protracted meeting at East Ackworth, to commence March 6th, and hold as long as duty requires. Let there be a rally of the children. Come to work. Preaching by Brn. E. Cotton, T. L. Hall, and others.

T. L. HALL.

Notice.

There will be a conference at South Livermore, Me., commencing Thursday evening, March 3d, and continue over the following Sabbath. Eld. Jesse Gay is expected to be present to preach the word. For the brethren, E. M. HAGGETT.

Conference.

The "Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference" will be held at Frankfort, Me., commencing Thursday, March 10th, 1870, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and worship with us. The church here love to "entertain strangers." Inquire for Josiah Woodman. F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

Bro. Benjamin Saulpaugh, of Goffstown Village, N. H., has been chosen as a steward of the church, to whom friends can send what they feel the Lord would have them, and he will see that it is judiciously used for Bro. Manning's support and comfort. J. G. SMITH.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

In consequence of my wife's sickness, I shall be unable to fill my appointments at present. Pray for her, that she may be made whole.

R. S. EMERY.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Mfoot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. Munger......evenings, March 3d and 4th and Sunday, March 6th.
Henry Pratt......Sunday, March 20th
A. F. Baker......Sunday, March 27th

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.
Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.
J. S. White......Sunday, March 6th
J. G. Smith......Sunday, March 13th
Geo. A. Streeter......Sunday, March 20th

EAST BOSTON.
Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.
Zina Ford......Sunday, March 6th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)
J. Couch......Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell......Sunday, March 13th
J. S. White......Sunday, March 20th

CHARLESTOWN.
Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.
S. W. Thurber....Sundays, March 6th, 13th and 20th

Wakefield, Mass......Sunday, March 6th
Fairhaven, Mass......Sunday, March 13th
C. GOODRICH.

North Springfield Vt...Sundays, March 6th and 13th
South Ashburnham, Mass...Tuesday eve., March 15th
Fitchburg, Mass.....Wednesday evening, March 16th
Wyoming, R. I., Tuesday evening, March 22d, and over the following Sabbath. Will Bro. E. Bellows labor with me at Wyoming? H. F. CARPENTER.

New Bedford, Mass.....Sundays, March 20th and 27th and Sunday, April 3d. J. G. SMITH.

Haverhill, Mass......Sabbath, March 13th
D. CARR, JR.

Wakefield, Mass.......Thursday evening, March 10th and over the following Sabbath.
Nottingham......Sabbath, March 27th
S. S. MOONEY.

Manchester, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
L. BOUTELL.

West Abington, Mass......Sunday, March 20th
ENOCH MORRILL.

Clinton, Mass......evening, March 9th
Worcester......evenings, March 10th and 11th
Charlton......Sunday, March 13th
Springfield. (on the hill)......Sunday, March 20th
Chicopee Falls......Sunday, March 27th
Z. FORD.

Webster, N. H., (Methodist meeting-house), Sabbath, March 6th.
Manchester, N. H......evening, March 15th
SIMEON ROBY.

Great Works......evening, March 23d
East Rochester, N. H......Sunday, March 27th
Dover, N. H......Sunday, April 3d
E. S. MOULTON.

West Rumney, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
West Plymouth......Sunday, March 13th and onward as the Lord directs.
Dorchester, (Town House......Sunday, March 20th
Piermont, (Clay meeting-house)...Sunday, March 27th
WM. H. SHAW.

Meredith Centre, N. H., (Dolliff school-house), Sunday, March 6th.
New Hampton, N. H....(Bro. Pike's), eve., March 8th
J. L. CHUTE.

Dover, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
JOHN G. HOOK.

West Plymouth, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
A. H. CLARK.

Barnstead, N. H. (Tuttle school-house) Sun., March 6th
J. H. F. VARNEY.
JOSEPH LIBBY.

West Ossipee......Sunday, March 6th
Dover, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
Melvin Village, N. H......Sunday, March 27th
T. W. PIPER.

Bradford, N. H., (Bush meeting-house), Sabbath, March 6th. F. NELSON.

Dorchester, N. H., (Town House)....Sab., March 6th
North Dorchester, (Union school-house), March 13th
Holderness, N. H., (True school-house), Sab., March 20th. JOHN H. EVANS.

London Ridge, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
Rawsonville, Vt......Sunday, March 20th
Plymouth, Vt......Sunday, March 27th
Z. T. WOOD.

Alton, N. H......evening, March 4th
Great Falls, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
South Berwick, Me., Great Works....eve., March 7th and Sunday, April 3d.
East Rochester, N. H., (for baptism), Sun., March 13th
D. M. LEAVITT.

North Sutton, N. H., (at Bro. I. Andrews'), evening, March 12th, and over Sunday. JULIA BUSWELL.
L. E. SAULPAUGH.

Hartford, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
Vernon, Vt......Sunday, March 13th
H. PRATT.

Square Pond, Ct......Sabbath, March 13th
P. S. BUTLER.

New York City, (Star of Hope Mission), evening, March 4th, and onward as Elder T. J. Cox may arrange. A. D. FLAGG.

Holden, Mass......March 13th and April 10th
Plymouth, Mass......Sunday, March 27th
South Reading, Mass......Sunday, April 17th
J. S. WHITE.

Stowe, Mass......Sunday, March 6th
Manchester, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
A. SIMPSON.

Salem, Mass......Sunday, March 13th
C. E. BARNES.

West Fairlee, Vt......Sundays, March 6th and 13th
Pomfret, Vt......evenings, March 16th and 17th
Bridgewater, Vt......Sundays, March 20th and 27th
Plymouth, Vt......evenings, March 29th, 30th and 31st
North Springfield, Vt......Sundays, April 3d and 10th
J. W. THOMAS.

Sandy Hill......Sunday, March 6th
Z. DUBOIS BAIRD.

Pleasant Valley, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Brimfield, Mass......Sabbath, March 6th
RUFUS BAKER.

Abington, Ct......Sabbath, March 13th
Rocky Brook, R. I......Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
C. H. SWEET.

Southington, Ct......Sabbath, March 6th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Newfield, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
S. WOODRUFF.

Waterbury, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Newfield, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
East Otis, Mass......Sunday, March 27th
Lovely Street, Ct......Sunday, April 3d
WM. J. RIPLEY.

New Bedford......March 1st to 12th
Anthony, R. I......March 11th to 14th
New Britain, Conn......March 16th to 25th
F. H. BURBANK.

Haverhill Center, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
Warren Summit, N. H......evening, March 10th
Meredith Village, N. H......evening, March 11th
Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)...Sunday, March 13th
Concord, N. H., (Bethel)......evening, March 15th
Manchester, N. H......evening, March 16th
Brentwood, N. H......evening, March 17th
East Kingston, N. H., (Town Hall), Sab., March 20th
Seabrook, N. H., (with Bro. Wm. C. Stewart), evenings, March 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th.
A. A. HOYT.

Bath, Me......Sunday, March 6th
H. S. MITCHELL.

Kennebunkport, Me....Sundays, March 13th and 20th
N. F. NASON.

West Abington, Mass......Sunday, March 6th
C. E. BARNES.

Holden, Me., (Clewley Chapel)......Sunday, March 6th
E. V. B. EDGERLY.

Groton, Vt......evening, March 3d through the week, and over the following Sabbath.
North Haverhill, N. H., (as the Brn. arrange), evening, March 9th.
Piermont, N. H., (Town House), evening, March 12th and over the Sabbath, March 13th.
Porter Village, Me....Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th
T. K. LANG, JR.

East Rochester, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
WM. C. STEWART.

Hopkinton, N. H., (Town Hall Building)...March 6th
Sutton, Mill Village......Sabbath, March 13th
C. W. SARGENT.

South Elliot, Me......Sunday, April 3d
Will Bro. Brown please meet me at Portsmouth, first train, on Friday evening, April 1st?
JULIA BUSWELL.

Ansonia, Conn., (Military Hall)...Sunday, March 6th
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

North Somers, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
Woodstock Valley, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Abington, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
A. MOREE.

Wolcottville, Ct......March 13th and April 10th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Seabrook, N. H......Sunday, March 6th
Rochester (Village)......Sunday, March 13th
Alton, (Stockbridge Corner)......Sunday, March 20th
South Elliot, Me...Sundays, March 27th and April 3d
J. PINKHAM.

Compton, (Bump school-house), evening, March 3d, and every evening through the week, and over the Sabbath, and longer if the Lord directs.
D. EASTMAN.

Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house)......Sunday, March 6th.
Alton Corner, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
Melvin Village, N. H......Sunday, March 20th
Farmington Village, N. H......Sunday, March 27th
WM. BODGE.

Factory Village, N. H., (as Bro. Kidder may arrange), Tuesday evening, March 1st, through the week, and over the Sunday following.
Lake Village, N. H......evening, March 9th
West Ossipee, N. H., Sunday, March 13th Subject in the afternoon (by request),—Baptism the great symbol of the resurrection. Any who wish can be baptized.
Madison, N. H., (North Division) evening, March 15th
Albany......evening, March 17th
Upper Bartlett......Sunday, March 20th
L. C. & M. MCKINSTRY.

South Berwick, Me. (Great Works), Sunday, March 6th
East Rochester, N. H......Sunday, March 20th
Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliot, Me.

Prospect, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
S. C. HANCOCK.

New York, (Cooper Institute)......March 27th and from thence to Philadelphia. F. H. BURBANK.

River Point, R. I......Sunday, March 13th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Lynn, Mass......Sunday, March 6th
Preach and break bread. M. BATCHELOR.

Morris, Ct......Sabbath, March 6th
G. L. WHITE.

New York......Sunday, March 6th
New Britain, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Scitico, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
Bristol, Ct......Sunday, March 27th
H. H. DICKINSON.

Putnam, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
I. B. POTTER.

Hartford, Ct., (Talcott & Post's Hall), Sun., March 6th
Woodbury, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
GEO. W. BROWN.

Scitico, Ct......Sunday, March 6th
Granby, Salmon Brook......Sunday, March 13th
S. M. & H. R. TATRO.

Bristol, R. I......Lord's day, March 6th
JOSEPH D. BROWN.

Warehouse Point, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Vernon, Vt......Sunday, March 20th
H. MUNGER.

WORCESTER, MASS.
A. Ross......Sunday, March 6th
M. Batchelor......Sunday, March 13th
H. F. Carpenter......Sunday, March 20th

LAWRENCE, MASS.
A. Ross......Sundays, March 13th and 20th
T. W. Piper......Sundays, April 3d and 10th
M. Batchelder......Sunday, April 24th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.
P. S. Butler......Sabbaths, March 6th, 20th, and 27th

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., (Bethel Church.)
W. N. Pile......Sunday, March 6th

STONEHAM, MASS.
S. S. Brewer......Sunday, March 6th

EXETER, N. H.
J. Harvey......Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 13th
T. W. Piper......Sunday, March 20th
A. Ross......Sunday, March 27th

DOVER, N. H.
E. S. Moulton......Sunday, March 6th
Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)
C. H. Fletcher......Sabbath, March 6th
J. Couch......Sabbath, March 13th
A. Simpson......Sunday, March 20th
Enoch Morrill......Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)
E. S. Moulton......Friday evening, March 4th
Allen Damon......Sabbath, March 6th

SEABROOK, N. H.
Joseph Pinkham......Sunday, March 6th
E. S. Moulton......Sunday, March 20th

HAMPTON, N. H.
J. G. Smith......Sabbath, March 6th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.
E. S. Moulton......Sundays, March 6th and 13th

ELLIOT, ME.
L. E. Saulpaugh......Sunday, March 6th
Wm. C. Stewart......Sunday, March 13th
Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 20th

BIDDEFORD, ME.
W. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 6th

BONNY EAGLE, ME.
J. T. Jordan......Sunday, March 6th
T. P. S. Hampson......Sunday, March 13th

DANIELSONVILLE, CT.
C. H. Sweet......Sabbath, March 6th
A. Bellows......Sabbath, March 13th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)
G. L. Teeple......Sabbaths, March 6th, 13th and 20th
B. Hitchcock......Sabbath, March 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
Wm. Stewart......Sunday, March 6th
W. N. Pile......Sunday, March 13th

MINNESOTA.
Winona......Sabbath, March 6th
Utica......March 10th and 13th
St. Charles......March 14th and 15th
West St. Paul......March 20th
Rockford......March 23d and 27th
Forest City......April 1st and 3d
Castle Rock......April 8th and 10th
Prescott, Wis......April 17th
O. R. FASSETT.

Melvin, S. H., two miles south-east of Townville, Crawford Co., Saturday evening, and Sunday, at 10½ A. M., March 12th and 13th.
Bromley, S. H., two miles south of Hyde town, 2½ P. M.
Hall, S. H., four miles east of Townville, March 20th, 11 A. M.
Rootville, (where I live), evening March 20th.
Clark, S. H., two miles south-east of Spartansburg, evening, March 25th.
Abbys, S. H., four miles south of Columbus, Warren Co., Pa., evening, March 26th, and over Sunday.
Rootville, Break Bread......first Sunday in the month
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

ROCHESTER, N. H.
There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION, 14 LAURENS STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M.
Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M.
Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M.
[Fri]day, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M.
Come one, come all. A. K. SMITH, Principal.

PORTLAND, ME.
Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and [Tuesd]ay and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

NEW YORK CITY.
The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 405 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Wyoming, R. I......1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I......2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I......3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I......4th Sabbath in each month
A. DURFEE.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 150 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 51 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c., &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 400 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.

A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the [illegible] and clear statement of the [illegible] doctrine of the Millennium. 165 pages. 35 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Business.

Letters Received.

R. S. Dennison, B P Manning, E S Moulton, G W Trull, S F Hall, W A Fess, A C Newell, J G Hook, I C Wellcome, T H Hall, S. Ayers, E Cotton, J McQueen, J Porter, D F Newton, Wm Sheldon, W Warrall, H Hall, J T Ongley, C H Sweet, N F Stearns, M E Chase, E Lanning, J S White, J B Cook, J O Prescott, D D Reed, W H Mitchell, A L Adams, M L Page, K Morrill, A N Seymour, H Munger, H H Weld, C E Gierlow.

Books and Tracts Sent.

By Mail—H Holden, C M Carpron, T H Rupel, R M Sargent, D W Brownson, E A Prescott, T F Funk & Bro., H Austin, T Greenstreet, N M Maples, E Tanning, L J Jennes, J Flory, C C Ramsey, S L Hubbard, M M Post, L W Lord, J Taylor, J Wilbur, H A Degrasse, E L Jenkins, A Hurlburt, D Comstock, W W Cate, W C Nelson, Susie F Hall, P Kelley, Mrs D W Kimball, O Hibbard, D Rowell, S Roberts, L M Eccleston, G A Brenner, A A Haven, Mrs C Van Vleck, C Parker, D Thompson, W. H. Gewitz, J. R. Andrus, J Meitt, Mrs W P Kilbourn, J. Carney, J. W. Felwell, C Wilder, D D Reed, N H Jones, L Roundsville, E D Krutfield, J L Locke, J Benon, H C Card, [illegible] Koots, W Hall, A N Seymour, C L Tower, A Rice, P A Smit, J T Atwood, C Marsh, O Stannard, A J Philbrick, G Lichtenthaler, S Tenney, Mrs M Martin, J Whitman, G A Covell, F. Zanseler, Mary Stillman, E Cliff, M Cliff, E J Jenkins, H Goodrich, Mrs J Loveland, H Walling, W F Church, T B Lawrence.

By Express—J L Tatro, M. Foster, A Verder, E S Gage, Geo Tilley, J G Baker, S B Daggett, S Ayers.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9[…] per dozen; $75.00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 1[…] cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

375 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.0[0] per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.[00]; $3.50 per one hundred copies

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home......16 pp.
2. Life Insurance......16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!......8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?......8 pp.
5. About God (for children)......4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing......4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ......4 pp.
8. Now......4 pp.

The above practical tracts, envelope size, will be sent, postpaid:

One set (54 pp.)......6c.
1300 pp......$1.00
1800 pp., (by express, not prepaid)......$1.00

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

NEW MUSIC.

BY GEO. E. LEE.

"The General Roll," and "Jesus Comes Again."
"Resting By-and-by."
"The Lord's Supper" and "The Pilgrim's Hope."
"The Glorious Prospect," and "Shall we be There?"
"The Voice of my Savior," and "The Day of Peace."
"Blessed Tidings."
"The Prospect."
"Calvary."
"Who'll stand up for Jesus?"
"All to Christ I owe."
"My Jesus, I love thee."

SONGS FOR THE CAMP-GROUND.—A sheet containing five pieces of music, and twelve choice hymns, viz: "The Resurrection Hymn," "Over There," "Awake! Awake!" "The Better Day," "Walk through the Valley," "Battling for the Lord!" "I will sing for Jesus," "Your Mission," "The Heavenly Meeting," "Jesus our Salvation," "The Fountain of Mercy," and "Singing for Jesus."

"Must be a Lover of the Lord," and "Gathered in the Morning."

"The Resurrection Hymn," and "Walk through the Valley."

"'Tis the very same Jesus," and "New Year's Chime."

"The Bleeding Lamb," and "Jesus my Shelter."

"Awake! Awake!" and "The Better Day."

"Over There," and "Hallelujah."

Price of the above sheets singly, 5 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per 100. Postage 2 cts. for twelve copies. For sale at the Crisis office. AG'T.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Brethren wishing to correspond with the church at Wakefield, Mass., will please address G. R. TYZZER, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Savoy, which is represented in the Mass. State Conf., will please correspond with Daniel Miller or A. E. Bliss. Those sending appointments, are requested to state which church.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ BRO. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for Loudon Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Goshen, N. H., will please correspond with O. F. CAIN, before sending appointments.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. R. Cooper, No. 4 Hickory Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in South Berwick (Great Works), Me., will please correspond with Bro. Harrison Dow, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Vernon, Vt., will please correspond with J. C. Allen.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 [illegible] Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany.

☞ Brethren wishing to communicate with the church in Pleasant Valley, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Reuel O. White, New Hartford, Conn.

☞ Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., are held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. Whitehead, West Meriden, Conn., Box 4.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All brethren wishing to preach in Wrightville, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. D. A. Grant, Torrington, Ct.

☞ All brethren wishing to preach in Newfield, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Wm. Ripley, Pleasant Valley, Ct.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with J. Chadwell.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with Joseph Coultis.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, postpaid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $2.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (12mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.35; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 60 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlinear Word-for-word Translation, etc., etc. Cloth, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Leather back, $5.00; by mail, $5.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shephard. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.36c; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERY BODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 6c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 15c. postage 2 cts., or by mail 17 cts.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 234. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Bally. 23pp. Single 6c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00: by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

"THE PENALTY OF SIN." By O. R. Fassett. By mail, single copy, 5c; dozen.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL and the Scriptural Millennium," by I. C. Wellcome and Clarkson Goud Price 25c; postage 2c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By I. C. Wellcome. pp 8[?]. Price by mail, 25c.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

THE MILLENNIUM. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome 60 pp. Single copy 15c.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c., postpaid.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

OUR LOSS IN ADAM OUR GAIN IN CHRIST A valuable tract on the Atonement. By H. F. Carpenter. 5c. single copy, by mail; 40c. per dozen.

THE BIBLE, OR TRADITION—Which shall we Believe?" An excellent tract. By S. L. Manley. 3c. single copy by mail; 20c. per dozen.

"ONE MORE INVITATION." A tract of four pages By mail, 35c. per 100 copies.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00. paper, 60c.

VOICE OF THE THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor Cloth, $1.00.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsay. Cloth, $1.00.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man, with various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church; By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times to Daniel and John. On Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THAT MAN OF SIN. By Eld. O. R. Fassett. To which is added "The Only Hope." Price, 5c. single. postage 2c. 50c. per dozen; postage 6c.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 400 pp. $1.25.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, Retribution, and Will all Men be Saved? By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1.00; paper 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. Paper, 20c.; by mail, 22c. Cloth, 40c; by mail, 50c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 6c; by mail, 7c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof texts.) 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 2c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 2c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.00; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $3.50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.25; postage 24 cts.

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

"ADVENTIBLE."

We have a supply of this valuable [illegible]
Price in cloth......75 cts., postage [illegible]
Flexible covers......60 cts., postage [illegible]
Paper covers......[illegible] cts., postage [illegible]
In paper covers by the dozen, by [illegible]

Evening Hours.

BY

E. P. Woodward.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

THE POWER OF GOD.

Men talk, lightly sometimes, of the omnipotence of God, just as they speak of the infinity of space, and the limitless Past of eternity, with scarce a thought of their utter weakness and inability to comprehend these themes, even if God's wisdom were taxed to make them plain to the human mind. And it is only by treading far out toward the limits of human knowledge, and then considering the impassable gulf which shall lie between what we can learn, and the complete comprehension of the Great Unknown, that we can get a faint, feeble idea of the majesty and power of Him whose "judgments are unsearchable, and his ways past finding out."

The power of God, more than any other one of his attributes, is constantly visible to man. However much men have disliked to "retain God in their knowledge," the fact of an overruling power, unseen and irresistible, thwarting their most cherished purposes, and overturning their fairest hopes, they have never been able to deny. And in their mad denial of a superintending Providence, they have only transferred their destiny from the hands of an intelligent Creator, to the pitiless grasp of blind, inexorable Fate, the ceaseless workings of whose unthinking laws end only in the darkness and silence of eternal nothingness.

The mighty and startling manifestations of power in nature, have hitherto furnished the symbols by which finite man has striven to comprehend the infinite strength of Jehovah. The resistless might of the tempest and the whirlwind, the blasting power of heaven's thunder-bolts, and the mortal terror of the earthquake's shock, shadowed forth the greater power of Him who used these agencies as the servants of his will. And in these days of astronomical research, the mighty forces which swing the heavenly bodies through space with such fearful velocity and wonderful accuracy, have been looked upon as the most perfect manifestation of divine power. It has remained for more modern science to discover the existence and measure the power of forces, beside which the action of these other forces is but as child's play. Silent and unseen in their workings, but no less potent and beneficial in their results. All around us, above and below, even in our own bodies, they are at work, binding the invisible atoms of matter into the visible forms of nature, with a grasp utterly and forever beyond all power of imagination to conceive. It was no idle thought of him who said that the existence of form in the universe was proof of an overruling God; and that, were he to sever for one instant his connection with the world of matter, the universe would vanish like a dream. Whatever may be the nature of the ultimate atoms of matter, we know that, taken alone, they are invisible to all human perception, and only by the secret forces by which they are aggregated in masses, have we any knowledge even of their existence. And, were these forces suddenly withdrawn, the basis of all perception would be destroyed.

In the following statements taken from an article in the Christian Standard, we may get something of an idea of this atomic attraction, which, by the way, is altogether a different power from that which forms masses of matter. Chemical, or atomic attraction, acts on atoms of different substances, combining one or more atoms of two or more different elements into one atom, of a nature different from any of the elements composing it. Attraction of cohesion,—the force which holds matter in masses,—simply acts between these composite atoms. Physical force may destroy the power of cohesion, but cannot separate the particles into their original elements. Common salt ground to an impalpable powder, is salt still, and we have not destroyed one particle of the power which keeps the original elements in that relation to themselves and to other elements, by which they form salt. And in all the changes through which salt passes in the ordinary operations of nature and art, this power resists all outside pressure, and the salt remains salt through the whole.

The system of weights and measures here used, is the metric, originated in France, founded on the decimal system of notation, and gradually being adopted by other nations. The meter is the unit of length, and equals 3.28 feet. The kilogramme equals 2.20 pounds. The thermometer used to measure heat is the Centigrade, so called from the fact that there are 100 degrees between the freezing and boiling points. The heat of water at freezing point is called Zero, or 0, instead of 32 in the common thermometer; and at boiling point, it is 100 instead of 212. So that one degree of heat is the one-hundredth part of the heat necessary to raise water from the freezing to the boiling point. In estimating the volume of heat in these calculations, as distinguished from the intensity, we must fix on some amount which will always produce a certain result. This unit of heat, as it is called, is that amount of heat necessary to heat one kilogramme (kgr.) of pure water, one degree Centigrade. This unit of heat is called a Calorie, and is, of course, a purely arbitrary distinction, as is also the unit of power. A unit of power is called a Dynamo, and equals the power necessary to raise one kgr. (of weight) through the space of one meter. One Calorie is found to perform the work of 425 Dynamos. That is, the heat which will raise the temperature of one kgr. of water one degree Centigrade, will, by the means through which heat develops power, exhibit a force 425 times as great as the force necessary to raise one kgr. through the space of one meter.

Water is composed of two gases, which, taken separately, are invisible, but when combined in proper proportions by chemical attraction, form a tangible substance. These gases are Oxygen and Hydrogen, which no human power has yet been able to solidify, even under the most powerful pressure. But what man cannot do, nature does silently and irresistibly.

If we take 2 kgr. of hydrogen and combine it with 16 kgr. of oxygen—which may be done by passing a galvanic current through a mixture of these gases—we get 18 kgr. (about forty lbs.) of water, with an evolution of 69,000 Calorie—the heat developed in this chemical change, thus measuring the power necessary to produce it.

One Calorie being equal to 425 Dynamos, it follows that in forming this quantity of water, a force of 29,000,000 Dynamos has been exerted, a force sufficient to raise 29,000,000 kgr. (31,900 tuns) through a distance of one meter, or 3.28 feet. It can in like manner be shown that the forces which hold together the Chlorine and Sodium in 58 kgr. of common salt equal 40,000,000 Dynamos, a force sufficient to raise 44,000 tuns through a space of 3.28 feet.

A few practical examples will perhaps make this atomic attraction better understood. An atom of Nitre is composed of one atom of Potassium, three of Oxygen and one of Nitrogen. These three Oxygen atoms are highly condensed, by the atomic attraction of Potassium and Nitrogen; in fact, they are solidified. In an air-gun we have what is called an air-chamber, in which air is highly compressed. The sudden liberation of this air and its coming in contact with the bullet, drives it from the barrel. The nitre of gunpowder acts just like this air-chamber. In the presence of Sulphur and Carbon, a spark of fire is sufficient to decompose the Nitre, the condensed Oxygen is set free, and its sudden expansion gives to gunpowder its explosive power. In place of Nitre we might take Potassium Chlorate, which is the same as Nitre in composition, with the exception that Chlorine has replaced Nitrogen. A gunpowder formed of this subtance is far more violent in its action than when Nitre is used, and for this very reason it cannot be brought into general use. It explodes with such quickness that the air contained in the barrel of the gun does not have time to escape before the gun bursts. If Chlorine and Nitrogen be combined, a compound is formed, called Chlorine Nitride. This liquid explodes with the most destructive violence, even on being touched. Gunpowder ignited upon a metal plate in open air, simply puffs off into the air. A few drops of Chlorine Nitride placed upon a metal plate, explodes with such violence that the air has not time to give away before it, and a hole is blown through the plate.

When we look at these facts, knowing that this same principle of attraction between the primal elements of matter is what gives form and consistency to everything we behold, we do well to walk humbly before the Lord. We stand by the ocean's side, listen to the ceaseless murmur of the waves, and think of the majesty of its strength; but we fail to discern the invisible grasp of the Almighty's hand on the atoms that compose those sparkling drops, holding in perfect, harmless quiet those pent-up forces, which, were that restraining power withdrawn, would blow this world to atoms, and bring back the chaos from which it sprung.

And so of everything we eat, and drink, and touch, and see. Everything in earth is, in fact, a slumbering volcano, which none but the Almighty can restrain from making this fair world the abode of ruin and death. But we fear not this mighty God, for we learn in the revelation he has given of himself, that there is another attribute of his divine perfection, which so far outshines and eclipses his surpassing power and his boundless wisdom, —constituting the source of his every action, the moving purpose of his power, and the inspiration of his wisdom,—that, when he would give in one sentence an epitome of his own character, his power is forgotten, and his wisdom ignored, and we read the simple, mighty truth, "God is love."

Accurate Criticism.

The value of criticism, especially in the study of the Bible, is very great. And the information and light which may be obtained from the labors of Bible critics, is not to be lightly esteemed. Like grain in the chaff, the seeds of truth are more or less surrounded by those incidents and circumstances which, like the chaff on the grain,—designed not to be used as grain, nor to be mistaken for it, nor to hide or injure it, but to protect from harm, and preserve till required for use,—must be stripped off, and separated from the truth itself, before the benefit and nourishment contained there can be appropriated, and do its appointed work.

But it would sometimes seem that inaccuracy in criticism is worse than no criticism at all. We know what feelings are excited in our minds when the enemies of the Bible use arguments which are unfair and unsound. And so long as Christians utterly and forever refuse to use any such means in argument, or to allow an unjust criticism to stand in their presence for one moment, even if it adds apparent strength to the views which they hold, so long will no Infidel seek to cover the guilt of his own dishonesty with the cloak of the Christian's wrong.

But, owing to the fact that the English Bible is only a translation, liable to be defective in the rendering of words, and the grouping and connection of ideas, both from the prejudice and ignorance of the translators, and the inadequacy of our language to express all the finer shades of meaning which the numerous inflections and particles of the Greek were designed to give, men are very apt to make criticisms based on the commonly accepted meanings of English words, which, when judged by the words of the original, may be of no force, and even positively injurious to the cause of truth. More than once, within the last month, have I made a criticism on some word or sentence in the New Testament, basing it on the ideas which had come to me through our translation, and, very fortunately, thinking to look at the original, the matter ended in a pile of ashes on the hearth.

A criticism has been made, by those who hold to the punishment of the wicked between death and the resurrection, on the passage in Jude, which speaks of Sodom and Gomorrah as being "set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." It is said that the word "suffering," from its being in the present tense, was designed to convey the idea that the Sodomites are now suffering the torment of fire for their iniquities.

It might easily be shown that, though, for all that is said in this verse to the contrary, they may be now enduring such a punishment, yet, so for as proof of such a doctrine is concerned, these words are utterly worthless, and hence should not be quoted in this connection. But a criticism has been made to offset this one, which, from the fact that the basis is wrong, is worse than worthless, and can only produce the opposite of its intended effect, whenever its inaccuracy is seen.

The criticism is this. The words "giving" and "going," in the first part of the verse, although in the present tense, most evidently refer to past events; consequently, the present tense of the word "suffering" must also refer to a past suffering;—thus making "having suffered" a better translation than the present one. A very good criticism if the original will bear it out.

By looking at the Greek, we find something which the English does not show. The words "giving themselves over to fornication" (one word in the original,) and "going," are not translated from the present tense of verbs, but from the aorist. This is invariably used to denote past events. And Macknight's translation appears to be more literal than the common version: "Which had habitually committed whoredom, and gone after other flesh," though his substitution of "having undergone" for "suffering," is decidedly questionable. Hence, we see that all criticisms upon this verse based on the analogy of tenses as found in the English, is worse than folly. If the doctrine of future endless torment must be disproved by such arguments as this, the less of them the better. "Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, having given themselves over to fornication, and gone after other flesh, are set forth"—spread out, laid out for public inspection—"for an example,"—deigma, a spectacle, an exhibition, the "example" of these cities held up before the world, exhibited in panoramic view, being a living, perpetual portrayal of their punishment; and in this picture, here pointed out by Jude, we see them—"suffering the vengeance of eternal fire."

For the World's Crisis.

MEMORIAL LINES.

The wind blows cold from off the hills,
The sun casts down its feeble rays;
Now memory wakes the cares and ills,
Scenes of my long since boyhood days;
Back through the lapse of by-gone years,
Alas! what wreck and ruin lies;
It casts a gloom, and starts the tears
That gushing run down from mine eyes.

Loved of my early days all gone,
Deep in their narrow graves they sleep;
There they've been gathered one by one,
And sad mementoes make me weep.
Their names a dear familiar sound,
That fell so sweetly on my ear,
Their forms lie in the damp cold ground,
As I look there it starts the tear.

The little village that stood near—
Dear spot, my boyhood's early home;
When wandering there, I could but sigh
Through tears, a stranger and alone.
The market, shop, the church, the stores,
The school-house, pump, and old oak tree,
And names on signs above the doors,
All gone! and none seemed left but me.

Oh, fading earth! an unseen foe
By sin rose on Time's turbid waves,
His power hath filled the earth with woe,
And made of it a place of graves.
Mementoes of the past, farewell!
Your sombre traces make me sad,
I will no longer on them dwell,—
Faith lifts the vail and says be glad;

For earth all fair shall yet arise,
The home of Zion's beauteous King,
With angel myriads from the skies,
The immortal saints for joy shall sing.
Speed! lingering moments, bring the day;
Quick leave old time and death behind,
Then memories sad shall pass away,
And never come again to mind.

S. S. Brewer.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ARAMAIC, SADDUCEEAN, AND PHARISAIC FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY O. R. FASSETT.

It is very apparent on the reading of the New Testament Scriptures, that the Apostolic faith, doctrine, and hope, centred in "Jesus and the resurrection." So important did the apostles regard the doctrine of the resurrection, that, in ordaining one to fill the vacancy made by the apostasy of Judas, they made choice of one by "lot," who had "accompanied with them all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among them, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from them," that he might be "a witness" with them "of his resurrection." Acts 1: 15–22.

The apostles constantly affirmed everywhere and in all their preaching: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." Acts 2: 32. It is clear, also, that our Lord endeavored to convince the apostles of the fact of his actual resurrection in every possible and conceivable way; angels declared it. Matt. 28: 1–8; Mark 16: 1–8; Luke 24. He himself affirmed it, and demanded their conviction and faith in it, giving them the indubitable evidence to their senses: "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." Luke 24: 39.

Thomas, the most unbelieving of all the apostles, is summoned to such a critical test, that his skeptical doubts are dissipated, and in astonishment and wonder at the reality he declares him unequivocally his Lord and Redeemer; "My Lord and my God." He said to Thomas, "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." On his confession of faith, the Lord "Jesus saith unto Thomas, Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."—John 20: 24–29. May this blessing come upon us, that the apostle's words may be our happy experience: "Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." 1 Pet. 1: 8.

The unbelieving and wavering disciples at the first were "upbraided" for "their unbelief and hardness of heart" (Mark 16: 11, 14; Luke 24: 25–27, 46), until they became confirmed in the faith, as "he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God."—Acts 1: 3.

And it is certain that the Lord never sent an apostle, or a church, to evangelize the world, who did not believe in the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead. His great commission was given to those "that believe:" "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark 16: 14–17. Nor does Jesus promise salvation to any but those who believe in his death, burial, and resurrection. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—v. 16. Baptism is the outward symbol of the inward faith required. Rom. 6: 3–5; 1 Cor. 15: 29; 12: 34. The same must be confessed by word of mouth. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."—Rom. 10: 9. The resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ forms the basis and ground of hope for the resurrection to an immortal and endless life of his people; therefore the apostles "taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." Acts 4: 2.

Their usual argument is stated by St. Paul in 1 Cor. 15, thus: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I have preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures [thus he has made a fit atonement, by the shedding of his blood, for the remission of sins]; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." Observe, the crucified Christ "was buried"; and he that was buried "rose again." His resurrection, therefore, did not occur simultaneously with his death, as advocated by many, but "the third day" afterward. And the open sepulchre in Jerusalem, in which he lay while he was buried, attests the character of his resurrection; it was that of his person.

Then the apostle proceeds to enumerate the "witnesses" of his resurrection, among whom he includes himself (vers. 5–10), assuring us that "so we preach," and true christians "believe." v. 11. And no one can doubt how Paul preached, when Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, that it was a question of their own superstition, and of one Jesus which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.—Acts 25: 19. And when we, too, learn his charge to Timothy—"Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead, according to my gospel."—2 Tim. 2: 8.

"Now," says the apostle, "if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?"—v. 12. It seems that some among the Corinthian church who had been "baptized," thus prefiguring their faith in the resurrection from the dead (v. 29), had departed from the faith, and had "sinned," and "had not the knowledge of God." v. 34. He therefore reasons with them: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—vers. 12–18.

Thus does the apostle predicate the whole efficacy of the christian's faith, and the whole salvation of men from sin, death, and the grave, upon the resurrection of Christ from the dead; and then finally affirms that this is no uncertain hope. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."—v. 20.

As the resurrection of Christ was "the third day" after his burial, and from the sepulchre in person, so he declares the resurrection of his saints to be, not at death, by the spirit's elimination, but "afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (v. 23); and "at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible" (vers. 52–57); the epoch of which is still future. Rev. 11: 14–18.

Though the Old Testament Scriptures taught "the resurrection from the dead" by their Redeemer and Messiah as "the hope of Israel" (Ezek. 37), yet when Christ appeared, faith in a future life by a resurrection had almost died out in the Jewish church, and the heathen world had nearly abandoned all hope of any future existence to man. The problem, "If a man die, shall he live again?" (Job 14: 14) had almost come to be decided in the negative by the human family. Christ by his coming, and resurrection to an immortal life, revived the hope of the fainting church, and by commissioning his apostles to "go into all the world, and preach the glad tidings" together with "repentance and remission of sins," gave hope to a despairing and dying world by that gospel which brings "life and immortality to light."

The enlightened heathen world began with the doctrine of the immortality of both the body and soul. They regarded the soul or spirit of man as immortal, and that if they could preserve the body from decay and dissolution, the roaming spirit, they supposed, might return and reanimate it in due time. Hence they mummied their dead.

"The Egyptians believed in the immortality of the soul and body. This led them to the custom of mummying the dead, and the excavation of most costly sepulchres, adorned and beautified in every manner. They expected to return to their original bodies at some future time, and desired to find them not only perfect, but in such habitations as they might not be ashamed of. They expected to resume their bodies and inhabit the Nile valley. That this was their theology, I think cannot be questioned."—Rev. Mr. Ellis.

In process of time, the reanimation of the body was abandoned as a hope, and the immortality of the soul endeavored to be established and confirmed by human reason without divine revelation; but all such efforts only involved the subject in still greater mysteries and difficulties, until the doctrine of an immortal entity in man surviving death and the dissolution of the body began to be questioned, and finally rejected by the enlightened heathen. Even the masters of this philosophy expressed their fears and uncertainty as to its truthfulness. Says Socrates:—"We should consider this, that if the soul is immortal, it requires our care for all time; and the danger would appear dreadful if we should neglect it. A suitable destiny hurls into tartarus the unjust, lawless, murderers, and those guilty of great crimes and sacrilege, whence they never came forth. Those who can be cured are subjected to needful punishments. Those who have lived in eminently holy life are set free from hades and dwell in the upper parts of the earth. And among these, they who have sufficiently purified themselves by philosophy shall live without bodies, throughout all future time, and shall arise at habitations yet more beautiful than these. To affirm positively that these things are exactly as I have described them, does not become a man of sense; it is most fitting to be believed, and worthy the hazard for one who trusts in the reality; for the hazard is noble, and it is right to allure ourselves with such things, as with enchantments. Though I should be mistaken, I gain at least thus much, that the expectation makes me less uneasy while I live, and my error will die with me."

Plato sometimes denied and sometimes affirmed the doctrine of the soul's immortality, showing his uncertain faith in it; and Archbishop Whately concludes that it was with him a mere "matter of speculation."

Cicero said: "I have read Plato's book [the Phædo] over and over again; but I know not why it is so. So long as I am reading it, I agree with it; but no sooner is the book out of my hands, than I begin to doubt whether man is immortal." This hope he subsequently abandoned altogether, and on the death of a beloved daughter mourned as those who have no hope concerning their dead. Julius Cæsar declared, "Death is the end of every thing"; and he regarded the doctrine of the soul's immortality a "silly fable." Seneca says: "I gave myself up to the splendid illusion." But after a time he writes:—

"Chaos and hungry time devours us all;
Inevitable death the body kills,—
Nor spares the soul."

We see from these brief extracts the truthfulness of Gibbon's statements:

"A doctrine thus removed beyond the senses and the experiences of mankind, might serve to amuse the leisure of a philosophical mind; or in the silence of solitude, it might sometimes impart a ray of comfort to desponding virtue; but the faint impression which had been received in the schools, was soon obliterated by the commerce and business of active life. We are sufficiently acquainted with the eminent persons who flourished in the age of Cicero, and of the Cæsars, with their actions, their characters, and their motives, to be assured that their conduct in this life was never regulated by any serious conviction of the rewards or punishments of a future state. At the bar, and in the senate of Rome, the ablest orators were not apprehensive of giving offence to their hearers, by exposing that doctrine as an idle and extravagant opinion which was rejected with contempt by every man of a liberal education and understanding." Vol. 1, p. 528.

Thus the enlightened heathen world, to say nothing of the more unenlightened, had, at the time of the advent of Christ, abandoned all hope as to any future existence of man; and over their dead inscribed the word expressive of their sad and lamentable fate, as believed by them,—"sepulchrum":—that is, "eternal home."

THE SECRET.

"I noticed," said Franklin, "a mechanic, among a number of others, at work on a house erecting but a little way from my office, who always appeared to be in a merry humor, who had a kind word and a cheery smile for every one he met. Let the day be ever so cold, gloomy, or sunless, a happy smile danced like a sunbeam on his cheerful countenance. Meeting him one morning, I asked him to tell me the secret of his constant and happy flow of spirits. 'No secret, doctor,' he replied. 'I have got one of the best wives, and when I go to work she always has a kind word of encouragement for me, and when I go home she meets me with a smile and a kiss; and then tea is sure to be ready, and she has done so many little things through the day to please me, that I cannot find it in my heart to speak an unkind word to anybody.'"

For the World's Crisis.

OUR POSSESSIONS.

Though on my parent's coffined forms
The cold sods sad do press,
Alone to breast life's raging storms,
I am not fatherless;
For He who notes the sparrow's fall,
His children ne'er forgets;
Our very hairs are numbered all,
Each tear our eyelid wets.

Though now no land or golden hoard,
I've more my soul to bless;
In Jesus Christ, my blessed Lord,
All things do I possess.
What though a pilgrim here I roam,
All weary though I be?
I'm nearing fast my heavenly home
He has prepared for me.

Though fortune's flatt'ring smiles are gone,
Sweet hope the soul illumes;
Faith girds her bridal garments on,
For lo! our Bridegroom comes.

Anna E. McEllister.

Moorestown, Burlington Co., N. J.

Grandeur of the Bible.—If you have ever tried it you must have been struck with the few solid thoughts, the few suggestive ideas which survive the perusal of the most brilliant of human books. Few of them can stand three readings, and of the memorabilia which you had marked in your first reading, on reverting to them you find that many of them were not so striking, or weighty, or original as you thought. But the word of God is solid; it will stand a thousand readings, and the man who has gone over it the most frequently and carefully is the surest of finding new wonders there. —Rev. J. Hamilton.

Dr. Payson once, when traveling, having occasion to call on a lady when she and some of her friends were sitting down to tea, she would have him stay, and treated him very hospitably. When he left, he said, "Madam, you have treated me with much kindness and hospitality, for which I sincerely thank you. Allow me to ask you one question before we part. How do you treat my Master?" This led ultimately to the conversion of the lady and her household.

Gems.

— We know with what an excellent nicety the skillful engraver can represent the forms he designs to produce; but it is essential to his art, that the substance he engraves upon should be suited to receive the impression. What could he do on the surface of a coarse tile? So God first refines the heart, to fit it to receive his lovely image, and then, by the operation of his Spirit completes the glorious work.

— Never do things by halves. If you have a task before you, do it at once with all your might and all your mind, and do not leave it till it is finished. This is the way to get a light heart and an easy conscience, as well as a full purse.

— If love and affection could be won with gifts and jewels, then, indeed, love would have its price; but it is not so. Affection springs from the heart only; no gifts can produce it. A child's love is won more truly by a parent's fond embrace and kiss than with glittering toys.

— We deceive ourselves when we fancy that only weakness needs support. Strength needs it far more. A straw or a feather sustains itself longer in the air than a stone.

— Hope is like the cork to the net, which keeps the soul from sinking in despair; and fear is like the lead to the net, which keeps it from floating in presumption.

— Instead of seeking a reward for being righteous, let us remember that God cannot give us a better reward than righteousness itself.

— How many hurtful things should we instinctively abstain from, if we were among the number of the blessed ones, described as the pure in heart.

— Prayer is a key which, being turned by the hand of faith, unlocks all God's treasures.

— Take counsel of him who is greater, and of him who is less than thyself, and then refer to thine own judgment.

— Don't be afraid of the storms of time, knowing that God holds the moral as well as the physical ocean in the hollow of his hand.

— Many a rich man, in bringing up his son, seems ambitious of making what Aaron made —a golden calf.

— Prayers and meditation have the nature of relatives; they live one by the other, and like true turtles, they die when out of sight.

— Speaking without thinking is shooting without taking aim.

— Honor yourself and you will be honored; despise yourself and you will be despised.

— At the gate which suspicion enters love goes out.

— He who will not keep a penny, will not have many.

— Forgiveness is the odor which sweet flowers yield when trampled upon.

— God hears the heart without words, but he never hears words without the heart.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the Hygiene Column.

HOW I CONQUERED.

As some have undertaken to set forth from time to time a declaration of the filthiness and sinfulness of smoking, snuffing, and chewing, it seemeth good to me also, having had a pretty thorough experience, from my youth up, to say a few words respecting the moral and physical evils attending the use of Tobacco.

In the first place, it exerts an injurious influence on the nervous system, weakens the memory, enfeebles the will, causes irresolution, and leads to forgetfulness of God and the duty of self-denial. I used it constantly for about thirty-five years, yet always admitted it to be a very bad habit, and wished many times I had never commenced using it; but it had got such a hold on my system, I sometimes gave up the idea of ever quitting the use of it, and admit that tobacco was master, and I its slave. But when as a professed child of God, and one who honestly believed that Jesus was soon coming to earth again, to gather all his faithful ones, and desiring to be ready "to hail the glad day," and also in studying the Scriptures more carefully, and trying to renew my covenant with God, how often these Scriptures came up before me: "Know ye not that your bodies are the temples of the living God?" And, "Whoso defileth the temple of God, him will God destroy." "Whether ye eat or drink, and whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God"; and would sometimes bring barreness and leanness of soul.

I had tried in my own strength many times to quit using the vile weed, but had as often failed. At last I came to the conclusion that nothing but help from God would enable me to free myself from the loathsome and miserable habit. I began to reason somewhat in this way: God's grace is sufficient, and I know that it is his will and for his glory that I should be a free man in Christ Jesus. I had tried in my own strength, and could succeed. I now asked help from him, and commenced by throwing away my tobacco, cleansing my pockets, and rinsing my mouth, with the petition, "Lord, help!" And to the praise of God I can say that it is now more than six years since I have had the least inclination to touch, taste, or handle, the nauseous drug.

I tell you, my brethren, God will deliver us if we ask in faith. It was the grace of God, with my resolution, and without "gentian," as Dr. Trask recommended. Having been addicted to it so long, and now free, I have a deep sympathy for my brethren who are held in bondage by the foolish, useless, and I must say, wicked habit. I would plead with you, and pray to God, that you in this particular may be made free. I always was a friend to total abstinence from all that intoxicates, yet I had not the confidence I wanted while I was indulging in a habit which, perhaps, more slowly yet as surely was ruining me physically as ardent spirit was others. May God help us, brethren, to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord. Let us be overcomers, and deny ourselves of every vile and hurtful lust, that we may teach others also, and be among those who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth, and reign with him eternally. May God grant that some one may be benefited by this. Thomas Foote.

Salisbury, N. H.

MENTAL TREATMENT OF THE SICK.

Professional nurses and women who wish to fit themselves for the work of waiting on sick friends at home, have now many opportunities of learning to do the physical, material part of their work efficiently and well. But as yet hardly anything is generally known about one very important part of a nurse's work, viz., the mental management of an hysterical person, or one in danger of becoming delirious, or over whose mind some morbid idea is gaining hold.

I do not, of course, profess to teach a business of which every one is as yet so ignorant. But I may, perhaps, give you a few hints which will enable you to learn something of it by practice.

The first hint that I have to give you is, Don't tell your patient a falsehood.

There is something significant, as well as most touching, in the longing which a half delirious patient sometimes shows for the presence and caresses of some particular person—one perhaps for whom he never before felt any very great affection—one, it may be, his previous intercourse with whom has been none of the pleasantest—but one, I think you will always find, between whom and himself he is sure that there are, and need be, no concealments or equivocations. . . . .

Somehow or other, it comes to pass that almost every one has some friend—often our nearest—perhaps, alas! our dearest too—whose presence is the cause of a constant struggle to appear to be what we are not. A fit of illness will often be preceded by some days or weeks of irritability, combined with an intense longing to give vent to some feeling which has been for years perhaps concealed, and which the patient struggles painfully to hide. When the self-control at last gives way, the entrance of the friend who was the cause of this struggle will be the signal for a fit of violent excitement, which is attributed to dislike, but which is, I believe, in the early stages of illness, rather a symptom of terror. And now the patient is supposed to be seized with a monomania, which causes him to think and feel in a manner quite contrary to what he thought and felt before; whereas the fact perhaps is, that he is now for the first time speaking as he has thought and felt for years.

The plan I should try in such a case, if the friend were one whose kindness and wisdom I could trust, would be to let him go alone to the patient and say, "You may say anything you like to me; I know more of your feeling than you suppose. Nothing you can say will hurt me or make me angry. All I beg of you is to speak quietly and steadily, and not to say more than you are sure is true." I believe the result of such a course, if taken early enough, would often be, as I know it has sometimes been, that the apparent dislike would change to an intense affection, and that the impending fit of delirium would lose much of its painful character, even if it were not warded off altogether.

If the experiment succeeded, it would be necessary that the friend should, after the first interview, gently but steadily discourage all recurrence to the painful topic—all confessions of wrong feelings formerly indulged, all dwelling on anything peculiar in the relations of the patient to himself, all morbid self-analysis and sentimentality of every kind, and that he should try to awaken the patient's interest in other things. His influence in this respect would probably be greater than that of any other person.

If the first interview failed of producing any good effect, I would not repeat the experiment without medical sanction. A great deal would depend, for the success of it, on its being tried early enough, before delirium actually set in, so that the idea of hating or dreading the friend should not have time to fix itself in the insane mind. A good deal also would depend on the previous character of the patient, and still more on the character and intelligence of the friend.

The next best plan to this would certainly be to keep the friend away altogether, and never to allow his name to be mentioned in her presence. But it is bad to yield thus to an insane fancy. It is always good to conquer it if you can.

When the patient takes a dislike to some one who has been deceiving her, it is simply cruel to allow them to remain together for one hour. The dislike is in this case not a delusion at all; it is the result of the uncontrolled action of a perfectly natural and healthy instinct.

It often happens that a nervous woman will, in illness, feign a desire to get rid of some person whom she dearly loves, and will use every artifice, even that of pretending to dislike him, to induce him to leave her, although perfectly conscious that his doing so would cause her the greatest possible pain, and would diminish her chance of recovery. A morbid sense of not deserving affection, a suicidal desire to inflict suffering on herself, and some perverted notion about the selfishness of allowing a friend to tie himself to a sick-room, are usually the chief causes of this sad and often dangerous mental phenomenon. There is, humanly speaking, no remedy for it but to smother it out of existence—to drown it in love. "I can't help your not wanting me; I want you, and I can't do without you; so I mean to stay in spite of all you can say," is the proper tone to take with such a patient. It has not unfrequently happened to me to see a fit of what would have seemed to a casual observer to be violent anger and dislike suddenly cut short by such a speech. I have seen the twitching features relax, and the patient nestle down on the arm of a friend she had been professing to want to send away, and settle, with a soft sigh, into a sleep worth all the medicine in the world. I am persuaded that many a fit of real suicidal mania might be nipped in the bud if the patient were told earnestly enough, lovingly enough, and soon enough, that her life was of value to some one whom she loved; ay, I fear, I might have said, if she could have been persuaded that her life was of value to any human being. Women who are little over-tired (just because their lives are a little over-full of unselfish cares and duties, and because too many others depend upon them) are very subject to fancy, in the reaction of fatigue, that their lives are of no value, and that they are not wanted by any one on earth. The remedy is to tell the patient that, there as she lies, weak, tired, prostrate and useless, some one wants her for very love of her and cannot live without her.

Again, there are women who, though incapable of any deep feeling, are gifted (or cursed) with that sort of emotional temperament which is popularly supposed to indicate an affectionate disposition. Such women, when suffering from hysteria, often pretend a dislike to those—I will not say whom they love best—but to those whose society is most agreeable to them, and whose caresses and kind words they most crave for. They do so, partly for the pleasure of testing the strength of their friends' affection, partly for the amusement of inflicting pain, partly for the excitement of a scene. They do it for the sake of flirting, in fact; for the same reasons which make a heartless girl coquette with her lover. The proper treatment is to take the patient at her word, to leave her when she bids you, and be always chary of your caresses and reserved in your conversation with her. But you must be prepared for a grand explosion of temper and an aggravation of all the symptoms, physical and moral, when first she finds herself taken at her word.

I have said that you should never deceive a sick person. It by no means follows from this that you are to let him know all that you think about his state of health, or all you may learn of his affairs. You should try to accustom him to see that you do not feel called upon to answer all his questions; that you do not think it wise to talk to him about his state of health or his chances of recovery, or about worrying business; and that your refusing to do so on any particular occasion does not necessarily imply that you have bad news to give him. Try to get him to feel that he may, and that he ought to, trust in God to take care of him and his affairs, and in you, to tell him whatever it is expedient for him to be told. Use your discretion, according to circumstances, as to how much you will tell him. If he has not the habit of resting quietly on God, you will often find it necessary to speak when it would otherwise be far better to be silent. But never deceive him; and above all, never do anything to induce him to deceive you.

And remember that a calm demeanor, when you know there is news to tell which would make the patient uneasy if he heard it, is, if you have faith enough not to feel uneasy, something very different from deceit. Conquering your dislike of a person, learning to see what is good in him and to forget what is unpleasant, is not bad for you, but very good. It is pretending to like a man whom you know you dislike, hiding angry feelings which you are secretly cherishing, which, as I have said already, makes such havoc of your brain and disturbs the nerves of all who are under your personal influence. And so it is with your uneasiness about your patient. Do not hide fears which you allow yourself to feel, but "put on" the quiet faith which will cause you not to feel them. The simple truth is that, as long as you feel uneasy about a sick man's body, soul, or estate, you have no business near him! If you show it outwardly, you infect him with your fear. If you hide it, you give him a vague sense of duplicity and unrest. . . . .

—Good Health.

(To be continued.)

Medical men very generally, in all ages, have believed that "swine's flesh" has been a principal cause of scrofula, and this is but a name for half the diseases that afflict the human race.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance....................$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address.......$5.50.
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.
CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—Private.
Over all business matters, write—Business.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's Name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write Private on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,
Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

Payable always in advance.

Single copy, 30 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.
Ten copies, and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 25 cts. a year for each copy.
Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 25 cts. a year for each copy.
To Canada subscribers at the same rates. No extra charge for American postage.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 751. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1870. | VOL. XXX.—NO. 25.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN, H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

CHEER UP!

Tune.—"Pulling hard against the stream."

Brothers, sailing on Time's ocean,
Let us join in praise and song;
For the land is getting nearer,
And the voyage will not be long.
Hand in hand, and all together,
Soon the storms will all be past;
And we'll anchor in the harbor,
Safely moored on shore at last.

Chorus.—Home, sweet home, is drawing nearer,
Christ will guide us o'er the main;
When we reach the golden city,
We shall never part again.

Do the best you can for Jesus,
All on board his words obey;
Let each sailor mind the Captain,
As we sail from day to day.
Don't give way to grief or sorrow,
Jesus cries, "Be of good ceer";
Brighter skies may come to-morrow,—
Wait and watch and persevere.

Time's long night will end in morning,
Sin and death will all be o'er;
In the bright and sunny harbor
Storms and clouds will come no more.
Jesus pressed a sailor's pillow
Once upon the raging sea;
Soon we'll sing beyond the billow,
How he died for you and me.

Let each sailor take his station;
All on deck now watch and pray;
We are coming into harbor,—
Lo! at last 'tis break of day.
Call the roll and sound the trumpet;
Now our ship is anchored fast;
Hallelujah! hallelujah!
Safe arrived at home at last.

—Selected by J. T. Kimball.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment; ut the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46.

(Continued.)

"Every one [of the wicked] shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice [saints present their "bodies a living sacrifice"] shall be salted with salt." As salt is a preserving element, so is fire a destroying element. If to salt the righteous with salt (a preserving element) signifies their preservation, then to salt the sinners with fire (a destroying element) signifies their destruction. What can be clearer than this? While the righteous are to be salted with that which will preserve, the wicked are to be salted with that which will destroy. The righteous are admonished to have this preserving salt in themselves; for "if the spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." But we are sometimes told that to salt signifies to preserve, and therefore to salt with fire implies to preserve with fire. That is just as reasonable as for me to say to rain signifies to wet, and therefore to rain fire would signify to wet with fire; but Sodom did not get wet when "it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all." To rain a wet element is one thing, but to rain a burning element is another thing; so to salt with a destroying element is quite another thing.

The doctrine of eternal life only through Christ, at the resurrection, gives him the honor of bestowing immortality upon the faithful; whereas the opposite view robs him of his honor, and enables man to say, I am immortal independent of Christ. The one agrees with the statement that "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ," and the other view conflicts with it. Which shall we believe?

We have assigned several invulnerable reasons why the wicked cannot live forever in the emphatic sense: God offers them eternal life on stipulated conditions, which are spurned; the sinner is destitute of immortality, without which he cannot live eternally; the sinner has no promise of eternal life, either in this world, or any other; eternal life is denied to the sinner in the plainest terms; sinners are to die a penalty-death, even the "second death"; sinners are to be burned up as chaff and tares; sinners are to become extinct, and be "as though they had not been"; sinners are to be consumed in gehenna fire, at the judgment day; and in view of their coming doom, God expostulates with them—"Why will ye die?" and bids them "turn and live." Could God do more than to offer them eternal life, and entreat them to accept the offer? If the offer is refused, could he do less than to give them over to death? The sinner has forfeited all claim to eternal life, has made himself offensive to God; and even his present life is a trial existence, and not the sinner's own, except as a loan from the Lord; therefore, as a God of justice, Jehovah can do nothing less than to chastise the sinner for his life of rebellion, and for the future deprive him of a life that he has only used to dishonor God: and all this can be done with no injustice to the sinner, and in harmony both with God's mercy and justice; while eternal torment for finite sin would charge Jehovah with being an infinite tyrant, exceeding justice, and deficient in mercy.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

In our investigation of this topic, we have already examined several objections, but will now make a brief reference to several others used by our opponents.

1. It is sometimes said that the doctrine of the destruction of the wicked takes away the motive for repentance. To say that it takes away a false motive would come nearer the truth, but the gospel motive remains unimpaired; viz., "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance" (Rom. 2: 4), and "godly sorrow worketh repentance" (2 Cor. 7: 10), and "we love him because he first loved us" (1 John 4: 19). This principle of divine goodness and love, when properly impressed on the mind, will awaken godly sorrow in the heart, and thus lead to repentance; and a repentance not produced by this principle, but exclusively by the fear of eternal torment, is worthless. Many have been moved in part by this principle of fear, while the true principle was underlying it, and have proved true christians; for when the fear had subsided, the underlying principle continued to propel them: but those who have been moved only by fear, invariably relapse into sin after the principle of fear has spent its force upon them, and thus the world has been filled with its millions of backsliders who have been once scared into repentance, but never led into it by persuasive and compelling love, and divine goodness.

The man who is initiated into the service of God by a wrong motive, will remain there only so long as that motive operates upon him. If it is a motive of divine attraction, it will continue to do its work, unless repelled. If it is a spell of fear driving him, instead of love inviting him, when the spell of fear subsides he will become inactive. The sailor who repents and prays in the storm, and relapses into sin when apparently out of danger, has served God while the motive power of fear moved upon him. The child that professes love to the father who stands over it with the whip, to extort that profession, will lose all its love when the whip is out of sight. So the man who professes to love God, and serve God, to escape eternal torment, will be active while the principle of fear operates on him; but though sincere, he is moved by a wrong principle, and by a short-lived one, unless the true principle is underlying it. This spurious principle is worthless when alone, and is of no advantage to the true principle when connected with it.

It is true that God has made threats to the sinner, to show him what he will lose by continuing in sin, and what his destiny will be in contrast with the future of the redeemed; but not to frighten him to repent, but to operate on his enlightened judgment as a tributary inducement to seek life through Christ. The man who candidly looks at destruction in contrast with eternal life, though he sees nothing to frighten him, sees much to induce him to choose eternal life. The end of the one class is not inviting, but repulsive; but the future of the other class is delightful to contemplate. To those who affirm that destruction is no punishment, we remark that it involves the loss of everything that the saints secure; and if what they secure is no reward to them, then the loss of it all to the sinner is no punishment. Is it a trivial matter to lose eternal life, with all its attendant glories, and pass under the dark waves of oblivion, never more to rise?

2. We are sometimes told that the doctrine of destruction does not admit of degrees in punishment; that it clashes with the truth that men are to be both "judged" and "rewarded" according to their works, as taught in Rev. 13, 14; Matt. 16: 27; Rev. 22: 12; that it repudiates the doctrine of "greater damnation" for one class of sinners than for another, as taught by Christ in Matt. 23: 14; that it sets aside the doctrine taught by the Savior in Luke 12: 46–48, that at the Lord's coming one class will be punished with "many stripes," and another class with "few stripes"; that it denies that God "will render to every man according to his deeds," even "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish" to the sinner; and that the man of few sins and the man of many sins are to be destroyed alike.

We reply, the doctrine of degrees in punishment can be more easily reconciled with destruction than with endless misery, when we take into account the fact that death is not the sum total of the sinner's punishment, but merely one ingredient in it, the culminating point in the penalty, and hence made the most conspicuous; for with the popular view the man of few sins who died one thousand years ago, and the man of many sins who dies to-day, continue in endless chastisement; hence, the only principle on which they can possibly be punished, according to their crimes, and prevent the small sinner from receiving vastly more punishment than the large sinner, is by claiming that the difference is not in the time, but in the intensity of the chastisement.

Those who make this claim cannot be so blind as not to see that the same principle carried still further would indefinitely shorten the length of future suffering, and thus reduce their eternity of suffering to a comparatively short term of time. Nor can they object to the application of the same principle to the "anguish" and "vengeance" to be inflicted upon the sinner before this divine display of "wrath" shall culminate in the "second death"; thus, from their own showing, giving the man of many sins more chastisement than the man of few sins, allowing the scene in both cases to culminate in the "second death."

It is the height of absurdity to claim that the penalty for sin must consist either in misery exclusively, or in death exclusively. Whatever God has threatened the sinner with as a retribution for sin, is a component part of the penalty. All the chastisement they receive at the judgment will be according to the infallible decision of the divine Judge, based upon the amount of crime committed; but in every instance this chastisement will culminate in the "second death," which is a prominent ingredient in the penalty: thus one class will receive "greater damnation" than another. "Death" is due every sinner; but death is not the only ingredient in his sin-bought fate: "tribulation," "anguish," "vengeance," "wailing," and "stripes" await him, as well as "death"; and as these cannot be experienced subsequent to death, they must precede it, and if these are to be literal, so must the threatened death be; both being component parts of one penalty; and if death is ever inflicted, these cannot be endless: but death, the prominent ingredient of this punishment, will be eternal.

God has threatened the sinner with both chastisement and extermination, and he will keep his word; and as chastisement, and not extermination, can be proportioned to the amount of crime in each case, and must also precede extermination, it is clear there can be degrees in punishment, yet ultimating in the second death in every case.

Should a law be enacted that the thief should be punished with forty lashes and death, and that the murderer should be punished with four hundred lashes and death, there would certainly be degrees in the punishment, though both criminals would be punished with death; but the law would be disregarded, and the degrees in punisnment set aside by omitting the whipping. The degrees in the punishment would not be in the death of the criminal, but in the whipping; but the punishment could not be complete without death. And if to deter men from committing such crimes, they should ever and anon be reminded of the death they would thereby incur, would any one infer from this that only death would be visited upon them? That would be just as reasonable as to conclude that only death awaits the sinner because he is threatened with death.

Shall we conclude because God has repeatedly promised the righteous eternal life, that therefore eternal life is all they will have? Are they not also promised "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory"? And though even those who commence at the eleventh hour are to receive the penny of eternal life, yet the Savior's parable, given to illustrate the future bliss of the redeemed, gives one "authority over ten cities," and another "authority over five cities" only.

Sometimes the sinner's extermination, and sometimes the "anguish," and "vengeance," and "wrath," and the "terrors of the Lord," are held up to the sinner's view, to show them the danger to which they are exposed. Shall we then be inconsiderate enough to insist that the sinner's doom must be either misery only, or death only? Reason and revelation alike rebel against the thought that God will mete out the same fate, in all respects, to the greatest and smallest sinner. If not a hair can fall from our heads without the divine notice, surely not a sin will escape his observation, and not a sin unrepented of will go unpunished: so the more a man sins, the more punishment he incurs, but every sinner will find death one ingredient in his bitter cup, as did the Savior who died for sinners, and that cup cannot pass from him. Some will find more "anguish" and "vengeance" in their cup than others, but death will be an ingredient in every cup.

It is folly to insist that if one ingredient of the sinner's punishment is "everlasting," that every ingredient must be; that if the death is endless, the suffering must also be, because it is a part of the same punishment. If a law is enacted that the robber shall be punished with two hundred lashes and imprisonment for life, who does not know that this would be a life-long punishment? And who does not know that the whipping would be one ingredient in this punishment, preceding the close of the imprisonment, too; and who would be foolish enough to insist that as the punishment was life-long, and the whipping a component part of the punishment, that therefore the whipping must be in process of infliction through the entire life of the criminal? Such a claim would be just as reasonable as in the case of the divine law.

Thus the doctrine of destruction is in harmony with the principle of degrees in punishment, as all must admit after reflection; but the doctrine of eternal misery cannot so easily be reconciled with it; for either Cain must suffer nearly six thousand years longer than the last murderer, or the principle of intensity only can produce equality; and if that principle can make one man's misery six thousand years shorter than another man's of the same crime, why not shorten the misery of all, and let them die the "second death," instead of living to curse God, without any benefit to God, to angels, to saints, or to themselves?

3. We are often told that Dan. 12: 2 conflicts with our view of destruction: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." That the wicked will awake to "shame," and be made to feel deeply their loss of eternal life and the glories of futurity, we have no doubt; but nothing is said about everlasting shame; that must be read into the text before it can be read from it; but the text does speak of "everlasting contempt"; and the Hebrew word d' rah-ohn, here rendered "contempt," is defined by lexicographers as signifying "abhorrence," and occurs but once more in the Bible; viz., in Isa. 66: 24, where it is translated "abhorring," and applied to carcasses: "And look upon the carcasses of the men, ... and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." This establishes the fact that "everlasting d' rah-ohn" cannot involve everlasting consciousness or misery, unless it be admitted that carcasses are capable of the same. As a carcass is held in contempt, as a traitor is held in contempt by his countrymen from generation to generation, so will the enemies of God be held in contempt by all the saints forever.

It is sometimes said that in order for sinners to be held in contempt, they must have a conscious existence. But is this true in the case of "carcasses"? Is it true in the case of Arnold the traitor? Though he is dead, that "contempt" for him exists still. So turn the text which way we will, we cannot deduce the slightest justifiable inference from it in favor of eternal misery; while Heaven's book of truth abounds with denunciations of death against the ungodly.

(To be concluded.)

For the World's Crisis.

JESUS COMES AGAIN.

Air.—"Jesus paid it all."

List! ye patient, waiting ones,
Hear the trumpet's blast;
Yes, methinks 'tis Jesus comes,
Lo, he comes at last.

Chorus.—Jesus comes again,
With his angel band;
Now he comes on earth to reign,
And we'll possess the land.

Hark! as in creation's day,
Sweet, melodious sounds,
Bright seraphic sons of God
Joyous about around.

Let us join the choral strain,
Swell the glorious song;
Lo, our King has come to reign,
Shout, ye ransomed throng.

What a peal of gladsome joy
From the bursting tomb;
All the sleeping saints come forth
In immortal bloom.

E. J. S. Rice.

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 5.

BY S. S. BREWER.

DIVINE RETRIBUTION UPON ROME SIGNALLY MANIFESTED DURING THE REIGN OF TERROR IN FRANCE, FROM 1791—1795.

"Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double."

In the previous article, No. 4, we briefly referred to the judgments upon the last paramour of the purple and scarlet-arrayed harlot of Babylon, that sat upon "many waters," concerning which it is declared, "The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." The angel having explained the waters in the fifteenth verse, on which the woman sat, to be nationalities, in the next place enumerates in particular "seven mountains" in the ninth verse. In the following translations, these mountains represent kings:

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth, and they are seven kings."—Douay.

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sits; and the kings are seven."—Emphatic Diaglott.

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth; and they are seven kings."—Thomson.

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth, and they are seven kings."—Wakefield.

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth, and these are seven kings."—Penn.

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sits, and are seven kings."—Sawyer.

The above "seven kings" (or kingdoms) are doubtless designed to symbolize the seven imperial protectorate governments, that had, in prophetic language, "nourished" her; and in verse 9th, of chap. 18th, it is declared—"And the kings of the earth . . . have committed fornication, and lived deliciously with her." The angel presents to John a view of the past, present, and future. Five of these kings, or kingdoms, had fallen; namely, Franks, Saxons, Franconians, Swabia, Spain. One then was, that was doubtless Austria. Please observe the prediction: "And there are seven kings; five are fallen, and ONE IS, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space." Concerning the then present "head," "mountain," "king," or kingdom, of whom it is written "ONE IS," it does appear to me that history is so conclusive upon this point, that the prophecy cannot possibly be applied to any other power but Austria, without marring what had previously transpired, and what followed immediately upon the seventh head.

In the previous article, we referred to the rupture between the Emperor of Austria and the Pontifical family, by his edict, dated Oct. 13th, 1781. See Coxe's "House of Austria," vol. 3. pp. 490, 491. It was predicted, when the seventh came, he would continue but a "short space." The simple idea is this; it would be but "a short space" to the end of the 1260 years, during which this harlot and her paramours should continue "to make war with the saints." Will the reader please read the first nine verses of Rev. 13. There the beast with his "seven heads" is brought to view. France, "the seventh head," did most certainly continue but "a short space," as was proved in No. 4. It was only the "short space" of eleven years, when the last representative head of the seven, that had made "war with the saints," and "killed with the sword," and led "into captivity," did have war made upon him; was led into captivity, and killed by the sword, by the beast out of the abyss, in his eighth dragonic form. So, dear reader, it appears to your friend and brother in Christ.

After John is presented with a view of the woman upon the "scarlet-colored beast," of which I will not now speak, the angel instructs him in relation to a power that had antecedently existed, and of which he testifies, "WAS, AND IS NOT." Please notice. Eighth verse—"The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition." Verse 11th. "And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." This beast is doubtless the eighth form of Dragonic government, that was kept in abeyance by the "seven heads," or kings, during their domination and complicity with the Roman harlot, for 1260 years. At its termination, it was predicted it would ascend out of "the bottomless pit."

The Dragonic beast "was" the ruling power when John saw it, during his exile on Patmos, and "was not" when the sixth head existed; but did ascend out of "the bottomless pit" in a "short space" after France, under Louis XVI., became the ostensible protector of popery.

THE WONDROUS EFFECT OF THIS BEAST PREDICTED AMONG THE NATIONS, ON ITS ASCENSION OUT OF THE BOTTOMLESS PIT. "The beast that thou sawest, was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder (whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world), when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is." Rev. 17: 8. The following testimony from the eminent historian Redhead, p. 113, will present the effect produced upon the nations by France, during the "reign of terror," caused by this monster in its eighth form, from the abyss:—

"All Europe stood in amazement and pertubation at the events that were passing. The prodigious increase of power by France, and the revolting purposes to which she applied it, began to arouse a universal dread for the independence of nations and the existence of social order or public morality. It was natural that kings and aristocracies should regard even the first outbreak of the revolution with dislike and apprehension now, from the frightful features it had assumed. This feeling was partaken by the whole world and prevailed even among the most democratic communities. The enlightened citizens of the United States shared it with the ignorant population of Sarmatia or Romelia. Upon the first reverse sustained by France, all the nations of the earth seemed to rush simultaneously to quell her. The sympathies of mankind were enlisted against her, for she had shown how hideous was the spirit by which she was actuated."

This was the power God designed to use as a rod to inflict "judgment" upon the complicated political and ecclesiastical system of superstition, cruelty, and iniquity, in fulfillment of the prediction thus uttered by the angel to John: "I will show unto thee the JUDGMENT of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters."

The seeds of this unparalleled revolution were sown by Voltaire, Frederic II., king of Prussia, D'Alembert and Diderot. Speaking of Voltaire, Buck, in his "Dictionary, in an article on Philosophists, says: "He now set himself, with D'Alembert and Diderot, to excite universal discontent with the established order of things. For this purpose, they formed secret societies, assumed new names, and employed an enigmatical language. Thus Frederic was called Luc; D'Alembert, Protagoras, sometimes Bertrand; Voltaire, Raton; and Diderot, Platon. . . . Their great object, they professed to one another, was to confound the wretch, meaning Jesus Christ. Hence their secret watch-word was Ecrasez l'Infame,"—"Crush Christ." They purposed in their heart to accomplish what their great prototype had attempted at Calvary. The efforts of these bold blasphemers culminated in terrific judgments upon the nation whose kings had sanctioned the massacre of Protestants.

The French atheistical assembly, among many others decrees, declared:

"All men are equal by nature.

That the free will or liberty of man is unrestrained by any law, either human or divine.

That human nature possesses endless perfectibility.

That insurrection is lawful in civil society.

That death is only an eternal sleep of the soul.

That the ancient Sabbath ought to be abolished, and the times of the year be calculated by decades.

That tutelary gods, even dead men, may be cannonized, consecrated, and worshiped.

That Jesus Christ was an imposter.

That human reason is the only true God. By an edict of the Constituent Assembly, there was a general sale of all ecclesiastical property; and every kind of property connected with churches or charities was confiscated. The magnificent church of St. Geneieve, at Paris, was changed by the National Assembly into a repository for the remains of their great men, or rather into a Pagan Temple, and, as such, was aptly distinguished by the name of the Pantheon."

Truly the eighth head of the dragon emblazoned the principles of its seven headed predecessor on its forehead (as Pantheon means a temple dedicated to heathen deities,) with this inscription: "Aux Grands Hommes la Patrie reconnoisante," which translated reads thus: "To the great men the country recognized."

"It was to this temple, or Pantheon, that the remains of Voltaire and of Rosseau were conveyed in a most magnificent procession; a compliment which was afterward paid to the infamous Marat, whom Kett styles "The Nero of the Revolution." The bones of Voltaire were placed upon the altar, and incense was offered by the infatuated multitude in this reign of liberty.

This execrable power (says Mr. Kett,) which alone can steel the hearts of its votaries against every feeling of nature, has dared to sanction treason, parricide, lust, massacre; and to infuse into the breasts of its subject multitudes, a new passion, which has sunk them beneath the level of the brute creation—a passion for the sight of their fellow creatures in the agonies of death—a literal thirst for blood."

One writer, referring to the Atheistical assembly and its laws, remarks as follows:—

"Barruel, in his Memoirs, describes this Encyclopedia to be 'a vast emporium of all the sophisms, errors and calumnies against religion, from the first schools of impiety to the day of their enterprise.' Diderot, who was one of its principal compilers, compares it to a 'gulf, or rather, a rag basket, into which they promiscuously threw every thing half examined, ill digested, good, bad, and indifferent, but always incoherent.' 'This compilation (says Mr. Galloway,) was a vast and labored collection, and, among other things, of the dark and mystical parts of ancient, and of the errors of modern philosophy and impiety. In short, it was, and yet is, an artful and chaotic mixture of gross contradictions, and impious errors and absurdities, of deism and atheism, of spirituality and materialism, of virtue and vice, of truth and falsehood, of religion and blasphemous impiety; in which the first are but slightly touched, or placed in the background, and in the deepest shades; while the last are enforced upon the imagination with all the management of cunning and deception. It was artfully calculated, first, to confound the human intellect, then to seduce it into skepticism; and, afterwards, to plunge it, thus bewildered, into the grossest errors and the blackest impiety."—Galloway, vol. I., p. 70.

Dr. Coke, L. L. D., in a work published in 1807, when speaking of the atrocities of this abyss-ascended monster, presents among a multitude of other testimony in relation to the savage barbarity of dragonic fury, the following:—

"The massacre, in cold blood, of prisoners of war; the condemnation of persons accused, without the form of trial, or proof of guilt, are unhappily not without too many examples in the records of human depravity; but the conflagration of 1820 towns, villages, and hamlets, in one portion of its own territory; the deliberate assassination of women and children by thousands; the horrid pollution of female victims, expiring in the agonies of death; and the establishment of a tan-yard under the auspices of Government, for manufacturing into leather the skins of its murdered citizens,—are facts and deeds of atrocity, which exclusively disgrace the bloody annals of modern France, and give to the revolution a dreadful pre-eminence in guilt."

The Commissioner, Garnier, wrote thus to the Convention: "I have caused fifty-eight priests to be drowned; ninety priests have just been brought before me; I have drowned them, which has given me great pleasure."

I have exceeded my purposed limits in this article, and will now bring my remarks, for the present, to a conclusion as speedily as possible. Another writer in history, under the significant title, "THE HAND OF GOD IN HISTORY," remarks:—

"We are struck with admiration at the change which Europe has passed through during the last half century, . . . since France voted christianity out of existence, and with impious hands assailed the temple of truth, and decreed that one stone should not be left on another, till the whole should be thrown down; and in the temple which she built she set up her image, the Goddess of Reason; and the reign of terror which followed was terrific and bloody beyond anything recorded in the annals of history of the apostasy. Revelation was trodden under foot, and evangelical piety scouted from the nation; her voice was nowhere heard, except as echoed in blood and groans, or from the remote valley or solitary glen."—Hand of God in History."

In conclusion, let me notice the destiny of this beast from the "bottomless pit." He shall "go into perdition." 8th verse. "And goeth into perdition." 11th verse. He will never assume another form, but is "reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and PERDITION of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 7. This day now hangs with fearful portent over the heads of a fire-doomed generation.

Truly, the times are most strikingly ominous, and there is safety alone to be found by being obedient to the requirements of the gospel, and having the witness in our hearts that we are "sealed unto the day of redemption." Dear reader, if you have not obtained that, do not feel at ease in your mind until you do. It may be but a very, very few days, before we shall all be summoned to appear in judgment. Do not be mistaken. Do not be deceived by accepting conviction for conversion. Seek, seek, until you experience the promise made unto you in Eph. 1: 13, 14. May you obtain this through the mercy of God. Amen.

ADVENT-CHRISTIAN.

Bro. Grant:—Much has been said through the Crisis in opposition to our being designated by any name except Christian. Many—I think I might say the majority—of your readers wish to see something upon the other side of the question. Will you please publish the following from the Times. C. H. S.

Advent-Christian.

Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order things concerning the name by which we should be called, it seemed good to me also (having had some knowledge of this way from the very first,) beloved brethren, to write unto you, and that you might know that there has often been an exhibition of wisdom manifest in the application and adoption of a name. I do the more confidently write to you believing that you will patiently listen to a few thoughts penned by "Old Pilgrim."

The attempt made by some to prove by Dr. Clarke that the name Christian was given to the church at Antioch by inspiration will not stand one moment before Campbell's criticism. It cannot be that you have read with any attention that critical examination of this question. The references to Dr. Clarke's simply passing and indifferent remarks are every way calculated to instil into the minds of those who have not thoroughly examined this question, the idea that it is a fearful thing to have even the smallest appendage to the name Christian. Why, it would almost be a sin to use a word to qualify the name. Brethren, if you will consider the universal custom among both ancients and moderns, you will see that they are careful to give names indicative of character, position, relation to master or teacher, to men, and things. With this view you can but see that the name Christian accepted by the church at Antioch was most indicative of relation to Christ and the opening truth of that age.

I will give you a few indicative names: Abraham, father of many nations; Isaac, he laughs; Jacob, a prevailer with God; Isaiah, the salvation of God; Ammon, strong people.

But if you must have a name that you cannot question the authority of its giver, take the name disciples. Why is not this enough? Christ gave it. Why not retain it? He gave his disciples the name church, also. John adopted it, and gave it to all the followers of Christ in Asia. Paul uses the name given them by Christ, when sending them a letter, after they had been "called Christians at Antioch," showing conclusively that these names were used interchangeably. It was not because of ignorance of the fact, I think, that the angel addressed the different collections of the saints by the name church, instead of Christians. Why not have said, To the angel of the Christians of Pergamos? The name church was used by saints and angels long after Christian was used as a handle to church, after being adopted at Antioch. What need of this "appendage?" Why not say church as consistently as before the name Christian was thought of? This is as much an appendage to church, as used then, as Advent is to Christian, as used now. It is amusing to see people eject a gnat, and drink down a camel.

It is very manifest that the only real interest had in view in giving names to men collectively, or individually, was to select one indicative of their relation. You will see it again in the name given to the Savior—Jesus: he shall save his people from their sins. I fail to see any absolute importance attaching to a name, if it but express our relation to our Master; and the more fully it expresses this, the more appropriate the name. I ask, what name can be found that would so fully express our relation to Christ and the great work in which we are engaged, as the name Advent-Christian?

This appendage carries upon its front the most prominent characteristic of this people—a truth which wicked men and devils cannot bear, and which was the sustaining faith of the uncounted numbers of the martyred dead.

But why do we fear the name? Is it because we would escape the reproach which we well know originated among haters of the events indicated by the name? Are we unwilling that our faith and relation to coming events should be indicated by a name? Or are we planning to secure a hiding place by repudiating the hated appendage, and thus getting away from reproach behind the popular name Christian?

Now, "Old Pilgrim" is not a lover of nature when the ridiculous predominates over the sublime. Here is the picture: wish I could forget it. Being compelled to wait some hours for the Eastern train, I employed myself in reading and exercise until my attention was called to a couple of gentlemen standing close to the ticket office, one of whom handed out a half-fare pass, and soon after retired to a seat. No. 2 soon following, took a seat near by.

No. 1. "Are you a minister, sir?"

No. 2. "Yes, sir," promptly.

No. 1. "What denomination, sir?"

"Christian," promptly answered No. 2.

No. 1. "What's the difference between you and the Methodists?"

No. 2. "More unitarian in views."

No. 2. was on his way to an Advent meeting then, and is very zealous; but felt glad of a chance, I fear, to hide when in the great whirl. Had that brother been an Advent-Christian, that stranger would have understood his relation to Christ as well as to the great truth of the age; and it might not be too much to say, perhaps have been saved by his influence.

I will call your attention again to the use of a name, and remark that it is evident there is no crime in dropping or adopting a name: if so, the saints would not have abandoned disciples for Christians so soon. The indicative relation of the name to the mighty truth unfolding to that age is the only excuse for a change.

We do not propose to change the name now, but we do claim the privilege of accepting an appendage so indicative of our relation to the grandest event in earth's history. Around this name have clustered all the hopes of past ages. It has filled the souls, lit up the dying eyes, and hung upon the lips of the martyred dead.

Old Pilgrim.

For the World's Crisis.

ABOUNDING SIN.

"My ear is pained, my soul is sick, with every day's report of wrong and outrage with which earth is filled." If we poor sinful mortals are sickened at the sight and hearing of so much sin and corruption, in this our world, how offensive must it appear to holy beings. How to the infinitely holy Creator, who beholds not only the outward acts, but is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, the hearts of the son's of men are fully set in them to do evil."

Now is the day of mercy, and long-suffering patience of God; but his Spirit will not always strive with sinners. He is a God of justice too. There is an awful day coming, when his eye will not pity nor his hand spare. Those who have despised the day of grace, and trampled on his mercy, must receive their doom—"Depart from me." O, my soul, what a fearful thought! "When once the Master of the house has risen up and shut to the door," no more an ear is lent to their cries. In vain they will call, for he will not answer; and what must aggravate their woe, they will have no excuse; their blood is on their own head. Oh, my God, revive thy work, and save poor sinners. In the midst of deserved wrath remember mercy.

Oh, careless sinner, come,
Pray now attend;
This world is not your home,
It soon will end.
Jehovah calls aloud,
Forsake the thoughtless crowd,
Pursue the road to God,
And happy be.

Kennebunk, Me. M. D. Stevens.

A Pillow for the Night.—To sleep well, lay these things under your head:

1. A precious promise out of Scripture.
2. A sweet verse of some evangelical hymn.
3. A hearty prayer to God.
4. A good conscience, purified with Christ's blood.
5. A feeling of forgiveness and charity to all mankind.
6. A resolution to serve God on the morrow.
7. A glance of faith at the Cross.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, March 9, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ J. M. TOZIER—The money received, and tracts sent to M. Foster.

☞ M. G. S.—We purpose to forward as requested.

☞ G. E. JACKSON—Your notice came too late.

RUTLAND.

Our meetings in Rutland have been seasons of special interest. For some years the enemy has had the advantage in R., but the Lord has routed him in his strong hold. There is now the best prospect we have ever seen in Rutland. Some eight or ten have been converted, many are under conviction, and the children of the Lord are pressing the battle in earnest. Several of the most active members from other churches are helping with an earnest zeal, manifesting a true christian spirit. Sectarianism—the curse of christianity—is passing away like snow before a warm sun.

Bro. Bailey, the Methodist preacher in Rutland, manifested an excellent spirit, and assisted in the meetings. He is a devoted, intelligent, and earnest preacher, who appears to be free from sectarian feeling. We find in him a kindred spirit, who loves the appearing of Jesus. He sees the perils of these last days, and is crying against the sins of the age, urging his flock to consecrate all to the Lord. If all were like him, and many of his members, there would be no occasion for separate meetings.

Monday evening, Feb. 28th, we had a good meeting at Castleton. Two rose for prayers. During the winter, Bro. Mathewson has held extra meetings, and his labors have been blest in the conversion of sinners, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the edification of the church, which is in a very healthy condition. He has been at Castleton six years, and the longer he stays, the more he is esteemed, and the more the people feel that he must continue with them. They have a very inviting, neat, commodious chapel, and a pleasant conference room. We enjoyed very much our visit with Bro. and Sr. M., and the Castleton church. Peace prevails, and the blessing of God rests upon them.

Tuesday evening, March 1st, we preached in the Baptist meeting-house, in East Poultney. The house was filled with a very attentive audience. The Baptist minister, Bro. Tobin, manifested a true christian spirit, and assisted in the exercises. Also, Bro. Obed Miner, the Congregationalist minister, exhibited the same good spirit, and took a part in the meeting. The prospect was very encouraging. Two rose for prayers.

Wednesday evening, March 2nd, we returned to Rutland, and another very interesting meeting. Some fifteen came forward for prayers. The prospect is more than ever encouraging. A deep feeling of anxiety for their future welfare pervades the minds of the people. The devoted members of the various churches manifest an increasing interest in the meetings. Some have been very much quickened, and have taken advanced ground in divine life. The fields in this region seem white for the harvest. A conviction rests upon their minds that some great event is at hand, and they wish to be ready. We purpose to remain here over the Sabbath, March 6th.

CAMEL AND NEEDLE'S EYE.

"It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Matt. 19: 24.

This passage of Scripture has been very perplexing to many. Some have thought it should read cable instead of camel; because it is impossible to get a camel through the eye of a needle used for sewing purposes. But we have never heard of a needle large enough for the use of a cable as a thread; besides one could not well sew with a cable, if he had a needle of sufficient size. This whole matter is very plain and forcible, when the facts are known.

In eastern cities, in their large gates, or by their sides, are small ones, for foot passengers, called "needle's eyes." They are too small for the passage of a loaded camel. When it becomes necessary to take one through the "needle's eye," he kneels down, his load is taken off, and he then walks through on his knees. This is the way to get rich men into the kingdom. Let them unload their riches, by giving to the poor, humble themselves upon their knees in prayer, and not feel above God's poor saints; then they may go into the kingdom; but it is easier to get "a camel to go through the eye of a needle," than to persuade a rich man to humble himself sufficiently to be a christian. Lady Duff Gordon writes from Cairo, "Yesterday, I saw a camel go through the eye of a needle—that is, the low-arched door of an inclosure. He must kneel, and bow his head to creep through." It is rare that rich men will thus humble themselves; hence but few of them will be saved. Whenever they will allow the Spirit of Christ to take possession of them, it leads them to humble themselves in the dust, and mingle with all who love Jesus. It takes from them pride and the love of display; makes them new creatures in Christ; causing them to walk as he walked, removing the pride of life, and all vain show. Truly "the love of money is the root of all evil."

A GODLESS CONSTITUTION.

It is a well-known fact that the constitution of the United States does not acknowledge God. A national convention is appointed to meet in Pittsburg, Pa., March 3d, at two P. M., for the purpose of taking measures to have the Constitution of the United States so altered as to acknowledge God and the Christian religion. It is claimed that the present constitution "dishonors God," and "is inconsistent with the character of nearly all our state constitutions, and with all the precedents of our early history. It has introduced, or furthered, views and measures which are now struggling for a baneful ascendancy in state and national politics, such as—that civil government is only a social compact; that it exists only for secular and material, not for moral ends; that Sabbath laws are unconstitutional, and that the Bible must be excluded from our public schools. It is easy to see that laws for the prevention of intemperance, blasphemy, impurity or cruelty, may be objected to on the same grounds. And indeed we may expect that law itself will be defined to be the mere advice of the majority, with no proper penalty but the disapprobation of the public."

The call is signed by W. Strong, president; Gen. O. O. Howard, Bishop Scott, ex-Governor Bullock, Bishop McIlvaine, vice-presidents; and is sustained by a large class of judges, clergymen, superintendents of schools, teachers, Bishop Huntington, Bishop Herfort, Bishop Eastburn, and many others.

RATHER STRANGE.

"It has been proved beyond dispute that pain can be felt for twenty minutes after decapitation, by the following experiments, made by a Paris surgeon: Two human heads were placed in the rays of the sun, and the eylids which had been opened were immediately shut; and the head of an assassin named Terrier, which was experimented upon, more than a quarter of an hour after having been separated from the body, turned his eyes when called."

If the man had an immortal soul, where was it during the "more than a quarter of an hour after" the head was separated from the body? It appears certain that if it is the intelligent part, it was still in the head for more than fifteen minutes after it was severed from the body. Does not this show that the intelligence is the result of an active brain, which action continued for some time after the head was cut off, and that, consequently, when the brain ceases to act, then all consciousness ends, till the resurrection of the dead? Such conclusions are in harmony with the Bible, and a multitude of physiological facts, that prove beyond successful controversy that no man, or animal, can think or feel without a brain. When that is dead or paralyzed, there is no intelligence; hence the statement in the Bible "that the dead know not any thing" is in harmony with all known facts in relation to the nature of man.

CRIME IN NEW YORK.

New York has truly become like Sodom in its crimes, and the tide of wickedness keeps rising. The following is from the New York Herald of Feb. 3d, 1870:—

THE REIGN OF CRIME.

"Nothing in the history of Christian cities—the worst capitals in the worst ages of the past—can equal or approach the dreadful prevalence of crime in this metropolitan shamble. Scarcely a day passes without its frightful story. Our city news is just now only spared chronicling two more murders, similar in character to the Townsend butchery, by the failure of the murderous aim in both cases. Already in the one month of this year we have chronicled a murder or attempted murder for every day in the month, and not one of these crimes but seems inspired by a spirit of fiendish savagery equal to the worst act men or devils could conceive. It is not only that the pistol and the knife are on all hands the ready arbiters of every difference, but it is almost as if some general madness to kill had taken possession of certain classes, and if this frenzy rioted in the certainty that the indulgence of its impulses was absolutely safe.

The worst feature of all these crimes is the readiness with which violators of the law push minor offences to the enormity of murder. Here is an old man in Hudson street who refuses to harbor a rogue that comes into his house, and this refusal invites a death blow. He keeps his eye so closely on the intruder into his little shop that no chance is afforded for the theft he went to commit. Ordinarily we might suppose a thief thus foiled would go away and ply his craft elsewhere. But no; he stays and murders where he cannot steal. To him there is no difference between these crimes. He would as soon commit one as the other. He is equally ready to extend his hand to take a watch or take a life. He would as lief strike as bandy words, and recks not at the thought that the hand that strikes is armed with what will make it unnecessary to repeat the blow. He has a temper so desperate and savage as not to be appalled by any consequence of what he may do. The men who shot at the plumber in his doorway the other night sent the bullet intended to murder him as their answer to some speech of his. In a recent murder in a rum-shop, never yet investigated, the fatal bullet was a retort in a discussion. It is so through the catalogue; and this readiness to kill is so notorious that citizens hesitate to interfere with lawlessness or violence of any sort, for a word may cripple a man for life, and an affray is certain death."

TOBACCO TRACTS.

Those who wish for excellent tracts on the bad effects of tobacco, will do well to send to Bro. Geo. Trask, an able Congregational minister, Fitchburg, Mass., who was once a notorious tobacco user, but has wholly abandoned it, and paid special attention to its evil effects upon the moral, physical, and intellectual system. Every one who uses tobacco, will do well to take their tobacco money and send for a package of tracts. Let the friends of reform help sustain Bro. Trask in his noble efforts to scatter light on the injurious effects of smoking, chewing and snuffing tobacco. Send and get a dollar's worth of his tracts to scatter among the people. They may do great good. Tobacco is ruining its thousands. Let all be done that can be to rescue its victims from its soul-destroying effects. But few are aware of the evil it is doing to the human family. O that good men would awake to the importance of this subject.

☞ The Sunday Magazine, Good Words, and Good Words for the Young, for March, are received. Published by Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia. An attractive list of contents in each.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAST ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

As the brethren of this church in Boston have kindly offered their chapel for the use of our Annual Conference in Massachusetts, in connection with a protracted meeting held by them at the same time, we hope it will be one of the best ever held there. They also invite the churches of East Boston, Chelsea, South End, Charlestown, and Cambridge, to unite with them in making this a profitable meeting to all. Those churches which are related to it, or were in former years, also other churches in other States, as formerly, are invited to come and help make it and yourselves better by your presence and duties. The other churches above named will help in lodging and boarding such as come to worship the God of our fathers. We expect it will be next to a good campmeeting; better for some. You may expect preaching that will be interesting and meat in due season, as there are so many prophetic developments now seen around us. Come, brethren, what if it does cost a few dollars for fare? Our money is to use for the cause we are engaged in.

The conference business will not interfere this year with the religious exercises. We hope that there will be a full delegation from all the churches in Mass., as there will be two conferences proposed, instead of one east and west, to save the expense of travel. There seems to be a double motive for holding a general gathering. Shall we have it? Yes, I think we shall, and God will bless the meeting.

HIRAM MUNGER.

[See notice of the meeting in another column.

NEW TRACTS.

Just Published by the A. C. P. Society.

"THE GATE TO GLORY." A good tract to give to those who think good people enter through death to glory. By A. P. MOORE. 36pp: Price, by mail, single 5 cts; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"SCRIPTURE, OR POPULAR THEOLOGY;—Which shall we believe?" By S. L. MANLEY. 8pp. Price, by mail, postpaid, two copies for 5 cents; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred. Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass. AG'T.

NEW BOOK.

THE SEVEN MESSAGES OF THE APOCALYPSE, showing their harmony. By S. S. Brewer. 48 pp., 12mo. Price per dozen, $1.20; single, 13 cents.; postage, 2 cents. For sale at this office. AG'T.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

"EVANGELS OF THE COMING ONE: Prophetic Utterances and their Accomplishment."

This work will be ready for delivery in a few days. Its object is, to present the evidences of the speedy coming of our blessed Lord and Master, to consummate the hope of the good of all ages. All who desire to assist in the dissemination of this work, will please address their orders at once for the above, either to the Crisis office, or to C. W. Sargent, Concord, N. H., Box 426. S. S. BREWER.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM GERMANY.

The following is a literal translation of a German letter, which came into my hands a few days ago, and which was directed to a Bro. in Philadelphia, who has for ten or twelve years held our views on the life and death question, the speedy coming of Christ, etc. L. REIMER.

Phila., Feb. 6th, 1870.

"My Dear Friend:—In the first place, I have to beg your pardon for not sending the money for the parcel of German tracts you had the kindness to send to me. I wrote at last to my son in Newark, state of New Jersey, who is book-keeper in some establishment there, to pay the debt in my stead; but as I did not receive any letter from you, wherein I could learn the amount of your expenses in sending me those tracts, you will please to write to my son in Newark, whose address you find here enclosed. State to him the amount due to you, and he will at once settle the bill. But now to these tracts. They have been a great blessing to me and my whole family, and the light of the word of God shines brighter now in our hearts than ever before. We see clearly which are the teachings and traditions of men, and which is the word of God. We no more worship Satan's lie, "Thou shalt not surely die," as most people here do; but we praise our heavenly Father, that he has opened our eyes, that we can see and comprehend his glorious promises, which are so soon to be fulfilled. For all this, we have been expelled from the church (Baptist) because we believe the word of God more than Satan's lie and the traditions of men.

Dear friend, I wish you God's rich blessings for the new year 1870. Should the Lord Jesus soon appear in his glory, I hope that I, with you, may have a glorious resurrection, or be changed in a moment to an everlasting life; and that we may, together with our blessed Lord, enter into the New Jerusalem, and there sing the song of triumph: Glory and praise be to our God, who has delivered us, and brought us safely through this vale of tears, through the Lamb's victory. Praise be to him forever and ever. Amen.

Your Bro. in Christ, FR. TURER.

Stuttgart, Kingdom of Wirtemburg."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$446.97
M. Clark.........(by M. G.)	5.00
C. Manchester " " "	.30
Cora Manchester " " "	.50
Geo. Tilly	1.08
S. M. Parsons	.75
Carter Wilder	1.10
A. S. Ladd	.50
H. Vandry	1.88
C. & H. Smith	5.00
J. B. Paine	1.15

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$19.06
J. L. Tatro.....(by M. G.)	3.00
C. & H. Smith	3.00
S. E. Teeple	.50

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$707.55
A Friend	10.00
Miss A. W. Hovey	10.00
P. W. Higgins	5.00
G. W. Persons (by M. G.)	5.00
M. Clark " " "	5.00
C. & H. Smith	2.00
W. W. (Memphis)	1.00

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass.....$12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

MEMPHIS.

It has been a month to-day since I penned a line for the Crisis, and it is with a somewhat lighter heart I now seize a moment to write. Our lives here are made up of sunshine and shadow, and of late especially shadow; so when a ray of light is thrown athwart our pathway, we quickly sense it.

At the beginning of the month we were well nigh discouraged by several circumstances, calculated to darken our way and plunge us into despondency; but the coming of Bro. Himes, and his setting matters to rights, has brought sunlight to us; indeed, his presence here was indispensable to the welfare of the Mission; and now the wheels can move faster with a greater load than before.

The work is going on well, with good news from the outposts. A Bro. M., who went from this church last summer, reports a great interest at Holly Springs, Miss., where he has been preaching, and he lifts an earnest cry for help—"Some one to preach to us!" And there are plenty of doors open on other hands. I often sigh that I can do no more.

A vast responsibility rests somewhere, to scatter the warning cry of the judgment near, if it be true; and who so likely to be burdened as one that really accepts the truth? May God help us, one and all, to be willing to bear our part of the burden, and so be co-workers with the Lord.

We have received a barrel from No. Carver, filled with choice and acceptable benefits. Accept our thanks, dear brethren and sisters, and may God bless you, is our prayer. Pray for us, that we may have strength for the work before us. Yours looking for Jesus,

L. F. COLE.

Memphis, Feb. 22nd, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Brethren and Sisters:—Judging from my own pleasure received in hearing from workers in our Southern field, I feel that many will be glad to hear from West Point. Constant work, till my eyes fail with weakness, accounts for my long silence. My school has been so large, that I have found it necessary to economize both time and strength as much as possible. But to-day felt that I must communicate.

I have over forty scholars, and am much gratified by their evident improvement in intellect, morals, and general deportment; and I cannot but hope that a foundation has been laid for the gathering of some stones, that shall be polished for the great temple. Above every earthly consideration, have I desired of the Master to be made a means of encouragement, elevation and salvation to this poor race, so lacking in purity and temperance, and almost all the qualities of moral excellence. While I have felt that my greatest hope of successful labor lay in the children and youth, my heart has intensely yearned over the fathers and mothers bearing the soul-stains engendered by slavery. It seemed as though but little could be done for the worst among them, unless they abandon the whiskey; and so I proposed a pledge and temperance society, and endeavored to show them the evils of strong drink, and how it kept them from attaining a fitness for both the present and future life.

I was greatly encouraged in my labor. Twenty-five of my scholars signed a pledge of total abstinence, and quite a number of adults, among whom was the most abandoned drunkard in the place, and since Christmas has been a changed man. He now brings his money home, and spends his evenings there, surrounded by his children with their books, and says no tongue can tell how much happier he is than formerly. He has been forward for prayers several times, and has often said to me, "I sure am going with you to the goodly land."

There is another poor drunkard that excites my sympathy, for whom I ask prayer. He is called, among black and white, one of the likeliest "darkies" round, but for drunkenness. I talked with him last Sunday, and he says,

"I tell you, Missus, my master learned me to drink when I was a boy, and he always allowed me three drams a day. Since I have been free, I have earned a great deal of money, have bought me a horse and cow, and have supported my family well. But I am so glad of my freedom that, when Sunday comes, I think I have a right to some fun, in drinking and treating, and have spent from three to six dollars of a Sunday; but since the temperance talk, I have been thinking I would taper off, and to-day have spent but thirty cents."

This man sends three children to school, and is pleased beyond measure now they can read to him. I tell him the judgment is near, and he will not be ready unless he stops drinking. Would to God that converting power might come to him.

Here I must express my desire and earnest wish that a missionary, capable of stooping to the capacity of these poor ones, would come to this region, and gather souls for Christ. They have their preachers often, but they are so ignorant they cannot instruct. A white person has a much greater influence over them, and one coming here full of love and the Spirit, could in a circuit of twenty miles gather a rich harvest, I believe. In this house are two rooms, beside the school-room, where a small family can be very comfortable; and with a good garden spot, and also a stable, is free to one who can come with his family and dispense the word in this region. I will labor in the day and Sabbath School, while duty calls and strength permits. Is there not some one in our ranks, endued with wisdom and love for this work, and who can live on plain fare, that can leave the thoroughfares, and go into the "regions beyond"? Myself and little boy have lived on less than one dollar per week this winter, and can live thus still longer.

Now a few words concerning the debt on this house. Finding my receipts not likely to be sufficient to meet the debt, I applied again to the Superintendent of Education, and was encouraged to hope for assistance, but the matter is not yet decided. In the meanwhile I would say to friends, that they need send nothing more till I get answer, unless it be to spend for the poor ones. A part that has been sent I was obliged to use, till I could get the house ready and my work started; the rest I have on hand, and use only as cases of actual need present themselves. To-day I broke a dollar to send some comforts to an old saint, dying of consumption. She bears every mark of being one of our Father's children.

The kind friends who have written me such sweet words of encouragement, and sent of their means to help pay the expenses of this humble mission, have my most earnest thanks for enabling me to do, as I trust, a little good among this poor people. I have a salary from the "Board of Education," sufficient for the support of myself and boy, and need nothing personally. It is very sweet to present substantial comforts, with words of encouragement, to the old and sick ones; and the friends are assured their donations are not wasted.

With this, my heart sends love and greeting to all the family. Would answer all letters, but, friends, I cannot. Would tell you how all my time is taken up, but have written too much already.

Receipts: By Bro. Hastings, from a sister, $2; also the "Christian," for which I am more than thankful. Olivia Percy, So. Norwalk, Ct., $1. C. Greene, Phila., Pa., 95c., with tracts and papers. Mrs. M. A. Sparks, Rouseville, Pa., 50c., for "Young Pilgrim" for one of my scholars. Mrs. A. Hardy, Groveland, $1. Trust Hope, Groton Junction, $2. From Norwalk, O., by D. C. Jefferson, $3.50; also, $3.15, the proceeds of a lecture by a reformed spiritualist, donated for a stove for my school-room. Letters from friends coveted. Their words are as cold water to a thirsty soul. Your sister,

CAROLINE TULLER.

West Point, Ky., Feb. 26th, 1870.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TRUTH PROGRESSING.

BRO. GRANT:—I am thankful that amid all the "wreck and ruin" which the devil has produced by sin and death, we can report progress in the work of the Lord. Some will listen to the invitation of Christ, and come to him and believe his truth. Never have I seen the time, for the last twenty-five years, when there were so many open doors and hearts to receive the message of Christ's immediate coming, as now. But few of the many calls can be supplied.

When I closed tent-meetings in Oct. last, I was so entirely overworked that I concluded I could preach no more for several months, if ever. My speaking organs and entire system seemed ruined by overlabor. I thought to rest, but could not see how to do so. Since then I have visited Bangor; found the believers alive, and at work for Christ, with a good prospect of gathering souls for him. Visited Biddeford; here is a living, working church, constantly increasing by the conversion of sinners.

I visited Portsmouth, N. H. Here they need reviving. Some are at work for Christ, but others seem to be asleep. Visited Newton Upper Falls, Mass. Enjoyed a precious meeting in the house of Bro. L. C. Cunningham; found a revival interest—some lately converted, some seeking the Lord, and an interest was manifested to learn about Jesus' coming.

Visited Lawrence; enjoyed a heavenly sitting together with the believers there. Some are really in earnest in the work, and waiting for the Lord. Visited Portland, Me., several times; find a goodly number crying to the Lord for help, amidst trials and troubles, a deep interest to hear the word of life.

Visited Bath. Here is a living, working church, and an open door for usefulness. Some new cases of conversion; others seeking Christ. It is an easy place to preach; the word is precious to them. Visited Newcastle; find the few believers still holding fast and working for the cause of truth and the salvation of sinners in other places, as the door is not open at home. This they do by giving their means to carry the gospel to places where it will be received. Visited Rockland, and found the word sown there before had sprung up and was bearing fruit. Spent one week preaching the word to them. The believers are alive and at work in good earnest. One came to Christ.

Spent one Sabbath at Gardiner, and preached in the evening to the Young Men's Christian Association, in a back district, and was requested to come again. Visited Lisbon, and found an earnest desire to hear the word; yet christianity is low indeed, and but little faith. Visited Hartford, and preached in the Methodist meeting-house; a good ear to hear, and want to hear more. Some faithful believers there; sinners are penitent.

Visited Falmouth; found the children holding fast and waiting for the Lord. I would visit the many other places where desired to, but am too ill. I. C. WELLCOME.

— We are bound to be honest, but not to be rich.

For the World's Crisis.

A MIDNIGHT VIEW OF THE STATE OF THE DEAD, AND OF A LIVING CHRIST.

BY L. C. MCKINSTRY.

I had been, through the pouring rain in midwinter, to preach a funeral sermon. A good brother had died in the Lord, and we had returned after a short absence, in season to pay these last respects to one we loved. The eyes of the many friends were suffused with tears, that swelled out from the over-full fountains of grieved hearts. Wearied, I returned to the pilgrim home, where comfort and christian consolation were afforded by those who had newly found the Savior precious. Retiring early to rest, I fell asleep—a troubled, restless sleep, from which I awoke to find darkness all around me; to bear no sound save the sighing of the night-wind and the dripping of the rain. My thoughts reverted to the proceedings of the past day, and then came a view of the present state of him who had died and was passing his first night in the earth; and then was opened to my view the state of all the dead. The darkness of the night, the moaning of the wind, and the sadness of the heart, all conspired to intensify that scene, which was all wrapped up in gloom and heavy darkness, and seen in the darkness of the night.

Hades, that "dreadful hell," where all the dead are, seemed to be opened to me for inspection, and its gloom and darkness were no hindrance to a realization of the horrors of that dismal abode; that dark, dreary, cold, silent place in the earth; that under-world, beneath the treading feet of the multitude of living men who, whichever way their faces may be turned, are hurrying on to the subterraneous place,

> "Whose hearts, though stout and brave,
> Still like muffled drums are beating
> Funeral marches to the grave."

There were the dead, all unconscious of what transpired above them; knowing "not anything." They were mouldering back to earth, themselves but "corruption, earth and worms"; a mass of putrefaction, loathsome and polluted. There lay the hoary sire and his companion side by side, uncommunicative and silent, decaying in broken, mouldering coffins. There were fair forms that, laid aside in their beauty, would seem to have said to the worms, "Keep back," and to corruption and mould, "Come not here"; but they were no exception in the great carnival feast of death's loathsomeness. The prattling child and the maiden; young genius, cut off in the midst of its buddings of promise of future usefulness and honor and life's success; and those who were cut off in the midst of the world's applause, "who darkened nations when they died"; those whose hands were stained with blood, and whose hearts were heavy with the guilt of ill-gotten gains; those, too, whose hands had been extended in blessing others, and in providing for the wants of dependents; whose arms had been lovingly entwined around the "loved ones at home,"—all, in one mighty sepulchre," a mass of corruption, or dust, or meatless, mouldering bones, their identity not lost, but their consciousness gone. Their love and their hatred are all perished—beings or existences in the abode of the dead. Oh! the sad, heart-sickening sight; for there, among them all, were my own dear ones, who made my heart a tomb, their tomb, and buried themselves, dead and icy cold, in it when they died. Such a tomb certainly would give me a clearer perception of the gloom and dampness, darkness and silence of hades, where the dead are all gathered, to be the food of worms,—the dishonored descendants of disobedient Adam.

My heart sickened while, at the hour of night's heavy-hanging darkness, this appalling underground, loathsome scene was before me, and my senses were fast falling into a gloomy, sad, heartless, disconsolate state (for who can look long into the dark grave, and know what is in the impenetrable darkness, and not be sad and gloomy), when a refreshing, invigorating thought came to me, like a ray of sunlight through the damp darkness, or a rescuer to a drowning man,—the thought that JESUS LIVES. It changed the whole scene before me. I seemed, while thus absorbed in the view before me, to hear Jesus saying, as though standing above all this mass of festering corruption, of loathsome humanity, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hades and of death"; and I said, Yes, yes, Jesus lives, Jesus lives, JESUS LIVES; he has been dead like these; he has been in hades among this great company; he has shared in the contumely, the ignominy, the cold frigidness of the tomb, and "was dead"; but, behold, he is now "alive forevermore." A constant, ever present, inexhaustive life is his, and nothing can be introduced to destroy it, or make it a dependent life. The keys of hades and of death are in his hands. He controls the place, and its dwellers, its prisoners; for he has "led captivity captivity," and he is chief commandant over the whole army of the dead, and soon will command them to come forth. Another once held this position, and would have kept his victims in "durance vile" forever, but his power is destroyed, and he ("that is, the devil") awaits his own destruction. Cheer and comfort came to me with these reflections, and the sweet, strong assurance that Jesus lives mingled with the sadness of that scene.

There is nothing but gloom about the grave. All the light, and joy, and comfort, and hope, and glory of it, is in the resurrection from it. Sin is a dreadful evil, and its penalty is none the less so; a disgrace alike are they to man. Hades is not a pleasant place. I might weave a goesamer, rainbow-tinted web of fancies, which would, in theory, rob death of its terrors and hades of its gloom; but I could not thereby change the stern fact, or make the king of terrors less terrible than he really is. Gossamer theories are not much like stern facts; hence if I argue that > "Death, or what we reckon such,

> Is but the kindly frost
> Which cracks the shell to germinate
> The immortal life";

and that dying is but beginning to live, and that "death is the gate to endless joy," and that "there is no death," and that the dead saints are in heaven alive; I shall really effect nothing, for the great "charnel house" itself is too full of stubborn, incontestible facts, which are forever in the way of such moonshiny work; and the doctrine of life from the dead (and not in death) by the resurrection of the dead, is too strongly taught in the word of God for such theories to bear on candid minds with any weight. Yes, hades is the gloomy, dark abode of the unconscious dead, who are not simply in part, but wholly there.

> "It must be so, for our first father's fall
> And disobedience brought this lot on all";

and I am death-doomed, unless Jesus comes to snatch me from its power before I am its victim. Yes,

> Death-doomed I am, but still the same,
> As Christ for my redemption came;
> I'm born to live again, to be
> (If faithful) clothed with immortality.

Job, and David, and Paul, and Peter, and all the early saints, looked to the resurrection of the dead as their hope of reward; and there will I look for comfort, not rejecting a truth because, like that relating to the unconsciousness of the dead, it is unpleasant, nor accepting an error because it is draped with the silken tapestry of pleasant imaginings. I may always see hades as I saw it at that midnight hour, a revolting place; and a way out of it may seem to human reasoning impossible; but so long as I can see Him "that liveth, and was dead," clothed in light, and armed with resurrection power, standing over the tomb with "the keys of hades and death" in his hand, "my faith shall triumph o'er the tomb," and I will rejoice over "mine enemy" death; for, "though I fall, I shall rise."

For the World's Crisis.

APPEARANCE OF EVIL.

"Abstain from all appearance of evil."—1 Thess. 5: 22.

All of us, in this imperfect state of existence, are prone to judge more or less from appearances, notwithstanding we know they are often deceptive, and perhaps it is almost impossible to learn what motives prompted the appearance, whether it be good or evil. In this chapter, written by the apostle Paul to the church at Thessalonica, he tells of the coming of Christ, and he gives many words of advice which we would all do well to cherish deeply in our hearts, and always keep before us. This particular passage seems to the writer to embrace the whole, as it were, for it is so full of admonition, and stands forth so bright, and laden down with so many truths and cautions to Christ's little ones.

We must not only abstain from evil, but the very appearance of it is to be shunned just as much. Christian, when invited to that party, or sociable, or evening company, as you may choose to call it; when pressed to go to that masquerade, or if tempted to attend that church fair, or festival, let the words of Paul loom up before you as a beacon light, warning you from shoals of worldliness,—"Abstain from all appearance of evil." Can you go to any such places, asking God's blessing? Or would you like Christ to come and find you among the throng of thoughtless, foolish, gossiping, and gaudily-dressed humanity, that patronize such foolish, yea, such wicked gatherings, such a sinful waste of the precious time that God has allotted us to work for his honor, with an eye single to his glory; God save us from such unrighteousness, even if it is sanctioned by the church, and its pulse-warm adherents. Christ says, "What is that to thee? follow thou me;" and we know our Savior by his Spirit will never lead us where he would be the furthest from our thoughts, and never once spoken of. When we feel like indulging ourselves in what may seem innocent, yet feel somewhat doubtful, how much better it is to forego that seeming pleasure, knowing that we commit no sin by denying ourselves, but do that which is pleasing and acceptable to God. May we have holy guidance, that we may take no step in this life without due consideration, and much prayer to the great Jehovah.

The social element in our nature may become inordinate in its action, if not held in subjection by the influence of our religious principles. In these latter days, there seems to be no such wholesome restraints; but those who have named the name of Jesus, the man of sorrows, plunge into the vortex of worldly pleasure, seeming to forget that we all have the cross to bear. The injunction, be ye separate from the world, owing to the selfish forgetfulness of the heart, and from denying the power of godliness, is lost sight of, and thus that which was in the beginning implanted within us for a good purpose, has by abuse become hurtful, and a great hindrance in the performance of our duties to our Creator.

Let us, then, dear brethren, who look for the soon coming of our Lord, try to keep our garments unspotted from the world; though we may be considered by the worldly-minded as fanatical; or, to use the words of Peter in his first epistle, fourth chapter, fourth verse, "Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you" God grant that we may be wise as serpents, keeping clear from the devil's snares, ever watchful of our conduct, abstaining "from all appearance of evil."

C. MENDENHALL.

Wilmington, Jan. 28th, 1870.

Correspondence.

From Sr. S. P. Green.

Dear friends in Jesus:—By permission, I will try to speak to you all through our much loved paper, the "World's Crisis," hoping and praying that Jesus will stand by you all in this trying hour. Halt not by the way; linger not; "tarry not in the plain." The time is soon coming when we shall need his protecting, powerful hand to lead us through old ocean's last and most tempestuous wave. Soon our voyaging will be over, and Jesus will welcome and take us to those beautiful mansions he has gone to prepare. Dear brethren and sisters, shall we be there? Let us be firm, minding the chart, for it is pointing out the way, and our Leader is "cheering us, as over the waves we go; saying, Courage, sailors, soon we'll gain the day."

To all the professed followers of the Lord and Savior, I would say a word. Be ever ready to lend a helping hand towards sustaining missions among the down-trodden, destitute, poor and afflicted ones in the region where they are springing up; and those who are obeying the injunction, "Go ye out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be full," are calling for help; because they love the Lord, and love to obey his commands, and have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. O, my dear friends in Jesus, I want to tell you that my soul is enraptured at the thought that the time is near when God's children are going home; and the glorious immortality will be put on at the resurrection of the just. O blessed thought! O glorious hope! I would not part with it for the world and all contained in it. I sometimes have (by faith) a glimpse of the heavenly orchestra. Earth's most beautiful scenes cannot compare with it in sweetness and glory. The King in his beauty will be there.

O brethren and sisters, you all know the whole story. I need not take time and paper to tell you these things. I only wished those whom I cannot see again in this life, as well as others, to know how I stand in regard to this important theme. Let us be faithful, and struggle for life and enduring riches. Pray for me and my family, that we all may have part in the first resurrection. Amen. Your sister in hope, S. P. GREEN.

Plymouth, Vt., Jan. 26th, 1870.

From Sr. M. Otis.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like to say a few words, and ask a few questions through the Crisis, leaving it to your good judgment whether I may. I would say to all the brethren and sisters, I am strong in the faith of the soon coming of Jesus; and that, by God's grace assisting me, I mean to walk in the narrow way, until I can see Jesus open those pearly gates to me, and hear it said, "Well done." Trials I have, and many; but it is through tribulation that we gain the promised reward. Now, brethren and sisters, readers of the Crisis, these trials I shall not name here, but one and all pray that we may not be deprived of a place to worship.

It seems strange to me, and I would like to ask why it is, that we have so little pastoral preaching, or, in other words, stationed ministers. A minister will go to a place, preach a few times, move his family there, just get a good congregation, and get people interested, and perhaps before he closes the third sermon, he will get up in the face of the whole congregation, and say, I do not know when I shall speak to you again, perhaps never. I have an appointment,—may be in Iowa, may be in Missouri, or Connecticut. All the interest is knocked out of the congregation at one foolish blow. The consequence is, next Sabbath there are perhaps a dozen people present, and so on for months. Now it seems to me, as a good brother said, If we were going to sow wheat, expecting to get a good crop, we would not throw one handfull in one lot, and then jump aboard the cars, and throw a kernel down perhaps fifty miles from the first handfull; but let each husbandman choose a field, and sow therein; and if it does not yield an hundred-fold, reap what it does produce, and till the ground more thoroughly the next year. I think a great deal of money is spent in this wild-goose sort of a way, that amounts to but little; for I know, from experience, that a person cannot travel these great thoroughfares for nothing; and it seems to me, if they can spend so much money traveling, that it would be well for those who are not sufficiently talented to hold discussions, and carry on large and important meetings, to just go into some place, where a pastor is needed, and go to work for the Lord, and so all be blessed. M. OTIS.

Wayne, N. Y.

From Bro. E. Johnson.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord is at work in West Ossipee, N. H. There is a blessed revival of religion. I was there Sabbath, Dec. 26th, 1869. Monday I went on my way to Great Falls. On my return I preached again. Will some of the brethren, whose only object is to save sinners, please go and preach to the people there? Will Brn. L. C. McKinstry and T. W. Piper? Please make your appointments through the Crisis, as it is taken there. This is a union meeting of Methodists, Free-will Baptists, and Adventists. I am laboring in Denmark, Maine, and have my heart and both hands full. Sinners are coming to Christ. Bless the Lord. Will the brethren pray for us in Denmark, that we may see yet many more coming to the Lord. Yours in hope,

ELISHA JOHNSON.

P. S.—I have given up moving to Rochester, N. H. My post-office address is North Fryeburg, Maine. E. J.

Married.

BAXTER—HUBBELL. At the residence of the bride's mother, Feb. 28th, 1870, by Eld. Geo. Wright, Jr., WILLIAM N. BAXTER, of Elk, Mich., and PHARONIA L. HUBBELL, of Lexington, Mich.

Obituaries.

LAWRENCE. Died, in Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 13th, 1870, of typhoid fever, Bro. Charles W. Lawrence, aged thirty-one years.

With fortitude and patience Bro. L. met his fate. He leaves father and mother, brother and sister, wife and two children, to help fill up the ranks of the sorrowing and suffering.

Bro. L. remarked during his illness that if be died, "God would take care of his babies." Bro. L has given many a meal to God's little ones, hence he felt to trust his little ones in the hands of his heavenly Father.

A large number gathered at the Alexander St. M. E. Church, where the writer endeavored to speak words of comfort from John 11: 21.

WM. A. FENN.

RICHARDSON. Died, at Sugar Hill, N. H., Dec. 22nd, 1869, my father, David Richardson, aged seventy-three years and seven months.

He bore his sickness with patience and resignation, and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, to awake in his likeness in the morning of the resurrection He will sleep but a little while. Text, Matt. 25: 31. BYRON H. RICHARDSON.

SAWINS. Died, in Pembrook, of diphtheria, Dec. 1st, 1869, Helen, wife of Livenas Sawins, aged thirty-eight years.

Also, Dec. 31st, 1869, Elma E., daughter of Livenas and Helen Sawins, aged eleven years.

Sermon by the writer, at the Baptist church, Feb. 20th. Text, 1 Pet. 1: 24, 25.

A. C. NEWELL.

SHARRICK. Died, in Darien, Jan. 26th, 1870, Fanny, wife of Abraham Sharrick, aged sixty-six years.

Sister S. leaves a large family to mourn their loss, but she died in hope of life when Jesus comes. Sermon in the M. E. Church, by the writer. A. C. NEWELL.

MARSHALL. Died, in East Poultney, Vt., March 2nd, 1870, Sr. Drusilla Marshall, wife of Horatio Marshall, and daughter of Bro. Chittendon and Sr. Mary Kinney, aged twenty-eight years.

She sleeps in Jesus. The funeral was at the Baptist meeting-house, attended by the writer, assisted by Bro. Tobin, the Baptist minister.

MILES GRANT.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MUNICH, March 2. King Louis approves of the protest of Dr. Dollinger against Papal infallibility, and urges him to persevere in the defence of the State from the undue influence of the Church. He also gives orders for the observance of his birthday with marks of public respect.

ROME, March 3. Every effort is being made to induce American bishops to declare for papal infallibility, but so far the ultramontanes have been unsuccessful in securing their adhesion.

The sessions of the Ecumenical Council will be resumed next week. The Pope is confident of his ability to carry the proposition for infallibility.

PARIS, March 4. A manifest from the Emperor will appear on the 28th instant, the birthday of the Prince Imperial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 4. The Sublime Porte has granted a large mosque as a church to the American priests excommunicated by the Pope.

DOMESTIC.

St. Domingo, Feb. 20, via Havana, March 1. The Dominican Republic has formally declared for annexation to the United States. A vote of the people has been taken, which shows an overwhelming majority in the affirmative.

Chicago, Feb. 24. A special dispatch to the Tribune from St. Paul says the bill which recently passed the Minnesota House of Representatives, providing for submitting to the people of the State an amendment to the constitution on the question of woman suffrage, on which question the women should be allowed to vote, was to-day concurred in, nineteen to twelve. The bill provides the women's votes shall be taken in separate boxes. It is understood Gov. Austin will sign the bill.

Visit to the Cistercian Monastery, Iowa.

A drive of nearly twelve miles on the main road leading from the city of Dubuque brought us to the monastery of the Trappists, or, as they are generally called, the Cistercian Monks. This is one of the most rigorous and self-denying of the orders of the Roman Catholic Church. But three are to be found in North America—one in Canada, one in Kentucky, and the third in Iowa. Here the Pope has granted them an abbot from Rome, and they are just now erecting a new and magnificent Abbey, which will cost half a million of dollars. You enter their enclosure—a farm of 2200 acres—driving along a narrow path, over gentle slopes, through a growth of trees and tangled shrubbery, beautiful enough to tempt any wanderer to linger, then through the wide fields to the lane, lined on either side by rows of poplars, which leads to their present home.

The new Abbey, a few feet further on, will not be completed before June. It is built of lime-stone after the style of the 5th century, with high roofed arches, narrow, stained glass windows, long and gloomy corridors, library and dormitories all arranged so as to shut out the cheerful light and air. Apparently it would accommodate some two hundred and fifty inmates, though we were assured they could arrange for five hundred.

"Four hundred such houses as this," said the monk who accompanied us, pausing on the stairs, "four hundred such stone structures burnt in the time of Luther, and that's what you call The Reformation, ugh!"

The monks rise at two o'clock in the morning and retire at eight. Their beds are a board, with a pillow of straw. Their outside garment, which they lay aside only when at work, is a seamless robe, with an opening for the head. Twelve hours a day are given to devotional exercises, and the remainder to hard labor on their farm, which is, perhaps, the best in the State. They raise the most delicious fruit. Their barn, some 350 feet in length, contains the finest cattle and horses. One of the brotherhood, called the Commercial Monk, takes charge of the buying and selling. The trades are each represented by one of their number. They knit their own stockings, weave their own cloth, and keep close to the rites and customs of their order in olden times. They eat no meat—vegetables and omelette, bread and water, being their diet. Six are at liberty to speak and entertain strangers. The others, unless by express permission from the Abbot, are bound by their vows to observe perpetual silence. Only by signs will they reply to the questions of visitors. All are obliged to serve a term of twelve months before joining the order, when the strength of their resolution and their temper are tested by insult and hardship, closing by a week of solitary fasting and prayer.

The library contains about two thousand volumes. Three or four newspapers are taken in order to learn the price current of produce. Beyond this they are never read.

The monks looked strong and healthy, and some of the countenances were cheerful and intelligent. We noticed a young man slight and delicate in appearance, and learned that he was an American from New York, the son of wealthy parents, who had voluntarily left his home, and was now serving his time of probation. Recently, his mother had discovered his retreat, but none of her entreaties moved him to return.

The old monk, who first appeared to bestow upon us a cordial welcome—for they are earnest in their hospitality—invited us to their ante-room, or dining room, brought a loaf of bread, and filled our glasses with wine of their own making. He was interested in our party, and urged us to become good Catholics and join them. "Ah! this is a blessed life," he said. "It is work and pray, pray and work; no cares, no troubles, no yielding to temptation; there is no happiness like it. In your Protestant church you know nothing of heroism." Some one suggested it was more heroic to stay in the world and fight temptation than to run away from it. "Yes, it might be," he replied, "if you could gain the victory; but I know how sin conquers. For thirty-four years I have renounced the world in order that I may gain heaven at last. Could anybody do more than that?" He was importunate, as we rose to go. "I want to warn you once more to enter the true church. From my high seat in heaven, how can I bear to see you burning in the hot flames of hell?" "We will be saved, father," said one of our number, "through Christ, who saves us all." "Jesus can't save your souls outside the true church;" and we left him mournfully shaking his head.—Cor. Journal, March 4th.

THE CHINESE NEW YEAR was celebrated with great pomp in San Francisco. The day occurred on the 30th of January according to our calendar. The festivities of the New Year, for which there were days of preparation, are numerous, the first day being devoted to the sacrifice of heaven and earth; the second, to the worship of the gods and idols belonging to the family; the third, to the worship of deceased ancestors; the fourth, to prostration before living parents and grandparents; the fifth, to the making of New-Year's calls. The male portion start from their homes to see their friends. On meeting, they bow to each other, shaking their own hands and congratulating each other. In all houses are tables spread with delicacies, fruits of all kinds, candies, hot tea, wines, cigars, cakes, etc., which are offered to calling friends. It being Sunday, the police regulations in regard to firing crackers were carried out, though greatly regretted by the Chinamen, and none were fired till late after church hours. It is the custom for all classes to appear in new clothing at this season, and many of the men were seen upon the streets in satin robes trimmed with fur, and the women with huge waterfalls decked with flowers.

Passing Events.

☞ The Empress Eugenie is in favor of the infallibility of the Pope, and so is her pet preacher, the Abbe Bauer.

☞ During the present year no less than five murders or attempts to murder have been the daily record in the city of New York.

☞ Shocks of earthquake have recently occurred in France, Scotland and other parts of Europe.

☞ The secularization of Father Hyacinthe does not deprive him of his priestly office. He is only absolved from his monastic vows, and is no longer a Carmelite friar, nor subject to the rules of the Carmelite community.

☞ The father of the Welsh "fasting girl" has been prosecuted for permitting her to starve to death.

☞ It is said that within the whole range of histories used in the schools of Great Britain, nothing can be found which relates to the war of the Revolution in this country, or which describes the results following it.

☞ The Catholic priests have made a million of converts in China.

☞ A Paris letter says many persons were killed during the Rochefort riots, notwithstanding the telegrams reported the contrary.

☞ The barque Benefactress, Captain Eldred, which arrived at San Francisco March 1, from Yokohama, Japan, made the passage in twenty-six days, which is probably the quickest run ever accomplished by a sailing vessel between the two ports. She brought a full cargo of fresh teas, consisting of 11,000 packages, which will be at once forwarded to New York by the Pacific Railroad. This is the first cargo sent across the continent by rail, and the event demonstrates the wonderful change which is now taking place in the trade with China and Japan.

☞ Compressed air-drilling has been successfully begun at the west shaft of the Hoosac tunnel, making a progress of four feet per day.

☞ According to the latest statistics, Englishmen are about two inches taller and more than seven pounds lighter than Americans of the same age and similar pursuits.

☞ The Jews in all parts of the world are said to number about 6,000,000.

☞ The English Government is reducing its military establishments in every direction.

☞ Among the interesting discoveries recently made in Pompeii are five musical instruments, a kind of clarionet, one-half silver, and the upper part and mouthpiece of ivory, in an excellent state of preservation.

☞ Napoleon III. has been elected an honorary member of the Antiquarian Society of the Rhine. In acknowledging the favor, he said that his German education was a guarantee for his esteem and sympathy with Germany.

☞ Queen Victoria has neuralgia, which shifts its locality in a way to cause much alarm to her physicians.

☞ The foundry for casting shadows is located in the sun.

☞ Victor Hugo is now the only exile of importance remaining voluntarily outside of France, except the Orleans family, and it is doubtful that they wish to return.

☞ A gigantic aerolite fell on the Table Mountain at the Cape of Good Hope, on the 27th of November, with an explosion which was heard twenty-five miles.

☞ A remarkable revival is going on at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. About one hundred and fifty persons have identified themselves with religion.

☞ The latest story about the assassination of Dr. Livingstone has been completely disposed of by a letter from the brother of the distinguished traveller, who is Consul at Fernando Po. He shows that the fiction is an old one, and owes its origin to some mendacious Portuguese traveler.

☞ Among brakemen on the Erie road are said to be several talented gentlemen, including an accomplished physician who left his home owing to domestic difficulties; also, a graduate of Princeton College, and a victim of Wall street speculations.

☞ A California paper reports a recent "fish shower" near Monterey, in which the fish varied in length from six inches to three feet!

Notices.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the CORNER OF LOWELL AND CAUSEWAY STREETS, BOSTON, on Tuesday evening, April 5th, 1870, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week:

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready;" may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference. In behalf of the church,

GEO. T. ADAMS, MILES GRANT, } Elders.

J. G. HAMBLIN, S HOVEY, GEO T. ADAMS, M. H. PIPER, GEO. E. FOSTER, GEO. W. WOOD, } Committee.

Mass. State Conference.

The annual State Conference will hold their meeting for the choice of officers at Boston, Lowell Street Chapel, Friday, April 8th, at nine A. M. It is desirable that the churches be fully represented at this meeting. Let your delegates be chosen speedily; two for every twenty-five; one for a less number. If delegates cannot come, represent yourselves by letter. Do not fail this time. Come, brethren, to this meeting, alive to every good work, and decide whether the Conference shall live and be a blessing in exerting a holy influence in converting men and spreading the truth; or shall it cease to be? S. W. THURBER, Pres. P. S. BUTLER, Sect.

R. I. and E. Ct. Conference.

☞ Change of time.

That our preachers may be at liberty to attend the Boston Conference, our next conference will be held at West Gloucester, R. I., commencing Wednesday, two o'clock P. M., March 30th, 1870, which is one week earlier than our adjournment. Those coming on N. and W. R. R., leave cars at Putnam. From Providence come to Chepatchet, and be met by team. A team will probably run to Putnam depot Wednesday and Thursday.

Per order of Moderator,

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Discussion.

There will be a discussion held in Quincy Hall, Allegany City, Pa., to commence on Monday evening, March 14th, 1870, and continue for one week, or longer if thought best, between Bro. J. Wendell and Eld. Bacon, pastor of the Universalist church of Pittsburgh.

QUESTION: Eld. Wendell affirming the final destruction of the wicked, Eld. Bacon denies. After discussing that question for three days, Eld. Bacon affirms the final happiness and holiness of all men. Eld. Wendell denies. JOHN A. BEST.

Notice.

Any church wishing the A. C. Conference of Conn. to convene with them in April, will please notify the Secretary of Conference as soon as convenient. GEO L. TEEPLE, Sec., 189 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

Notice.

I wish to say to the churches where I have been laboring for the past years, that I shall have to decline their pressing invitations at present, as the Lord is at work in this city. Some of the vilest of the vile are coming in. A. D. FLAGG.

Springfield, Mass.

Minnesota Conference.

The next quarterly meeting of the Saint Paul District, will be held at High Prairie, Goodhue Co., Minn., commencing Saturday, March 26th, to continue over the Sabbath. A team will be in Northfield on Saturday morning, to meet any friends who may come on the cars.

EDWIN T. HIMES, Secretary.

Wanted,

A home for my little girl in some christian family, where she would receive good religious instruction, as well as have her temporal wants provided for. Am willing to pay liberally for a good place. Her age is two years and a half. Apply soon, stating price per week or month. C. H. SWEET.

Millville, Mass.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two days meeting at the lower North Fork school-house, near Westfield Village, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, March 25th, to continue over the Sabbath following. For the brethren,

J. W. TAYLOR.

Conference.

The "Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference" will be held at Frankfort, Me., commencing Thursday, March 10th, 1870, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and worship with us. The church here love to "entertain strangers." Inquire for Josiah Woodman. F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

Bro. Benjamin Saulpaugh, of Goffstown Village, N. H., has been chosen as a steward of the church, to whom friends can send what they feel the Lord would have them, and he will see that it is judiciously used for Bro. Manning's support and comfort. J. G. SMITH.

Notice

For the benefit of those who desire information concerning the Resuscitator. All letters should be directed to Munger & Weaver, Springfield, Mass., Drawer 81. Also those who got the books printed in German, can change them by sending them to Springfield, as above. H. MUNGER.

Notice.

Correspondents will please address A. E. Bennett, rear of 169 Allen Street, New York, care of E. S. Mellen.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Minot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

S. S. Brewer......Sunday, March 13th
Henry Pratt......Sunday, March 20th

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.

J. G. Smith......Sunday, March 13th
Geo. A. Streeter......Sunday, March 20th
C. Goodrich......Sunday, March 27th
T. M. Preble......Sabbath, April 3d

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.

A. P. Moore......Sunday, March 13th

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)

L. Boutell......Sunday, March 13th
J. S. White......Sunday, March 20th
T. M. Preble......Sabbath, April 10th

CHARLESTOWN.

Preaching at Charlestown, (Evening Star Hall, No. 22 Main Street), every Lord's day.

S. W. Thurber......Sundays, March 13th and 20th
J. S. White......Sunday, March 27th

East Poultney, Vt., (in the Baptist meeting-house), Friday evening, March 11th.
Rutland, Vt......Saturday evening, March 12th and over the following Sabbath. MILES GRANT.

Fairhaven, Mass......Sunday, March 13th C. GOODRICH.

Hyde Park, Mass......Sabbath, March 27th T. M. PREBLE.

Chicopee Falls......Sunday, March 13th and onward. JOHN G. HOOK.

New Bedford......March 1st to 13th
New York, (Cooper Institute)......March 27th and from thence to Philadelphia. F. H. BURBANK.

North Springfield, Vt......Sunday, March 13th
South Ashburnham, Mass......Tuesday eve., March 15th
Fitchburg, Mass......Wednesday evening, March 16th
Wyoming, R. I., Tuesday evening, March 22nd, and over the following Sabbath. Will Bro. E. Bellows labor with me at Wyoming?
Scituate, R. I......evening, March 29th
West Gloucester Conference......March 30th
Abington, Ct......Sunday, April 3d
Danielsonville, Ct......Sunday evening, April 3d
Putnam, Ct......Monday evening, April 4th
Webster, Mass......evening, April 5th
Bridgewater, Vt......Sundays, April 17th and 24th H. F. CARPENTER.

Westfield, Mass......Sunday, March 13th
Chicopee Falls, Mass......Sunday, March 20th A. M. HIGGINS.

Westfield Farms (Baptist Church), Sun., March 27th E. OWEN.

Webster, Mass......Sunday, March 20th
Charleton......evenings, March 22d and 23d
Abington, Ct......Sunday, March 27th
Danielsonville, Ct......evenings, March 29th and 30th
Will some of the Charleton brethren meet me at Webster the 21st?
Will Bro. Ingle meet me at Putnam, on the arrival of the eleven o'clock train on the morning of the 24th? S. S. BREWER.

New Bedford, Mass......Sundays, March 20th and 27th and Sunday, April 3d. J. G. SMITH.

Haverhill, Mass......Sabbath, March 13th D. CARR, JR.

Wakefield, Mass......Thursday evening, March 10th and over the following Sabbath.
Nottingham......Sabbath, March 27th S. S. MOONEY.

Worcester......evenings, March 10th and 11th
Charlton......Sunday, March 13th
Springfield, (on the hill)......Sunday, March 20th
Chicopee Falls......Sunday, March 27th Z. FORD.

Lake Village, N. H., Monday evening March 7th, through the week, over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as it may seem to be duty.
My address will be there for the present.
ALLEN DAMON.

Manchester, N. H......evening, March 15th
Boscawen, N. H., (Gulf school-house), Sabbaths, March 13th and 20th. SIMEON ROBY.

West Abington, Mass......Sunday, March 20th
East Concord Village, N. H., (where brethren may arrange), Saturday evening, March 26th.
Canterbury......Monday evening, March 28th ENOCH MORRILL.

Hopkinton, (Town Hall building)......Sundays, March 13th and April 3d. C. W. SARGENT.

Great Works, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
Rochester, N. H. (Gonic Chapel), Sunday, March 20th MRS. A. MARSTON.

Lee, N. H., (Union House)......Sunday, March 20th
Wednesday Hill (Wiggin school-house), March 27th A. J. GLOVER.

Nashua, N. H......Sundays, March 13th and 20th JOHN H. DADMUN.

Barnstead, N. H., (Tuttle school-house), Saturday evening, March 26th, and over the Sabbath. JOHN PARSONS.

Guilford, N. H., (at B. Leavitt's), evening, March 12th
West Alton, N. H., (meeting-house), Sun., March 13th
Alton, (Flander's school-house), evening, March 13th
N. GLIDDEN. J. L. CHUTE.

Alton Corner, N. H......evenings, March 15th and 16th
Farmington, N. H......evenings, March 17th and 18th
Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house), Sun., March 20th. J. L. CHUTE.

Strafford, N. H. (Robert's school-house), Saturday evening, March 12th, and over the Sabbath.
Epsom (Marden's Corner), Saturday evening, March 19th, and over the Sabbath. JOHN PARSONS. H. M. BRAANT.

North Dorchester, (Union school-house), March 13th
Holderness, N. H., (True school-house), Sab., March 20th. JOHN H. EVANS.

Rawsonville, Vt......Sunday, March 20th
Plymouth, Vt......Sunday, March 27th Z. T. WOOD.

South Berwick, Me., Great Works...Sunday, April 3d
East Rochester, N. H., (for baptism), Sun., March 13th D. M. LEAVITT.

North Sutton, N. H., (at Bro. I. Andrews'), evening, March 12th, and over Sunday. JULIA BUSWELL. L. E. SAULPAUGH.

Vernon, Vt......Sunday, March 13th H. PRATT.

Square Pond, Ct......Sabbath, March 13th P. S. BUTLER.

Holden, Mass......March 13th and April 10th
South Reading, Mass......Sunday, April 17th J. S. WHITE.

Manchester, N. H......Sunday, March 13th A. SIMPSON.

Salem, Mass......Sunday, March 13th C. E. BARNES.

Great Works......evening, March 23d
East Rochester, N. H......Sunday, March 27th
Dover, N. H......Sunday, April 3d E. S. MOULTON.

West Plymouth......Sunday, March 13th and onward as the Lord directs.
Dorchester, (Town House......Sunday, March 20th
Piermont, (Clay meeting-house)......Sunday, March 27th WM. H. SHAW.

West Plymouth, N. H......Sunday, March 13th A. H. CLARK.

Dover, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
Melvin Village, N. H......Sunday, March 27th T. W. PIPER.

West Fairlee, Vt......Sunday, March 13th
Pomfret, Vt......evenings, March 16th and 17th
Bridgewater, Vt......Sundays, March 20th and 27th
Plymouth, Vt......evenings, March 29th, 30th and 31st
North Springfield, Vt......Sundays, April 3d and 10th J. W. THOMAS.

Abington, Ct......Sabbath, March 13th
Rocky Brook, R. I......Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th C. H. SWEET.

Waterbury, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Newfield, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
East Otis, Mass......Sunday, March 27th
Lovely Street, Ct......Sunday, April 3d WM. J. RIPLEY.

Meredith, N. H., (Dolloff Hall)...Sunday, March 13th
Concord, N. H., (Bethel)......evening, March 15th
Manchester, N. H......evening, March 16th
Brentwood, N. H......evening, March 17th
East Kingston, N. H., (Town Hall), Sab., March 20th
Seabrook, N. H., (with Bro. Wm. C. Stewart), evenings, March 24th, 25th, 26th, and Sunday, the 27th. A. A. HOYT.

Kennebunkport, Me......Sundays, March 13th and 20th N. F. NASON.

Piermont, N. H., (Town House), evening, March 12th and over the Sabbath, March 13th.
Porter Village, Me......Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th T. E. LANG, JR.

South Elliot, Me......Sunday, April 3d
Will Bro. Brown please meet me at Portsmouth, first train, on Friday evening, April 1st? JULIA BUSWELL.

Woodstock Valley, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Abington, Ct......Sunday, March 20th A. MORAN.

Wolcottville, Ct......March 13th and April 10th B. HITCHCOCK.

Rochester (Village)......Sunday, March 13th
Alton, (Shaker... Corner)......Sunday, March 20th
South Elliot, Me......Sundays, March 27th and April 3d J. PINKHAM.

Alton Corner, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
Melvin Village, N. H......Sunday, March 20th
Farmington Village, N. H......Sunday, March 27th WM. BODGE.

West Ossipee, N. H., Sunday, March 13th. Subject in the afternoon (by request),—Baptism the great symbol of the resurrection. Any who wish can be baptized.
Madison, N. H., (North Division) evening, March 15th
Albany......evening, March 17th
Upper Bartlett......Sunday, March 20th L. C. & M. MCKINSTRY.

Seabrook, N. H......Sunday, March 13th
East Rochester, N. H......Sunday, March 20th Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliot, Me.

River Point, R. I......Sunday, March 13th GEO. A. STREETER.

New Britain, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Scitico, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
Bristol, Ct......Sunday, March 27th H. H. DICKINSON.

Granby, Salmon Brook......Sunday, March 13th S. M. & H. R. TATRO.

Warehouse Point, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Vernon, Vt......Sunday, March 20th
Westfield, Mass......Sunday, March 27th H. MUNGER.

Northville, N. H., (in the town of Newport), Sundays, March 20th and 27th. E. COTTON.

Vernon, Vt......Sunday, March 27th O. D. WOODRUFF.

Scitico, Ct......Sunday, March 27th G. L. WHITE.

Prospect, Ct......Sunday, March 20th S. WOODRUFF.

East Haddam, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Westfield, Mass......Sunday, March 20th I. H. POTTER.

Woodbury, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
Wolcottville, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
West Meriden, Ct......Sunday, March 27th
Hartford, Ct., (Talcott & Post's Hall), Sun., April 3d GEO. W. BROWN.

Cheshire Street, Ct......Sabbath, March 13th
Southington, Ct......Sabbath, March 20th
Chicopee Falls, Mass......Sabbath, March 27th WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

New Preston, Ct......Sunday, March 13th
New Milford, Ct......Sunday, March 20th
Pawling, N. Y......Sunday, March 27th J. L. WOOD.

Bridgeport, Ct......Sabbath, March 27th G. L. TEEPLE.

North Canton, Ct......Saturday evening, March 12th and over the following Sabbath.
Hartland Hollow (Town Hall), five evenings, commencing Tuesday evening, March 15th.
Pleasant Valley, Ct......Sunday, March 20th and onward through the week. H. K. FLAGG.

Providence, R. I......Sunday, March 20th
Springfield, Mass..Sundays, March 27th and April 3d WM. N. PILE.

Richmond Corner, Me., Saturday evening, March 12th and over the following Sabbath. J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Kennebunk Depot, Me......Sunday, March 20th
Kennebunkport, Me......Sunday, March 27th
Kennebunk Landing......Sunday, April 3d T. P. S. HAMPSON.

Murray, N. Y......Saturday evening, March 19th and over the Sabbath.
Knowlesville, N. Y......Saturday evening, March 26th and over the Sabbath. WM. INGMIRE.

WORCESTER, MASS.

M. Batchelor......Sunday, March 13th
H. F. Carpenter......Sunday, March 20th
H. Munger......Sunday, April 3d

LAWRENCE, MASS.

A. Ross......Sundays, March 13th and 20th
T. W. Piper......Sundays, April 3d and 10th
M. Batchelder......Sunday, April 24th
H. F. Carpenter......Sunday, April 10th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.

P. S. Butler......Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.

C. E. Barnes......Sunday, March 13th
C. Goodrich......Sunday, March 20th

EXETER, N. H.

Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 13th
T. W. Piper......Sunday, March 20th
A. Ross......Sunday, March 27th

DOVER, N. H.

Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)

J. Couch......Sabbath, March 13th
A. Simpson......Sunday, March 20th
Enoch Morrill......Sunday, March 27th
A. Ross......Sunday, April 3d
J. G. Hook......Sunday, April 10th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)

E. Owen......Sundays, March 13th and 20th
Geo. A. Brown......Sunday, April 3d

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

E. S. Moulton......Sunday, March 13th
D. M. Leavitt......Sundays, March 20th and 27th
J. W. White......Sunday, April 3d
J. G. Smith......Sunday, April 10th
C. Goodrich......Sunday, April 17th

SEABROOK, N. H.

E. S. Moulton......Sunday, March 20th

HAMPTON, N. H.

J. G. Smith......Sabbath, March 6th

MANCHESTER, N. H.

J. Couch......Sunday, March 20th
Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, April 3d

DOVER, N. H.

Jer. Hill......Sunday, March 20th
C. W. Sargent......Sunday, April 10th

ELLIOT, ME.

Wm. C. Stewart......Sunday, March 13th
Wm. H. Mitchell......Sunday, March 20th

BONNY EAGLE, ME.

T. P. S. Hampson......Sunday, March 13th

BRISTOL, CT.

Seth Woodruff......Sabbath, March 13th
R. K. Stark......Sabbath, March 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CT.

S. W. Bishop......Sunday, March 20th
Rufus Wendell......Sunday, April 17th and evenings, April 18th, 19th and 20th.

NEW BRITAIN, CT.

H. H. Dickinson......Sabbath, March 13th
F. H. Burbank......Sabbath, March 20th
S. C. Hancock......Sabbath, March 27th
Rufus Wendell......Sabbath, April 3d
Wm. N. Pile......Sabbath, April 10th
S. S. Brewer......Sabbaths, April 17th and 24th

DANIELSONVILLE, CT.

A. Bellows......Sabbath, March 13th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)

G. L. Teeple......Sabbaths, March 13th and 20th
B. Hitchcock......Sabbath, March 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CONN.

W. N. Pile......Sunday, March 13th

MINNESOTA.

Utica......March 10th and 13th
St. Charles......March 14th and 15th
West St. Paul......March 20th
Rockford......March 23d and 27th
Forest City......April 1st and 3d
Castle Rock......April 8th and 10th
Prescott, Wis......April 17th O. R. FASSETT.

Melvin, S. H., two miles south-east of Townville, Crawford Co., Saturday evening, and Sunday, at 10½ A. M., March 12th and 13th.
Bromley, S. H., two miles south of Hyde town, 2½ P. M.
Hall, S. H., four miles east of Townville, March 20th, 11 A. M.
Rootville, (where I live), evening March 20th.
Clark, S. H., two miles south-east of Spartansburg, evening, March 25th.
Abbys, S. H., four miles south of Columbus, Warren Co., Pa., evening, March 26th, and over Sunday.
Rootville, Break Bread......first Sunday in the month JOHN T. ONGLEY.

ROCHESTER, N. H.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to conflict.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION, 14 LAURENS STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Sunday morning, prayer and conference, six o'clock Sunday School, two o'clock P. M. Love feast, four o'clock P. M. Preaching, seven o'clock P. M. Monday, (class meeting), seven o'clock P. M. Wednesday, (preaching), seven o'clock P. M. Friday, (prayer and conference), seven o'clock P. M. Come one, come all. A. K. SMITH, Principal.

PORTLAND, ME.

Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block 253½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Advent Church formerly meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, have removed to 405 Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the present. Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 19 Orchard Street.

Wyoming, R. I......1st Sabbath in each month
Westerly, R. I......2d Sabbath in each month
Riverpoint, R. I......3d Sabbath in each month
Bristol, R. I......4th Sabbath in each month A. DURFEE.

Business.

Letters Received.

D. G. M., S Temple, N H Barbour, N B McMurphy, J W Thomas, E S Eastman, T R Weaver, E H Durand, C Hill, I C Wellcome, L F Cole, B H Richardson, G W Ashdown, H S Mitchell, L Mead, C Tuller, B W Davis, C A Colton.

Cash received for Books and Tracts.

J V Himes $26.01, E S Gage $3.00, P Kelley 35c, J Benson 75c, J F Funk & Bro. $3.00, G Tilly $3.00, O Hibbard 50c, S Roberts $1.00, J Carney 35c, T L Waugh $1.10, W H Gewitts 35c, J Mott 60c, R Lovell 35c, W C Nelson $3.42, L Roundeville 35c, J L Locke 35c, J G Baker $5.00, C Wilder $1.60, W Miles $1.25, D D Reed $15.00, P A Smith 50c, J F Atwood 50c, S B Daggett $1.00, C H Tucker $1.23, C Marsh $1.20, S Tenney 35c, A J Phillbrick $1.14, J Bray 50c, M E Tryon $1.00, O Stannard $2.00, E L Jenkins $1.00, H Goodrich 50c, F Zarisoller $1.40, M Croft 50c, H Walling $3.73, I Loveland $2.00, S Leonard $3.00, W Barker 75c, H E Bernell $1.00, E R Colby 50c, S Frost 45c, C Leonard 35c, S Roby $1.55, E N Whitford 50c, G F Shirley $5.95, Mrs C Holden $3.00, J W Wright $5.00, J Hill 87c, J C Shorey $5.00, P C Child 75c, S B Colton 75c, J Andrews 50c, E T Day $1.15, A C Newell $4.50.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.50 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9½ per dozen; $75.00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cts. per copy additional, when sent by mail.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A WORK THAT THOROUGHLY VENTILATES SPIRITUALISM.

276 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

Price 15 cents single copy. $1.50 per dozen. $10.00 per one hundred.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $3 50 per one hundred copies

LIST OF ENGLISH BIBLES.

We have received and keep on hand the following English Reference Bibles:

Minion, 8vo., marg. ref., large type, circuit binding, $4.50; postage 28 cts. Do. plain binding, $4.00; postage 28 cts.

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., circuit binding, $3 50; postage 20 cts. (Best size for preachers.)

Nonpareil, 16 mo., marg. ref., plain, $2.25; postage 20 cts. Do. ref. between verses, $2.25; postage 24 cts

Pearl, 8 vo., marg. ref., circuit. $3.25; postage 20 cts. Do. plain, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

Any of the above will be sent by mail on receipt of the price.

"ADVENTISM."

We have a supply of this valuable work.

Price in cloth......75 cts., postage 12 cts.
Flexible covers......60 cts., postage 12 cts.
Paper covers......50 cts., postage 6 cts.
In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ The Committee for procuring preachers for Worcester, Mass., for the year 1870, are as follows:—H. M. Blackmer, Willard M. Hall, Willard G. Ruggles, to whom all communications must be addressed.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Westfield, Mass., will please correspond first with E. A. EGGLESTON.

☞ Brethren wishing to correspond with the church at Wakefield, Mass., will please address G. R. TYZZER, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Savoy, which is represented in the Mass. State Conf., will please correspond with Daniel Miller or A. E. Bliss. Those sending appointments, are requested to state which church.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. THOMAS J. SPINNEY.

☞ Bro. JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK has been chosen Corresponding Secretary for the church in Hampton, N. H. Preaching brethren will please notice.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor

☞ Brethren sending appointments for Loudon Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ Any Bro. wishing to come to Seabrook, N. H., to preach, will please address Bro. R. S. Johnson, of Hampton, N. H., or Bro. Charles Barton, of Seabrook.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Goshen, N. H., will please correspond with O. F. CAIN, before sending appointments.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. R. Cooper, No. 4 Hickory Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. YORK, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Advent preaching brethren who may wish to visit Kennebunk Depot, will please address Edwin B. Wells, Kennebunk Depot, Me.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Lewiston, Me., will please correspond first with ALBERT BURGESS, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in South Berwick (Great Works), Me., will please correspond with Bro. Harrison Dow, Cor. Sec.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Vernon, Vt., will please correspond with J. C. Allen.

☞ AUGUSTUS E. SNOW, 1715 M...kham Street, Philadelphia, has been chosen Cor. Secretary of the church worshiping at Ninth and Spring-Garden Streets.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder B. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Those wishing to correspond with the Beers Street Church, New Haven, Ct., will address W. F. CARPENTER, 73 State Street, New Haven.

☞ Brethren desiring to preach in Hartford, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. L. Tiffany.

☞ Brethren wishing to communicate with the church in Pleasant Valley, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Reuel D. White, New Hartford, Conn.

☞ Advent meetings in Meriden, Ct., are held in Circle Hall, on Colony Street. All communications concerning church matters should be directed to E. J. Whitehead, West Meriden, Conn., Box 4.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All brethren wishing to preach in Wrightville, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. D. A. Grant, Torrington, Ct.

☞ All brethren wishing to preach in Newfield, Ct., will please correspond with Bro. Wm. Ripley, Pleasant Valley, Ct.

☞ All preaching brethren desirous of going to New Milford Ct., to preach, will first correspond with J. COGGSWELL.

☞ Brethren wishing to send appointments to Morris, Ct., will please correspond with JOSEPH CURTISS.

WORKS BY I. C. WELLCOME.

A Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv.

Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfilment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. Fifth edition. 180 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

Christian Baptism—its Object and Duty.

Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. A valuable work. Fourth edition. 61 pp. 25 cts. by mail.

The Berean's Casket.

A Collection of Scriptures, in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1.00; leather, $2.50 by mail.

The Plan of Redemption.

BY WELLCOME AND GOUD.

A valuable work on the Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Faith and Hope, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, &c. &c. This work receives great commendation. Third edition. 460 pages. $1.25 by mail.

Israel and the Millennium.

A thorough refutation of Judaism; a valuable exposition of the Scriptures, and clear statement of the Bible doctrine of the Millennium. 162 pages. 25 cts. by mail.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE

Advent Christian Publication Society,

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT. The Common English Version as revised and corrected by the American Bible Union. Prices, by mail, post-paid—Family and Pulpit Edition (8vo. Pica), Plain Cloth, $1.25; Extra Cloth, $2.75. Medium size (18mo. Brevier), Plain Cloth, 85c; Extra Cloth, $1.10; Sheep, $1.25; Roan, Colored Edges, $1.60. Miniature Edition, for Children and Sunday schools,—cloth, 25c.; roan, 50c.; gilt, 75c.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or the Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. Arranged for the use of Ministers, Teachers, and Students of the Bible With two Maps, and a variety of useful Tables. Price, by mail, 40 cents. Postage 8 cts.

UNIVERSALISM EXPOSED from the Inner Temple, and shown to be, in its results, no better than Infidelity. By John T. Walsh. 5c. single by mail; 50c. per dozen.

"THE NEXT DISPENSATION Viewed in the Light of Revelation." By Wm. Sheldon. By mail, 12c. single copy; $1.00 per dozen.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament according to the Recension of Griesbach, with an Interlineary Word-for-word Translation, etc., etc. Cloth, $4.00; by mail, $4.16. Leather back, $6.00; by mail, $6.16.

THE EXISTENCE OF HOLY ANGELS; their Origin, Nature, Rank and Titles, their Ministry and Various Offices in the work of Human Redemption, and in the Administration of the Government of God By Wm. Shepherd. 20c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of Demons: An Examination of its Origin, Morals, Doctrines, and Politics. By Miles Grant. Single copy, 15c.; eight copies for $1.00; $10.00 per hundred.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. The Golden Rule in High Life and Low Life. By D. F. Newton. $1.50; by mail, $1.70.

LOUIS NAPOLEON, the Destined Monarch of the World, and Personal Antichrist. By M. Baxter. $1.00; by mail, $1.12.

FABLES OF INFIDELITY AND FACTS OF FAITH; the absurdity of Atheism, Pantheism and Rationalism. By Robert Patterson. In cloth, $1.00 postpaid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; a Reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible." By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE to the Holy Scriptures. Leather, $2.00; by mail, $2.26; Cloth, $1.75; by mail, $2.07.

EVERYBODY'S BOOK; the Personality of God; The Devil, his origin, personality, power, and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c; by mail, 12c.

HOME, MARRIAGE, AND FAMILY RELATIONS, in the light of Scripture. By James Inglis. 15c; eight copies for $1.00.

STORIES FOR YOUNG PILGRIMS. 16pp. each, in paper covers, with illustrations. 30 cents per dozen; $2.00 per 100; 5c. single, postpaid.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 3 cts; by mail, 5c.

THE FIRST DAY SABBATH. By T. M. Preble. A new and interesting work. pp. 471. Price $1.50.

THE TWO ADAMS. By T. M. Preble. 5 cts. single; by mail, 7 cts.

THE THREE KINGDOMS. By T. M. Preble. 15c.; postage 2 cts., or by mail 17 cts.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES FOR CHILDREN. By Elder T. M. Preble. pp. 234. 80c. by mail.

HEALTH REFORMER'S COOK BOOK. Price 30c; by mail, 32c.

BLIND BARTIMEUS; or, How to be Saved. 25c. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Single 4c., postpaid.

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH. Is its observance binding? By G. W. Baily. 23pp. Single 5c. postpaid.

SPIRITUAL EVIL: A Warning for the Unwary. By Thomas Carlyle. 3c. single; 5c. by mail; 20c. per dozen.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR; or, Spiritualism; What it is, and what it is not. Paper covers, $1.00; by mail; cloth, $1.25 by mail.

CHILDREN'S HYMNS. For Sunday Schools, etc. 5c; per dozen, 50c.

BETHLEHEM: a Rhyme for Children. By H. L. Hastings. 10c. postpaid; $1.00 a dozen.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE for general use in the study of the Scriptures; with five colored Maps and 250 Engravings. Sheep, $2.00; by mail, $2.25. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.75.

THE LIFE OF TRUST. The Effects of Prayer and Faith. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Muller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL and the Scriptural Millennium," by I. C. Wellcome and Clarkson Goud. Price 25c; postage 2c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By I. C. Wellcome. pp. 61. Price by mail, 25c.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?—a tract on War. By I. C. Wellcome. 10c.

THE MILLENNIUM. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 60 pp. Single copy 15c.

CHLOE LANKTON, or Light beyond the Clouds. A Story of Real Life. 75c; by mail, 87c., postpaid.

DIPHTHERIA; its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D. 10c; by mail, 12c.

THE DAY AND THE HOUR: a Lecture, by Joseph A. Seiss, D. D. 15c.

OUR LOSS IN ADAM OUR GAIN IN CHRIST. A valuable tract on the Atonement. By H. F. Carpenter. 5c. single copy, by mail; 40c. per dozen.

THE BIBLE, OR TRADITION—Which shall we Believe?" An excellent tract. By S. L. Manley. 3c. single copy by mail; 20c. per dozen.

"ONE MORE INVITATION." A tract of four pages. By mail, 35c. per 100 copies.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

VOICE OF THE THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.00.

THESSALONICA, the Model Church, and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM, by Dr. Ramsay. Cloth, $1.00.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY between God and Man, with various tracts. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

LOOKING FORWARD; or, Prospects of the Church; By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

MATTHEW XXIV. AND XXV. An Exposition, showing Christ's Predictions fulfilled, and his Kingdom near. By I. C. Wellcome. 25c; by mail, 27c.

THE CELESTIAL RAILROAD; or, Modern Pilgrim's Progress. 8c; by mail, 10c.

THE GREAT SYMBOLIC CHART of the times to Daniel and John. On Cloth, by mail, $4.00.

THAT MAN OF SIN. By Eld. O. R. Fassett. To which is added "The Only Hope." Price, 5c. single, postage 2c. 50c. per dozen; postage 5c.

CANON OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES examined in the light of History. By Prof. L. Gaussen, of Geneva, Switzerland. $1.75; by mail, $2.00.

PREMATURE DECAY of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. 6c; by mail, 8c.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By I. C. Wellcome and C. Goud. On the Old and New Covenants, the Atonement, Redemption, Restitution, Kingdom, Millennium, True Israel, etc. etc. Second Edition. 460 pp. $1.25.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT as taught in the Scriptures. Comprising Pauline Theology, Destiny of the Wicked, Old Paths, Retribution, and Will all Men be Saved? By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1.00; paper 50c.

STATE OF THE DEAD, and Punishment of the Wicked. A Discussion between Miles Grant and W. W. Clayton. Paper, 20c.; by mail, 22c. Cloth, 40c; by mail, 50c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the Wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c; by mail, 29c.

WHAT IS MAN? A Bible View of his Creation. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? A Bible View of its meaning. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS; Thief on the Cross, etc. By M. Grant. 5c; by mail, 7c.

ENDLESS MISERY not a Bible Doctrine. 4c; by mail, 6c.

THE WICKED NOT IMMORTAL—(with 200 proof texts.) 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING OF THE WORD HELL. 3c; by mail, 4c.

BIBLE MEANING of Forever and Everlasting. 2c; by mail, 4c.

SMOKE OF TORMENT and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c; by mail, 3c.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED.
WHAT IS MAN?
THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?
THE SPIRIT—WHAT IS IT?
THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

All the above works in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston Mass.

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

1. Home......16 pp.
2. Life Insurance......16 pp.
3. Lost! Lost!......8 pp.
4. Brother, shall we meet?......8 pp.
5. About God (for children)......4 pp.
6. Worth Knowing......4 pp.
7. Peace in Christ......4 pp.
8. New......4 pp.

The above practical tracts, ... will be sent, postpaid:

One set (64 pp.)......
1000 pp......$1.00
1000 pp., (by express, not prepaid)......$0.80

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Evening Hours.

BY

E. P. Woodward.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand." Eccles. 11:6.

LET THE LIGHT SHINE.

The path of life is full of danger and darkness. The danger makes the darkness more terrible, and the darkness multiplies the dangers ten-fold. And men press on, escaping one danger, to fall by another; and avoiding all dangers, to be lost in the shades of the impending darkness. Through this runs the "narrow way," direct and unvarying, to the land of safety and eternal light. And for the firm footing and perfect safety of this way, the hearts of men are sighing. But little power has man to tell where to find this way, or to follow it when once found; for "thick darkness" envelopes the whole.

Many methods have been tried to lighten up this path of life. Many are they who say their light is the true light, and alone able to guide a lost world to the haven of rest. And so we see a thousand flickering, wandering lights, bewildering the vision, only revealing danger when in its very presence, and giving no certain view of the end.

To christians is given the true light of the living word. And on their manner of using it, depends the question whether the world shall have an unfailing guide through the dangers and darkness of this life. Some, with this light in their hands, run hither and thither, taking hold of this man and that man, telling them to throw away their light, because they have a better one; arguing, disputing, wrangling, because men will not accept their light; waxing earnest in their opposition; entirely forgetting the sad fact that their light only adds one more to the bewildering maze, perhaps scarcely distinguishable from many others.

But he who would achieve the greatest success, allows no challenge of a false light-bearer to divert him from his purpose. He may answer, "My light is the true light, and yours is not;" but to prove it he uses few words. Following the command of his risen Lord, he calmly treads the narrow way, showing by the light of his "good works" that there is a better way, and bearing before him the lamp of the living word, whose steady, unwavering light pierces the surrounding gloom, reveals the only way where one can walk safely, and shows, what no other light can ever show, the goal which lies at the end of the race.

O, then, thou light-bearer of the Lord, above all other things, let your light shine. So shalt thou reveal to lost men the path to eternal safety, and do more to win them from the wild, uncertain pursuit of error and folly, than all the arguments, reproaches, or ridicule which men have unwisely used to press sinners into the way of truth. However much the enemy may reproach and revile, LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE; and the feeble rays of light which spring from human wisdom, will all be eclipsed in the light of His word, who dwelleth in the light which no man can approach unto; and from whose presence darkness shall forever flee away.

No Internal Molten Mass.

The geologists are in trouble. They cannot settle the foundation principles of their favorite science. After a long and hard struggle between the aqueous and igneous theories of the earth's formation, it was generally supposed that the igneous had won the day, at least so far as relates to the order of their worship. If anything was supposed to be settled in geology, it was that the center of the earth has been, or is, in a molten state, and that the granite rocks are unstratified, and give evidence of being formed under great pressure and intense heat. Earthquakes and volcanoes were referred to as proofs of this great internal heat, and the protrusion of trap rock as a proof of the molten state. On this granite as a solid foundation, the stratified rocks were supposed to rest, though of necessity the order is generally disturbed by the long action of subterranean forces.

But the foundation seems at last falling through. The aqueous theory has won a new triumph, and is driving its rival from the field. Granite is found to be not of igneous but of aqueous formation. Some years ago, a Mr. Evan Hopkins, of England, broached a new theory, and attempted to prove on scientific principles, that granite was formed not horizontally, but vertically, and not by heat and pressure, but by solution and magnetism. His speculations at first attracted little attention, and excited indeed much derision, but they have gradually attained the assent of many masters in the science.

Prof. Thompson, by rigid mathematical reasoning from well-known physical laws, also proved that the existence of a liquid ocean in the interior of the earth was simply impossible. He declared it to be a physical necessity that "the interior must be even more rigid than the superficial parts."

Leading geologists are frankly surrendering the old theory, and Prof. Ansted in a paper read before the British Association in 1867, says: "Geologists, until recently, have spoken of granite as a primitive rock, as the nucleus of the earth, and as having been from time to time erupted, playing an important part in the disturbances by which the general framework of the earth is supposed to have been constructed. The observations of Daubree and Sorby show that all true granite has been elaborated with water, under great pressure, at a temperature below melting heat; that it has neither been ejected nor has it formed a framework. There are granites of all ages and of many kinds. Numerous observations show that granite alternates with and passes into stratified rocks, and must itself in such cases be stratified rock, and that its production does not necessarily involve the destruction and obliteration of all the stratified rocks with which it is associated. This view of the nature of granite will greatly affect the theories of geology."

This is no longer a matter of theory, but of demonstration. Granite cannot have an igneous origin. Chemists testify that the laws of chemical action disprove it. The presence of black lead in granite and gneiss is inconsistent with melting heat, for black lead is pure carbon, and would have been reduced to ashes by heat; and in turn would have also reduced the mica and hornblende, as carbon always operates on silicates in blast furnaces. The chemists also testify that if the granites were once in a melted state, the magnetic iron-ore in them would have united with the silicates, forming a vitreous instead of a crystaline rock. Attempts have been made to resolve granite by heat, into what was regarded as its original state, but they failed utterly. It would not melt; its crystals gradually decomposed, or turned into black glass, confirming the opinions of the chemical critics.

The laws of gravity also bears witness against the igneous origin. As the Annual of Scientific Discovery says: "If granite were once in a molten condition, then, as it cooled in the first place, quartz must have crystalized out, and would have sunk down through the still molten mass, while feldspar and mica must have crystalized at a much later stage of cooling, as the necessary consequence of their different degrees of fusibility."

As a last and conclusive stage of proof that granite is of aqueous and not of igneous origin, chemists have succeeded in producing feldspar, the base of granite, from solutions of kaolin and alkaline silicates in heated water, and as it is generally conceded that mica and quartz, the other principal ingredients, are aqueous deposits, the demonstration may be regarded as complete.

The science of geology, therefore, will need a thorough reconstruction. If the igneous origin of granite is given up, the idea of a molten mass at the earth's center will also be abandoned. If this intense central heat be exploded, the argument for a gradual cooling of the earth from firemist will limp badly, and the Laplace theory of physical development will lose all probability. And, still further, if the granites are not the most ancient formations, but are often of modern dates, intermingled with rock of the secondary or even tertiary period, it may be necessary to make long deductions from geological time-tables.

The above extract from the Christian Standard may well furnish food for serious thought. Geologists have so long and so boldly proclaimed that "the testimony of the rocks" would shortly overturn the word of our God, that we can very calmly witness the overthrow of their favorite theories, and the disproval of their supposed facts. The Christian is safe in waiting a long time before he allows the statements and theories of men to destroy his faith in those eternal verities, upon which no facts, and no reasons, and no theories, can ever shed one ray of steady light. And he who wraps about himself the mantle of self-sufficiency, and, with the shield of worldly pride, shuts out the "light that shineth in a dark place," may follow the feeble "light of nature," and the flickering, uncertain lamp of reason; but, since he has no guide who can show him the end from the beginning, his pilgrimage is at best a venture, an experiment, which will surely leave him on the dark mountains of doubt, the lamp of reason gone out, the ignis fatuus of nature's light bewildering his vision, and himself stumbling and falling, to rise no more.

To some, the ideas suggested by the facts stated above, may seem at variance with the teachings of Scripture concerning the future destiny of earth, and perhaps render of little worth some of the theories respecting the ways and means by which God shall one day cleanse the world by fire; but this need not shake their faith in the word which has declared this destiny to be in store for a rebellious race. Science is daily revealing new forces, and hitherto unknown resources of power, which make the idea of a burning world very easy to comprehend, and not difficult of belief, even for those who see in nature only the operations of blind, unintelligent forces. And when the great day at last comes, it will matter little whether the world is heaving with the surges of internal fire, or is covered with a mantle of perpetual snow.

"Saved as by Fire."

"For we are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry,—God's building ... Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed [made plain] by [en, in] fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.... If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved, yet so asby [dia, through, out from the midst of] fire."

The servant of Christ can only build on the foundation already laid,—Jesus Christ. He may build on this foundation, wisely or foolishly, according to the grace of God which is given him as a wise master-builder. He may preach the plain, unvarnished truth, in simplicity and sincerity, warning sinners with earnestness and without fear, destroying false hopes, building a structure which shall both shelter the believer, and be a perpetual witness for God; or, he can be lazy, smooth-tongued, passing by sin, raising false hopes and unreal expectations.

When the day of trial comes, the wise builder will see the fruits of his labor in those he has led to Christ, and fed with the truth of God; while the foolish builder will see all his labor lost, his boasted structure melting away before his eyes, and himself saved only by that grace of God that can overlook a wasted life, and save him for the love he bore to Christ:—just like a man whose dwelling is in flames, and himself saved from the same fate only by being dragged through, and out of, the threatened death. Let every one strive to build wisely.

For the World's Crisis.

USELESS THINGS.

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"—Isa. 55: 2.

Comparatively few go to the miser's extreme, and deny themselves of all that they can possibly do without and sustain life. And the number of those who occupy the happy middle ground of true economy, is far less than of those who are in some degree guilty of extravagance. Let us dwell for a moment upon some of the things which are not at all necessary, but which multitudes seek for with great eagerness.

1. Strong Drink. It is said that in the largest city in America, three times as much money is paid for liquor as for bread. Here the question is appropriate, "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread?" But very few of those to whom the question applies, will give heed to it. Three times as much for strong drink, as for bread! And throughout the country, and the whole world, there is a fearful amount wasted in the purchase of this worse than useless thing, drink.

2. Vain Amusements. Balls, parties, festivals, theatres, useless and idle games, and all that can be classed under this head—what a vast amount of time and money is wasted here.

Useless Ornaments, whether upon the person, or the dwelling; the outside finish, or the furniture and furnishing within; in many cases these useless things cost many times more than the essential and needful part of the establishment. Much more might be said on this point, but let each think for himself.

4. Needless and Hurtful Indulgence in Eating. Probably as much as five times the money is paid in this country for what is called food, as there need to be, or ought to be. The most wholesome food is not the most expensive. The best, and most nutritious food, that which is best adapted to strengthen and sustain the body, can be obtained in abundance for less than one fifth of the ordinary cost of living. But we may adopt the language of the ancient prophet and say, "Who hath believed our report?" And who will take the admonition here given? Only a part of the useless things" are here mentioned, but to the reflective mind a vast field of thought is opened. We cannot speak of the besetting sins, or "darling" sins of the people without giving offence. Those things rolled as a "sweet morsel under the tongue," must be passed by in silence. Is it so? Can we say that tobacco, tea, coffee, spices, and many other things in common use, are utterly needless? Yes, we will declare that this is our belief, and we are by no means going to extremes in this direction.

Webster, Mass. F. H. Chamberlain.

Selected for the Crisis.

PENITENTIAL HYMN.

Jesus, I thy yoke have taken,
And I come to learn of thee;
Aid me, that I be not shaken,
Teach me now to come to thee.

Oft thy warnings I've neglected,
Oft thy calls unheeded came;
Oft thy invitations slighted,
And my heart scarce knew thy name.

I have to temptations yielded,
When thy friendly voice I heard;
I have turned my back upon thee,
And have oft despised thy word.

I am weak and heavy laden,
Sadly I have toiled in pain;
Help my aching heart to love thee;
Help me find thy love again!

Save me from the brink of ruin,
Let me fly unto thy breast;
Shield my heart from strife and sorrow,
Keep my soul and give me rest.

Can I hope to win thy pity?
Can I ever gain thy love?
Can I e'er expect to join thee,
When thou comest from above?

Shall I join the saints in glory,
Where temptations never come?
Shall I—will I tell the story,
That I am a ransomed one?

Blessed Jesus, wilt thou take me?
Take my weary soul to thee.
Let the world and all forsake me,
If thou wilt but save poor me!

Altered and revised by J. N. Berry.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ARAMAIC, SADDUCEEAN, AND PHARISAIC FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY O. R. FASSETT.

(Continued.)

Respecting the Jewish nation to whom had been entrusted the "lively oracles," revealing the future destinies of men, we may say in the language of others: "The belief in a future state may be said to have been an open question among the Jews, when our Lord appeared and 'brought life and immortality to light.'" *

The Jews were divided into two leading sects—the Sadducees and Pharisees—in the days of Christ and his apostles. The Sadducees rejected the doctrine of the resurrection as taught in the sacred Scriptures. They agreed that it was not a doctrine taught in the writings of Moses, and adverse to the law. Hence they encountered Jesus in an argument upon this question. "The same day came to him the Sadducees, which say there is no resurrection, saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother."—Matt. 22: 23–32. They then present the case of a woman who had married "seven" brethren in succession; "and last of all the woman died also." They then inquire of him, "In the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her."

Thus they supposed that Moses would not have given such a law, involving a family difficulty hereafter in the resurrection state, had he believed and taught the doctrine. Christ replies: "Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the Scriptures, neither the power of God?" A fact true of every one who denies the resurrection. Then he proceeds to show that Moses did teach the doctrine, and that it was found declared in his writings. "As touching the resurrection of the dead, ... have ye not read, ... I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but of the living." "Even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob."—Mark 12: 26; Luke 20: 37.

Some most inconsistently maintain, from this language of Jesus to convince the Sadducees of the doctrine of the resurrection, that he teaches the present conscious and living existence of these patriarchs. If that were true, how would that prove their resurrection? There are thousands of spiritualists in the present day who maintain the existence of human spirits independent of the body, and yet have no faith in a resurrection. And had he convinced them of this fact, would it follow that they would then believe in their resurrection from the dead "at the last day"? Certainly not. God, in affirming himself to be not the God of the dead, but of the living, declares the certainty of the resurrection of these patriarchs from the dead; and when he affirms, "I am the God of Abraham," in the midst of "the burning bush" (emblem of an immortal church), he declares their resurrection to immortality. ("As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were." Rom. 4: 17.

Rev. Mr. Bonar, an eminent Scotch divine, refers to Matt. 22: 23, when penning the following in sight of the cave of Machpelah, thus giving his testimony in favor of this view: "The great point on which Abraham's testimony bore, was the resurrection; and the terminating point of the divine testimony was the same. 'Touching the resurrection.' Matt. 22. And it was the same testimony that embodied the anxiety of these patriarchs 'concerning their bones.' One feels that it is round the tomb of Abraham, the place where his dust lies waiting for the resurrection, that special interest gathers. It is this tomb above others that is the intimation of patriarchal faith and hope. Could we get access to the cave itself, we might find the bodies of these patriarchs still there, or at least that of Jacob, for we read—'The Egyptians embalmed Jacob.' There are mummies in Egypt as old as the days of Abraham. Their resurrection does not depend on this. They were careful about their bones, only that they might have a testimony to their hope. They waited the resurrection."

The Sadducees went still further in their unbelief. They did not believe in any future existence whatever after death. "For the Sadducees say there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit." They were complete infidels as regards any future state. "The Sadducees did not believe in any future state, nor in any spiritual existence independent of the body."—Conybeare and Howson. Such was the state of the Jewish church at the time Christ came and the apostles preached. Its principal sect maintained no future life to man! The Sadducees had attained place and power. The high priest of the Jews, and several of the Sanhedrim, and others of the priests, were of this sect. "Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him [which is the sect of the Sadducees], and were filled with indignation, and laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison."—Acts 5: 17, 18. Afterward they brought them out and said, "Did we not straitly command you that you should not teach in this name? and behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine."—v. 28. "And as they [the apostles] spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them, being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead."

This was the "doctrine" with which they "filled Jerusalem," and at which their enemies were so greatly incensed; and hence on this occasion, as well as in the other instance, "Annas, the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem," and called the apostles to account." Acts 4: 1, 2, 6. What a necessity was there, then, for a revival of the doctrine of "life and immortality" by a resurrection from the dead, in the days of Christ and the apostolic church.

The Pharisees were a sect who believed in a resurrection. They were orthodox respecting this faith and hope. However, they were divided into two parties: those of the Hellenistic school, and those of the Aramaic. The former had incorporated into their faith the heathen doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and its conscious rewards in the intermediate state between death and the resurrection. They were much the largest party of the Pharisees, and whom Jesus often rebuked, and charged with "making void the word of God by their tradition."

Their doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and rewards in death, nullified and forestalled the doctrine of a coming Messiah and the resurrection from the dead; and hence Jesus warned his disciples against their doctrine, as he did that of the Sadducees: "Beware of the doctrine of the Pharisees." "Beware of the doctrine of the Sadducees." "There was no lack of Hellenistic synagogues at Jerusalem, which at the seasons of the festivals would be crowded with foreign pilgrims and become the scenes of animated discussions." *

The manner in which the doctrine of the immortality of the soul became the faith of this sect, was through apochryphal writings of Jewish priests, who united it with the doctrine of the resurrection, something as Wm. Tyndal charges the Papists with this error: "The Pope joineth the spiritual doctrine of Christ (the resurrection which we are warned to look for every hour) with the fleshly doctrine of philosophers [the immortality of the soul]; things so contrary that they cannot agree. If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be. In putting departed souls in heaven, hell, and purgatory, you destroy the argument wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection."

Says Gibbon as a historian: "To the authority of Scripture the Pharisees added that of tradition, several speculative tenets from the philosophy or religion of the eastern nations; and as the Pharisees, by their austerity of manner, had drawn into their party the body of the Jewish people, the immortality of the soul became the prevailing sentiment of the synagogue, under the Asmonean princes and pontiff."—Vol. 1., pp. 550, 551.

M. Renan adds his testimony, and we merely quote him for the historic fact, and not because we sanction his views of Jesus: "Israel possessed not the the doctrine termed spiritualistic; this doctrine sprang from Greek philosophy. The ancient Hebrew writings contain no trace of it. Some Jews embraced the Hellenic culture not to speak of the Jewish school in Egypt, in which attempts to amalgamate Hellenism and Judaism had been continued for nearly two hundred years. Josephus furnishes us with a Jew completely Hellenised."

Josephus being a distinguished Jewish historian of the age of Christ and his apostles, by reference to his writings we shall be able to determine the faith of the Pharisees of his party; and after quoting the Evangelist Luke upon this point, we will refer to him. "The Sadducees say there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit; the Pharisees confess both."—Acts 23: 8. Here their faith is spoken of as directly the opposite of that of the Sadducees. They also believed in spirit communication. "If a spirit or an angel hath spoken unto him, let us not fight against God."—Acts 23: 9. "Angel" here refers not to the celestial and higher order of intelligences bearing that name, but to a ghost of a man. The disciples, not yet fully rid of tradition concerning the state of the dead, supposed when they saw Jesus after his resurnection that they saw "a spirit." And when they saw Peter at the gate, to the surprise of those praying for his deliverance from prison and death, they within supposed him to be "his angel." Those who believe now in the Pharisaic faith of those in the Hellenistic culture, cannot avoid believing in spirit communication as here taught. Acts 23: 9. The fact is, the Pharisees of this school believed and confessed one thing too much, when they confessed spirit or angel existence and communication anterior to the resurrection.

Referring to Josephus' writings, we find the following mixture of Hellenism and Judaism:—"God hath determined the rising again of those VERY BODIES which you Greeks, seeing to be dissolved, do not believe [their resurrection]; for while you believe the soul is created, and yet is made immortal by God, according to the doctrine of Plato, and this in time, be not incredulous; but believe that God is able, when he hath raised to life that body which was made as a compound of the same elements, to make it immortal; and to every body, shall its own soul be restored; and when it hath clothed itself with that body, it will not be subject to misery."

As to the place of rewards in the intermediate state, we gather the following from Josephus:—"The Pharisees believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and that under the earth there will be rewards and punishments according as they have lived virtuously or viciously in this life."

In reference to the place of rewards, Alexander Campbell says, in a work reviewing Adventism:—"The Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans, located the souls of all the dead under the ground. Were it either desirable or necessary to demonstrate that the receptacle of human spirits was understood by the ancient nations—Egyptians, Jews, and Pagans of all superstitions, to be deeper than the ground, a very long induction of authorities could be introduced. We might fill a documentary evidence incontrovertibly clear and definite."

If we wish to ascertain "the doctrine of the Pharisees," pertaining to the condition of the dead in the intermediate state, we have only to refer to our Lord's parable concerning the rich man and Lazarus, which was addressed to the Pharisees themselves, to teach and impress upon them certain truths, in which he makes use of their ideas and notions respecting that condition; as will be seen by another reference to Josephus, who lived in that age: "Jesus does this, not to teach or sanction the doctrine of the Pharisees, but to enforce other things upon their attention; for then would he be teaching that which he has warned his church to beware of. Now as to hades, wherein the souls of the righteous and unrighteous are detained, it is necessary to speak of it. Hades is a place in the world not regularly finished; a subterraneous region wherein the light of this world does not shine. This region is allotted as a place of custody of souls, in which angels are appointed as guardians to them, who distribute to them temporary punishment, agreeably to each one's behavior and manners. In this region there is a certain place set apart as a lake of fire unquenchable, wherein we suppose no one hath yet been cast; but it is prepared for a day afore determined by God, in which one righteous sentence shall be passed upon all men; when the unjust shall be adjudged to this everlasting punishment, as having been the causes of defilement; while the just shall obtain an incorruptible and never-fading kingdom. These are now confined in hades, but not in the same place wherein the unjust are confined. For there is one descent into this region, at whose gate we believe there stands an archangel with an host; which gate those that pass through that are conducted down by the angels appointed over them, they do not go the same way; but they are guided to the right hand, and are led by hymns sung by the angels appointed over that place unto a region of light, in which the just have dwelt from the beginning of the world; where they wait that rest and eternal new life in heaven. This place we call 'The bosom of Abraham.'

But as to the unjust, they are dragged by force to the left hand by the angels allotted for punishment. Now they drag them into the neighborhood of hell itself, who do not stand clear of the hot vapor itself, and in effect are punished thereby; and not only so, but where they see the place (or choir) of the fathers and of the just, even hereby are they punished; for a chaos deep and large is fixed between them, insomuch that a just man that hath compassion upon them cannot be admitted, nor can one that is unjust, if he were bold enough to attempt, pass over it."

A reference to our Lord's parable of the rich man and Lazarus (taken in consideration with the fact, "that the receptacle of human spirits was understood by the ancient nations, Egyptians, Jews, and Pagans of all superstitions, to be deeper han the ground," and "the Hebrews, Greeks and Romans located the souls of all the dead under the ground," Alex. Campbell), will show the allusion of Christ to that superstition. If, therefore, it is still maintained by any that Jesus was teaching doctrine concerning the intermediate state, or rewards after death, then it must be admitted that, in that parable, he taught the same superstition; and there is no possibility of evading it.

It cannot be consistently argued that "we may dissent from their notion of place and other circumstances, without impairing the weight of evidence in favor of such a state as was indicated by the word hades."—Alex. Campbell.

A comparison of the parable with the description of hades, as given by Josephus, a contemporary writer with Jesus, and a Pharisee of the Hellenitic school, will illustrate "the place" and "state" of the departed dead to be one and the same identically.

"The beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom."	"The just are conducted down by the angels, to the right hand, into a region of light: this place we call "the bosom of Abraham."
"The rich man died, and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments."	"The unjust are dragged by force to the left hand, into the neighborhood of hell itself, who do not stand clear of the hot vapor."
"And seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom."	"Where they see the place (or choir) of the fathers and of the just."
"Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed; so that they which would pass from thence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence."	"For a chaos deep and large is fixed between them, insomuch that a just man that hath compassion upon them cannot be admitted, nor can one that is unjust, if he were bold enough to attempt it, pass over it."

Here, then, we have the faith of the Pharisees of the Hellenitic party, who had incorporated the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and its conscious rewards in "a subterraneous region," or in "hades," while they professedly believed in the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, finally, at the day of judgment.

(To be concluded.)

* The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, by Conybeare and Howson. Introduction by Bishop Simpson.

* The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, by Conybeare and Howson. Introduction by Bishop Simpson.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITHFULNESS.

"Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Matt. 25: 23.

This text seems peculiarly adapted to encourage the weak things of this world, whom the Lord has chosen to confound the mighty; who, though entrusted with but two talents, have a large majority over their perhaps more favored brothers who have five talents, yet are inclined to think that as their talent is small, they are to be excused, and the talented ones occupy the time and perform the labor.

Now this is wrong. When God made a "million spears of grass to every one tree," he designed that the grass should be just as useful in its place as the tree. True, the tree in its stateliness and grandeur will draw forth the admiration of men, and with its wide-spreading branches invite to its shade; so the man with ten talents, imbued with the Spirit of God, will reach many hearts, and draw thousands unto him, and gather 'sheaves' abundantly into the garner of the Lord; while the million of little spears of grass scarce attract attention growing in meekness at the foot of the tree, often wet with dew, yet discharging the duties for which it was made. So with the little ones to whom God has entrusted his work. Though the united effort of the million, sowing seed in tears, may accomplish no more than the one, yet, as was said of one of old, they have done what they could.

Faithfulness implies much, not merely occasional prayers or exhortations, or feeding the poor, or clothing the naked; but persistent effort, untiring zeal in the cause of God, laboring as earnestly when the result is seen only by the eye of faith, as when apparent to the natural sense; yielding to no opposition or obstruction, having on the whole armor, never laying it down, until bidden by the Master, laboring for the love of God and perishing men.

The Master called us to work in his vineyard, and none are excused from weakness or inability, for to whom but little is given little is required. Let us all be willing to do that little, to hold up the gospel banner high, proclaim a Savior born, crucified, risen and coming, and living out the beautiful principles of the gospel.

What matters if we, the instruments in the hand of God, are not seen, altogether overlooked here? What though despised of men and set at nought, if we in the gathering day may see some gleanings safe in the garner? That will be glory enough. Let us not excuse ourselves from labor, but rather seek out opportunities, for time is short. What is done must be done quickly. Men and women are rushing on heedlessly to their ruin, and must take up the lamentation of the lost unless speedily set upon the "Rock." Only a little in the future and he that is "filthy must be filthy still."

In view of this let us all arise and seek a fresh unction from on high, and with a living faith in God go about our Master's business, doing what we can with an earnestness unknown in this generation, counting not our lives dear unto us, much less ease and pleasure, that we may win souls to shine as stars in the crown of our rejoicing; that we may hear the "well done, faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord;" that by reason of faithfulness in a few things we may be made ruler over many things in the kingdom of God, according to the promise.

Wolcott, Vt. P. A. Walker.

For the World's Crisis.

CONSECRATION.

O Lord, why is my faith so weak,
My trembling heart so cold?
Why am I loth for thee to speak,
When christians should be bold?

Why all these doubts and gloomy fears,
If thou hast changed my heart?
Why can I not with saints shed tears,
And from all sin depart?

O, where's the joy of which they tell,
So great, so full and deep?
To every sin I'd bid farewell,
If I could only weep.

O Lord, my sins I now forsake,
To thee I humbly bow;
My Savior's praise I e'er will speak,
In heaven record my vow.

Now I can sing, and pray, and weep,
For I am thine, I know;
O, give me grace my vow to keep,
In strength I then shall grow;

And I will show to sinners round,
What God has done for me,
The heavenly joys that I have found,
And what he'll do for thee.

Peru, Ind. H. H. Hall.

THE CLOSING HOURS OF TIME.

Are we really in the winding up of our world's history? If so, what a solemn thought. All to be over so soon. Our work all to be closed up. A day of settlement to dawn. Yes, the scrutinizing eye of the Judge will then be turned with a searching glance upon us. Our past history of faithfulness, or unfaithfulness, will then re-appear, to approve or condemn us. Our hearts, filled with heavenly zeal, or chilling luke-warmness, will then decide our claims to the felicities of a celestial paradise; for we shall then continue "holy still" or "filthy still."

Are we indeed nearing a day of such magnitude? Are we truly living in the closing hours of time? We cannot evade the conclusion that such is the case. Then what is our duty? If the Master is about to return, how should we improve these closing hours? If we have been remiss in duty in days gone by, should we not begin now to do the will of Christ? If we have lived prayerless lives, let us begin to visit the throne of grace, and seek pardon for past indifference, and strength for time to come. Let us go to work for God, and pluck men as brands from the burning. The hours fly—will we improve them? The closing hours of time are upon us; shall we squander them in idleness? Oh! sound out the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," and do it with devoted hearts and earnest minds.—Voice of the West.

Gems.

— The slow, modest, moderate, compact, muscular growth of the healthy body is the type of true christian life; nourished by love, and faith, and truth; and increasing slowly and surely in every grace of the Spirit. Be this our growth;—substance, not show; reality not pretense; building up in holy faith, rather than puffing up by mere worldly knowledge.

— Whatever stands in the way of our progress toward perfection, even if it seems as vast and immovable as a mountain, may be moved from our path by the prayer of faith.

— Christian graces are like perfumes; the more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell. Like stars that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, that are shaken, the deeper root they take, the more fruit they bear.

— Those whose faces are only seen, and whose voices are only heard in seasons of religious revivals, are like the flowers that bloom in the morning and fade in the evening without producing fruit. They are not the evergreens of the church.

— The miller that relies upon the occasional freshet to grind his corn, has a very uncertain prospect of business. What he needs, is the bubbling fountain. So our christianity should be a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

— If we attend carefully to our duty, and keep both beams and motes out of our own eye, those of others will not often seriously trouble us.

— Study to make the whole of your carriage and discourse among men so engaging, as may invite even strangers to love you, and allure them to love religion for your sake.

— God rendereth desolate to induce you to seek a better country. He strikes away every human prop, and puts failure and vexation into every worldly scheme, that you may turn from your idols to him.

— Truth and holiness are, in the christian system, so intimately allied, that the warm and faithful inculcation of the one, lays the foundation for the other.

— It is not until the flower has fallen off that the fruit begins to ripen. So in life it is when romance is past that the practical usefulness begins.

— Our individuality is not destroyed by being with the multitude. Each must do his own work, and do it with all his might.

— No one can impart what he does not possess. No one can teach to others what he has not learned once himself.

— Kill a tree by nourishing and trimming it! What nonsense! Lay the axe at the root.

— Do nothing to-day that thou wilt repent of to-morrow.

— Truth withheld is sometimes a worse deception than a direct mis-statement.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

WHAT TRYING DID.

I want each of you to bring a new scholar to school with you next Sunday," said the superintendent of a Sunday school to his scholars.

"I can't get any new scholars," said several of the children to themselves.

"I'll try what I can do," was the whispered response of a few others. One of the latter went home and said, "Father, will you go to the Sunday school with me?"

"I can't read, my son," replied the father, with a look of shame.

"Our teacher will teach you, dear father," answered the boy, with respect and feeling in his tones.

"Well, I'll go," said the father.

He went, learned to read, sought and found the Savior, and at length became a colporteur. Years passed on, and that man established four hundred Sunday schools, into which thirty-five thousand children were gathered!

Thus you see what trying did. That boy's effort was like a tiny rill, which soon swells into a brook, and at length becomes a river. His efforts, by God's grace, saved his father, and his father being saved, led thirty-five thousand children to the Sunday school!—Rev. P. B. Power.

THE OLD HERMIT.

"Some time ago, a young man, who had great cause of complaint against another, told an old hermit that he was resolved to be avenged. The good old man did all that he could to dissuade him; but seeing that it was impossible, and the young man persisted in seeking vengeance, he said to him, 'At least, my friend, let us pray together before you execute your design.'

Then he began to pray in this way:—

'It is no longer necessary, O God! that thou shouldst defend this young man, and declare thyself his protector, since he has taken upon himself the right of seeking his own revenge, and go against thy injunction, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord."'

As soon as he was finished, the young man fell on his knees before the old hermit and prayed him to forgive him for cherishing such a wicked thought, and also declaring that he would no longer seek revenge of those who had injured him.

The young man was glad he had made known his determination to the hermit, and went away happier than he would have been had he carried it out."

TRUTHFUL AND OBEDIENT.

"Charlie! Charlie!" Clear and sweet as a note struck from a silver bell, the voice rippled over the common.

"That's mother," cried one of the boys, and he instantly threw down his bat, and picked up his jacket and cap.

"Don't go yet!" "Have it out!" "Finish this game!" "Try it again!" cried the players, in noisy chorus.

"I must go—right off—this very minute. I told her I'd come whenever she called."

"Make believe you didn't hear!" they all exclaimed.

"But I did hear!"

"She don't know you did."

"But I know it, and—"

"Let him go," said a bystander. "You can't do anything with him. He's tied to his mother's apron-strings."

"That's so!" said Charlie; "and it's to what every boy ought to be tied; and in a hard knot, too."

"But I wouldn't be such a baby as to run the minute she called," said one.

"I don't call it babyish to keep one's word to his mother," answered the obedient boy, a beautiful light glowing in his blue eyes. "I call that manly; and the boy who don't keep his word to her will never keep it to any one else—you see if he does!" and he hurried away to his cottage home.

Thirty years have passed since those boys played ball on the common. Charles Grey is now a prosperous business man in a large city and his mercantile friends say of him, that "his word is as good as a bond." We asked him once how he acquired such a reputation.

"I never broke my word when a boy, no matter how great the temptation, and the habit formed then, has clung to me through life."—Child's Delight.

LOOK WELL TO YOUR FOOTING.

A man was passing along a high road one day, when he saw a boy standing on the edge of a chalk-pit which was being worked at the time.

"Look well to your footing, my lad!" he cried; for he thought it not unlikely that the bank might give way.

The boy, thinking he was safe enough, paid no heed to the kind warning. He did not care to move, but stood gazing idly before him! Suddenly the edge fell in with a terrible crash. Down he went headlong, and was buried in the rubbish. Help was at hand, and the men worked hard to dig him out: but twenty minutes elapsed before they could reach him; and, when at last they succeeded, it was too late. Smothered in the debris, the boy had lost his life because he would not heed the warning. "Look well to your footing!"—Child's Sower.

Two Paths.—Two paths are before you. A rough one has the finger post, ☞ To Duty. The other is smooth and flowery, with the finger-post ☞ To Pleasure. Those who take the rough one, will find it grow smoother and broader and pleasanter, till it reaches the very gate of the celestial city.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

If paid in advance..............$2.50 a year
Five copies six months to one address......$5.60
Same rate for any larger number under ten.
Ten copies six months to one address......$10.00.
Same rate for any number over ten.

CLUB PRICES PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—The postage in the United States on each single copy of the Crisis is 20 cts. a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write—Private.
Over all business matters, write—Business.
Over all articles for the paper, write—For the Crisis.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's Name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save much labor.
Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, please write Private on the outside of the envelope.
☞ Put business matters and appointments on separate pieces of paper, or so that they can be detached without interfering with any other communication.
☞ All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

Semi-monthly,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

An Illustrated Sunday-School Paper,

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

TERMS.

Payable always in advance.

Single copy, 50 cts. a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.
Ten copies, and any larger number under fifty, when sent to one address, 40 cts. a year for each copy.
Fifty copies, and any number over fifty, when sent to one address, 35 cts. a year for each copy.
To Canada subscribers at the same rates. No extra charge for American postage.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 752. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1870. VOL. XXX.—NO. 26.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, A. ROSS.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
D. MATHEWSON, H. V. DAVIS,
M. BATCHELOR, J. G. HAMBLIN,
H. H. DICKENSON.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer and Business Agent.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

TAKING UP THE CROSS.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me."—Luke 9. 23.
"Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple."—Luke 14: 27.

What is it to take up the cross,
And follow Jesus day by day?
It is, my soul, to cast self-will,
And all which it commands, away:
It is to meet Jehovah's choice,
And, in his will made known, rejoice.

It is to meet the cutting edge
Of pain and grief with naked heart;
Bend to the separating steel,
Smile at the anguish of the smart;
Or, if some natural tears will rise,
Meekly to wipe them from the eyes.

"Take up the cross and follow me":
Does this imply a power to choose,
Amidst the various ills of life,
What to accept, what to refuse?
Ah, no! the pain, the grief, the loss,
Which man selects, is not his cross.

The cross is something undesired,
A heavy, hard, unwelcome thing;
Something the heart's first thought rejects—
The sceptre of its rightful King
Alone can sway the heart to take
And bear its cross for Jesus' sake.

To take the cross and follow Christ,
Is just where nature starts aside;
By grace to check her strong desire,
By grace to bend her lofty pride,
To bring her to accept her pain,
And own her heaviest loss is gain,—

This is the test, the turning point—
Each heart its bitterness doth know;
This to accept, endure, improve,
With this and Christ toward heaven to go;
This doth distinguish, saith his word,
The true disciple of the Lord.

—Montreal Witness.

For the World's Crisis.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BY WILLIAM SHELDON.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46.

(Concluded.)

4. Several passages are quoted from the symbolic book of Revelation, thought to refer to the future doom of the wicked, containing the term "forever," as expressive of the duration of the punishment referred to. Before inquiring whether these texts really refer to the doom of the wicked after the judgment, or merely to a chastisement before the judgment, we will look at the scriptural usage of the term "forever," upon which the stress of our opponent's argument is laid. "Forever" is used in both an emphatic and a comparative sense in the Scriptures. When applied to temporal or perishable things, it is used in a limited sense; and the wicked who "sow to the flesh" shall "reap corruption" instead of incorruption; so when "forever" is applied to the wicked, it is used in a limited sense; but when applied to that which is incorruptible or immortal, it is used in the emphatic sense, and runs parallel with immortality; as for instance, when applied to God, angels, or the resurrected saints, as all are immortal; but when applied to that possessing only corruptibility or mortality, which is the only nature possessed by the wicked, it only runs parallel with mortality. Let us look at a few instances in which the term is used in a comparative or limited sense in the Bible, when applied to temporal or corruptible things.

In speaking of the servant Onesimus, sent back by Paul, he says: "He therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldest receive him forever."—Phil. 1: 15. The length of this "forever" depended upon the length of Onesimus' life after his return; if he lived ten years or more, it would be a "forever" of ten years or more in length, but if he lived only ten days, this "forever" would be limited to ten days' duration. David said: "The Lord . . . chose me . . . to be king over Israel forever."—1 Chron. 28: 4. As he reigned forty years, this forever was forty years long. The term forever in these two instances simply meant as long as the man should live, whether longer or shorter.

Moses permitted the children of Israel to "buy bond-men and bond-maids" of the heathen, and said: "They shall be your bondmen forever."—Lev. 25: 44–46. This could not have meant to all eternity, as this claim would carry the now obsolete system of bondmanship into endless futurity—into hell and heaven. The simple idea was, they were to be their bondmen as long as they should live: hence, if a bondman should live ten years or more after his purchase, that "forever" would be ten or more years long; but if he should live only ten days, that "forever" would be limited to ten days. Again, Moses said, "The priests shall blow with the trumpet; and they shall be to you for an ordinance forever."—Num. 10: 8. Were the priests to blow to all eternity? Are they blowing now? Or is that "forever" past? Jonah thus speaks concerning his three days' imprisonment within the great fish: "The earth with her bars was about me forever."—Jonah 2: 6. Here is one "forever" positively limited to three days' duration.

We are sometimes informed that "forever and ever" signifies more than "forever," and invariably means eternity. We remark (1), this claim concedes the fact that "forever" is a term used in a limited sense; and (2), if "forever and ever" really signifies a longer space of time than "forever," then "forever and ever, even forever and ever," must as really signify a longer space of time than "forever and ever"; and (3) consequently every time we add "ever" to the phrase, we add to the length of time, and thus disprove the eternity of the previously mentioned time.

"Forever" is usually, in the New Testament, translated from the Greek term aion; a noun primarily signifying age, as the age of man, or dispensation; but sometimes translated from aionious, a Greek adjective derived from aion; and hence cannot exceed the meaning of the noun aion from which it is derived. Let us then inquire whether aion, as used in the New Testament, and which is the true root of the word "forever" there used, really and invariably signifies an endless space of time. Jesus said, "The harvest is the end of the (aionos) world."—Matt. 13: 39. "So shall it be in the end of this (aionos) world." ver. 40. "So shall it be at the end of the (aion) world."—v. 49. "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the (aionos) world?"—Matt. 24: 3. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the (aionos) world."—Matt. 28: 20. "Upon whom the ends of the (aionos) world are come."—1 Cor. 10: 11. "But now once in the end of the (aionon) world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."—Heb. 9: 26. "That in the (aiosi) ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace."—Eph. 2: 7. Here the term is used in both its singular and plural forms, translated "world" in the sense of age, and once translated ages; but it is seven times said to have an "end"; hence, the length of this kind of aion, "age," or "forever," must depend upon what it is applied to: if applied to immortal beings, it will run parallel with their existence; but if applied to immortal or perishable beings, it can only run parallel with their existence.

Thus the remark so often made, that forever when applied to the wicked signifies just as long a time as when applied to God, is proved incorrect. We will now proceed to examine some texts containing the term "forever," relied upon by our opponents to prove eternal torment, and learn whether they refer to temporal chastisement, or to the sinner's final reward. "If any man worship the beast, and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb; and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for (aionas aionon) ever and ever; and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast."—Rev. 14: 9–11.

By reading the preceding verses it will be seen that reference is here made to a judgment to be visited upon the Papal power in connection with the fall of Babylon from its previous supremacy over the kings of the earth, which judgment is more fully described in Rev. 18: 4–10, in connection with Babylon's fall: "And I heard another voice out of heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double. How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give. . . . Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. And the kings of the earth . . . shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they see the smoke of her burning, standing afar off for fear of her torment."

Here we have two descriptions of one scene after the political fall of Babylon, two descriptions of judgment on the papal power, not of final judgment after the judgment day arrives, but of temporal judgment before that day comes, because (1) in the first description this "torment" is said to be inflicted on them that "worship the beast"—not that did once worship him; showing that the "torment" and the "worship" belong to the same age; and (2) in the other description the "plagues," the "torment" and "the smoke of her burning" can be seen by men who stand afar off, even "the kings of the earth," her former sympathizers; and certainly the kings of earth cannot see the smoke of a literal hell "afar off." The truth is, the "torment" and "burning" of this corrupt power is symbolic, and precedes the judgment, and has nothing to do with the final punishment of the wicked. Temporal judgments in the past are portrayed in language equally as strong as that here employed. The judgment that fell upon Idumea is thus described: "The streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up forever; from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it forever and ever." Isa. 34: 9, 10. This cannot be applied to hell, (1) because it is to lie "waste," even "from generation to generation," and "none shall pass through it forever," which does not harmonize with the popular idea of hell; and (2) the prophet applies it to Idumea. That temporal judgment, though expressed in such strong language, was never applied to the sinner.

At the final extermination of papacy, it is said "Her smoke rose up forever and ever" (Rev. 19: 3,) being irreparably ruined, as when a house is burned up forever: "rose up" —not is rising up forever. The "torment" of Rev. 20: 10, with its "forever," is limited by "day and night;" but there shall be "no night" after the kingdom comes. Rev. 22: 5.

5. It is often asserted that the soul is immortal, and therefore must live forever in the emphatic sense, either in weal or woe. If assertions were proof, that would settle the matter; but this is the very point that needs to be proved. It never has been proven, and, with due deliberation, we affirm it cannot be. As we have already seen, Bible evidence pronounces eternal life "the gift of God" to the faithful only, "through Jesus Christ," and not an inherent principle independent of him. Many of our opponents, being hard pressed by our arguments, now admit that the Bible does not declare the immortality of the soul, but takes it for granted, or assumes its immortality without anywhere directly affirming it; and to make this look plausible, they tell us that the existence of God is also assumed, and never definitely affirmed; forgetting that it is definitely affirmed: "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and man;" and, "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets;" thus this effort to prop up one error by manufacturing another one, is unavailing.

The immortality of the soul is neither affirmed anywhere in the Bible. It is not once spoken of as a personality distinct from the body. The Bible speaks of man in the present state as "mortal man" (Job 4: 17) without excepting any part; and although the term soul is used over eight hundred times in the Bible, it is not once spoken of as being immortal; yet at the present day people are sufficiently wise above what is written to talk incessantly about "the immortal soul." Whatever doctrine is scriptural can be found in the Scriptures; this cannot be; then why not give it up?

6. It is said by others that the soul is a part of God, and therefore must be immortal, and hence must live forever in some locality. If this assumption were true, it would make God a sinner, for it is "the soul that sinneth" (Ezek. 18: 4,) or, on this hypothesis, a part of God that sinneth in this man, or that man, as the case may be. This makes God commit all the sin in the world, and represents him as eternally tormenting these parts of himself in hell, besides tormenting the innocent body which was only a tool for the soul to commit the crime with. Thus one part of God is represented as being at war with the other part of God, and to carry on this war, these small parts of God, residing in men, make a cat's-paw of the body to do the work of transgression, and finally the greater part of God gets so enraged at these smaller parts of himself, that he damns a part of himself to all eternity, and damns the cat's-paw, or innocent body also. Admit the blasphemous conclusion, or abandon the assumed premises.

7. It is asserted by others that a "living soul" is ascribed to man, and that this is equivalent to a deathless soul. The record reads, concerning the material man, who was formed "of the dust of the ground," that "man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7. We observe (1) that no reference is here made to a soul within man, but to man as a soul, a person; (2) the original nephesh 'g hah y, here rendered "living soul," is also applied to beasts, and rendered "living creature," as in Gen. 1: 21, 24; Gen. 2: 19, and elsewhere; so if it proves the deathlessness of any part of man, it as strongly proves it of the beasts; and (3) we expressly read in Rev. 16: 3, "Every living soul died in the sea;" thus living souls are not deathless souls.

8. Some assume that the "breath of life" which was breathed into man at creation is a principle of eternal life, or a deathless soul. If this were true, it would prove too much, for the same breath of life is possessed also by the beasts. See Gen. 6: 18. Gen. 8: 15, 22. Besides, the "breath of life" is not a personality, but an element.

9. We are often reminded that man was created in the "image of God;" and then, without proof, it is asserted that reference is made not to the body, but to the soul; not to form, but to nature; that God is immortal, and the soul being in the image of God, must also be immortal. If reference were really made to the soul and its nature, instead of man and his form, in contradistinction to the animal creation, then we might carry the contrast a little further: God is all powerful, hence the soul of man must be all-powerful; God possesses foreknowledge, hence the soul of man must possess foreknowledge; God is infinite, hence the soul of man is. These conclusions are just as conclusive, from the assumed premises, as the first; and the principle that admits of the one, demands the others. But what say the Scriptures? "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply." Gen. 1: 27, 28. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." Gen. 9: 6. It is the man who was commanded to multiply, and whose blood could be shed, who was made in the image of God. There is no prohibition against shedding the blood of the beast; but man's blood must not be shed, because he was made in the image of God, in contrast with the form of the animal creation.

10. We frequently hear the remark that sin against an infinite God, calls for an infinite punishment. For a finite man to commit an infinite sin, is just as much impossible as for a stream to rise higher than its fountain. To claim that a three year old child, who had been forbidden to enter the royal palace of a king, should be entitled to the same severity of punishment for this forbidden act as the adult, would be inhuman; and although they had both disobeyed a king, who would say that the disobedience should be punished strictly and exclusively with reference to the high standing of the person disobeyed, with no reference to the standing of the offender? Yet this is but a faint comparison. Think of the wisdom and justice of God, as portrayed to us in the Bible; and then think of him in the light of modern theology, inflicting endless torment on one of his creatures, or millions of them. Take the little child who has just crossed the line of accountability, and has committed the first sin, and that sin of the smallest magnitude, and dies in the act. Can it be that God will consign it to a hell of punishment to all eternity, to writhe in anguish, to shriek in hopeless misery, to wail in agony, with no chance for release, or respite, or mitigation while God lives, because the sin was against an infinite being? Must his anger be infinite? Or will he cause his anger to "cease" in their "destruction?" "He will not keep his anger forever." Sin will not eternally exist. God will make an end of misery. Satan will not eternally stand at the head of a majority of the human family, cursing God, and boasting of his success in being general of a greater portion of the human family than God himself, because "for this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil" (John 3: 8), which cannot be fully done till the devil himself is destroyed; and in due time Christ will "destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." Heb. 2: 14.

The time will come when there will be no sin in the universe of God, no enemies, no devil, and no misery;

"When truth shall sit on every hill,
And peace shall flow in every rill";

and "God shall be all and in all," iniquity having been submerged beneath the dark waves of oblivion, and the saints left to enjoy righteousness unmixed with sin, and undisturbed by the wails of despairing millions, amid the glories of Paradise restored.

For the World's Crisis.

PORTENTS.—NO. 6.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Anciently there existed a literal city called "Babylon," built on either side of the river Euphrates. Both of these names are brought to view in a symbolical sense in the Apocalypse in the sixteenth chapter. The stupendous ecclesiastical institution of Papal Rome is presented under the symbol of a "woman," with the brand of infamy emblazoned upon her forehead. Rev. 17: 5. "Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of earth." In verse 18th, she is represented as reigning over the kings of the earth, as a "great city." Ancient Babylon was a great city; modern symbolic Babylon has been a great symbolic city, in her complicity reigning over kings of earth. Ancient Euphrates was to that ancient city of Babylon the source of immense wealth and support. The Almighty predicted the drying up of these rivers that formed the Euphrates: "That saith to the deep be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers." Isa. 44: 27. "Cyrus, by turning the whole river into the lake by the Paleacopas, 'The river of the Pool,' laid the channel, where it ran through the city, almost dry, so that his army entered it, both above and below, by the bed of the river."

The symbolic Euphrates of Rev. 16: 12, in an analogous sense held the same relation to the Babylon of Revelation, that the ancient river did to that city. It constituted its source of immense wealth. It is thus described by the revelator: "The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." 17: 15. The drying up of this river is predicted to be accomplished by the effect of the sixth vial. "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates, and the water thereof was dried up." This was, doubtless, in our opinion, fulfilled in the reign of terror in France, as we have shown in article No. 5. The abolishment of religion by the action of the French atheistical assembly in that once imperial strong-hold of Popery, that had previously done more than other nations for its support, turned the current of affairs in an opposite direction, and was, in matter of fact, as ruinous to Papal Babylon as was the turning away of the ancient Euphrates from ancient Babylon, that sat upon its waters. Both events ruined both cities. The peoples, and multitudes of France, constituted, by far, the largest proportion of the great Euphrates, and the cutting off of its waters, or peoples, from Babylon the great, did prove in plain matter of fact the drying up of the symbolic river.

"On the memorable 26th of August, in the year 1792, an open profession of atheism and irreligion and infidelity was made, and forthwith acted upon by a whole nation once devoted to the papal superstitions. Christianity was then formally abolished, as a notorious and malignant imposture, by the government of revolutionary France; and so well did the people second them, that, while not a trace of the gospel could be found throughout the reprobate metropolis, every frantic oration in praise of atheism was loudly and enthusiastically applauded."—Faber on the Prophecies, Vol. 3, p. 363.

The effect produced by this vial in drying up the symbolic Euphrates extended to other nations than France.

"At the commencement of the French revolution, the clergy in France were both numerous and wealthy. They amounted to no less than eighteen archbishops, one hundred and eleven bishops, and one hundred and fifty thousand priests, having under their control a revenue of five millions sterling, annually, besides three thousand four hundred convents. The clergy and their wealth were now attacked by the INFIDEL revolutionists, and fell an easy prey. The tithes and revenues of the clergy were taken away, by a decree of the Constituent Assembly; the possessions of the church were now declared to be the property of the nation; the religious orders were abolished, the monks and nuns ejected from their convents, and their immense wealth seized for the nation. [illegible] France, and laid waste the Roman Church, BOTH THERE AND IN NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES. The priests were massacred, her silver shrines and saints were turned into money for the payment of the troops, her bells were converted into cannon, and her churches and convents into barracks for soldiers. From the Atlantic to the Adriatic she presented but one appalling spectacle. She had shed the blood of saints and prophets, and God now gave her blood to drink."—History of the Church, by Goodrich, pp. 183, 184.

Says Marsh, p. 300: "A civil constitution was formed for the clergy, to which all were required to swear, on pain of death or banishment. The great body refused, and priest and altar were overturned, and blood, once esteemed sacred, flowed to the horses' bridles. Such as could, escaped through a thousand dangers, and found an asylum in foreign countries. No tongue can tell the woes of the nation."

Dear reader, there is an astonishing coincidence, as it respects the period of the tribulation of the church, at its commencement and its termination also. I now refer to the interposition of law and governmental authority in both respects. The first is manifest in the following testimony referring to the papal monarch's inaugurating act of persecution at the commencement.

"While the Arian king was striving, by the most just and equitable laws, to clear the church from all simony in the west, the Catholic emperor was employing the most unjust and unchristian means of clearing her from all heresies in the east, that of persecution, and the most cruel persecution any Christian emperor had yet set on foot, or countenanced. For by an edict which he issued to unite all men in one faith, whether Jews, Gentiles, or Christians, such as did not, in the term of three months, embrace and possess the Catholic faith, were declared infamous, and, as such, excluded from employments, both civil and military, rendered incapable of leaving anything by will, and their estates confiscated, whether real or personal. These were convincing arguments of the truth of the Catholic faith; but many, however, withstood them; and against such as did, the imperial edict was executed with the utmost rigor. Great numbers were driven from their habitations with their wives and children, stripped and naked. Others betook themselves to flight, carrying with them what they could conceal, for their support and maintenance; but they were plundered of what little they had, and many of them inhumanly massacred by the Catholic peasants, or the soldiery who guarded the passes."—Bower's History of the Popes, Vol 1. p. 334.

Such, dear reader, were the opening days of papal vengeance upon all who dared question popish prerogatives, when the power predicted in Rev. 13 commenced to "make war with the saints, and to overcome them." Justinian placed the "top stone" upon "Babylon the great," and the full tide of the "great river Euphrates" flowed swimmingly into the coffers of "the woman," that commenced to drink "the blood of the saints," and "the martyrs of Jesus;" but as the prediction of the ancient "seer" (Jer. 21: 44) was fulfilled in ancient Babylon,—"The nations shall not flow together any more unto him"—so the typical prediction was fulfilled in the history of modern Babylon, as I have clearly shown heretofore. There is, of late, a melancholy strain running through the Pope's letters and public addresses, in contrast with the defiant and blasphemous "maranathas" of the days of Babylonish papal glory. Hear the poor "Pio Nino" utter a wail as he retrospects the days of his gory predecessors.

"On every side are constantly heard frenzied voices, which find an echo in our desperate enemies, declaring that this City of Rome must share in this unhappy Italian perturbation and rebellion—nay, must become its capital; but God, who is rich in mercy, will, by his omnipotence, make the impious counsels and desires of our enemies fail. He will never permit this noble city, so dear to us, in which out of his great and singular goodness, he has fixed the chair of Peter, the impregnable basis of his divine faith and religion, to return to that unfortunate conditon so admirably described by our holy predecessor, Leo the Great, in which she found herself when for the first time the holy Prince of the Apostles entered this city, then the mistress of the world."

The above extract from his address suggested the following lines in an acrostic, upon "Mystery, Babylon the Great and the Mother of Harlots.

As it has not been published in the Crisis, I append it for its readers.

ACROSTIC.

Mourning o'er her fate in anguish,
Yearning for her lovers fled,
Sinful harlot, see her languish,
Trembling now in fear and dread;
Earthly kings have forsaken her,
Royalty withholds its hand,—
Yielding, lone, without a lover,
Broken is her bloody wand.
Alas! alas! thou once "great city,"
By thy wrath were millions slain,
Your cup is full, ah! who can pity?
Look back upon thy bloody reign.
O'er thy head in darkness lower
Naught but clouds of gloom and wo,
Thy God draws near in might and power,
He comes to strike the final blow;
E'en all thy vain and bold illusion
God will shortly tear away;
Reckless in thy vain delusion,
End forever in that day.
Ah! mourn in sadness, wretched harlot,
The mask is fallen from thy face,
Thou art cast off the beast of scarlet,
He cannot save thee from disgrace.
Ended are thy days of pleasure,
Mourn thy power fled and gone;
Of all thy kingly wealth and treasure,
Tormented, widowed and alone;
Hear her mournful sit bewailing,
Earth's monarchs flee her foul embrace;
Raise high thy mass, it's unavailing,
Oh, how despair sits on her face.
Full of uncleanness, cruel scoffer,
How canst thou mock a holy God?
Almighty wrath thou soon must suffer,
Rebellious foe to man and God,
Look back upon thy bloody pages,
Of names forgotten long by thee;
Thy God will pay thee all thy wages,
So dearly earned by cruelty,
Ah yes! remembered are thy sins,
None have escaped thy Judge's eye,
Dark, cruel, foul as they have been,
All stain'd with a blood-crimsoned dye;
But wail, proud harlot of the nations,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Naught is left to thee but trouble,
All shall be returned again;
The cup thou'st fill'd, fill'd to thee double,
In indignation, wrath and pain.
O Roman Pontiff, "Man of Sin,"
None ever did compare with thee,—
Sodom, Gomorrah, Chorazin,—
O Babylon, thou "Mystery of Iniquity,"
For thee God's cup of wrath's preparing.
Thou queen of harlots, drink it down;
Heaven-appointed, swiftly nearing.
E'en now the heavens begin to frown,
Earnests of wo thy Judge hath given;
All latent fires shall fiercely burn,
Robed in majesty, from heaven,
Thy Judge his wrath will on thee turn;
Howl, harlot! thou art doomed to burn!

For the World's Crisis.

THE ARAMAIC, SADDUCEEAN, AND PHARISAIC FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY O. R. FASSETT.

(Continued.)

There was, however, another party of the Pharisees who rejected the above superstition, and adhered to what is termed the Aramaic faith, and looked for the coming of the Messiah, and the resurrection from the dead, as the only hope of future "life and immortality." These were denominated "the Hebrew of the Hebrews." "Hebrew is used for an Aramaic Jew, as opposed to a Grecian or Hellenist. . . . The pious Hebrew was always in the attitude of expectation of the coming One."*

The patriarch Job, though not a Jew, has engraven this faith in living letters of light not to be obliterated or misunderstood; and his faith and hope was that of the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Heb. 2. "O that my words were now written! O that they were written in a book! [His prayer has been marvelously answered.] That they were graven with an iron pen [this, too, fulfilled] and lead in the rock forever [also been stereotyped]. For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." During the intermediate state he anticipates no reward or conscious existence. "For now shall I sleep in the dust." And the term "sleep," used concerning the dead in both the Old and New Testaments, implies the hope of an awakening, and is engraven on the tombs and burial places of the christians in the catacombs of Rome, as expressive of their hope in a resurrection, so different from that of the heathen:—"Sepulchrum"; "eternal home." Job did not anticipate that in death he should be a roaming spirit, as did the heathen, who regarded the soul immortal, visiting the world, the place of his sepulchre, etc. "For now should I have lain still and been quiet; I should have slept; then had I been at rest with kings and counselors of the earth, which built desolate places for themselves. . . . There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary be at rest. There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and great are there, and the servant is free from his master."—chap. 3.

Having considered that though in the case of "a tree" being "cut down," "it will sprout again" under favorable circumstances, as its "life element" is preserved in "the root"; and that in man there is no such surviving entity, but that "man dieth and wasteth away"; and fails altogether, so that no search can find a living element anywhere; and declaring that "so man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep,—he prays: "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me!" And then looking forward to the coming of his Redeemer, who is the Life-giver of the world, he exclaims in confident hope: "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hand." Even when the Lord "destroyest the hope of man, and changest his countenance, and sendest him away," in such unconsciousness that "his sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them"; yet his hope survives such dissolution, and such a complete destruction of man; and the problem of the ages—"If a man die, shall he live again?" he solves to his own satisfaction in the triumphs of faith in his Redeemer, and says, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait [in the grave], till my change come"; and that is at the call of his Redeemer. Job 14th and 19th chapters.

The prophet David gives expression to his faith and hope thus: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."—Ps. 17: 15. The apostle Paul says of David: "After he had served his own generation, by the will of God, he fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption."—Acts 13: 36. The epoch of his awakening, and of his beholding his Redeemer's "face in righteousness," is fixed by the Scriptures at the resurrection, when the sleepers "in the dust of the earth shall awake" (Dan. 12: 1–3); and when "the Redeemer shall appear," then "we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."—1 John 3: 1–3. Hence, says David again, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me."—Ps. 49: 15. Concerning the state in death, he says, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."—Ps. 115: 17. In view of his death he is comforted in hope: "Thou, which hast showed me sore and great troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth." Then he says, "I will also praise thee."—Ps. 71: 20–22. He only expected, as "the sweet singer of Israel," to praise the Lord while living. "I will praise the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have my being." As did Hezekiah, who said, "The grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day."—Isa. 38: 18, 19.

"When in a sweeter, nobler song
I'll sing thy power to save:
When this poor lisping, stammering tongue
Is ransomed from the grave," was the theology of these holy men of old. They did not expect to sing—

"When this poor lisping, stammering tongue,
Lies silent in the grave."

From the uniform teaching of the Old Testament writings, as to the hope of the church; from their complete silence as to the soul's immortality, and rewards in death, and in fact their denial of these doctrines (Eccl. 9), they basing their only hope in the coming of the Messiah, and the resurrection from the dead (Dan. 12, Ezek. 37, Isa. 25), there were those who adhered to this faith at the coming of Christ, in the days of his humiliation. These were Simeon and Anna, and others who "waited for the consolation of Israel," and looked for redemption in Jerusalem. Luke 2: 25–38.

The conversation of Jesus with Martha and Mary concerning the death of their brother, will show the difference between the popular belief among the Pharisees of the Hellenitic school, and those of the true Aramaic faith. "Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." John 11. There is no allusion here to Lazarus having departed to a state of happiness—gone to the abodes of the blest—underground, as maintained in that age. The sisters mourned the death of their brother. When Mary saw Jesus, "she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." She wept bitterly, and the Jews, in sympathy, did the same; and it caused the Son of God to groan "in the Spirit," and also "Jesus wept." To comfort the bereaved sisters, Jesus said, "Thy brother shall rise again." Why did he not say also, "Don't weep; thy brother is far better off; he has gone to Abraham's bosom," and is with "the choir of the Fathers in hades?"—If that were true, is it not surprising that all allusion to such a state by him who knew his condition was not mentioned, nor referred to as a source of comfort; but only Lazarus' resurrection? Martha replies: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Thus understandingly fixing the period of his resurrection, and referring only to her hope being in the realization of that event. Jesus, to inspire hope in him as the One who was to accomplish this marvelous work, and also to encourage her to hope that even at that time, if she would believe, she should "see the glory of God" (v. 40); "said unto her, I am the Resurrection and the Life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (i. e., dead as was Lazarus. All such shall live.) "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die (i. e., "We which are alive and remain" unto the coming of the Lord (1 Thess. 4: 16–18), these "shall never die," as they will be translated like Enoch and Elijah, that they "should not see death." Heb. 11: 15). Says Jesus unto her, "Believest thou this?" This is what is to be believed concerning our dead, and all the dead asleep in Jesus. And Lazarus' resurrection is a fit illustration of the character of the resurrection "at the last day." The persons of the dead must be called forth from their slumbers, by the voice of the Son of God. John 11: 41–44. The doctrine of Jesus relative to the resurrection, is this: "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; "and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 28, 29. "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God." v. 25. Not the living, "immortal soul," in "Abraham's bosom; but "the dead;" and they that hear shall live." We now understand how the apostles believed, and taught, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

St. Paul was a Pharisee; and when he "perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees," as he was brought before the Jewish council, "he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." This immediately caused "a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees; and the multitude was divided."—Acts 23: 6. Here, Paul does not say of which party of the Pharisees he was; but the Hellenistic Jews for a time claimed him, and said, "We find no evil in this man; but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken unto him, let us not fight against God."—ver. 9. But afterward, he was regarded and denounced as a heretic, as he says, before Felix the governor. "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."—Acts 24: 14, 15.

St. Paul might be regarded as a heretic by the Pharisees for his rejection of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and its rewards [illegible]

(Concluded next week.)

* The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, by Conybeare and Howson. Introduction [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, March 16, 1870.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, at World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ C. H WILLIAMS—Draft received.

RUTLAND.

The meetings in Rutland continued to increase in interest to their close. Some fifteen or twenty were converted, and eight young converts were baptized the 8th inst. Several others will improve the next opportunity. All who attend the meetings seem delighted with the spirit of them. The last Sabbath evening, March 6th, was one of special interest. The house was crowded. We had the sacrament in the evening. Between fifty and sixty partook of the Lord's Supper. It was truly good to be there. At the close of the meeting a large number requested prayers. We have rarely enjoyed so good a meeting. The members of the various churches took an active part in the meeting, and manifested a true christian spirit.

LIVE IN THE SPIRIT.

In 1 Pet. 4: 6, we find an expression that has perplexed some. It is a passage often quoted by Spiritualists. It reads as follows: "For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit.

1. The gospel was "preached to them that are dead." The gospel was preached to them before they died. It would be impossible to preach to them after they were dead, for "the dead know not any thing." Eccl. 9: 5.

2. The judgment comes after the preaching, and after the resurrection. Both of these events are yet in the future; therefore they are not yet living "according to God in the Spirit," because they are still dead and unjudged. 3. They who have died will not "live according to God in the Spirit" till they live again in the world to come. 4. What is it to "live according to God in the Spirit?" Says Paul, "They that are in the flesh cannot please God." Rom. 8: 8. What does he mean by being "in the flesh"? He makes the matter plain in the next verse. "But ye are not in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you." Those who receive eternal life, will have the Spirit of God dwelling in them; hence may be said to "live according to God in the Spirit."

CREEDS.

We are pleased to learn that many good men begin to realize that creeds are of less consequence than they had supposed. The real Christians in the various churches are beginning to see that the many church creeds now in force are only obstacles in the way of christian union, and should be used no longer to bind the consciences of the followers of Jesus. This is a bright omen. For many centuries every new sect would get up a new creed, and then build a fence around it, so that those who adopted it should not mingle with those in another sectarian pen. All this was in harmony with the spirit of Satan, and opposed to the spirit of Jesus, who prayed that all his children might "be one, even as" he and his Father "are one." Blessed union! Let us do all we can to promote it. All sectarian creeds are well calculated to prevent such a union.

Some years since, we came to the firm decision, in the Lord, that we would not subscribe to any creed, declaration of faith, treatise, or platform principles, that every christian in the world could not adopt. For whenever we make a test of fellowship that would shut out a single christian, we are more rigid than Jesus, and have become guilty of building a wall between his dear children. Let all who truly love Jesus keep clear from the spirit of creed making, and "follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify [build up] another."—Rom. 14: 19.

We are much pleased with the following from the Congregational Quarterly:

"Imperfection in doctrinal belief should debar no true christian from church fellowship. To exclude a child from school for ignorance, to look for the fruit as soon as the root, is preposterous. Where "the power" of godliness is, there "the form" will come under favoring circumstances in time, as the skeleton develops and hardens into proper symmetry with the lapse of childhood into manhood. Not the least of the "plagues"—mischiefs—that come upon those who add to the things written in the book, is the discouragement of the children from coming early into the church. Assent to a creed is valueless, if made on the authority of another mind; and yet it is beyond the ability of most children to assent, understandingly, to the theological creeds of some of our churches. And the closer our observance, with all sorts of persons, of the apostolic terms of church fellowship, the better for the church and the [illegible] [illegible] "Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," —if grace, [illegible] [illegible] among them. John Owen says: "We will never deny the communion to any person whose duty it is to desire it." Samuel Mather shows that all christians ought to be admitted to any of Christ's churches. Dr. Watts, in his "Terms of Christian Communion," shows that the churches should, as a general rule, admit all who make a credible profession of religion, take heed not to make the door of admission larger or straiter than Christ made it, and that nothing be in their covenant but what is essential to common Christianity. The principle of assimilation, every man "to his own place," together with the strict maintenance of orthodoxy and piety in the pulpit, will be found as potent to produce all desirable uniformity of belief as any initiatory tests in mere theology. We say, then, in the golden phrase of Cotton Mather, let "the terms of communion run parallel with the terms of salvation."

THE GOLD PANIC.

There are stirring times among the gold dealers in Wall St., New York. The following from the New York Express, March 8th, shows the effects of the love of money:—

"The excitement in the Gold Room was without a parallel since September last. As the day wore along the anxiety to sell gold assumed the shape of a mania, and its equal has never before been witnessed in the room. The fluctuations were unusually frequent, and the dial recorded nearly one hundred changes during the day. The scene in the room is almost indescribable. The crowd of operators around the fountain surged to and fro, cheered each decline of one fourth and one half per cent., vented their feelings in screams and yells of delight, and otherwise acted like madmen, more than sane human beings dealing in millions of property. If our readers will imagine a lunatic asylum on fire, with no escape for the inmates, they will approximate to the scenes in the Gold Room at the height of the excitement to-day."

Gold is now down to 111, 110½. It is hoped it will go down to par value.

RESTORING LIFE.

A remarkable cure was performed in Cleveland, O., by Dr. Weber. The following is the account, as published in the Cleveland Leader, Feb. 21st, 1870:—

"An accident, which nearly proved fatal, took place on the west side yesterday. A little boy, ten years of age, while innocently playing with a large bean in his mouth, accidentally swallowed it and immediately experienced the most intense pain. The child was immediately taken to the operating rooms of Dr. Weber, where the doctor proceeded to extract the bean. A person practiced in examining patients in such a condition would have believed the child to be dead.

A deadly pallor overspread his countenance, the eyes were glassy and without expression, the muscles all relaxed and the perspiration entirely suspended. Every appearance indicated that the grim king of terrors had impressed his ineffaceable seal upon the young boy. The actual presence of death would hardly have changed the stiffened limbs and whitened features of the youth, who seemed to have been snatched away from his loving and tender parents in a moment of idle playfulness. During a minute and a half the child remained without breathing. All the students surrounded the child in breathless silence, and Dr. Weber proceeded to extract the troublesome bean. It had passed down out of the windpipe into the opening that leads into the lung, and there stopped.

Dr. Weber began the operation by making a longitudinal incision in the neck just below the pompum Adami, in vulgar parlance, Adam's apple. His next step was to pass an instrument down through the incision, draw up the bean and pull it out with a pair of forceps. The child still presented every appearance of a lifeless corpse. After the bean had been extracted the incision was held open by two hooks and by pressing on the child's chest the air in it was driven out. The blood at the opening was sponged off, and by relieving the pressure on the breast and pressing on the sides beneath the arms, air was drawn in through the aperture made by the incision.

A mechanical passage of air was thus established and by continued efforts the child began to breathe and show signs of consciousness. The color returned, the eyes received their wonted expression, and the little child whose feet had almost touched the black river of death, began to move. There were about fifty students present, and the success of the experiment brought down the house with loud applause.

The parents of the child sat in an adjoining room in breathless expectation, hopes of the child's recovery and fears of his death contending in their bosoms. The noise of the students caused them to make a rush into the operating room, where the child lay with every appearance of robust health. Their joy was so great that it became necessary to take the child away from them to prevent him from being smothered by their caresses. They overwhelmed Dr. Weber with thanks, as well they might do, for the precision, skill and good judgment exhibited in the operation."

How plain and full of common sense was the whole performance of the Dr., when we take the Bible ground, that only "the breath of life" leaves men when they die. How reasonable, too, that the parents should caress the child, when restored to life, and not some etherial essence, without body or parts, which they never saw, and can never handle; because it only exists in the imagination of those who believe in such strange theories.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

A Vindication of the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Unjust, by J. H. Wagoner, Battle Creek, Mich. We have carefully examined this work, and consider it unanswerable. All who have doubts concerning the resurrection of the unjust should read it. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cts., postage 2 cents.

WRITING FOR THE CRISIS.—A Bro. wishes to know whether we desire to have articles for the Crisis written on only one side of the paper? We are not particular. Sometimes it would be more convenient, but we do not require it. The extra expense of postage would overbalance the amount of labor it would save the office.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTICE.

I wish to call the attention of brethren searching after truth to two new and important tracts: Bro. Brewer's "Seven Messages of the Apocalypse," price five cents by mail. It is a great effort, and gives new and important light on dark positions. The second new tract is Bro. Wagoner's, showing the Scripture argument that the wicked dead will come out of the graves to be judged. Bro. Wagoner has done justice to the subject, as no other man yet has; and every one ought to have a copy. H. MUNGER.

For the World's Crisis.

CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

Let fervent prayers be offered for the coming conference in Lowell St. Chapel; that all the meetings may be under the direct guidance of the Holy Spirit; that love, peace and harmony may characterize its councils; that light on the word of God may shine with unusual power; that sinners may be thoroughly converted to God; that the erring and backslidden in heart may be led back again to their Father's house; that the saints of God may be quickened and helped forward on their journey to the land of rest and glory; that the ministers of God may be deeply imbued with the Spirit of their divine Master, that they may preach as though they expected soon to meet their congregations at the judgment-seat of Christ; that the truths which distinguish us as a people may be presented in such a manner as to instruct the ignorant, convince the sceptic, and charm to obedience the obdurate and unbelieving; that the Spirit of God may so fill the place, that at the close of the conference all may be led to say that the Lord has indeed been with us, and that his blessing has rested upon us. P.

NEW TRACTS.

Just Published by the A. C. P. Society.

"THE GATE TO GLORY." A good tract to give to those who think good people enter through death to glory. By A. P. MOORE. 36pp. Price, by mail, single 5 cts; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"SCRIPTURE, OR POPULAR THEOLOGY;—Which shall we believe?" By S. L. MANLEY. 8pp. Price, by mail, postpaid, two copies for 5 cents; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per hundred. Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass. AG'T.

NEW BOOK.

THE SEVEN MESSAGES OF THE APOCALYPSE, showing their harmony. By S. S. Brewer. 48 pp., 12mo. Price per dozen, $1.20; single, 13 cents.; postage, 2 cents. For sale at this office. AG'T.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The Report of the Discussion held in Chelsea in November last, between Elders Grant and Cornell, is published in a pamphlet of 126 pages, and is for sale at this office. Price, sent by mail, 20 cents per copy. AG'T.

"EVANGELS OF THE COMING ONE: Prophetic Utterances and their Accomplishment."

This work will be ready for delivery in a few days. Its object is, to present the evidences of the speedy coming of our blessed Lord and Master, to consummate the hope of the good of all ages. All who desire to assist in the dissemination of this work, will please address their orders at once for the above, either to the Crisis office, or to C. W. Sargent, Concord, N. H., Box 426. S. S. BREWER.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION."

WHAT THEY SAY OF ITS MERITS.

From W. H. Shailer, D. D.: "'The Plan of Redemption' contains some sublime ideas. There are parts of it which I like very much. I find it a work containing deep thought. It requires close attention to the Bible while reading it."

From U. R. Sinclair: "That new book, 'The Plan of Redemption,' I think one of the most instructive and interesting works I ever read. All should read it, ministers and people, rich and poor."

Price, postpaid, $1.25. For sale at this office.

For the World's Crisis.

WEST GLOUCESTER, R. I.

The Lord has blessed his people in this place with the renewing influences of his Holy Spirit. Backsliders have been reclaimed. Twenty have arisen for prayers. Our congregations are large for the locality. Pray for us. M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like to give a copy of Sister Champlin's paper, and make an acknowledgment of the monies received.

Providence, Jan. 8th, 1870.

To the friends of the late Eld. Geo. Champlin: Whereas, the widow of the late Elder Geo. Champlin is at present sick, and in a suffering condition, being deprived of her eyesight, thus unfitting her to do any kind of work to help herself; we, the undersigned, do feel it duty and a privilege to contribute of the means God has given us, to help better her condition. Her eyesight can be restored for two hundred and fifty dollars, which sum we wish to raise by the month of March, 1870; and we trust that all the friends of her late husband, who wore his life out in the cause of Christ, will give of their means, that the widow of one so worthy may not suffer.

Bro. Moses P. Dailey, the bearer of this paper, is duly authorized to solicit and receive contributions. Samuel Rodman, President of Board of Directors. Henry R. Smith, Clerk of Pond St. colored church.

CONTRIBUTIONS.—Pond street church, $30. Cash, $6. Warwick Plains, $40. Bro. Miles Grant, $2. From L. B., Philadelphia, $1. E. B., West Peterboro, N. H., $1. Bro. D. Cogswell, Dansville, N. Y., $1. Bro. George, Worcester, Mass., $1. Lake City, no name, 50c. Sr. E. S. Willard, Ide, Rahway, N. J., $5. "One of Father's children," Swampscott, Mass., $1. Bro. Wm. Bassford, Thomaston, Ct., $3.15. "A friend," Hyde Park, $1. R. C. B., Stoneham, $1. "A sister, looking for Jesus," Lowell, Mass., $2. Sr. Elizabeth Hamblin, East Boston, $2. Three letters, wish not to be acknowledged. A friend from Pawtucket, $2. For these liberal donations, Sister Champlin returns her hearty thanks, and hopes that the blessing of the Lord will be with all.

I would further say, that our sister has had an operation on one eye, and is doing well. We think that our good sister is going to see again. Brethren and sisters, pray for her. The Lord remember the cheerful giver, is my prayer. Amen. Yours in hope of the gospel. MOSES P. DAILEY.

P. S.—Sister Champlin's address is 89 Dexter St., Providence, R. I.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of [illegible] Sunday, September 3rd, at the National Camp-meeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from ignorance and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. R. HERRICK, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

Donations for the Tract Fund.

Previous acknowledgments	$404.41
F. H. Burbank	1.25
A. G. Eddy	.75

POOR FUND.

(To send the Crisis to the Poor.)

Previous acknowledgments	$55.86
Sarah A. Phelps	.35
E. A. Bartlett	.75

AMERICAN ADVENT MISSION SOCIETY.

All donations and payments of pledges for this Society, should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, P. O. Drawer 202, Boston, Mass., who will acknowledge the same in the columns of the Crisis.

Previous acknowledgments	$707.85

THE YOUNG PILGRIM FUND.

To help send the Pilgrim to the Poor.

PLEDGES.

"Uncle John," Weymouth, Mass. $12.00

Uncle John pledges to be one of a hundred to pay for the free circulation of thirty copies of the Young Pilgrim. Who else will do the same, and receive the blessings of the poor? Who will pay for twenty, or ten, or five?

For the World's Crisis.

MEETING AT NEW DOVER.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say, through the dear "Crisis," that yesterday, the 13th, was a day long to be remembered. According to previous appointment, we met at the large school-house near the spot where we for the first time made an appointment to speak for Jesus and labor for the perishing, more than twenty-seven years ago. Though the day was very cold, we were greeted by the dear children of God from nine towns, many of whom we had seen in by-gone years, and had together worshiped the God of heaven in various places. The house was full. I noticed in the congregation many of my kindred after the flesh; for near this place I was born, and lived in the vicinity until about twelve years old. Concord has been my home since.

While looking over the many smiling faces, beaming with the love of God, I missed many who met there twenty-seven years ago. Many a pilgrim had gone to the grave, while others were sick at home; and others had moved away. My feelings were mingled with joy. I beheld some who were converted there during the time I first made an effort to preach Jesus and the coming kingdom; and heard them testify with many others that their faith was strong in God, and they were waiting "for his Son from heaven." I preached twice. At the close of the afternoon meeting, we partook of the Lord's Supper, which carried our minds back to Calvary, and also pointed us to the time when it would be fulfilled in the kingdom of God; believing it to be near, even at the door. We could part with good cheer, even with singing, not expecting to meet again on earth as it now is. At noon, I went about half a mile, and visited the old homestead, where just fifty years that day a little boy was born, whose parents named John Gilman Hook.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 14. J. G. HOOK.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—Money received for the benefit of Bro. B. P. Manning, and which has been thankfully received in the time of his need:—A. D. Wood, 50 cts. Albro M. Humphreville, $2. Mrs. M. A. Sparks, $2. Mary Fuller, 50 cts. J. G. Hamblin, $5. W. H. Mitchell, $2. G., Worcester, Mass., $1. Anne M. Locke, $1. L. R., $1. C. W. B., $2. Moses Philbrick, $1.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. Bendixon.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned from Chicago, where I have been for two weeks, and had meetings in Bro. Snyder's church, the Baptist minister who has come out on the truth. When I arrived here, I did not know any of our country people of the same precious faith, but a dear sister, Anna Bowman, who has been with Bro. Ramsay; that faithful handmaid of the Lord has prayed and worked, and the seed that you sowed here in Chicago had also fallen into the hearts of some of our people, and had begun to grow, but needed some watering and refreshing. After I got the church, I had the meetings published in the Scandinavian paper, translated the Questions on Immortality, and sent them out among the people. The meetings were well attended, when we take into consideration the great prejudice that exists among the Scandinavians.

A week ago last Sunday, I preached on the soul; and when I came to the scripture where Reuben wanted to save him (Joseph), a Methodist stood right up in church and said that I was a false teacher. A brother stood up and told him if he was a christian, or a gentleman, he ought to know better. After the service, I went down to him, and he challenged me for a discussion, to which I, of course, consented gladly. The subject was: "Is the soul immortal or mortal?" A committee was appointed. Either of us must establish his position with clear scripture, with ten minutes' speeches. Tuesday, the 22nd, came, and with that date the fatal hour for the "Advent Infidel." I opened the meeting with prayer, and a short speech, after which I proceeded to the discussion. I then read the Swedish translation, where it reads, "And Reuben said, Let us not kill a soul." After quoting other plain scriptures, such as, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," I appealed to the committee and congregation to know if this was not plain? and I heard "Yes, yes," from many sides. I then said I hoped my brother would bring just as clear proof for his position, if such were to be found in holy writ, and thus let the light shine, and the glorious truth of God be known more perfectly. A knock on the table told me that my ten minutes were passed, and I sat down.

My opponent now arose, and without any further introduction, was to give me the death-blow, by quoting the rich man and Lazarus; then the souls that were killed and laid under the altar; then, "Fear not them," [illegible] and last day "[illegible] cast into the lake of fire," "[illegible] with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." I, of course, answered with a loud amen, and the same response was heard in the congregation. I appealed to the committee for decision, before any further proceedings, and he was voted down, as not being able to prove his position. He went down from the pulpit and sat down. But two or three other Methodists stood up, and began to call me an infidel.

Thank God, a goodly number of our people in Chicago, and many more, are searching. But, dear brother, we want help, that is to say, tracts. The few that you scattered while here in the tent have done a good work. I am willing and glad to write and translate, if I only had the means to have them printed. I am intending to translate "The Soul, what is it?" "The Spirit, what is it?" "Key of Truth," and other smaller tracts, such as Bro. Sheldon's articles about "Death," and others.

Now, dear brother, allow me to ask you and every lover of truth to assist me in this work. God will bless you, if you do something for us. If any will be so kind as to help us, please address O. BENDIXON, care of C. C. Ramsay, 339 Hubert St., Chicago, and every cent shall be acknowledged and accounted for. We ask an interest in your prayers. God bless you all, is the prayer of your brother, waiting for redemption,

O. BENDIXON.

P. S.—My address is Bishop Hill, Ill.

From Bro. T. R. Weaver.

BRO. GRANT:—Thinking perhaps it might be interesting to some of the readers of the Crisis to hear a word in relation to the prosperity of the church in Springfield, Mass., I will briefly speak of God's dealings with us. We never have had such heavenly, interesting prayer meetings as we are now enjoying. We hold three a week, and they are fully attended. We have adopted a rule for all to be very short in prayers and exhortations, and by so doing, we have from fifteen to twenty prayers, and from thirty to forty exhortations in each meeting, and close at nine o'clock, with the interest still unabating. Bro. Wm. Pile has been our pastor for the last nine months, preaching half of the time, and Bro. Hemenway one fourth of the time. We all esteem them both very highly for the faithful, earnest efforts they have made to build up the church, and get the truth, that Jesus is about to come, before the people. Bro. Pile has just given a series of eight lectures on the prophecy of Daniel, showing most conclusively that we are very near the sounding of the last trump, which every true child of God hails with joy; for it brings to life all those that sleep in Jesus.

There is quite a theological discussion going on here in regard to the nature and destiny of man. Some of our most able ministers have been, and are now, preaching with the greatest zeal, the immortality of the soul and eternal torment. We, of course, would naturally enter the arena, and show them a better way, as we are now trying to do. Bro. Pile reviewed last Sunday evening, in the Opera House, before a large audience, one of Rev. Dr. Ide's sermons on the subject—"Do the righteous dead sleep till the resurrection?" We think from the interest manifested, that much good was accomplished. He will give the Bible evidence on that question next Sunday evening at the same place, and we trust the Spirit of God will seal instruction to the hearts of the people, and that many may be brought from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God. It is very evident that the light and truth of the nature and destiny of man is on the increase. God speed it on, is my earnest prayer, until multitudes that are now in darkness shall be brought to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ.

Yours in hope of life when the Life-giver comes. THOMAS R. WEAVER.

Springfield, Mass, March 4th.

From Bro. E. Cotton.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Since I wrote last through the Crisis, Sept. 26, I have labored in Concord, Newport, Cornish, East Boston, Charleston, Holliston, North Barnstead, Pittsfield, Worcester, Hinsdale, Keene, Fitzwilliam, Springfield, Chichester, and Manchester. I have held nine protracted meetings. In two of them I labored in company with Bro. S. C. Hancock, a very good man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost.

In these meetings sixty-seven have made a start to seek the Lord, and quite a good number found peace in believing. Many of the dear saints have been strengthened and comforted. I have had almost a constant flow of joy and peace into my soul since I wrote you last.

"Joyfully, joyfully, onward I roam,
Bound for the land of the bright world to come."

I can say if the streams are so sweet, what must the fountain be?

"For it is a heaven below,
My Redeemer to know."

Oh, it is blessed to walk with God; to be filled with comfort; to have the evidence that we are all ready and waiting for our Lord. Truly, we have a Savior who is able to save us from all of our sins, and to fill us with comfort and joy here in this world. And may the Lord help us to live blameless and harmless, read and known of all men. I am your affectionate brother, looking for Jesus to come.

Feb. 28th, 1870. E. COTTON.

SR. C. A. COLTON writes from Bloomfield, Ct., March 1st:—"We (that is, husband and myself) are members of the M. E. church, in regular standing I believe. We are not careful to conceal our new views, but speak freely with all of them, and give tracts when we have opportunity. But I do want to hear some good preaching. By the way, there was some here last fall in an Advent tent. Some said it was too good to be confined to a tent. They wished it could come from the churches. Husband said he would give fifty dollars if those preachers could get into our church and preach two weeks. But after they left, the preachers of the different churches put their heads together (I guess) to undo all that had been done by them; each commenced a series of sermons on the 'immortality of the soul.' I don't know how they succeeded. I heard a member of one of the churches say their preacher had just flatted out, and had better have let it alone. Another minister preached several discourses. I asked one who heard them how he liked them; as I could not go. I was anxious to hear. He said he thought he would make out about as the Irishman did who commenced to build his house at the top of the chimney.

"Religion is down, down. The weekly prayer meetings have sometimes two or three; but seldom 'the form of the Fourth.' The weekly socials are flourishing. Houses are crammed, regardless of weather or distance, forgetting the old adage of 'early to bed,' etc. If they get home by twelve or one o'clock, all right. They 'have splendid times!' take off the doors, run around the chimney, etc., etc.' But then you must [illegible] [illegible] strings, and [illegible] hear of money!

But seriously, Bro. Grant, these socials, I do think, are killing the church. Now, what can be done to save them?"

BRO. D. M. LEAVITT writes from Great Works, N. H.:—"The Lord is blessing the church in East Rochester. A number of new ones started in the narrow way while I was there. Last Sunday, I baptized six happy souls, and more are waiting an opportunity. Sinners are still coming to Christ. To God give all the glory."

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

☞ The meetings which have been held in Mionot Hall, corner of Washington and Springfield Streets, are removed to Branch Chapel, corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

Henry Pratt ....Sunday, March 20th
John Couch ....Sunday, March 27th

BOSTON, (Branch Chapel), corner of Washington and Madison Streets.

Meetings at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M.

Geo. A. Streeter ....Sunday, March 20th
C. Goodrich ....Sunday, March 27th
T. M. Preble ....Sabbath, April 3d

EAST BOSTON.

Meetings are held at Chase's Block, up two flights, at 154 Meridian Street, on Sundays, at the usual hours, also Monday and Thursday evenings.

CHELSEA, MASS., (LIBRARY HALL.)

J. S. White ....Sunday, March 20th
T. M. Preble ....Sabbath, April 10th
S. W. Thurber ....Sunday, March 27th
M. Batchelder ....Sunday, April 3d

CHARLESTOWN.

Preaching at Charlestown, (Seaman Star Hall, No. 32 Main Street), every Lord's day.

S. W. Thurber ....Sunday, March 20th
J. S. White ....Sunday, March 27th

Stowe, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th — A. P. MOORE.

Lowell, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th — JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Chicopee Falls ....Sunday, March 20th, and evenings, March 21st, 22d and 23d. Brickaburg, Ocean Co., N. J., Thursday evening, March 24th, and onward for seven evenings, and Sunday, March 27th. — JOHN G. HOOK.

Hyde Pa Mass ....Sabbath, March 27th — T. M. PREBLE.

Lynn, Mass ....Tuesday evening, March 29th; Seabrook, N. H. ....Wednesday evening, March 30th; Portsmouth, N. H., evenings, March 31st and April 1st. — GEO. A. BROWN.

Clinton, Mass ....Monday evening, March 21st; Ashburnham, Mass ....Tuesday evening, March 22d; Keene, N. H. ....Thursday evening, March 24th; Vernon, Vt ....Friday evening, March 25th. — A. ROSS.

Hampton, N. H. ....Sunday, March 20th; Meredith Village ....Sunday, March 27th; Meredith, N. H. (Dolloff Hall) ....Sunday, April 3d. — L. E. SAULPAUGH.

North Sutton, N. H. (Bro. Andrews) Sun., March 20th; Goffstown ....Sunday, April 3d; South Elliot, Me. ....Sundays, April 10th and 17th. — JULIA BUSWELL.

Springfield, Mass ....evening, March 29th; Charlemont, Mass., evenings, March 31st and April 1st; East Savoy (New Chapel) ....Sunday, April 3d; North Adams ....Sunday, April 10th; W. H. Point, Ct. ....Sunday, April 17th. — H. K. FLAGG.

New York, (Cooper Institute) ....Sunday, March 27th and from thence to Philadelphia. — F. H. BURBANK.

Fitchburg, Mass ....Wednesday evening, March 16th; Wyoming, R. I., Tuesday evening, March 22nd, and over the following Sabbath. Will Bro. E. Bellows labor with me at Wyoming? Scituate, R. I. ....evening, March 29th; West Gloucester Conference ....Sunday, March 30th; Abington, Ct. ....Sunday, April 3d; Danielsonville, Ct. ....Sunday evening, April 3d; Putnam, Ct. ....Monday evening, April 4th; Webster, Mass ....evening, April 5th; Bridgewater, Vt. ....Sundays, April 17th and 24th. — H. F. CARPENTER.

Clinton, Mass ....evening, March 21st; South Ashburnham, Mass ....evening, March 22d; Warren, Mass. (as Bro. Rufus Baker may arrange) evening, March 31st. Southbridge, Mass ....evening, April 1st; Charleston, Mass ....Sunday, April 3d; Boston conference ....evening, April 6th. Ministers and delegates in Mass., please do not "forsake your assembling" at the conference in Boston, April 7th. — GEO. A. STREETER.

Chicopee Falls, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th. — A. M. HIGGINS.

Westfield Farms (Baptist Church), Sun., March 27th. — E. OWEN.

Webster, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th; Charleston ....evenings, March 22d and 23d; Abington, Ct. ....Sunday, March 27th; Danielsonville, Ct. ....evenings, March 29th and 30th. Will some of the Charleston brethren meet me at Webster the 21st? Will Bro. Ingle meet me at Putnam, on the arrival of the eleven o'clock train on the morning of the 24th? Stoneham, Mass ....Sundays, April 3d and 10th. — S. S. BREWER.

New Bedford, Mass ....Sundays, March 20th and 27th and Sunday, April 3d. — J. G. SMITH.

Nottingham ....Sabbath, March 27th. — S. S. MOONEY.

Springfield, (on the hill) ....Sunday, March 20th; Chicopee Falls ....Sunday, March 27th. — Z. FORD.

West Abington, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th; East Concord Village, N. H., (where brethren may arrange), Saturday evening, March 26th; Canterbury ....Monday evening, March 28th. — ENOCH MORRILL.

Hopkinton, (Town Hall building) ....Sunday, March 27th and April 3d. — C. W. SARGENT.

Rochester, N. H. (Goric Chapel) Sunday, March 20th. — MRS. A. MARSTON.

Lee, N. H., (Union House) ....Sunday, March 20th; Wednesday Hill (Wiggin school-house), March 27th. — A. J. GLOVER.

Nashua, N. H. ....Sundays, March 13th and 20th. — JOHN H. DADMUN.

Barnstead, N. H., (Tuttle school-house), Saturday evening, March 26th, and over the Sabbath. — JOHN PARSONS.

Strafford, N. H., (Robert's school-house), Sun., March 20th. — J. L. CRUTE.

Epsom (Marden's Corner), Saturday evening, March 19th, and over the Sabbath. — H. M. BRYANT.

Holderness, N. H., (True school-house), Sab., March 20th. — JOHN H. EVANS.

Rawsonville, Vt ....Sunday, March 20th; Plymouth, Vt ....Sunday, March 27th. — Z. T. WOOD.

South Berwick, Me., Great Works ....Sunday, April 3d; East Rochester, N. H., (for baptism), Sun., March 13th. — D. M. LEAVITT.

Holden, Mass ....Sunday, April 10th; South Reading, Mass ....Sunday, April 17th. — J. S. WHITE.

Great Works ....Sunday, March 20th; East Rochester, N. H. ....Sunday, March 27th; Dover, N. H. ....Sunday, April 3d. — E. S. MOULTON.

Dorchester, (Town House) ....Sunday, March 20th; Pierpont, (Clay meeting-house) ....Sunday, March 27th. — WM. H. SHAW.

Manchester, N. H. ....Sunday, April 10th; Melvin Village, N. H. ....Sunday, April 17th. — T. W. PIPER.

Bridgewater, Vt. ....Sundays, March 20th and 27th; Plymouth, Vt ....evenings, March 29th, 30th and 31st; North Springfield, Vt ....Sundays, April 3d and 10th. — J. W. THOMAS.

Rocky Brook, R. I. ....Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th; Abington, Ct. ....Sabbath, April 10th. — C. H. SWEET.

Newfield, Ct. ....Sunday, March 20th; East Otis, Mass ....Sunday, March 27th; Collinsville, Ct. ....Sunday, April 3d. — WM. J. RIPLEY.

East Kingston, N. H., (Town Hall), Sab., March 20th; Seabrook, N. H., (with Bro. Wm. C. Stewart), evenings, March 22d, 23d, and Saturday, the 27th. — A. A. HOYT.

Kennebunkport, Me ....Sunday, March 20th. — [illegible]

Porter Village, Me ....Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th. — E. E. LANE.

Abington, Ct. ....[illegible]; Wolcottville, Ct. ....Sunday, April 10th. — [illegible]

Pittsfield, N. H. (at the Bethel) ....Sunday, March 20th. — D. F. LEAVITT.

Gilmanton, N. H. (Gulf school-house), Sab., March 20th; Barnstead, N. H., (where Bro. Pulsee appoints) Sabbath, March 27th. — SIMEON HOYT.

[illegible], Mass ....Saturday evening, March 19th; Fitchburg, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th; Northfield Mountain ....Saturday evening, April 9th; Vernon, Vt ....Sunday, April 10th. — L. BOUTELL.

Pleasant Valley, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th; West Winsted, in the evening. Collinsville (with Bro. Elliot) evenings, March 21st, 22d and 23d. Thomaston ....evening, March 24th; Providence, R. I. ....Sunday, March 27th; New York City (Cooper Institute) Sunday, April 10th. — W. S. CAMPBELL.

Concord, N. H. ....March 23d and 24th; Manchester ....March 25th; Exeter ....March 26th, 29th and 30th; Lawrence ....Sabbath, April 3d, and through the week as the Lord will direct. Exeter ....Sunday, April 10th. — ☞ NO NAME.

Putnam, Ct ....Sabbath, March 20th. — A. BELLOWS.

Alton, (Stockbridge Corner) ....Sunday, March 20th; South Eliot, Me ....Sunday, March 27th; Wakefield, Mass ....Sunday, April 10th; North Barnstead, N. H. (Tuttle school-house) Sunday, April 17th; Rochester Village ....Sunday, April 24th; East Rochester ....Sunday, May 1st. — J. PINKHAM.

Bowdoin, Me ....evening, March 19th and over Sunday. Prayer meeting at nine A. M. Friendship, Me ....evening, March 24th; Friendship, Long Island ....evening, March 26th; Cushing, Me ....Sunday, March 27th. — H. S. MITCHELL.

Bath, Me ....Sunday, March 27th. — C. GOUD.

Holden, Me. (Clowley's Chapel) ....Sunday, March 20th; Bangor, Me ....Sunday, March 27th; Frankfort, Me ....Sunday, April 3d. — THOMAS SMITH.

East Haddam, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th; Newfield, Ct ....Sunday, April 3d. — S. WOODRUFF.

Wrightville, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th; New Milford, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th; Springfield, Mass. (on the hill) ....Sunday, April 1st and over the following Sunday. (Baptism.) — A. D. FLAGG.

Pleasant Valley, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th. — H. K. FLAGG.

Springfield, Mass. (Kempton school-house) Sabbath, March 20th. — F. S. RANSON.

Daganville, N. Y ....Sunday, March 20th; Greig, N. Y. (Union Chapel) ....Sunday, March 27th. — C. H. WILLIAMS.

Malvin Village, N. H ....Sunday, March 20th; Farmington Village, N. H ....Sunday, March 27th. — WM. BODGE.

Upper Bartlett ....Sunday, March 20th. — L. C. & M. MCKINSTRY.

East Rochester, N. H ....Sabbath, March 20th. — GEO. W. BROWN, of South Eliot, Me.

Scitico, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th; Bristol, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th. — H. H. DICKINSON.

Vernon, Vt ....Sunday, March 20th; Westfield, Mass ....Sunday, March 27th. — H. MUNGER.

Northville, N. H., (in the town of Newport), Sundays, March 20th and 27th. — E. COTTON.

Meredith Centre, N. H ....Sabbath, March 20th; Meredith Neck (baptism) ....Sabbath, March 27th. — N. GLIDDEN.

Vernon, Vt ....Sunday, March 27th. — O. D. WOODRUFF.

Scitico, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th. — G. L. WHITE.

Prospect, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th. — S. WOODRUFF.

Westfield, Mass ....Sunday, March 20th. — L. B. POTTER.

Wolcottville, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th; West Meriden, Ct ....Sunday, March 27th; Hartford, Ct., (Talcott & Post's Hall), Sun., April 3d. — GEO. W. BROWN.

Southington, Ct ....Sabbath, March 20th; Chicopee Falls, Mass ....Sabbath, March 27th. — WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

New Milford, Ct ....Sunday, March 20th; Pawling, N. Y ....Sunday, March 27th. — J. L. WOOD.

Bridgeport, Ct ....Sabbath, March 27th. — G. L. TEEPLE.

Providence, R. I ....Sunday, March 20th; Springfield, Mass ....Sundays, March 27th and April 3d. — WM. N. PILE.

Kennebunk Depot, Me ....Sunday, March 20th; Kennebunkport, Me ....Sunday, March 27th; Kennebunk Landing ....Sunday, April 3d. — T. P. S. HAMPSON.

Knowlesville, N. Y ....Saturday evening, March 26th and over the Sabbath. — WM. INGMIRE.

WORCESTER, MASS.

H. F. Carpenter ....Sunday, March 20th
H. Munger ....Sunday, April 3d

LAWRENCE, MASS.

A. Ross ....Sunday, March 20th
Geo. A. Brown ....Sunday, March 27th
M. Batchelder ....Sunday, April 24th
T. W. Piper ....Sunday, April 3d
H. F. Carpenter ....Sunday, April 10th
T. W. Piper ....Sunday, April 17th

WILBRAHAM, MASS.

P. S. Butler ....Sabbaths, March 20th and 27th

STONEHAM, MASS.

C. Goodrich ....Sunday, March 20th

EXETER, N. H.

T. W. Piper ....Sunday, March 20th
A. Ross ....Sunday, March 27th

DOVER, N. H.

Wm. H. Mitchell ....Sunday, March 27th

CONCORD, N. H., (CENTRE STREET.)

A. Simpson ....Sunday, March 20th
Enoch Morrill ....Sunday, March 27th
A. Ross ....Sunday, April 3d
J. G. Hook ....Sunday, April 10th

CONCORD, N. H., (AT THE BETHEL.)

Geo. A. Brown ....Sunday, April 3d
E. Owen ....Sunday, March 20th
A. Simpson ....Sunday, March 27th

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

D. M. Leavitt ....Sundays, March 20th and 27th
J. W. White ....Sunday, April 3d
J. G. Smith ....Sunday, April 10th
C. Goodrich ....Sunday, April 17th

SEABROOK, N. H.

E. S. Moulton ....Sunday, March 20th
A. Simpson ....Sunday, April 3d

MANCHESTER, N. H.

J. Couch ....Sunday, March 20th
Wm. H. Mitchell ....Sunday, April 3d

DOVER, N. H.

Jer. Hill ....Sunday, March 20th
C. W. Sargent ....Sunday, April 10th

ELLIOT, ME.

Wm. H. Mitchell ....Sunday, March 20th

BRISTOL, CT.

R. K. Stark ....Sabbath, March 27th

WEST MERIDEN, CT.

S. W. Bishop ....Sunday, March 20th
Rufus Wendell ....Sunday, April 17th and evenings, April 18th, 19th and 20th.

HARTFORD, CT.

O. D. Woodruff ....Sunday, March 20th
H. Pratt ....Sundays, March 27th and April 3d

NEW BRITAIN, CT.

F. H. Burbank ....Sabbath, March 20th
S. C. Hancock ....Sabbath, March 27th
Rufus Wendell ....Sabbath, April 3d
Wm. N. Pile ....Sabbath, April 10th
S. S. Brewer ....Sabbaths, April 17th and 24th

NEW HAVEN, CT., (Beers Street Christian Chapel.)

G. L. Teeple ....Sabbath, March 20th
B. Hitchcock ....Sabbath, March 27th

MINNESOTA.

West St. Paul ....March 20th
Rockford ....March 23d and 27th
Forest City ....April 1st and 3d
Castle Rock ....April 9th and 10th
Prescott, Wis ....April 17th

O. R. FASSETT.

Hall, S. H., four miles east of Townville, March 20th, 11 A. M. Rootville, (where I live), evening, March 20th. Clark, S. H., two miles south-east of Spartanburg, evening, March 26th. Albya, S. H., four miles south of Columbus, Warren Co., Pa., evening, March 29th, and over Sunday. Rootville, Break Bread ....first Sunday in the month each. — JOHN T. ONGLEY.

ROCHESTER, N. H.

There will be preaching in the chapel, near the brick school-house, in Rochester, N. H., on the first Lord's day in each month. Others can appoint so as not to interfere.

PORTLAND, ME.

Meetings are held in Advent Hall, Cushman's Block, 353½ Congress Street, three times on the Sabbath, and Tuesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Advent Church [illegible] meeting at Grand and Allen Streets, [illegible] Grand Street, one door above Clinton. Preaching every Sunday for the [illegible]. Prayer meeting [illegible] evening, at the house of J. K. Bellows, 18 Orchard Street.

(Continued from page 101.)

very different from Josephus' Dissertation, in which he first admits Plato's philosophy, and then endeavors to convince them of the resurrection of the body. No where in all of St. Paul's writings, or discourses, as reported by Luke in the Acts of the apostles, does he contend for the immortality of the soul; but it is ever this: "touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question."—Acts 24: 21. "Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive."—Acts 25: 19. "I now stand and am judged for the HOPE of the promise made of God unto our fathers; unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"—Acts 26: 6–9. "For the hope of Israel, I am bound with this chain." Acts 28: 20. And that was:—"Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves," etc.—Ezek. 37. Thus did he contend earnestly for this faith, and warned the church against "philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men."—Col. 2: 8. "It may be considered as certain that the family of St. Paul, though Hellenistic in speech (speak Greek) were no Hellenizers in theology." (The italics are mine.) "The manner in which St. Paul speaks implies the most uncontaminated hereditary Judaism: 'Are they Hebrews? so am I.' 'A Hebrew of the Hebrews.'"—The Life, Times and Travels of St. Paul, etc.

This opens before us a new feature of those times; and how animated must have been the discussions between the Sadducees and Pharisees, and the two parties of the Pharisees themselves: those of the Hellenistic and Aramaic schools. "There was no lack of Hellenistic synagogues at Jerusalem, which, at the seasons of the festivals, would be crowded with foreign pilgrims, and become the scene of animated discussions."—Ib. How plainly, in view of this, do we understand the same apostle's argument in 1 Cor. 15, wherein he bases the whole hope of future existence to man upon the resurrection from the dead. Let us revert to this chapter again. "If the dead rise not."—v. 16. "If the dead rise not at all."—v. 29. "And if Christ be not raised."—v. 17. What follows? "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—v. 18. Mark! not their bodies simply; but "they" "are perished." How could this be true if Christ was not risen, or the bodies of the saints did not rise? If the soul is immortal, and they had gone to their reward who had died unto that day, it could not possibly affect them, even "if Christ be not raised," or "if the dead rise not at all." Furthermore, he adds: "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not?" v. 32. Mark! not my body, but "me." What advantage shall I have? Well, would he not reap an advantage even if his body was not raised from the dead, if the soul is immortal and goes to its reward at death? Certainly he would. But it is evident from what follows that the apostle did not anticipate any gain or advantage, for he adds: "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."—v. 32. Thus quoting the sentiment of the epicurean and infidel, as the only fate that awaited him "if the dead rise not"; and hence with such a prospect (as the church bases all hope in Christ and the resurrection), he well exclaims, "If in this life only we have hope, we are of all men most miserable."—v. 19. If that hope—our only hope—is obliterated and not realized, after our sacrifices and sufferings and faith, and proves untrue and false, we are "miserable" indeed. But animated by the certainty of it, as predicated upon the resurrection of his Lord and Redeemer, and pledged by prophecy and promise, and his resurrection, he rapturously exclaims, "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept."—vs. 20–23.

(To be continued.)

Married.

WALSH—HODSDON. In Wakefield, N.H., March 8th, 1870, by Eld. Joseph Spinney, WILLIAM WALSH and MARY A. HODSDON, both of Milton, N. H.

LITCHFIELD—STANFORD. At Lewiston, Me., Feb. 20th, 1870, by Elder Jared Whitman, Mr. SAMUEL LITCHFIELD and Miss CYNTHIA STANFORD, both of Lewiston.

Obituaries.

RIPLEY. Died, in Blanford, Feb. 8th, 1870, Elizabeth B. widow of the late John B. Ripley, formerly of Hartford, Conn., aged 88 years.

Our dear mother was deprived of her reason in her last days. She was a kind and affectionate mother. May the children all choose that better part that cannot be taken away. Our home is broken up, no more to hear a parent's voice. O how sad! Yet there cometh a day, when all the household of the virtuous and good shall come again from the land of the enemy. How glad I am that our father, and mother, and loved ones are to live again. Not one of them shall be overlooked or forgotten. "Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord." MRS. E. L. BATES.

ENGLEY. Died, at Chestnut Hill, Blackstone, Mass., March 3d, 1870, of lung fever, William D. Engley, aged sixty-eight years.

There were but three weeks between his death and that of his daughter, my wife.

A good and faithful man has fallen. He embraced Christ in early life, and never broke the vows which he then made. His last moments were peaceful and serene, unclouded by a doubt, unshadowed by a fear. The blessed hope that he sleeps in Jesus comforts our afflicted hearts.

Upon the occasion of the funeral an able and consoling discourse was delivered by Eld. A. Ross, from John 11: 23–25. C. H. SWEET.

WORDEN. Fell asleep in Jesus, at his residence in Clarence, Erie Co., N. Y., Feb. 25th, 1870, of disease of the heart, Asa J. Worden, brother-in-law of Elder C. P. Greenman, aged thirty-two years.

He was converted to God five years ago, while in the army, but did not make an open profession of religion at that time, of which he often expressed regret during the time of his sickness. In a conversation that the writer had with the deceased, a few days before his death, he professed faith in the sleep of the dead, and the near coming of the Lord. A consoling discourse was delivered upon the occasion of the funeral by Elder Crawford Browning, from Psalms 37: 37. C. P. GREENMAN.

NICHOLS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Warner, N. H., Feb. 26th, 1870, George W. Nichols, aged twenty-five years and eleven months.

Having fallen in love with his best friend, Jesus, he gave himself up into his care, believing that in a little while he should awake in the likeness of his Redeemer, to die no more. He leaves a dear wife, parents and brothers to mourn his loss. He called the family around his bedside, and requested them to prepare to meet him on the morning of the resurrection, and then expired. Sermon preached by the writer, from [illegible] ADAMS DAMMAN.

DAVISON. Died, at Blooming Valley, Pa., March 2nd, 1870, Wm. G. Davison, aged sixty-six years.

Bro. Davison was a pioneer in the cause of truth in this county, but his work is done. His brother, aged seventy-six, was present at the funeral, as also a large number of relatives, neighbors and friends. We endeavored to comfort the friends with the words of Jesus—"Thy Brother shall rise again." John 11: 23. J. T. OROLEY.

BARNES. Died, in Philadelphia, Feb. 22d, 1870, Sister Caroline Barnes, aged forty-four years.

Sister Barnes was formerly from Conn. It was her dying request that notice should be sent to the Crisis that she died in the blessed hope of her soon coming Savior and a speedy resurrection from the dead to immortality and an endless life. Words of comfort were spoken by Elder Wm. Ashton. J. N. WILFONG.

WALDORF. Died in Bolton, Feb. 22d, 1870, Mary Waldorf, wife of Martin Waldorf, aged forty-three years.

Sister Waldorf embraced the blessed hope in 1843. She has always lived a life of deep piety. She has left a large number of Brn. and Srs. in different places to mourn her loss. Bro. Waldorf is left alone. Pray for him in his affliction. J. L. KNAPP.

BROWN. Died, in Holden, Mass., Feb. 27th, of lung fever, after a short but severe sickness of one week, Henry A. Brown, aged sixty-five years, eight months, and seven days.

He was a christian. CYRUS S. BROWN.

SMITH. Died, in Rogersville, Steuben Co., N. Y., March 1st, 1890, Sister Eliza B., wife of Bro. William Smith, aged sixty-four years and seven months.

She leaves a lonely and almost broken-hearted companion and grief-stricken daughter and son. May the hand of the Lord sustain and strengthen them. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by the writer, from Job 19: 21. D. COGSWELL.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

PARIS, March 8, 1870. Religious organs here have advices from Rome which represent that the Pope, in response to the request of the great majority of the bishops, has distributed among the members of the Council a schema proposing a definition of the dogma of infallibility, with a notice that the suggestions of the fathers on the same will be received until the 17th inst.

Despatches from other sources add to this intelligence that in consequence of the introduction of this schema the French government has made a demand on the Papal Court that the Special Envoy of France be permitted to assist at the Council; also that Cardinal Antonelli has acknowledged the receipt of the demand and promises to answer it in a few days.

ROME, March 9. It is expected that the Pope will adjourn the Ecumenical Council for the purpose of avoiding a collision with the French Government on the question of Papal infallibility.

ROME, March 9. The Pope temporizes, hoping to obtain a vote on the dogma of infallibility before the arrival of the French Commissioner.

ROME, March 10. The reply of the Pontifical Court to the last despatch of Count Daru has been forwarded to Paris. It contests in emphatic terms the demand of the French government to be represented in the Ecumenical Council. The Apostolic Nuncio to the French Court is charged at the same time to give assurances that the representative of France will be received with all the consideration due that Power.

PARIS, March 11. M. Louis Noir, a brother of Victor Noir, who was killed by Prince Pierre Napoleon Bonaparte, publishes an interesting communication in the morning journals of this city today. He complains that he has not been permitted to know anything of the accusation against the Prince; that neither he nor any of his friends have been cited to appear as witnesses in the case, and that the prosecution seems to be directed against his dead brother, and not against the Prince.

The Journal Francais asserts that there is nothing in the despatches sent by Count Daru to Rome to create animosity between the French and Papal courts.

The day before yesterday the cells of the prison of Sainte Pelagie, were carefully searched by the authorities. This is the prison where those are confined who were accused of a conspiracy against the life of the Emperor. One of the results of this search is the transfer of seventy-four prisoners to the Mazas prison.

Messrs. Henri Rochefort, Grousset and Mourat are still detained in the prison of Sainte Pelagie and are not allowed to see any visitors.

THE SCHEMA, OR PAPAL PLATFORM.—London, March 11th. The Times gives the following from the Roman frontier:—

On Monday a schema on infallibility was distributed to the members of the Council. It asserts that the Church possesses supreme and complete primacy, and that the principality over the universal Church was received with plenitude of power from the Lord himself by St. Peter, of whom the Pontiff is the successor. All questions of faith must be determined under that power, else the words of the Lord to Peter would be disregarded. This is proved by results. In the Apostolic see, Catholic and immaculate, the doctrine has always been fully maintained; consequently we inculcate with the concurrence of the Council and define it as a dogma of faith that, thanks to Divine assistance, the Roman Pontiff, of whom it was said, in the person of Peter, by Christ, "I have prayed for all," cannot err when acting as supreme teacher of all Christians.

The schema defines what the Church must hold in faith and morals, and that the prerogative of Papal infallibility extends over the same matters to which the infallibility of the Church is applicable.

The paper ends with the words:—"If any should dare, which God forbid, to controvert the present definition, let him know that he departs from the true faith."

THE GREAT RUSSIAN CONSPIRACY.—The Russian correspondent of the Nord Est writes as follows of the socialistic conspiracy in Russia:

The affair of the revolutionary proclamation, which it was at first believed, was the work of young enthusiasts, has assumed alarming proportions. A serious conspiracy has been discovered, having men of all ages and classes as its members. The alarm is very great among the conspirators, who are called Nihilists, and the government is equally disturbed. Already 700 persons have been arrested, among whom are high public officials, professional men, many students and political leaders. In a new revolutionary document which has appeared since the assassination of Ivanhoff, his assassins are exculpated on the ground that he belonged to the phalanx of "popular justice," and the conspirators declare that they consider their lives of no account provided they can realize the happiness of the people. In assassinating Ivanhoff, they simply got rid of an agent who did not fulfill the required conditions, and they further declare that more will be put aside in the same way the moment it is found that they are not faithful to the cause.

This document gives the organization which the Nihilists propose to establish if they succeed. There is, they say, to be no more family government nor religion; the State is to be supreme and will establish labor communities, to which every one must belong or be excluded from all legal rights. Every one will be bound to engage in manual labor; but permission may be obtained to pursue professions advantageous to the people. There are to be provincial syndicates formed of delegates from the communities, who will attend to the distributions of the products of labor, according to the needs of the different localities.

Religious Items.

— An extensive revival prevails among the churches in Cincinnati and adjacent towns.

— Five young and beautiful girls are among the Long Island converts to Mormonism.

— The denomination known as Seventh Day Baptists has seventy-six churches in the United States.

— The Mormon missionaries in Denmark made a thousand converts last year.

— A preacher once said: "If you know anything that will make a brother's heart glad, run quick and tell it; but if it is something that will cause a sigh, bottle it up, bottle it up."

— An extensive revival is in progress in Westfield, Mass. Last Sabbath Rev. J. H. Mansfield of the Methodist church baptized seventy-eight persons; confirmed eight who had been baptized in their infancy; received [illegible] by profession of faith and five by letter. Three hundred partook of the sacrament that day, and the work is still progressing.

CINCINNATI, March 7.—Over two hundred admissions to church membership yesterday was the result of the [illegible] of Evangelical [illegible] last week.

Notices.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ, worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the CORNER OF LOWELL AND CAUSEWAY STREETS, BOSTON, on Tuesday evening, April 5th, 1870, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week:

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready;" may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

